13,051. You are upon your oath, that will not do. Will you take your solemn oath you never mentioned to anybody any more names than those four who would take bribes, and be careful?—I know of no more.

13,052. Did you mention any more?—I should say not.

13,053. Say so then?—Well, I will.

13,054. Say no?—No.

13,055. On your solemn oath?—Yes, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

13,056. That will not do, you come here to pervert?—I can give you no further answer.

13,057. Did you, on your solemn oath, give in any more names to anybody at any time who would take a bribe?—To the best of my knowledge I have not done so.

13,058. (Mr. Russell.) Did you give him the name of Carrier?—No.

13,059. Do you know Carrier?—Yes, I do.

13,060. A baker?—Yes.

13,061. Do you think he got a bribe?—Very likely he might, but not to my knowledge.

13,062. (Mr. Slade.) Did you ever hear that Carrier was bribed?—I know he has been bribed at the municipal elections.

13,063. Did you never hear that Carrier was bribed at the election we are talking of now?—No.

13,064. Never?—No.

13,065. (Mr. Russell.) Did you offer him a bribe?—Carrier?

13,066. Yes?—I am not sure.

13,067. Did you?—I think I did.

13,068. You know you did?—I will not be positive about that for this reason, that he has been bribed at municipal elections, and whether it was at the municipal election or this present election I do not know.

13,069. You have bribed him at municipal elections?—I have.

13,070. And you have bribed him so often that you cannot remember whether you bribed him at the last election or not?—I am sure I did not.

13,071. Will you swear you did not?—Yes, I will.

13,072. (Mr. Slade.) Did you ever hear of the captains handing in their handwriting to Mr. Satterthwaite?—I have only heard it in this Court.

13,073. Never before?—No.

13,074. Did you never know before you heard it in this Court that Mr. Satterthwaite had the handwriting given him?—No.

13,075. Do you know that either Downing or Edwards, or Neave, gave in lists of men that would take bribes to Mr. Satterthwaite?—I do not.

13,076. You never heard it?—Only what I have heard in this Court. Will you allow me to make a statement?

13,077. What is it you wish to say?—I took 200*l.* to go to London at the election of Rumbold and Wilshire from Mr. Worship to bring the out voters down. I got 12*l.* 10*s.* for myself, and I gave the account for the rest to Mr. Wilshire. I brought down Captain Stewart for one.

13,078. Why cannot you tell us anything more about the election of 1859?—Because I know nothing.

SEVENTEENTH DAY.

4 Sept. 1866

J. Last.

JAMES LAST sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,079. What are you?—A horse dealer.

13,080. What did you receive at the last election?—20*l.*

13,081. Who from?—I am sure I cannot say. They tell me the gentleman's name was Jones, but I received it at Mr. Wright's.

13,082. Did you receive anything on the other side?—Certainly not.

13,083. Did you receive anything in the year 1859, the election before this last?—Well, I would not speak to that.

13,084. I daresay if you were to recollect you would be able to tell us?—I have a very bad memory.

13,085. Have you always been a Liberal?—I tell you what it is, I am very general.

13,086. You mean by that you voted for whoever would pay you best?—That is about the truth of it.

13,087. When once you have received your money you always vote for the party who gives it you?—Yes; when I promise I stand to what I do promise. I do not sell myself to both. When I pledge myself that is enough, and I only want another election.

13,088. How long have you had a vote?—Ten years.

13,089. You cannot recollect the last?—No.

13,090. Have you been paid every election?—I cannot account for that. I do not recollect.

13,091. You have been paid more than once?—Perhaps I may be three or four times, but I cannot call it to mind.

13,092. I will not ask about anything else prior to 1859. Now pray try and recollect?—I am sure I cannot recollect, for I have got no learning.

13,093. I am told you were not on the register in 1859?—I cannot say. If I was not on the register I know I never received anything. I know if it was not in the book I never did.

13,094. (Mr. Russell.) Were you offered anything the other side?—I am sure I forget.

J. Fish.

JAMES FISH sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,095. What are you?—A fish-curer now.

13,096. What did you receive at the last election?—20*l.*

13,097. Who from?—I do not know; it was a stranger.

13,098. Where at?—At James Thompson's.

13,099. Did you take a ticket there?—No.

13,100. How did you come to go there?—A man by the name of Lawson took me there.

13,101. What is his christian name?—George Lawson.

13,102. He sent you there?—He came for me to go there, and said there was some money to give away there.

13,103. Was George Lawson very active in the matter?—No, I do not think he was.

13,104. Did you get anything in 1859?—No, I never voted then at all.

R. Fenn.

ROBERT FENN sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

13,105. What are you?—A carpenter.

13,107. From Mr. Cooper?—From Mr. Cooper.

13,108. Did you get anything on the other side?—No.

13,109. I see you plumped for Lacon?—Yes.

13,110. Why was that; I suppose you meant to vote for Lacon and Goodson?—Yes.

13,111. Why did you not vote for Mr. Goodson?—I do not know the reason. I voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

13,112. No, you only voted for Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes, I did.

13,113. Why did you not vote for Mr. Goodson?—I can hardly say. I think I voted for Lacon and Goodson too.

13,114. Did you get anything for your vote in 1859?—No; I had not a vote.

13,115. You are quite sure you took no money the other side?—I did not take anything the other side.

13,116. And were not offered any?—No.

M. Gaze.

MARK GAZE sworn; examined by MR. RUSSELL.

13,117. What are you?—A shoemaker.

13,118. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—15*l.*, received of Mr. Cooper.

13,119. Did you take anything on the other side?—No.

13,120. Were you offered anything on the other, 15*l.*?—No.

13,121. Did you get anything for your vote in 1859?—I have voted in favour of the Liberals by influence through family causes, but I do not remember the exact date.

13,122. Do you know a man named Christopher Steward?—Yes.

13,123. Did he give you some money in 1859?—No; but there was some privilege given to the wife, I think.

13,124. That is to your wife?—Yes.

13,125. For your vote?—Yes.

13,126. And that made you vote for the Liberals?—Yes.

13,127. Do you know how much it was?—No, I do not.

13,128. Who was it gave it to her?—I do not know. I am not sure whether Mr. Steward or any other party.

13,129. Was it as much money as you think you got last time?—I do not remember. I do not know what amount it was.

13,130. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Who determined which way you shall vote; yourself or your wife?—Sometimes there is a great influence and family causes. I had a son apprenticed to Mr. Steward at that time.

C. Forder.

CHARLES FORDER sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,131. What are you?—An upholsterer.

13,133. Who from?—Mr. Cooper.

13,134. Did you get anything in 1859?—I was not on the register.

13,135. Did you get any offer on the other side?—No. I told them I was very sorry, but I could not vote for them, because my employment lies the other way.

F. Jay.

FRANCIS JAY sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,136. What are you?—A baker.

13,138. From Mr. Cooper?—Yes.

13,139. Were you offered anything on the other side?—Yes.

13,141. Who by?—Mr. Downing.

SEVENTEENTH DAY.

F. Jay.

4 Sept. 1866.

13,142. Did you refuse it?—Yes, I returned it to him.

13,143. You took it first?—It was left in my house, and I returned it to him Tuesday morning.

13,144. Did you get anything at the election of 1859?—No.

13,145. Had you a vote?—Yes.

13,146. When Downing left the money in your house, did he leave a ticket with it?—No; the money was done up in a piece of paper, and I returned it to him the same, the next morning.

13,147-8. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you recollect this man coming?

(Mr. Satterthwaite.) I think he did to Cattermole's. (The Witness.) I think you are decidedly wrong; I never was in Cattermole's in my life. Mr. Downing called upon me himself. I am here to speak the truth.

13,149. (Mr. Satterthwaite.) I do not think this is the man. The man I mean wore a blue Jersey. If it is in Downing's list Downing would tender me the money.

(Mr. Fitzgerald.) Probably it was in the list Downing gave you.

(Mr. Satterthwaite.) There is no doubt Downing would have the money.

13,150. (Mr. Russell.) Did you, Jay, return the money to Downing yourself?—I did in the same paper that he left it, 14 sovereigns and two half-sovereigns.

JAMES NOAH ARBON sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

J. N. Arbon.

13,151. What are you?—I am a fish merchant.

13,152. Do you wish to contradict a statement that you received money?—I do; and I wish more if it is within the province of right I should like to have the author of the statement, as I think a libel on a man's character should in some way be removed, and I am quite prepared to take the advice of my legal adviser in the matters, and to carry the matter to its utmost point.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

13,153. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you recollect this man?—I do not know. Perhaps you will see if you can find him on any of the lists that have been handed in, then we can trace him. If it has not been by a ticket it was by a list.

JAMES NOAH ARBON recalled; examination resumed by Mr. FITZGERALD.

J. N. Arbon.

13,154. Who did you vote for?—The two Tory candidates.

13,155. Were you canvassed by them?—By one of them.

13,156. Who was that?—The chairman of the Great Eastern Railway, I forget the name.

13,157. Mr. Goodson?—Yes.

13,158. Were you canvassed by the Liberal party?—Yes, I met them promiscuously in the street one day.

13,159. Did you promise their party?—Neither.

13,160. A man who does not promise in Yarmouth when he is asked, renders himself liable to an imputation?—I wish I had known the character of Yarmouth before. I had not voted for several elections before, and if I remain in possession of a vote I will never vote again. I am so thoroughly satisfied with the conduct of Yarmouth. I have always held myself superior to any inducement whatever.

13,161. You appear to have been maligned?—Yes; and I ask for the right address, if you can put me in the course for it.

13,162. I am afraid Mr. Satterthwaite is unable to hand you the name of the person that mentioned it to him?—I should be very glad to have it.

13,163. Is Noah Arbon your father?—Yes.

13,164. Do you think there may have been a confusion between you and him?—Not the slightest. We are both thoroughly independent in what we do as far as public matters are concerned.

13,165. He is on the other side in politics?—Yes.

13,166. And you think he is as unlikely to take a bribe as you?—I am thoroughly satisfied, if it was to be the last word I had to speak I should speak it now.

JAMES MARTIN sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

J. Martin.

13,167. What are you?—A cabman, a cab driver.

13,169. From Mr. Cooper?—No.

13,170. From whom?—From Mr. John Barber.

13,171. Were you offered anything on the other side?—No, nothing.

13,172. You are known to be a staunch Conservative is that the reason?—Yes, decidedly, I am.

13,179. Did you take it?—No.

13,180. Did you get anything in 1859?—I was not living in Yarmouth then.

13,181. (Mr. Russell.) Are you certain it was not 20*l.* that Mr. Cooper gave you?—No, I am certain of it; and I see it observed in the papers he gave me that sum, but that was a falsehood.

13,182. Did you count the money when you got it?—Yes.

13,183. Where did Mr. Cooper give you the money?—In his shop against the Hall Quay.

13,184. Did you call for it?—No. He called me as I was going out on the Quay.

13,185. I thought you said he gave it you in his shop?—Yes.

13,186. You went there for it?—Yes; but I should not have gone if he had not called me.

13,187. You went there?—Yes.

13,188. How did he pay you, over the counter?—No. He took me in a back room there. I went through the shop with him.

13,189. Did he count out the sovereigns in your hand?—Yes. He said there were 17, and that was as much as he could do.

13,190. Did you ask for more?—No. When he called first at my house he said there would be money, and what he gave the others he would give me, but not to promise anybody else, and I did not.

13,191. When did he call first at your house?—I should think within a week or ten days previous to the election, and I never saw him till that morning; that was after the Committee had sat.

13,192. (Mr. Russell.) Had you been to the "Angel" before Mr. Cooper gave you the money?—Yes, I rode up town with my brother-in-law. I had not been well, and he asked me to ride up the town with him. I had not been out for a fortnight or three weeks.

13,193. Were you offered anything at the "Angel?"—No.

13,194. Did you tell Mr. Cooper you had been there?—No.

13,225. And how much beyond that?—No more.

13,226. Did you not have 15*l.* or 20*l.* from Mr. Cooper?—No, I did not.

13,227. Did your wife receive any money for you?—Not that I know of. I never heard her say anything about it.

13,228. You swear to that?—Yes.

13,229. Who gave you the 10*s.*?—Mr. Cooper.

13,230. When?—The day before the election.

13,231. Why did he give you 10*s.*?—I did not ask him for it.

13,232. Did he say what it was for?—No.

13,233. Had you been driving Mr. Cooper about?—No; I had the other parties, and I got nothing for that either.

13,234. Did you get anything from Mr. Edwards?—No.

13,235. 7*l.* 10*s.*?—No.

13,236. You swear that?—Yes.

13,237. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know a man named Dunnell?—No.

13,238. Have you ever heard of Dunnell's name?—No.

13,239. And do not know anything about him?—No.

13,240. (Mr. Russell.) Did Mr. Dunnell never give you 7*l.* 10*s.*?—No, that is all I received.

13,241. You swear you received nothing but that 10*s.*?—That is all I received.

13,242. Or your wife?—My wife was not troubled with anything. I never heard her say anything about taking anything.

13,243. Did your wife tell you which way to vote?—No. I never heard her say anything at all about it.

13,244. Are you sure you are telling the truth?—I know nothing about what my wife did, if she has done anything. If you wish to have her up here I will send for her.

13,247. And did she say she did not?—Yes.

13,248. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know Downing?—No.

13,249. Thomas Downing?—I may know the man, but I do not know his name.

13,251. When did you promise to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—I cannot tell you the day of the month, I forgot all about that. Only Sir Edmund Lacon stopped me on the Southtown road and asked me for my vote. I said, "I intend to vote for you as I have promised to vote for you."

13,252. (Mr. Slade.) Downing says he gave you a ticket with the letter C upon it?—Not me.

13,253. James Thurlow, No. 1,231?—Not me.

13,254. That must be you?—No.

13,255. You are 1,231?—If he did he gave it to my wife; he did not give it to me.

13,256. Did he give it to your wife?—That I do not know. I did not hear anything about it, whether she took it or no. If he did he gave it to my wife; I did not receive anything. I did not know she took anything.

13,257. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you vote in 1859?—Yes.

13,258. Did you get anything for your vote then?—No, I did not.

13,259. How long have you been an inhabitant of Yarmouth?—Just over 40 years.

13,264. Which was it?—I cannot say anything about that.

13,265. You must recollect, if you please; did you vote in 1859?—You will excuse me; I have no learning.

13,266. What did you get this 10*s.* from Mr. Cooper for?—I did not ask him for it. I should have voted just the same if he had not given it to me. I promised Sir Edmund Lacon.

13,268. Did you hear there was any money given?—No, I knew nothing about that.

13,275. Do you know any of your friends who took money?—No, none at all.

13,276. You know of nobody who had any money at all?—No.

JOHN GARTSIDE OVEREND sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

J. G. Overend.

13,277. What are you?—A grocer.

13,278. Did you take an active part in the last election?—A very small part.

13,279. Were you a committee man for the Liberal party?—No.

13,280. Did you attend at the meeting at which it was discussed what was to be done with the shaky voters?—Yes, I did, and the new voters too; the shaky and the new voters.

13,281. And did you give any advice at that meeting?—I did not.

13,282. Was it decided at that meeting that money must be spent?—It was not.

13,283. Was nothing said about the expenditure of money at that meeting?—Not that I am aware of.

13,284. Did you not discuss what you would do with the shaky voters?—No.

13,285. Then what was the meeting held for?—They were to be canvassed, the shaky voters and the new voters.

13,286. For the sake of canvassing the shaky voters?—Yes, and the new voters.

13,287. Do you mean you were not at that time cognizant of there being any money spent in bribery?—No, I was not, nor any of the party that I am aware of.

13,288. When did you become cognizant of it?—I do not know. That was the only time I interfered with it. I struck then.

13,289. Did you become cognizant of the bribery before the polling day?—There was a rumour, that is all I know. I know nothing of it myself.

13,290. You took no part in it yourself?—Not at all.

13,291. Mr. Waters gave us your name?—He did.

WILLIAM BARLOW SKINNER sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

W. B. Skinner.

13,292. What are you?—A miller.

13,293. You are on the Liberal side?—I am.

13,294. Did you canvass for the Liberal party?—I did, on four or five occasions with Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman.

13,295. Do you know anything of the bribery on your side?—Not the slightest, further than hearing it repeated, and so forth, not that I took part in anything of the sort.

13,296. Can you give the Commissioners any information at all?—No, nothing further than clearing my own character as regards Mr. Wilshack, who spoke to an utter falsehood. He said I offered 20*l.* to a man of the name of Smith, whom I swear I never saw in his house in my life. I wish, if you please, that you would have Smith up to corroborate my statement. I heard Mr. Wilshack make that statement in the Court, and after leaving the Court I called on this Smith, whom I had never seen in his house in my life, and I asked if I had ever offered him anything. He said "No." I said, "Did I offer you 25*l.*?" and he said "No." I asked him again, "Did I ever see you in your house in your life?" He said, "No." His wife came forward and said, "You called," which I did once or twice, I confess; but I never saw him, and she said, "I can swear that you never saw my husband in his house in your life."

STEPHEN RUDRAM sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

S. Rudram.

13,297. What are you?—A carpenter and joiner.

13,298. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—14*l.* 10*s.* It was kindly brought to my house by Mr. Cooper. 15*l.* should have been the figure, but he said he should take 10*s.* to himself for his trouble.

13,299. Did you get anything from the other side?—No. I might have had it if I liked.

13,300. Was it offered you?—Yes.

13,302. By whom?—Mr. Fox, the master builder. I would not accept it.

13,303. Where does Mr. Fox live, do you know?—I cannot say exactly, somewhere on the Crown Road, I think.

13,304. The Apsley Road, is it?—It may be the Apsley Road.

13,305. Or Bath Hill Terrace?—Not that Mr. Fox; it is the elder Fox of the two.

13,306. When did Mr. Fox offer you this money?—I cannot say whether it was the night before the election or the night before that. I did not make any memorandum of it. The chief I recollect of it was, he said I was the honestest fellow he had fallen in with yet, because I would not take his money. I told him I should vote dead against him if I did.

13,307. You have always been a Conservative?—Yes, in principle.

13,308. Did you vote in 1859?—Yes.

13,309. Did you get anything then?—I got 15*l.* That seemed to be the figure they put for me, 15*l.*

13,310. At both elections?—Yes.

13,311. You got the whole 15*l.* in 1859?—Yes.

13,312. From whom?—Mr. Cooper. He did not take anything for his trouble that time. Perhaps I should not have said so much about Mr. Cooper, but he has made several statements about me, I see, in the papers, in reference to what he gave me. He says from 15*l.* to 20*l.*, his memory would not serve him. I see it got up as high as 23*l.*

13,313. (Mr. Slade.) What Mr. Cooper said is this, "Stephen Rudram, Crown Road." That is you?—Yes.

13,314. "How much?—15*l.* I am merely speaking "from memory; it may have been 20*l.*, some of them. "I will endeavour to recollect it." Therefore it was not correct what you saw in the paper?—It is a misprint.

13,315. He says "not less than 15*l.*?"—That is a wrong statement.

13,316. Did he pay the money down to you in your shop?—In my own house; he came to my house and paid it.

13,317. Was anybody there?—No, not in the room with us.

13,318. What time was it?—It was either breakfast half-hour, or dinner, or I do not know which.

13,319. When you went home to your meal?—Yes.

13,320. Did he give you the 15*l.*, or did he give you the 14*l.* 10*s.* first?—14*l.* 10*s.*; 14 sovereigns and a half-sovereign; and he said, "I shall take a half-sovereign for my trouble; that is all I get." "Very well," I said.

13,321. Did you tell him you got 15*l.* at the last election?—Yes; I got a 10*l.* note and five sovereigns.

13,322. Did you say it was rather hard you should have less this time?—No, I do not recollect saying such a thing as that.

13,323. Were you not rather disappointed at only receiving 14*l.* 10*s.*?—I thought it rather a mean trick of his to cut me short.

13,324. Did you say anything?—I did.

13,325. What did you say?—I believe I mentioned it to him at the time, and that is what brought it out from him, I suppose, that he took it for his trouble, the half-sovereign.

13,326. You are sure he said that?—Yes.

13,327. Did Mr. Fox say where you could get the money?—He said he had got it. He would go in at my back door, which was close by, and give it me there and then, if I would vote for the party.

13,328. Do you work for Mr. Fox?—No, I have no connexion with him.

D. Gravener.

DANIEL GRAVENER sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,329. What are you?—A coach-smith.

13,330. What did you get at the last election for your vote?—30*l.* between the two.

13,331. What did you get from the Conservatives?—I had 15*l.* about three or four days, or four or five days before the election.

13,332. From whom?—George Watson. He made it out to be 20*l.* but I never received 20*l.* from him. I received that in his shop and told it there.

13,333. And what did you get on the other side?—Mr. Skinner came down to our place and he was talking about what I wanted. I said I did not want any dealings with him, I knew a man of the name of Edwards; and Mr. Skinner went away and Mr. Edwards came down in about three-quarters of an hour, and he brought me 15*l.* and laid it on the front room table; he cannot deny it.

13,334. Mr. Edwards gave you 15*l.*?—Yes. They put me down 20*l.* on each side, I see, in the papers, and Mr. Watson said 20*l.*, but it is as false as God is truth.

13,335. (Mr. Slade.) Where did you get the 15*l.* from Edwards?—He brought it into our room, in the front room, and laid it on the table, and I counted it and gave my wife 14*l.* and put a sovereign in my pocket.

13,336. Which Edwards do you mean?—I mean the tailor that lives in Regent Street.

13,337. Do you mean the Mr. Skinner who has just been examined?—Yes, that is the gentleman I mean that came.

13,338. Did you tell Mr. Skinner what you wanted?—No. I told him I did not want any truck with him; I did not want anything to do with him; I knew a man of the name of Edwards; and after that, about three-quarters of an hour, Mr. Edwards came down, by whose sending I do not know.

13,339. Did you understand by Mr. Skinner he was going to offer you some money?—I fancy he was, but I cannot swear it.

13,340. Did he ask you which way you were going to vote?—He did not ask me that; but I believe I might have had the money.

13,341. Cannot you tell me what passed between you?—I said I did not wish to have anything to do with Mr. Skinner, and he walked out of the garden. I said, "I know a man of the name of Edwards," and, as near as I can tell, about an hour or a little less, Mr. Edwards came down. I was at home and I had the money.

13,342. Did you understand Mr. Edwards was sent by Mr. Skinner?—No, I never understood that, but I fancy so.

13,343. Did you know Mr. Edwards had money to give away?—I heard so. It was rumoured about.

13,344. Did you mean Mr. Skinner to understand that if you took money you would take it from Mr. Edwards?—I gave him a broad hint.

13,345. And you think Mr. Skinner took it?—No, Mr. Skinner did not take it.

13,346. He took the hint?—I do not know; he might. That I cannot speak for.

13,347. Is that all you got at the election?—That is all.

13,348. Do you know that gentleman, Mr. Satterthwaite (pointing)?—No, I do not. I can tell you what there was in the paper. They said that I took a ticket, but I never saw a ticket no more than a blind man, nor even a piece of paper of any sort. I will be on my oath at any time.

13,349. I see you divided your favours, you voted one and one?—Yes. I did not think it worth while making chalk with one and cheese with the other. I liked the looks of Mr. Brogden when he came into the shop, and the other I said I would give to Sir Edmund; and I made up my mind that I would vote, whether money or not, for Mr. Brogden.

13,350. Did you vote in 1859?—No.

S. Tricker.

SAMUEL TRICKER sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,351. What are you?—A greengrocer.

13,353. Who from?—From the "Army and Navy."

13,354. Did you take a ticket there?—No.

13,355. Who sent you there?—I heard a talk about the money being given away there, and I went down.

13,356. Did you vote for the Liberal party?—Yes.

13,357. Who canvassed you?—Not anyone.

13,358. When you got to the "Army and Navy" did you see any of your friends there?—No; there were two or three strangers there when I went, not anyone that I knew.

13,359. (Mr. Slade.) You must know who sent you to the "Army and Navy?"—Not anyone. I heard them talk about it on the quay the afternoon of the nomination. I heard several of them talking. I was standing alongside, and I heard several say there was going to be a meeting at the "Army and Navy."

13,360. (Mr Fitzgerald.) Who said so?—Several. We were standing on the Quay.

13,361. Who were they?—I do not know; and I walked from there to the "Army and Navy."

13,362. (Mr. Slade.) Did you go with a lot more?—No.

13,363. You went by yourself?—Yes.

13,364. (Mr. Russell.) What did the strange gentleman do when you got there?—I went upstairs with some others. He asked me what I wanted. I told him the same as the rest.

13,365. Did you give him your name?—Yes. He would not give it me at first. I went away and then I went back to him.

13,366. And then he gave you the money?—Yes.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE.

13,367. (Mr. Russell.) Do you remember anything about this man?—I think I remember his features; but it is preposterous for the man to say he did not know anything about it. Somebody must have sent him down.

13,368. He must have been on a list before you would pay him?—Yes. I should not know what to give him without.

SEVENTEENTH DAY.

S. Tricker.

4 Sept. 1866.

SAMUEL TRICKER recalled; examination resumed by Mr. SLADE.

13,369. Where were the others that went up before you?—I do not know.

13,370. Were they strangers to you?—Yes, quite strangers to me.

13,371. What ward do you live in?—The Nelson Ward.

13,372. Mr. Barber, Mr. Fill, and Mr. Stone were the three?—None called on me.

13,373. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

13,374. (Mr. Slade.) Did you ever see a ticket?—No, I never saw one. I did not know that there were any out until I went upstairs and saw some lying on a little table. I did not know then what they were for.

13,375. (Mr. Russell.) When Mr. Satterthwaite would not pay you at first, who did you get to go up with you?—I went down and sat in the room, and after the other three went, Cattermole called me upstairs. Then I went up, and the gentleman paid me the money.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

13,376. (Mr. Russell.) Do you remember that?—I remember in one or two cases where the landlord interfered. I refused to pay them because they had no tickets. I think there were two cases, and I remember the landlord did give me two tickets, and he said he would be responsible; and I marked the landlord's name upon them, "This is by Cattermole."

13,377. And this might have been one of those men?—It might have been.

G. Humphrey.

GEORGE HUMPHREY sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

13,378. What are you?—A licensed victualler I suppose you would call me.

13,379. Did you get anything for your vote at the last election?—I got 15*l.*; but I do not know whether it was for the vote or not. I had it before the election at any rate.

13,380. Where did you get it?—At the "Angel."

13,381. Did you have a ticket?—I think I had, but I am sure I cannot recollect; I fancy I had.

13,382. Do you remember who gave it you?—If I had one, Mr. Thomas Edwards gave it me.

13,383. If he did not give you a ticket he sent you up to the "Angel?"—Yes.

13,384. And there you got the 15*l.*?—Yes.

13,385. Was that all you got?—That is all I got for myself.

13,386. Did you get anything for anyone else?—I think the next day a young man of the name of Bambridge had a ticket, and he could not go up, and I took the ticket and went and got the 15*l.* for him.

13,387. Is that Henry Bambridge of Gaol Street?—Yes.

13,388. How much did you get for him?—15*l.*

13,389. At the "Angel?"—Yes.

13,390. From the same gentleman who paid you?—I think not; I am not certain. I did not see the gentleman the first time I went there.

13,391. Do you know Mr. Edwards by sight?—No.

13,392. Was it a gentleman in spectacles who paid you the second 15*l.*?—I do not recollect whether he had spectacles on; I think not though.

13,393. Did you give it to Mr. Bambridge?—Yes.

13,394. Did Mr. Bambridge tell you who had given him his ticket?—No, he did not.

13,395. Were you offered any money on the other side?—Yes.

13,396. Who by?—Mr. William Grief.

13,397. How much did he offer you?—20*l.*

13,398. Was that before you got the 15*l.* at the "Angel?"—Yes.

13,399. And did you refuse the 20*l.* from Mr. Grief?—Yes; and so I should if it had been a 100*l.*

13,400. Did Mr. Grief tell you where he could get the 20*l.* from?—No.

13,401. The 15*l.* you took to yourself, and the 15*l.* you took for Mr. Bambridge, is that all the money that you know of?—Yes.

13,402. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

13,403. Did you get anything for your vote then?—10*l.*

13,404. Who from?—I cannot say. It was a stranger.

13,405. Who did you vote for?—I voted for Mr. Watkin and McCullagh at that time.

13,406. You voted the same side?—Yes.

13,407. But you cannot remember who gave it?—I cannot now. I do not recollect who it was gave it to me. I do not think I saw the party at all. I think it was left wrapped up in a piece of paper. I do not recollect who it was at all.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock.

EIGHTEENTH DAY.

EIGHTEENTH DAY.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 5th September 1866.

Mr. R. A. Bentham.

Mr. ROBERT ALEXANDER BENTHAM recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

13,408. Have you received particulars from London as to Mr. Brogden's account?—Yes, I have.

13,409. Will you clear up what was left in doubt?—Shall I hand in the account, or read it?

13,410. You had better read it.—July 3rd, loan, 1,500*l.*; the 7th, loan, 2,500*l.*; the 10th, 1,000*l.*; the 11th, 1,000*l.*; the 19th, 1,500*l.* There was a small cheque of 46*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.* paid out; and then, dividend on 5,000*l.* consols, 73*l.* 15*s.* 0*d.*; sale of consols, 4,371*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* Then the last item is a draft on Manchester, 280*l.* 15*s.* 9*d.* That is the debit side. Then credit:—The 3rd July, left 1,000*l.*; on the 7th, 1,500*l.*; the 8th, 1,000*l.*; on the 10th, 1,000*l.*; on the 11th, 1,500*l.* Then on the 24th, in part of loan of 1,500*l.*; September 3rd, interest on loan, 46*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.*; December 30th, interest on loan, 79*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.*; 1866, May 31st, loan repaid, 4,509*l.*; and June 1st, interest on loan, 147*l.* 5*s.* 2*d.* And that balances the account.

13,411. It does not appear here what day the transfer of consols was made, but I think you told us that was made the 3rd July?—It was made prior to the 3rd.

13,412. Have you ascertained who brought down that sum of 1,500*l.* on the 11th?—I cannot find out at all. I have written to the assistant manager, and he cannot give me any information. He has asked all the cashiers, and they cannot recollect who took it; it is so long a time now that they cannot charge their memories.

13,413. In the course of business of the bank, would no memorandum be made as to who drew out the money in that way?—No, we should not put the name of the person who drew it out.

EIGHTEENTH DAY.

Mr. R. A. Bentham.

5 Sept. 1866.

13,414. Not the receiver of the money?—It would be payable to "Self." It would be merely the remembrance of the cashier who paid it that we have to go by.

13,415. (Mr. Russell.) I suppose the object of the account remaining open so long was, that it was inexpedient to close it until after the petition?—I could have closed it whenever I liked, but it went on, and the fact is, I did not think of it, or else it would have been much better for him to have closed it before. We could have sold the consols at a better price.

13,416. (Mr. Slade.) You can say that that 1,500*l.* was brought down in gold, can you not?—Oh yes, certainly. We could tell that by the books.

13,417. Do I understand that no person could tell us who received that sum, except the recipient himself?—None of our cashiers.

13,418. Nobody in the bank?—No one. The assistant manager has questioned everyone who has the payment of money, but he cannot find out any one.

13,419. (Mr. Russell.) But it must have been by written order from Mr. Brogden?—It must. We should never pay without, of course.

13,420. (Mr. Slade.) I presume the person who received the money was known to the cashier?—He brought the order, and that would identify him. I suppose he would know him, or no doubt he would, or ought to do so. Mr. Tahourdin has written to me this morning, and I should like to hand the letter to you. There seems to be some misapprehension on my part as to bringing down that 1,000*l.* (The witness handed the letter to the Commissioners.)

13,421. (Mr. Russell.) The sum of money that Mr. Tahourdin, in the letter you have handed in, states he did not bring down, was the 1,500*l.* that was brought down on the 7th?—On the Friday, I think.

13,422. On that occasion, three gentlemen came down together, one was yourself, the other was Mr. Tahourdin, the third was Mr. Brogden's brother?—No, Mr. Brogden himself.

13,423. And according to that, if it was not Mr. Tahourdin, or if it was not you, it must have been Mr. Brogden himself?—It might have been Mr. Salmon. Mr. Salmon is the only person that I recollect receiving money; might it not be him?

13,424. I do not think Mr. Salmon came down that day?—He was up and down a great deal, because he generally came to the bank for the monies.

13,425. I have been reminded that Mr. Salmon was in London, according to his evidence, on the 6th and 7th, and came down again on the 8th, and he did bring 1,000*l.*?—Yes, he so stated.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

13,426. Do you wish to make any statement?—I wish to make a statement with reference to the parties that come to deny receiving the money. Downing waited upon me at the hotel where I was staying last night, and told me there were several names in that list who had not got the money, but it had been transferred to other parties. I wish, for my own protection, that Downing, and those parties who say the others had the use of the money, should come and give the explanation of the parties they gave it to. There are two or three names he mentioned to me, and perhaps he can give the names of the others.

13,427. Did he say who the other parties were?—I think he introduced an intermediate party to the payment, but perhaps the Commissioners can get that out of him. I should like, if it was possible, for the whole of the parties who had the use of the money to be here, so that we might get out of some of them where this money has gone to. There is also another person whose name came out yesterday of the name of Fox. I suppose he will be one of the captains. When I heard the name, I remembered him bringing me a list of a large number of names. The amount of money he wanted was so large that I refused to give him the money upon that list. When his name came out, I wrote a small slip to Mr. Livingston to ask him, had he anything to do with this Mr. Fox. The answer he returned to me was "Yes." Last evening I made inquiry, and I find I cannot get to it as to who the intermediate parties were, but I think there was one with him, I am not sure. However, he is one that had money. I could not remember his name, but I now remember his going away in a huff because I would not give him this money, but I remember nothing more of him.

13,428. Do you know whether his name is Thomas or William?—I do not know.

13,429. What is he?—I believe he is a builder.

13,430. That is Thomas Fox?—I believe it is.

Mrs. C. Thurlow.

Mrs. CHRISTIANA THURLOW sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

13,431. Are you the wife of James Thurlow?—Yes.

13,432. Did you receive any money from anybody at the last election?—I did not.

13,433. Do you know Mr. Cooper?—Yes, I do know him.

13,434. Did he give you any money?—He did not.

13,435. Did you see Mr. Cooper about that time?—I did.

13,436. What day was it?—I really cannot tell the day.

13,437. How many days before the election?—It must have been many days before, because my son was to have been a clerk. That is what I spoke to him about the election day, therefore it must have been before the election day.

13,438. What did Mr. Cooper say about that?—He said he should be, but he was not.

13,439. Did he ask you which way your husband was going to vote?—No, he did not mention it to me at all.

13,440. What made you ask Mr. Cooper about your son being a clerk?—Because I thought he might as well earn the money as not. That was my only motive for asking him, that my son might earn the money that was paid, by being a clerk.

13,441. Did you know that Mr. Cooper could get him a clerk's place?—I thought he could; I was not sure when I spoke to him.

13,442. Was that at your house?—No, at Mr. Cooper's office, at the back of the Hall I saw him.

13,443. Was your son employed at the election by anybody?—No, he was not; he refused to go.

13,444. Why did he refuse?—He told me he did not wish to go.

13,445. Why not?—I do not know. He told me he did not wish to have anything to do with it, or else he might have been employed by Mr. Cooper.

13,446. Why should he refuse to go?—I cannot tell why. He said, "I do not wish to have anything to "do with it. I shall have to get leave of the master." He was an apprentice then. "I do not wish to have "anything to do with it. I would sooner go on with "my work."

13,447. Did you not press him to go?—No, I did not care about his going.

13,448. What made you change your mind?—I do not know; I had no particular reason. I did not change my mind. It was not his wish. I wished him to go.

13,449. And you always wished him to go?—Yes, I did. Mr. Cooper had said to me, "Never mind, he shall get his money whether he comes or not."

13,450. How much did he say he should get?—He said he should give him a sovereign, but he did not give him but a half sovereign some time after the election.

13,451. Did you see him give it him ?—No, I did not. He went himself for it. I did not see him.

13,452. You mean 10*s.* ?—Yes.

13,453. Are you sure it was not 10*l.* ?—No, 10*s.* That is the money.

13,454. Mr. Cooper says he gave you 10*l.* for your husband's vote ?—He did not. Mr. Cooper never gave me one penny in my life.

13,455. Never ?—No, he did not.

13,456. (Mr. Russell.) Did you have a ticket given you ?—That was by the opposite party I had.

13,457. Who gave you that ticket ?—Mrs. Walsh, the hatter's wife, gave me three ; one for Mr. Gravener, of No. 8 Northumberland Place ; Mr. Smith, of No. 6 Northumberland Place ; and one for my husband.

13,458. And did you give those three tickets to Gravener, Smith, and your husband ?—They promised to vote for the Blue party if they were paid, but when I took them the tickets they altered their minds, and would not take them.

13,459. They would not take the tickets ?—No. I did not say anything to my husband about the tickets, because he was so determined to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon.

13,460. What did you do with the tickets ?—Gave them to Mrs. Walsh, who gave them to me—the hatter's wife.

13,461. Did you return them all three ?—Yes.

13,462. Do you mean to say that you know that your husband received no money at all except the 10*s.* ?—I think he did.

13,463. You think he did ?—Yes.

13,464. Who from ?—Mr. Cooper.

13,466. When do you think he received it ?—I cannot tell, but I think it was early on the voting morning ; I am not very sure about that.

13,467. Did he tell you he had that ?—He told me he had it, but not exactly when. I think it was on the voting morning.

13,468. Was this 10*l.* that your husband had before the tickets were given to you ?—No, afterwards. My husband never asked for a bribe, and did not want a bribe. He was determined to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon at first.

13,469. That is why you did not give your husband a ticket ?—Yes.

13,470. You thought he would take money from the side he was going to vote for ?—No, I did not think it all. He said he did not care about a bribe ; he had made up his mind to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and he would vote for him. If he could get ever so much on the other side he would not take it.

EDWARD JEX sworn ; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. E. Jex.

13,471. What are you ?—A licensed victualler.

13,473. What did you get at the last election ?—20*l.*

13,474. From whom ?—I received it from two men by the name of Parker and Seago.

13,475. Did you get anything in 1859 ?—I was not here at the time.

13,476. (Mr. Slade.) Did you get any more money at all at the last election ?—No, I did not.

13,477. Did you get 10*l.* from Parker and 10*l.* from Seago ?—No. They both came together and brought it to my house.

13,477. Who gave you the money ?—They were both together. I will not be certain who gave me the money. They came into the room together and laid the money on the table for me to vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl, and I did so.

HENRY CURTIS sworn ; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. H. Curtis.

13,479. What are you ?—A tallow chandler.

13,481. From whom ?—Mr. Kelf.

13,482. Did you get anything else ?—Nothing else.

13,483. Did you get anything in 1859 ?—Nothing at all.

13,484. Had you a vote then ?—I had.

13,485. (Mr. Slade.) Did you not get something from Mr. Hickling ?—Not anything.

13,486. Did you get 15*l.* from anybody else ?—Not anybody else. Not a farthing.

13,487. Did you get any tickets ?—I did not know there was such a thing in circulation, not till after this Commission sat.

BENJAMIN LINDOFF sworn ; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. B. Lindoff.

13,488. What are you ?—I am a corn porter.

13,489. Where do you live—at Gorleston ?—On Southdown,—the waterside.

13,490. What did you do at the last election ?—I had 60*l.* to distribute.

13,491. From whom ?—Mr. Cooper.

13,492. What did you do with the 60*l.* ?—I gave 15*l.* to Mr. Duffield.

13,493. Do you know his christian name ?—I think his name is James Duffield, but he is a carter.

13,494. Is not his name Thomas ?—I cannot say. I think he lives up in Southtown Road. I do not know whether his name is John or James. I have always been in the habit of calling him James.

13,495. You gave him that to vote for Lacon and Goodson ?—No ; I got the money back from him the election morning.

13,496. He returned it, did he ?—When I went to him the election morning I was going to offer him more money, if I was not going to give it him ; that I would give him 5*l.* more, if he required it, to vote for Lacon and Goodson, as I found the market was getting up,—that is how I agreed with the man.

13,497. Would he not take the 5*l.* more ?—When I went he told me he knew nothing only about Sir Edmund Lacon—he would vote for Sir Edmund Lacon, and not for Mr. Goodson. I claimed the money. I told him I did not want him to vote for Sir Edward Lacon alone, and I wanted the money back again if he would not vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

13,498. Did he give it you back ?—His wife, after a deal of talk, went in and fetched it, and gave it me back again.

13,499. Who was the next ?—I gave it in two lots, this money. I gave Mr. Starling 15*l.* on the Sunday. I think it was the Sunday, but I should be very sorry to swear whether it was Sunday or Monday. I gave a man by the name of Richard Harrod 15*l.* on the Sunday. I promised him more, the same as I did Starling, if the market rose. I agreed with him according to the market, and then I gave a man by the name of Minter, a shoemaker, who lives on the Southtown Road. I gave him 15*l.* I was to give him more if the market rose. That is all I am concerned in.

13,500. That is 60*l.* ?—Yes.

13,501. What did you do with the 15*l.* that Duffield returned ?—I gave 5*l.* to Starling.

13,502. 5*l.* additional ?—Yes. I gave 5*l.* to Starling, and he gave me 2*l.* for my services for getting him this other 5*l.* Mr. Richard Harrod, I gave him 5*l.*, and he gave me 2*l.* back. Mr. Minter, I gave him 5*l.*, and never had a penny back from him. I never asked any one of them for it, only I considered I ought to have it for my services for going for him. I think Harrod was bribed by the other side. I think Downing told him to get all he could off me, and tell him.

13,503. Who is that?—Downing told Mr. Harrod to get all he could off me, and he would be a friend to him.

13,504. Duffield did vote for Sir Edmund Lacon?—No, he did not. I think not. I do not know. I cannot swear about that, because I do not know anything about it. I have not got any learning myself, and cannot read any papers.

13,505. He voted for Lacon and Brogden?—I cannot say whether he did or did not. I cannot read myself, and have no learning.

13,506. Is that all you know about it?—That is all I know about it.

13,507. You got nothing for yourself?—Not a farthing; nobody dare offer me anything.

13,508. You got 4*l.* for your services?—Yes, that was for getting this money for these people who had the extra 5*l.* each.

13,509. Did you do anything in this way in 1859?—Yes.

13,510. We should like to have that?—What, now?

13,511. It is a good deal, is it?—Do you want it now?

13,512. Have you got a good deal to tell us?—No, only about the same.

13,513. Then I daresay you would rather tell it us now than come up again?—There is Mr. Harrod, he had 15*l.*; Robert Starling, a man who is dead, 15*l.*; and Mr. Duffield, 15*l.*

13,514. The same man?—The same man. I gave him 15*l.*

13,515. He took it then?—Yes, he took it then; he took 15*l.* this time, but the election morning he would not keep up to his promise.

13,516. That is all?—That is all.

13,517. The same three?—I am a man who has got no learning, and I would not go after anybody that I did not know in person.

13,518. (Mr. Slade.) What relation is the Starling that you gave to this time to the man who is dead?—I think he is his brother.

13,519. (Mr. Russell.) Whom did you have the 45*l.* from in 1859?—I had it from Mr. Cooper. I cannot think of everything. I have not got it in my head the same as other people have got it, because I have got no learning.

13,520. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know any men who were bribed by Mr. Rivett?—No.

13,521. Or by Lummis?—No, I live the other side of the water.

R. Minter.

ROBERT MINTER sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,522. What are you?—A cordwainer.

13,523. Do you live in Southtown?—Yes.

13,524. We have been told you got 15*l.*?—20*l.*, I think.

13,525. At the last election?—Yes.

13,526. Did you get anything in 1859?—Yes.

13,528. Who from?—Mr. Greenhow.

13,529. Was that all you got?—Yes.

13,530. Who is Mr. Greenhow?—He formerly kept the "Sefton Arms."

13,531. Is he living now?—To the best of my knowledge he is.

13,532. Is he living at Southtown now?—He is.

13,533. Joseph Greenhow?—I do not know his name.

13,534. He lives in the market place?—No, he does not.

13,535. Is it Henry Greenhow, of near Garrison Walk?—He did formerly live there.

R. Harrod.

RICHARD HARROD sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,536. What are you?—A small boat builder.

13,537. We have been told that you got first 15*l.* and then 5*l.* from Mr. Lindoff?—Quite right.

13,438. You gave him back 2*l.*?—Yes.

13,539. Did you think that was fair?—I thought he had worked very hard for me, and I thought he ought to have 2*l.*

13,540. Did you get anything from the other side?—Oh yes, of course.

13,542. Who from?—A man by the name of Mr. Martin, sent it on the quiet one night when I was on shore.

13,543. Do you know his christian name?—Robert Martin.

13,544. Where does he live?—Somewhere close by the factory, down by the market gate somewhere.

13,545. Is he a voter?—He is a smack and boat owner, too.

13,546. What did he give you that 20*l.* for?—Because he respected me.

13,547. Which way were you to vote?—Which way I thought proper.

13,548. Then Robert Martin did not give it you for your vote?—I do not know what he gave it me for. He slipped it into my hand one night at the Cross. I was half drunk when I took it.

13,549. Is Robert Martin on the Liberal side, or the other?—I think he is on the Liberal side. I do not understand it. I have got no learning, but I found it very handy.

13,550. Which way did you vote?—For Sir Edmund Lacon and his friend. I do not know what Sir Edmund Lacon's friend is, Mr. Goodson.

13,551. Why did you take the other 20*l.*?—Because I was hard up and I wanted it, or else I should not have taken it. If they had not put it into my hands I should not have taken it.

13,552. Do you not think they wanted you to vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—Do not you see I could do as I liked then?

13,553. What did you do in 1859?—The election before the last?

13,554. Yes.—I took 15*l.* then.

13,555. Who from?—A man by the name of Lindoff, who lives on the Southtown road, somewhere close to the factory—Benjamin Lindoff.

13,556. Is that the man who was just examined?—Yes.

13,557. Is that all you got in 1859?—Yes.

13,558. You did not get anything from the other side then?—No, they would not let me have it. I should not have got it now if it had not been for my old friend Tom Downing putting me in the way to do it. He told me to do all I could on the other side, and vote for them, and there was no fiddling here. I kept that for myself. I knew I should vote that way.

13,559. You told him so?—No, I did not, or I should not have got the money.

T. Brown.

THOMAS BROWN sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,560. What are you?—A market gardener.

13,562. Who from?—I think it was from a Mr. Shattock.

13,563. Is his name James Shattock?—I do not know.

13,564. Did you get anything from the other side?—Nothing at all.

13,565. In 1859 did you get any money?—I never had a farthing in my life till now. I have voted several times, and always voted for the Liberals.

13,566. How came you to take money in this way? Because I wanted it. It was put into my hands, and I did know what it was for. I was never asked for my vote.

13,567. Did Mr. Shattock say where he got the money from?—No, he never said a word to me.

13,568. Did you intend to vote Liberal whether you had money or not?—Yes. When Mr. Brogden called on me, I told him if I was in the town I should vote for him, or I told him I should not vote against him.

13,569. You did not promise Mr. Brogden?—Those were my words: "If I am in the town, Mr. Brogden, I shall not vote against you." Those are the words I told Mr. Brogden. I always did vote Liberal at all elections.

THOMAS BETTS sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,570. What are you?—A fisherman.

13,572. Who from?—I do not know.

13,573. From a stranger?—From a stranger.

13,574. Did you take a ticket?—No, I never saw a ticket.

13,575. Who told you to come up?—I do not know.

13,576. Where did you get the money?—From Mr. George's at Gorleston, at the "Barking Fishery."

13,577. From Mr. George?—In that house.

13,578. How came you to go the "Barking Fishery?"—I usually go every evening when I am at home to get a glass of porter, sometimes something else.

13,579. Did you go up there?—I was sitting at the bar when I was called.

13,580. Did anybody tell you to go into the room where the stranger was?—Some one called me from the back of the counter, and told me I was wanted. I went through, I was led up to the top of the stairs, and saw some gentlemen there.

13,581. I want to know who called you?—I do not know.

13,582. And you got 20*l.*?—Yes.

13,583. To vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—They never asked me.

13,584. Not by anyone of the party?

13,585. You did vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—I did, but I never was asked to vote for them, not once, not by anyone of the party.

13,586. (Mr. Slade.) Were you asked to vote on the other side?—Yes.

13,587. Who asked you?—Sir Edmund Lacon. He came to my house when I was rigging for the summer fishery. I cannot say the time; about the latter part of May or the beginning of June.

13,588. Did you promise to vote for him?—No.

13,589. What did you say?—I told him I should not promise. I did not intend going that side.

13,590. Did you say that?—I did not tell him that, but I did not intend going that side.

13,591. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You promised no one? I was not asked by anyone else, only by Sir Edmund Lacon and his friend Mr. Goodson.

13,522. (Mr. Slade.) Did you see Warner at the "Barking Fishery?"—I do not recollect seeing him.

13,593. Or King?—I cannot say who it was. It might be them, but I cannot say who it was.

13,594. You know Warner and King?—Oh quite well.

13,595. Did they not canvass you?—No.

13,596. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) In 1859, did you get anything then?—No.

13,597. Had you a vote?—No.

13,604. Were you canvassed by anybody before Mr. Hammond gave you this 15*l.*?—No.

13,640. Who by?—I do not know him.

13,641. You do not know any of them?—No.

13,644. Did you give Mr. Kelf any money back?—No.

13,645. Did he give you the 15*l.*—He gave me 15*l.*

13,646. Are you sure it was not 18*l.*?—I am positive.

G. Cady.

GEORGE CADY sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,647. What are you?—A publican.

13,648. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—I did not get anything. I had cabs that they hired. They never asked me about my vote. What Mr. Neave said was quite correct; I think he was there two or three times. Mr. Edwards and Mr. Neave came to see me, and that was all I saw of the parties. The first time they came they asked me if I had a cab. I told them "Yes; I had two." I had two all the summer, but I only had one horse then, I had not bought the other.

13,649. What did they pay you?—They wished to know if they could have it. I told them "Yes." They told me not to let it till I saw them again. They came the day before the election, the Monday or Tuesday, and wanted to know if they could have the cabs. I told them "Yes." They asked me to promise to vote. I told them I could not. They asked what I wanted for the cabs. I told them I expected to be well paid that day because the cabs might be knocked to pieces.

13,650. What did they pay you?—They said 18*l.* I said that was hardly enough, and they said they could not give more.

13,651. Do you think that a fair price for a cab?—The night before the election a man came from the "Angel," and told me to go to the "Angel" directly. I went. When at the top of the stairs I saw Mr. Neave. He asked me to walk into a room. I did. It was almost in darkness. A man came there with spectacles on that nearly covered his face. He said, "How much?" "18*l.*" He took two parcels out of his pocket and laid them on a chair; I took them up and put them in my pocket. When I got home I opened one and found there were 10 sovereigns in it; that was more than I expected, and when I undid the other next day I found 10 also.

13,652. 20*l.* altogether?"—Yes.

13,653. And you kept it?—Yes. I never went for anything afterwards for my cabs.

13,654. Who did you vote for?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

13,655. You thought that 20*l.* was intended for the use of that one cab?—Yes, certainly.

13,656. Then it was 20*l.* you got?—Yes, I never got 10*l.* as Mr. Edwards said, that is false. I never received any other money except what I received at the "Angel." I see in the papers he says he gave me 10*l.*, that is false.

13,657. You got 20*l.* at the "Angel" for the use of your cabs for one day?—That is all the money I received.

13,658. Did they employ the cab?—Yes.

13,659. How often?—They had it from 8 o'clock in the morning until 5 or 6 at night.

13,660. Was not that rather high pay?—We get as much as we can. My horse was not fit to do anything for two or three days afterwards.

13,661. Why did you not send in your bill to Mr. Clowes?—I got paid beforehand. They agreed for the cab. It was for nothing else, so I concluded I was well paid for the cab.

13,662. You thought your vote had nothing to do with it?—I did not think about the vote. Of course I voted for them; I had a right to do so.

13,663. (Mr. Russell.) Do you know under the byelaws of the town you can only charge half-a-crown an hour for a cab?—Yes, but there is mileage as well. I do not know how many miles my cab went that day.

13,664. Do you think it went 20*l.* worth of miles?—I cannot say.

13,665. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you get a ticket?—No, I never saw a ticket. They were the only two men that I saw on the election.

13,666. You understood your vote was included with the cab?—They did not ask for the vote.

13,667. You did not vote against them?—I would not after paying for the cab. It was not likely I would.

13,668. Did you get anything in 1859?—That is seven years ago.

13,669. The election before this?—My memory is rather short; I fancy I did. If I did I did something for it no doubt. I think I did get something for it.

13,670. Do you recollect what you got?—I think it was 10*l.*

13,671. And who paid you?—I do not know, it is so long ago.

13,672. Was that paid by somebody you did not know, in the same way?—I forget who it was paid by.

13,673. I should like you to recollect?—I cannot recollect, it is so long ago; my memory is not sufficient. I am very short of memory.

13,674. You recollect the 10*l.*?—I recollect something about that.

13,675. Who were the people busy about the election at that time?—I cannot tell you; I do not know anything about it. I know there was something.

13,682. Anybody else?—No.

13,683. Did you get anything in 1859?—I had not a vote.

13,684. (Mr. Slade.) When Warner offered you the money on the other side, had you received that money from Hammond at that time?—I had not.

13,685. Did you tell him you expected money from Hammond?—No.

13,686. What did you say to him when he offered you money?—I was partly engaged then. In fact I had told Mr. Hammond I should vote that way.

13,687. You had promised?—Yes.

13,688. And you told Mr. Warner you had promised?—Yes.

13,701. And you went there?—Yes.

13,702. And got your 20*l.*?—Yes.

13,703. You do not recollect who it was?—No.

13,705. Were you offered anything on the other side?—No.

13,706. Were you canvassed by no one?—I was canvassed by all the members.

13,707. And you would not promise?—I would not promise any.

13,708. (Mr. Slade.) Why did you not promise?—I thought I would wait.

13,709. You were holding out for money?—I thought it was very likely there might be money afloat.

13,710. It was generally understood, I daresay?—Very likely.

13,721. Where did you get it at?—I received it of Mr. Shattock.

13,722. Were you offered anything on the other side?—Yes.

13,723. Who by?—Mr. E. O. Johnson.

13,724. When did Mr. Johnson offer you that money for the other side?—The day before the election commenced.

13,725. (Mr. Slade.) You told Mr. Johnson he was too late, did you not?—No; I told him I should not vote for that party at all.

13,726. Did you say you had received from the Liberals?—Yes.

13,727. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you get anything in 1859?—Yes.

13,729. Who from?—5*l.* from Mr. Eagleton, and 2*l.* from Mr. Reynolds, the baker.

13,730. Mr. Johnson is a builder, and you work for him?—I did not work for him then.

13,731. Have you ever worked for him?—Yes.

13,732. When did he ask you for your vote?—The day before the election.

13,733. Did he say how much he would give you?—Yes.

13,734. 20*l.*?—15*l.* I said I should not take it.

13,735. Was that at Gorleston?—No; where the new gasometer is building, at that ground that is taken in.

JAMES BLAKE sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

J. Blake.

13,736. What are you?—I can hardly tell you; Jack-of-all-trades most.

13,737. What is your principal trade?—Sometimes I am in the bloater trade, and sometimes in the pork trade.

13,738. You got 20*l.* at the last election?—Yes.

13,739. Who from?—That I cannot tell you.

13,740. The stranger?—They say it was the man in the moon.

13,741. Where at?—Mr. Warner's.

13,742. Did you get anything in the election of 1859?—I had not a vote.

13,743. Were you offered anything at this last election by the other side?—Yes; two or three times.

13,744. Tell us who offered it you?—Mr. Harmer was one; Lawyer Harmer. It is not to say what money, but he asked me what I wanted. I told him I did not want anything. He came several times to me.

13,745. Anybody else?—Yes, there was another man, but he is dead—Mr. Rivett.

13,746. Anybody else?—No.

13,747. How much did Mr. Rivett offer you?—Anything in a reasonable way, he said.

13,748. Did Mr. Rivett ask you more than once?—He asked me whether I would once or twice; twice, I think; but I told him I had promised Mr. Brogden, and so I should not vote for him.

13,749. Did Mr. Rivett send anybody to you?—No, he saw me himself.

EDWARD BONNEY sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

E. Bonney.

13,752. Who from?—Mr. Bunn.

13,753. Where did he give it you?—At Mr. Colthorp's public-house.

13,754. In Gorleston?—Yes; the "Greyhound."

13,755. Did you get anything on the other side?—No.

13,756. In 1859 did you get anything?—No.

13,757. Had you a vote?—Yes.

13,758. But you got nothing then?—No.

13,759. (Mr. Russell.) Did you vote on the same side in 1859?—Yes.

13,760. Without money?—Yes.

13,761. (Mr. Slade.) Did Mr. Warner canvass you?—No; Mr. George King asked me once.

13,762. Did he offer you money?—No; he told me I could have something if I came; but he never said any money.

EIGHTEENTH DAY.

J. Bonney.

5 Sept. 1866.

JOSEPH BONNEY sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,763. What are you?—A fish owner.

13,764. What did you get at the last election for your vote?—15*l.*

13,765. Who from?—Mr. John Hammond.

13,766. Did you get anything in 1859?—I had not a vote.

13,767. (Mr. Slade.) Were you canvassed on the other side?—I was asked to go on the other side.

13,768. Who by?—Mr. Warner and King were both together.

13,769. Did they say anything about the money?—No; they said there would be something allowed; but I did not ask him. I had promised the other way.

13,770. (Mr. Russell.) Did you receive any money to give anyone else?—Yes, 15*l.* for my brother-in-law.

13,771. What is his name?—Christmas Watson.

13,772. Did he take it?—Yes.

13,773. Who gave it you?—Charles Bunn.

13,774. (Mr. Slade.) Did you get any other money?—No.

13,775. Did you ask any other men for their votes?—No.

J. Ballard.

JOSEPH BALLARD sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD through the wife of the witness, the witness being deaf.

13,776. What is he?—He is an old sailor; he has been a mariner.

13,777. Did he get anything at the last election for his vote?—He did.

13,778. From whom?—It was given to him; not for bribery.

(Mr. Fitzgerald.) We had better swear the wife.

Mrs. M. Ballard.

Mrs. MARY BALLARD sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,779. You are the wife of Joseph Ballard?—Yes, I am.

13,780. Did you receive 15*l.* at the last election?—I did.

13,781. For your husband's vote?—Not for my husband's vote. I asked for it for charity, not for bribery. I said he had been very ill for a long time, and I asked George King. I said, "You know "Ballard's circumstances; you know he has been "very ill for a long time, and he has had a very bad "accident in his leg." The gentleman knew he was just getting on, and I said, "If you can get him a trifle I shall be very much obliged to you."

13,782. George King, was it not?—Yes.

13,783. Did George King give you 15*l.*?—He did.

13,784. Did your husband vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—He voted for the Blues, which he always did. He is one of the oldest of them upon the list.

13,785. (Mr. Russell.) Were you offered any money on the other side?—To say the truth, a woman came to us and offered us a little money, but Ballard said, "No, he would not run from his principles for no one for any bribe at all," and had they not given anything he would have voted just the same; it made no difference to him. His principles were strong that way, and always had been so, so that it made no difference whether he got it or not; and they were obliged to send an invalid-chair for him to go and vote.

13,786. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You would not have got that 15*l.* unless he voted for the Liberals?—No; but of course he would have voted the same if he had not got it.

13,787. Under those circumstances you have no objection to say that the 15*l.* was given for the vote?—Just as you please; you can please yourself about that.

13,788. (Mr. Slade.) Who was the woman who came to you?—Whether her name was Harris or Howes I cannot say.

13,789. Do you know her?—I know she is a Gorleston woman; she lives in Gorleston.

13,790. Did she say who sent her?—No, she did not say who sent her. She said, if he would turn his principles she would give him a few pounds. She never said any person sent her at all. Whether it was of her own self, or anyone else she never said.

I. Bradnum.

ISAAC BRADNUM sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,791. What are you?—A gardener.

13,792. Did you get 15*l.* for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

13,793. From whom?—Mr. Whiting and Mr. Brand called upon me, but Mr. Eastick was the man who brought it to me.

13,794. Who gave it into your hands, Mr. Eastick?—Yes.

13,795. What had Mr. Brand to do with it?—He called and asked me if I did not vote as I always had done, what I wanted. I understood there was money about, so I said, "I want 15*l.*," and he said, "I should have it."

13,796. You arranged with Mr. Brand that you were to have 15*l.*?—Yes, that is it.

13,797. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

13,798. What did you get then?—Not anything.

13,799. You are quite sure?—Yes; I always voted for that party. At this time I might have had something from them, but I did not choose to take it.

13,800. Was anything offered to you then?—I had it offered in many ways.

13,801. From whom?—One of the gentlemen is dead who wanted to get me money.

13,802. Who was that?—Squire Tilson. He is dead now.

13,803. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know Mr. Rivett?—Yes, years back. He lived down that way.

13,804. Did he come to you about the election?—Never. I never had any one call upon me in that way since the election of Mr. Watkin and Mr. McCullagh.

13,805. I am talking of the last election?—No, I never had one of them call upon me to ask me never since the election of Watkin and McCullagh.

13,806. Did Whiting call upon you?—He was with Mr. Brand.

13,807. Was Mr. Eastick with him too?—No.

13,808. Did you promise your vote when you were asked for it?—To them?

13,809. Yes?—Yes.

13,810. Were you canvassed by those gentlemen?—Yes. I saw them a week before that.

13,811. Did they all call upon you?—Mr. Watkin.

13,812. No, not Mr. Watkin?—I mean Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman.

13,813. Did they call upon you?—Yes.

13,814. And what did you say to them?—Well, I did not promise further than this; I said I should vote in their way. I always voted for their party.

13,815. Did you say you would vote for them?—I said they might be sure of me; that I had always voted for that party.

13,816. I suppose for some consideration?—Not till after that.

CHARLES BULL sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. C. Bull.

13,817. What are you?—A bricklayer.

13,818. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—I received 15*l.* from Charles Bunn.

13,819. Were you offered anything upon the other side?—No.

13,820. Did you get anything in 1859?—I had not a vote then.

13,821–2. You had no vote?—No.

CLEMENT BURTON sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. C. Burton.

13,823. What are you?—A carter.

13,824. What did you get for your vote?—18*l.*

13,825. From whom?—I think the man's name was Edwards. He was a strange man to me.

13,826. Were you offered anything on the other side?—No.

13,827. Did you see none of the parties on the other side?—I saw them, but they never offered me anything.

13,828. They never offered you anything?—No.

13,829. Did you get anything in 1859?—No.

13,830. Had you a vote?—No.

13,831. (Mr. Slade.) Had you made a bargain for your vote when you got 18*l.*?—No; the man gave it me.

13,832. He struck off two?—Yes. I had 18*l.*

WILLIAM COLE sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE. W. Cole.

13,833. What are you?—I was a pilot seven or eight years back, but I am superannuated now.

13,834. Do you keep an alehouse?—Yes.

13,835. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—20*l.*, I think, some of them got; but I never got a halfpenny.

13,836. I asked you what you got?—Last week I found my name in the papers. I never received a halfpenny, but whether our people did at home I do not know. They never told me anything about it. I think they received something from the party.

13,837. Have you got a wife at home?—She is close to you.

13,838. Did she receive anything?—I do not know, I am sure. You can have her up here in about two minutes, if you like.

13,839. Let her stand up then?—She is not here now. She can come up and speak for herself. I did not know it until I saw my name in the papers last week. I promised Mr. Brogden. I only saw him once.

13,840. And you did vote for him?—I did vote for him, and I never received a halfpenny.

13,841. Do you know, of your own knowledge, whether any money was received at your house for you?—My wife will tell you all about it.

13,842. Did you vote in the election of 1859?—I never voted only once before, for Anson and Rumbold.

13,843. That is many years ago?—Yes.

13,844. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you authorize your wife to take any money?—No.

13,845. Do you know that she did?—Since last week I think she told me she had received something. I do not know, I am sure. She will come and talk to you.

13,846. You seem to be in a hurry to leave the box. The question is whether you received a bribe or not?—I never received a halfpenny. I promised Mr. Brogden that I would vote for him.

13,847. And you would have voted for him?—I did vote for him, and I never took a halfpenny. If you like to have my wife up I will go and fetch her.

(Mr. Russell.) Yes, go and fetch your wife.

LEE STEPHEN COX sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. L. S. Cox.

13,848. What are you?—I am a publican.

13,849. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—I never got anything.

13,850. You got nothing?—No, I never took a shilling in my life.

13,851. Did your wife get anything?—There is no doubt but what she did; there is no doubt about that,—not with my knowledge, nor yet with my consent.

13,852. When did she get it?—That I do not know. She told me after I got the summons. I never heard of it before. I never spoke to Mr. Bunn in my life, nor he to me at the election, nor yet since.

13,853. Did you vote for Lacon and Goodson?—Yes. I told Sir Edmund Lacon when he called upon me that I would not vote against him.

13,854. Did you and your wife have any conversation about it which way you were going to vote?—I told her about a week before that what few customers we had who lived around were Tories. I never studied electioneering business, nor yet politics, and I told her I should vote for Lacon and Goodson.

13,855. What did she say to that?—Well, she thought that was the best thing I could do; it was not worth setting friends against us, what few we had.

13,856. Was anything at that time said about money?—Nothing was said about money till after I got this piece of paper from you, and when I came to ask about it she said she took 16*l.* from Mr. Bunn, and he told her she might as well have the money as any one else, as he could put it down to his man Newman, as his expenses. He said I need never know it. That is what she told me.

13,857. We want to see Mrs. Cox, is she here?—No, she cannot leave till I go back.

13,858. You undertake to say that you did not authorize her to take it?—I never did, I can take my oath to it.

13,859. We will not trouble you to send for Mrs. Cox now. In 1859 did you vote?—I always did vote for Sir Edmund Lacon ever since I had a vote.

13,860. Then you did not get anything in 1859?—No, I never took a shilling in my life.

13,861. (Mr. Russell.) Do you swear you did not know that your wife had taken it?—Not till after I had this piece of paper.

13,862. Not till you got the summons?—Yes; and I should never have known it if it had not been for that.

(Mr. Slade.) You had better send Mrs. Cox to-morrow morning.

SAMUEL DENTON sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. S. Denton.

13,863. What are you?—Well, I am almost anything that I can get a shilling out of.

13,864. Cannot you give us some description of yourself?—Well, I do not know. I keep a public-house in Gorleston.

13,867. Did you get anything from the other side?—No.

13,868. Were you offered anything?—There was plenty that I might have had if I liked. I received plenty of hints about it, but I never ran myself in the way. I saw plenty of it going on at the time that Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl were speechifying. They were touching this arm and that arm in this way (describing), but I think the election was lost then.

EIGHTEENTH DAY.

S. Denton.

5 Sept. 1866.

13,869. Did anybody offer you any specific sum?—No; they were afraid that I should split upon them.

13,870. Do you know who the people were that were offering money upon the other side?—There were a good many gentlemen. I believe Mr. Wightman spent some money. It is Mr. Woods Wightman, I think they call him; in fact, he came on the same night, and began to fight with me.

13,871. Abel Wightman?—Yes, Abel Wightman; he is the brother-in-law of Cox. He has no interest in voting at an election at all, but he must have some interest, or he would not have come and knocked me about.

13,872 Did anyone else come and offer you anything?—No.

13,873. At the election in 1859, did you vote then?—Yes.

13,874. What did you get for your vote?—I think 12*l.*, and I was offered 20*l.* upon the other side, and would not have it, by Mrs. Leggett, who keeps the "Buck."

13,875. Whom did you take the 12*l.* from?—I took it from some strange gentleman. I do not know who it was. I was offered 20*l.* by Mrs. Leggett upon the other side, and I would not have it.

13,876. Who is Mrs. Leggett?—She keeps the "Buck."

13,877. Have you always been a Liberal?—Yes, ever since I voted at Gorleston. I was always on the other side till I came away from Yarmouth. One time when the election was on, I said, "You have just come in time." They said, "Which side will you go?" I said, "I will go in for So-and-so." He says, "Will you give him a plumper?" I says, "All right," and I rendered all the assistance I could to gain the election. We got a few into the room, and one gentleman says to me, "Call for a drop of drink, for I dare not, and I will pay for it, Sam." When the upshot came, I think I had to pay a sovereign out of my own pocket for it, and I said, "I never will vote again for the Liberals"—no, "for Servitude," I mean.

13,878. That is the reason you went over to the other side?—That is the reason. I did not know much about Servitude, nor yet Liberals. I always call them Blues and Reds.

13,879. Now we know the reason why you went from the one side to the other?—Yes, because I found they were not right. At the same time I was offered 10*l.* by Mr. Charles Bunn at that election, and I said, "No, I should not go." That is the election before this one.

13,880. In 1859?—I do not know the date of the year; I have no learning. I was offered that, and I said, "No, I shall not." Then I hired a piece of land—a five acre allotment—and I put a man upon it. They got a policeman, and said he should not be there. I said he should so long as I think proper. I am independent of Mr. Bunn or any other gentleman like that.

13,881. (Mr. Russell.) Do you know any other man who offered bribes upon the other side except Wightman and Cox?—John Hammond, of Gorleston,—young John Hammond; and I am rather informed that his man did a little of it instead of his master, because my son-in-law had so much money to sport about with. He was in my house, and he bought 2*l.* worth of rum and gin.

13,882. Besides Hammond's man, do you know anyone else?—There were a good many people walking about with fine coats on when they might have been at their business.

13,883. Who were they?—I had a little bit of a set-to with a certain man. I heard him say to a man, "You promised me so and so," and he said, "If I do not get it I shall go without it." He says, "Stop a bit, it will be all right no doubt, if you stop a time." He said, "I shall have to put up with it." I do not know the man's name. I knew the man talking with him upon the other side. I think it was James Roberts, "Rattler" Roberts they call him.

13,884. We do not want any long stories, if you can give us the name of any man who was bribed upon the other side?—I cannot swear for it. He was walking about with a fine coat on.

13,885. Who was it?—"Rattler" Roberts they call him. I think his name is James. That is all I know of him.

13,886. Whose man is he?—Mr. Gooda's, the blacksmith. I saw him very liberal along with the Liberal party—I mean the Servitude party.

C. Cole.

CHARLOTTE COLE sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

13,887. Are you the wife of William Cole?—Yes.

13,888. Who has just been examined?—Yes.

13,889. Do you remember the last election?—I do.

13,890. Did anybody give you any money at that time?—I had some money.

13,892. Who gave it to you?—Well, I cannot tell you who did give it to me; it was through my son-in-law.

13,893. What is your son-in-law's name?—His name is Fisk. He is not about here now. He has been away six months. It came to me through him, and I never saw anybody else that offered me money.

13,894. Is that William Fisk?—Yes.

13,895. He got 20*l.* himself?—He did so, and he brought 20*l.* to my house.

13,896. He is your son-in-law?—Yes.

13,897. He married your daughter?—Yes. My daughter gave it me; he did not give it me, and of course I took it. I said nothing to my husband about it at all. I knew that he had always voted for the Liberals, and I knew that would not change him if he knew it, and that perhaps if he knew it he might have talked about it, so he never knew it till he saw his name in the paper. That is all I know.

13,898. Did your husband ever talk to you about the way he was going to vote?—He was always Liberal. He would not hear anything about the other party; he never would. I daresay he would not have voted for the other party if they gave him 100*l.* He was always that way inclined.

13,899. Did your husband ever tell you that he heard money was going about?—No, he never mentioned it to me.

13,900. You understood that the 20*l.* was for his vote, did you not?—I understood that the 20*l.* was sent to him. That is all I understood. My daughter gave it to me.

13,901. It was understood he was to vote for the Liberals?—He always was a Liberal. I did not tell him anything about it. He could not know anything about it, because I never told him anything at all about it.

13,901*a*. But you took it for his vote?—Of course; it was sent to Cole, and of course I took it. If it had been as much again I should have taken it, of course.

13,902. But you took it for his vote?—I do not know what it was for. There was nothing mentioned about the vote, or anything else. I never saw anybody about the money.

13,903. If you did not know what it was for, why did you not tell your husband that somebody had given you 20*l.*?—If you were to give me 20*l.* I should not tell him, because he is a man who will not keep a secret.

13,904. Then it was meant to be kept a secret?—I do not know whether it was to be a secret or not. My daughter gave it to me. Of course I never said a word about it till he saw his name in the paper, and then he said, "I never got the 20*l.*," and I said, "I did."

13,905. Do you suppose he would have sent it back?—I do not know, I am sure. I did not tell him. He would not have taken it if they had given him as much again; he would not, I assure you. He never took any money in his life.

13,906. (Mr. Russell.) Is that why you did not tell him, because you were afraid he would send it back?—No. I can pay it back directly.

13,907. But why did you not tell him?—I told you.

13,908. Did you spend it upon yourself?—I cannot tell where it has gone to. I spend many 20*l.*

13,909. Did you give any part of it to your husband?—No; I never told him anything about it.

13,910. He gave his vote, and you spent the money?—Yes, of course.

13,911. And that was an equal division of labour?—I do not understand you.

SAMUEL REED sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,912. What are you?—A blacksmith.

13,913. Did you receive anything for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

13,915. Who gave it you?—My son brought it me. I could not get out, he brought it, and laid it on the table.

13,916. Did it come from Mr. Bunn?—Yes.

13,917. Did you get anything in the year 1859; do you recollect the election of 1859?—I suppose I shall.

13,918. Do you recollect now the election of 1859?—No.

13,919. The one before that?—No, I do not recollect any money at all. I never see any. If there had been any about, perhaps I might have seen it, but I never see any.

13,920. You got the 15*l.* from your son for your vote, did you not?—Yes.

13,921. Did you vote for Lacon and Goodson?—Yes, Lacon and Goodson.

GEORGE REED sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,922. Are you the son of Samuel Reed?—Yes.

13,923. Did you bring him 15*l.*—Yes.

13,924. For his vote?—Yes.

13,925. From Mr. Bunn?—From Mr. Bunn.

13,926. Did you get anything for yourself?—Yes.

13,928. From Mr. Bunn, I suppose?—No, from John Hammond, junior.

13,929. Is that all you got?—He gave me 1*l.* to see after my father, to get him up to vote on the polling day

13,930. Is that all the money you received?—That is all.

13,931. Did you get anything on the other side?—No.

13,932. In 1859 did you get anything?—No, I had not a vote.

13,933. Had your father a vote in 1859?—Yes, I believe he had.

13,934. Do you know of his getting any money then?—No, I was not at home at the time.

13,935. What are you?—A plumber and glazier.

13,936. (Mr. Slade.) Were you offered anything on the other side?—No. There is one thing I wish to contradict; Mr. Bunn made a statement that he had paid me 1*l.* to gild some laurel-leaves for the election. He promised me the money, but he never gave it me, and I wish to contradict that.

13,937. What is the meaning of that?—The meaning of what?

13,938. What are laurel-leaves?—He got some laurel-leaves, and I put some gold upon them to stick on the top of the hats.

13,939. What side would that be?—The Conservative side.

13,940. Is that a party colour?—No, I do not know what is was for, he asked me two or three days before the election to do it.

13,941. Did you see anybody wearing laurel-leaves?—No.

13,942. What do you mean by sticking them in their hats?—They did do so.

13,943. Were they bribing men who stuck them in their hats?—The parties riding about in the cabs collecting the voters.

13,944. Reds or Blues?—Reds.

13,945. All Reds?—Yes.

13,946. They all put laurel-leaves in their hats?—So far as they went.

13,947. Had you ever known that done before at an election?—No, I never was at an election before.

13,948. What did you understand from the laurel-leaves?—I did not know what they meant.

13,949. Did you understand they meant people to take money?—No, I did not understand anything about it; he asked me to do some and I did not know what they were for.

13,950. Did you get any laurel-leaves?—Yes, I gave him some.

13,951. Did you give them to Mr. Bunn?—I only wanted to contradict it. He said he paid me the money for it. I saw it in the papers, and I thought I would contradict it.

13,952. I want to know what the laurel-leaves were for?—That I cannot tell.

13,953. Were they worn on the day of the election?—Yes.

13,954. (Mr. Russell.) To show which way the wind lay perhaps?—I cannot say.

WILLIAM DENTON sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,955. What are you?—A fisherman.

13,957. Who from?—John Hammond.

13,958. Did you get anything from the other side, or were you offered anything?—No.

13,959. Not offered anything?—No.

13,960. In 1859 did you get anything?—I had no vote then.

13,961. (Mr. Slade.) Did you know Mr. Rivett?—Yes.

13,962. Did he ever come to you?—No.

13,963. Are you sure?—Yes.

13,964. Did any one come from Mr. Rivett?—No.

ROBERT DAVID BARBER sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

12,965. What are you?—I am secretary to the Yarmouth Savings Bank.

13,966. You were one of the committee men for Sir Edmund Lacon?—I took part in the election for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson. I do not remember a particular committee I was on, but generally speaking I was on the committee.

13,967. Did you canvass?—I did.

13,968. Can you give the Commissioners any information with regard to the election?—I am not able to do so. I never knew so much until this inquiry took place, as I now know. I am unable to give you any information more than what has been stated; indeed I could not tell you as much.

13,969. You have no knowledge of anybody who has received bribes?—Not a person.

EIGHTEENTH DAY.

R. D. Barber.

5 Sept. 1866.

13,970. (Mr. Russell.) Do you know a man named Charles Barron?—I have no knowledge of any man of the name of Charles Barron.

13,971. Do you know any man of the name of Barron?—I have some slight recollection of a man of that name who drives a cab, but beyond that fact, I know nothing at all.

13,972. Did you give him anything?—No, I never gave any person anything; I do not know him. I only speak from recollection of the name. I should think you must have got the wrong Barber.

13,973. There is no doubt that is it?—Yes, I should think so. I should imagine that you may have summoned me in consequence of what took place at an alleged meeting at Mr. Aldred's, the mayor. I was present and heard Mr. Costerton's examination with regard to that meeting. Now I wish to say most distinctly and unequivocally, that I was not only not at that meeting, but I know nothing at all about it, and I have not the slightest reason to believe there was any such meeting.

13,974. Upon the Sunday?—Upon the Sunday. My own opinion is, he mentioned it from the fact, that I was sitting here when Mr. Costerton gave his evidence, and Mr. Bunn was sitting somewhere near here. We should never have heard our names mentioned in connexion with that or any other meeting, but he was pressed to say who was there, and he, seeing I and Mr. Bunn sitting here, he thought we were likely to be there, but beyond that, he had no authority for stating we were there, that is my impression.

13,975. Can you state your reason for believing there was no such meeting at Mr. Aldred's?—I cannot form any opinion upon that subject. All I know is, I know nothing of there having been such a meeting. I cannot give a reason for saying that there was no meeting, because I have no knowledge about it.

13,976. Were the gentlemen alleged to be at that meeting personal friends of your own?—Yes, all of them.

13,977. Do you believe, if there had been such a meeting there, you would have been summoned to that meeting, or you would have heard of it?—No, I have no reason to believe that I should have been asked to attend a meeting at the mayor's on a Sunday. I should say that I pass the mayor's house half-a-dozen times in the course of the day. We are on very agreeable terms. I am in and out frequently, still I do not think I should be asked to walk into any meeting there upon a Sunday of that sort.

13,978. Do you believe if there had been such a meeting you would have heard of it?—I think it very probable I should.

13,979. Do you think it is probable you would not?—I am not able to offer any opinion on the subject. I have no knowledge of it, and I have no reason to think there was a meeting.

13,980. I should not have asked you the question at all if you had not stated you had reason to believe there was no meeting?—I was desirous of mentioning the subject. I did not wish to be charged with being at a meeting which meeting never existed on a Sunday, that was my only object in mentioning it.

13,981. (Mr. Slade.) We quite understand that you were not there; the question is, whether any of the leading gentlemen on your side in politics did go to Mr. Aldred's on the Sunday during Divine service?—That I must leave to them to answer. I know nothing about it.

13,982. You offer no opinion about it?—No, no opinion at all.

13,983. Did you ever before this inquiry began hear that there had been—I will not call it a meeting—but several of the Conservative gentlemen going to Mr. Aldred's house on the Sunday?—I have no recollection. There are lots of things flying about in the shape of rumour and so on, but I have no distinct recollection of having heard there was a meeting on the Sunday in question.

13,984. (Mr. Russell.) Did you go to church yourself, as far as you remember, that Sunday morning?—Unless it was a wet morning as it was last Sunday morning, which kept me away from church, I should say decidedly I was at church.

13,985. Can you remember if any of the gentlemen who were said to be at that meeting were at church?—Well, I should tell you I do not go to St. Nicholas.

13,986. You do not go to the same church as Mr. Aldred?—No, I do not; I go to St. Peter's. I should say on the morning in question I was at St. Peter's church, and therefore I was not likely to see the gentlemen that perhaps you allude to.

R. Denton.

ROBERT DENTON sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,987. What are you?—A fisherman.

13,988. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—I received 20*l.*

13,989. Who from?—I do not know the gentleman who gave it to me.

13,990. A stranger?—A stranger.

13,991. Was it a man with spectacles?—Yes, I believe he had.

13,992. Were you canvassed on the other side?—No.

13,993. Nobody offered you money on the other side?—No one at all.

13,994. At the election of 1859 did you get anything?—No.

13,995. Had you a vote then?—No, I could not vote then.

13,996. You had no vote?—No.

13,997. (Mr. Slade.) Is that all you got?—That is all.

13,998. From anybody?—From anyone, that is all I received.

W. Beckett.

WILLIAM BECKETT sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

13,999. What are you?—A butcher.

14,000. Do you live at Gorleston?—No.

14,001. Where?—At Yarmouth.

14,002. What did you get for your vote?—15*l.*

14,003. Who from?—I cannot tell you the gentleman's name.

14,004. A stranger?—Yes.

14,005. Where did you get it?—I do not know him by name.

14,006. Where at? — The "Army and Navy Tavern," I think it was.

14,007. Who sent you there?—A man that you examined yesterday afternoon of the name of Tricker, who lives next door to me.

14,008. Samuel Tricker?—Yes. I received the money about the noontime; I think it was the day before the election; he says to me after dinner, "Your party is giving away money." I said, "Nonsense." He says, "Yes, I have heard it, for I have been and got 15*l.*" "Well," I says, "I do not suppose they will give me 15*l.*" He says, "They will if you like to go," and I says, "Where to?" and he says, "To this public-house, the 'Army and Navy.'" I said, "I do not know it." He says, "I will show it you," and he did go with me, and I went and had a glass of beer, and then the landlord beckoned me, and went into a room where this gentleman sat, and he says, "What do you want?" I says, "What you think proper to give me." He says, "15*l.* is what I am giving." I says, "All right," and he handed me over 15*l.*, and I thanked him and walked away. He never asked me who I was going to vote for. I should have voted the same way if I had not got anything.

14,009. (Mr. Slade.) Did Mr. Tricker say he had received some money himself?—He told me he had received 15*l.* I said, "Nonsense." He says, "And you can get it." I said, "Where?" He said where. I did not know where the public-house was, and he walked down with me. It was at the latter part of the afternoon I went in there, and I think I had a bottle of ginger beer, and the landlord asked me to follow him into a room. I did so. I went into the room where this gentleman was sitting at a table. He said, "What do you want?" I said, "I do not know; what you think proper to give me." He said, "15*l.*" I said, "I am much obliged to you," and I received it and walked out.

14,010. You knew it was given you for your vote, did you not?—Mr. Tricker said they were giving it for votes; he knew I was going to vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl, and that is why he wanted me to go down.

14,011. Had you spoken to anybody else of the party about it before?—No.

14,012. Had you promised?—No.

14,013. Why did you not promise?—I did not think I should vote at all.

14,014. You would not have voted without the 15*l.*?—Yes, I should.

14,015. Then why did you not promise?—I would not promise.

14,016. Who canvassed you?—Mr. Brogden, not Mr. Vanderbyl.

14,017. Did any of the agents canvass you?—There were three or four of them canvassing. I do not know who they were. They were with Mr. Brogden.

14,018. Were you asked at any other time to vote?—No.

14,019. Not by Mr. Downing?—I think he did. I think Mr. Downing did call.

14,020. Did he offer you a ticket?—No.

14,021. Did he say anything about tickets?—No.

14,022. When did he call?—He called several times, three or four different times.

14,023. Did anybody else call?—Not on that side.

14,024. Were you offered any money on the other side?—Yes.

14,025. Who by?—Hutchins or Hutchinson or some such name as that.

14,026. It was a mistake, was it not, to suppose you were open to receive money for your vote?—I do not know at all about that, he came and offered me money. I told him it was not my side; I did not vote that way. I did not know the other side was going to give any money.

14,027. How much did Mr. Hutchins offer you?—15*l.*

14,028. In 1859 did you vote?—I did not live in Yarmouth then. I voted but not in Yarmouth.

EDWARD COLTHORPE sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

E. Colthorpe.

14,029. What are you?—I am a hay dealer and coach proprietor.

14,030. What did you get at the last election?—10*l.*

14,031. Who from?—Charles Bunn.

14,032. Are you quite sure it was 10*l.*?—Yes.

14,033. Is that all you got?—That is all I got.

14,034. Were you offered any on the other side?—No.

14,035. Did you get anything in 1859?—I never voted before.

14,036. You had no vote?—No.

14,037. (Mr. Slade.) Mr. Bunn says he gave you 15*l.*?—I know, I saw it in the papers, it is false, he gave me only 10*l.*

14,038. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did he give it you in sovereigns?—Yes.

14,039. (Mr. Slade.) Did you and Mr. Bunn have any conversation about how much you were to have for your vote?—No, we had no particular conversation. I live in one of Sir Edmund Lacon's houses, and I said I would vote for him, and he said "If I can do any good for you I will do it." He said "Very likely I shall have some money, and I will behave as well to you as to other people," and I said "All right." That is the only conversation he had with me.

14,040. When did he give you this money?—On Monday night.

14,041. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You would have voted without the money?—Yes.

14,042. (Mr. Slade.) Did you know that other people were having money?—Well I knew one man, that is all I know.

14,043. Who is that?—His name is Ives.

14,044. Is it James or Samuel?—Jonathan I think.

14,045.—He got 15*l.*?—I do not know, I am sure; I know he had some, but I do not know what it was.

14,046. Did he get his at the same time that you got yours?—No.

14,047. Before you?—No, I got mine before he did.

JOSEPH DRAPER sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

J. Draper

14,048. What are you?—A butcher.

14,052. Himself?—Yes.

14,056. Is that all the money you got?—Yes.

14,057. Were you asked on the other side?—No, not particularly asked; they knew pretty well which way I was.

14,058. In 1859, did you get anything?—Yes.

14,059. How much?—10*l.*

14,060. Who did you get that from?—From the late John Rivett.

14,061. Did you know Mr. Rivett well?—Yes.

14,062. Did you see him at this election at all?—Yes.

14,063. Did you arrange with him to have 15*l.*?—No.

14,064. Did you know that Mr. Hammond came from him?—No, I did not know it till afterwards. Mr. Rivett asked me if I had seen anything of Mr. Hammond, and I told him yes; but it was not till after I had seen Mr. Hammond.

14,070. Who did you get that from?—From the late Mr. John Rivett.

14,071. Were you offered anything on the other side at the last election?—No. I was asked for my vote, but I said I was engaged.

14,073. You did not take anything?—No, not a farthing.

14,074. That you deny?—I hope you will be kind enough to alter that, if you please.

14,075. That is not true?—I deny that in toto; not a farthing.

14,076. (Mr Fitzgerald.) Who canvassed you on the other side?—Mr. Shattock.

14,077. Anybody else?—No, I do not remember anyone else.

14,080. You recollect the name of Shattock?—I think it is; but I do not remember.

14,081. Did anybody else on the Liberal side offer you money?—No; I do not remember anyone else.

14,082. Did you speak to anyone else at all on the subject of the election?—No.

14,083. On the Liberal side?—No.

14,084. What is Mr. Shattock?—I do not know what he terms himself, I am sure.

14,085. (Mr. Russell.) Will you swear you only received 15*l.* at the last election?—Yes, I will swear that I took only 15*l.*

14,086. Did old Mr. Rivett offer you anything at the last election?—Mr. John Rivett?

14,087. Yes?—I do not remember he came nigh me at all.

14,088. Do you know Mr. Downing?—No, I do not know him.

14,089. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you know George King?—Of Gorleston?

14,090. Yes?—Yes, I know George King, of Gorleston.

14,091. Did you see him or talk to him about this election?—No, I had no conversation with him about it.

14,092. (Mr. Russell.) Did you ever have a ticket offered to you?—No.

14,093. Did you ever hear of the tickets?—No, I do not remember hearing of them.

14,094. (Mr Fitzgerald.) Did you promise your vote when you were asked for it by the candidate?—Yes.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

C. Satterthwaite.

14,095. Do you know this man?—No, I do not recognize him. I do not know. I can suggest now who it was. Perhaps the Commissioners will ask him if any one else on our side offered him money. Would the Commissioners ask him if he knows King. I think in Gorleston they were all paid by lists. It was the first night in Gorleston.

14,096. (Mr. Russell.) There was nothing to prevent a man taking a ticket for this man, or putting this man down on a list, and then personating him before you?—Not at all, so long as he was not ticked off on the register.

JAMES ELLETT sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

J. Ellett.

14,097. What are you?—A mast and block maker.

14,099. Who from?—From a stranger to me,—a very respectable looking gentleman.

14,100. Where at?—At my house.

14,101. A stranger brought it to you?—Yes.

14,102. (Mr. Russell.) With spectacles?—Yes, I think he had.

14,103. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Were you offered anything on the other side?—No.

14,104. Were you canvassed by them?—Yes.

14,105. Who by?—By Mr. Brogden and Mr. Livingston, and the Tory candidates. I never saw them. I was out when they came. There were two gentlemen came three or four days before, and I told them I should not vote for them.

14,106. Who told you to go and get this 15*l.* from the gentleman in spectacles?—He called at my house.

14,107. Do you know why he came to your house?—He asked me which way I was going to vote, and I told him the same as I told the candidates, that I had friends on both sides.

14,108. Did he tell you who sent him?—No.

14,109. Did you get anything in 1859?—No, I was not on the register.

14,115. Your house was made use of, was it not?—Yes.

14,116. On what night?—Three or four different nights.

14,117. Every night?—Yes, three or four nights.

14,118. Did you see Mr. Edwards there?—I do not know the gentleman. I did very likely, but I did not know him.

14,119. Did you get anything for your own vote?—Yes.

14,121. Who gave it you?—A stranger.

14,122. Was he in spectacles?—That I cannot say.

14,123. Was your house occupied entirely by voters on the Liberal side?—Yes, one room.

14,124. Did any of the Conservatives ever come to your house?—They came backwards and forwards sometimes for a glass of ale.

14,125. You had some Conservative customers?—Yes, some of all sorts.

14,126. Did you take any money from the Conservative side?—Yes.

14,128. Who did you get that from?—Mr. Newman.

14,129. What is Newman's christian name?—Samuel.

14,130. And you split your vote, did you not?—Yes.

14,131. Did you get anything in 1859?—No, I had no vote.

14,132. Did Mr. Newman ask you for your vote when he gave you this 15*l.*?—No.

14,133. Who was it canvassed you on that side?—He did himself.

14,134. Newman?—Yes.

14,135. Did nobody else on that side canvass you?—No.

14,136. Did you introduce the people who came to your house to the stranger?—No, I never knew the stranger. I never noticed him there.

14,137. You know nothing about that?—No.

14,138. And you do not know who did?—No.

14,139. (Mr. Slade.) What did you get paid for the use of your room?—2*l.* 10*s.*

14,140. Who paid you that?—Mr. Clowes.

14,141. Was that the room that the stranger operated in?—I daresay it was, but I never saw him. It was the room that they all went to when they came in.

14,142. Was that the only room that was used?—Yes; one room, the upstairs room.

14,143. Had you any other meeting in that room except when the stranger was there?—No. I do not know. They had it for four nights. It was kept open for four nights, but I do not know who was there.

14,144. Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday?—Not Sunday.

14,145. Saturday?—It might be on Saturday. We always close up on the Sunday.

14,146. Saturday, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday?—I cannot say. It was three or four nights, or something like that.

14,147. The election was on the Wednesday?—I think perhaps it might be on the Friday and Saturday, and the Monday and Tuesday. I am not certain about it. I think it must have been four nights, for they ran up a good large bill and I never got the money, but I made use of that 20*l.* as for that.

14,148. Who gave you the 20*l.*?—Some stranger.

14,149. In the room?—No.

14,150. In the bar?—No; at Warner's house.

14,151. Warner came to you at your house to bring up men that were there at his house?—No, I went myself.

14,152. Did he not bring up men to your house from his own house?—No, not that I know of. I never noticed them. If any of them stopped at my house when they passed it was only to have a glass of ale. I never saw him there more frequently at that time than at any other time when business called him this way.

14,153. Did you tell Mr. Clowes anything about this stranger?—No. I went to Mr. Clowes' office. Mr. Whiting hired this room from me.

14,154. Did you ask Mr. Clowes to pay for the liquor that was drunk at your house?—No; Mr. Brand told me that he would see it all paid.

14,155. Did you mention that to Mr. Clowes?—No.

14,156. Did you mention it to Mr. Brand?—Yes, several times. I went for it, and he told me that the next money he got I should be paid. He said "You must stop till Monday." I went again on Monday, and he said, "You must stop till next Monday." I went again and did not get it, and I have waited till now and have not got it.

14,157. How much is it?—I do not know what it is now. Mr. Brand's bill was over 6*l.* or 7*l.* It would have been a good deal more, but I put a stop to it.

14,158. (Mr. Russell.) Did you get the 2*l.* 10*s.* from Mr. Clowes yourself?—Yes.

14,159. What did you tell him you wanted it for?—The bill was first of all sent into Mr. Brand, and he told me Mr. Clowes would pay it at the committee room. I sent my missis up to Mr. Clowes, he would not pay her, and I had to go myself, and I went the same day and he paid me.

14,160. Did you tell Mr. Clowes what had been going on at your house?—No; nothing passed. He gave me the money, and I gave him a receipt for it; and that was all.

14,161. Do you know whether that money was returned as part of the election expenses?—No; I do not know at all; I know nothing of it.

SAMUEL NEWMAN sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

14,162. What are you?—A butcher.

14,163. You were actively engaged in the last election were you not?—I was in some cases by Mr. Bunn; I am his servant and work for him.

14,164. Did he give you any money?—Yes, he gave me 15*l.* to pay to Mr. William George.

14,165. Was that all?—Yes.

14,166. Did he not give you some more money?—No, not for my vote.

14,167. Did anybody else give you any money?—No.

14,168. Did you get no money for your vote?—Not a farthing.

14,169. Have you always been a Conservative?—I have never voted only once for the borough, and I always voted for the party because I worked for the party.

14,170. Is that all you did give, 15*l.* to Mr. George?—Yes, I worked for him.

14,171. What do you mean by working for him?—He asked me to take it to Mr. George, and if I knew anybody more to let him know. I am always having money from Mr. Bunn, perhaps two or three times a week.

14,172. What for?—For business. I had business through him.

14,173. Did you canvass many people?—No, not many.

14,174. Did you offer many people money?—No, I did not offer them any. They might perhaps some of them say they wanted more money. Some had 20*l.* and they wanted more, and I knew Mr. Bunn was only paying 15*l.*, so I said nothing more to them.

14,175. Mr. Bunn had no authority to give any more than 15*l.*?—Not that I knew of. He had not said anything to me about it.

14,176. Do you know all the people to whom Mr. Bunn gave 15*l.*?—No, I do not, nor yet half, I daresay. I did not know who he gave money to and who he did not. Mr. Bunn made me a present after the election some little time.

14,177. How much?—He took it off my account, but I never knew anything at all about it.

14,178. How much did he take off your account?—15*l.*, but I did not authorize him to do so, nor I never asked, or anybody offered it.

14,179. I suppose you are aware Mr. Bunn took it off your account for your vote?—I was afterwards, but I did not know anything about it beforehand. Not till after I voted a week passed.

14,180. You allowed him to take it off your account?—He did do so. He kept it back for me, but I did not know it till after he told me of it, afterwards.

14,181. (Mr. Slade.) You have told us of this man George, which we knew about before, now tell us of anybody else?—I do not know of any others. I did not pay money to anybody else.

14,182. Do you know of anybody else who had money from Mr. Bunn?—I do not.

14,183. Try?—I do not recollect the names, I had no list of them. I do not know any of them had money, only what I heard them say; that is all.

14,184. Tell us who told you they had money?—Several had money from Mr. Bunn, but I do not know their names.

14,185. Yes, you know their names?—No. There was Mr. Lummis and Mr. Rivett, and several other parties, but I cannot tell you who. I have not kept a memorandum of them.

14,186. I do not ask you that?—I may know the people if you mention their names, but I cannot call them to my recollection.

14,187. Do you mean to say that on your solemn oath?—I was not with him at the time he paid the money.

14,188. Upon your oath, do you not know any other men to whom Mr. Bunn gave money?—I may know the people.

14,189. You must know their names?—I may know their names, but you must call them out.

14,190. I shall not do that?—I have got no list of them, only this paper.

14,191. Give me that paper. (The witness handed a piece of paper to the Commissioners)?—I cannot tell exactly. I do not know who received the money and who did not.

14,192. Did you ask anybody else for their vote?—I asked Mr. Brown and Mr. Duffield, and they all said they were going to vote, and I left them, and did not say anything more to them about it.

14,194. On the road to the common, Southtown?—Yes.

14,195. You asked him?—I asked him which way he was going to vote. He told me he did not know, so I did not say anything more.

14,197. That is George Noah Duffield?—Yes.

14,198. Who else?—I do not know anybody else.

14,199. Are those the only two you asked?—Yes, I believe they are.

14,206. The gentleman who is dead?—I did know him.

14,207. Can you tell us the names of any men that he bribed?—That I cannot; I was not in his company or canvassed with him.

14,208. Have you ever heard of any person?—I never heard of any person. I promised Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson the first day they canvassed.

14,209. But you submitted to have 15*l.* taken off your account?—I did a week afterwards. I did not know anything about it. I never sanctioned anyone to do it.

NINETEENTH DAY.

NINETEENTH DAY.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 6th September 1866.

C. Satterthwaite.

5 Sept. 1866.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

14,433. Can you give us any other names beyond those you gave us the other day?—Yes. There is a person named Newman, who I think will throw a deal of light on some of the cases; and I also wish to state to the Court, I remember, in looking over the names, most distinctly paying a person of the name of Arbon, at Cattermoles, and he also took the money for himself and his father there. The gentleman spoke for himself and his father. Whether he is the man I do not know. I know he did take the money for himself, and also for his father; and I see there are only three Arbons on the list. If the Court will allow me to have the register that I had when I checked them off in paying them, during the time I am in Court, it might bring to my recollection other things.

14,434. We have not got that register, we only have Edwards' register. Do you mean that?—No, I mean the register I had when I was paying them, when I crossed them off.

14,435. The only papers we received of yours were those two I handed to you?—I had a register which I put C. and D. upon.

14,436. That is exactly what we want to get hold of, and Mr. Edwards has not got it, or Mr. Salmon?—It was left in the room at the time I made the list out.

14,437. (Mr. Russell.) Edwards said he believed he had left that register on the table when he came away, and he does not know who might have taken it?—I know it was in the room. It would be a great assistance to me, because it would refresh my memory. I thought perhaps the Court might have it, and I could have it to use in Court.

14,438. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) When James Noah Arbon was called, I think you said you could not recollect him?—No, I could not. But I can recollect paying Arbon, and for his father; so that there must be Arbon who has been paid, and has not come; but there must be some mistake. You will find there are three Arbons, and it may come out in the evidence which it is, if it is not this one.

14,439. (Mr. Slade.) Is this the register you refer to that Edwards gave us?—No, because it had some memorandums opposite the names of some of them.

14,550. Do you know Mr. Eagleton?—Yes.

HENRY B. MUNSEY sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

H. B. Munsey.

14,570. What are you?—A painter.

14,571. What did you have for your vote at the last election?—12*l*.

14,572. Who gave you that?—Mr. Lane's eldest son.

14,573. Did young Mr. Lane tell you that his father had given him 14*l*. for you?—No.

14,575. Did you get anything on the other side?—I was offered some, but I did not take any.

14,576. Who by?—I do not know who it was; I think it was Mr. Livingston's side.

14,577. But who was it on that side that offered you the money?—I think Mr. Livingston himself.

14,578. Do you mean to say Mr. Livingston himself did?—I think so; it was at the house in the market-place; at a cookshop.

14,579. Whose shop is it? Who keeps it?—I do not know the gentleman's name.

14,580. Is that the shop opposite the "Angel?"—It is not direct opposite; it is further down.

14,581. Is it James Thompson?—Yes, that is the name.

14,582. Did you see Mr. Livingston there?—I think it was, but I am not sure; I cannot say whether it was Mr. Livingston.

14,583. You should not mention people's names in connexion with such matters unless you are pretty sure?—I am not sure.

14,585. What makes you think it was Mr. Livingston?—By the looks of him, nothing else.

14,586. Did you know Mr. Livingston?—Yes, I do know him by sight very well.

14,587. Was it that gentleman, or his son (pointing)?—That gentleman.

14,588. Do you remember how much was offered to you?—I think it was 10*l*.

14,589. Try and remember who really did offer you that money?—I do not know the party who it was.

14,590. Are you sure Mr. Livingston was present when you were offered this money?—No, I am not; I was offered that, but I do not know whether Mr. Livingston was present. I thought it was Mr. Livingston, but I cannot say.

14,592. Did you get any money at all on the other side?—No.

NINETEENTH DAY.

H. B. Munsey.

6 Sept. 1866.

14,593. Are you in the habit of being offered 10*l.*?—No.

14,594. You must remember who did offer you that 10*l.*; you can remember if you like?—No, I do not know; I could not tell you, because the morning I think when the election was I was offered that; I do not remember; I did not wait to hear; I came off directly.

14,595. Was it after the election?—It was the morning of the election, the same morning.

14,596. What makes you think it was Mr. Livingston? Did Mr. Livingston ask you for your vote?—Yes.

14,597. When?—At my house; that is, in the shop, before the election.

14,598. Were you offered any money then?—No.

14,599. What made you go up to Thompson's the election morning?—He met me in the market-place, and asked me to go as far.

14,600. Who did?—Mr. Thompson.

14,601. And did he ask you to go up to his house?—Yes, up to his house, and I went upstairs.

14,602. And who did you see when you got there?—I thought it was Mr. Livingston; that is what made me think it was.

14,603. How many people were there in the room?—There were not any there.

14,604. Only one?—Only one, and the man that lived there, that kept the shop, Mr. Thompson.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

14,605. (Mr. Russell.) Do you remember this man?—I think I have a recollection of him.

14,606. Coming to you?—Yes, but I do not think there would be 10*l.* offered the morning of the election. I think it would be more likely 20*l.*

H. B. Munsey.

HENRY B. MUNSEY recalled.

14,607. (Mr. Russell.) Are you sure it was not 20*l.* that was offered?—I might have held my hand for it if it had been.

14,608. You must tell me more about it?—That is all I know; I did not want the money the other side; I had got what I wanted.

W. Livingston.

WILLIAM LIVINGSTON recalled; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

14,609. Do you remember this man?—Yes, perfectly well, and I recollect calling upon him with the two candidates. We could not get a promise from him. But as to saying it was in Thompson's shop, I have been in the house canvassing, I was never nearer the place than the "Angel" from one week's end to the other; and the day of the election I was never in the place; and as to being upstairs, I was never upstairs; and as to my offering him 10*l.*, I deny it in toto.

14,610. If you on your oath say you were not at Thompson's the day of the election, this charge at once falls to the ground?—Most decidedly I do; we could not get him to promise, and Mr. Garratt gave him a job to paint the outside, and he thought he made him right by doing so.

H. B. Munsey.

HENRY B. MUNSEY recalled.

14,611. (Mr. Russell.) Who was it offered you the 10*l.*?—I do not know.

14,612. You hear what Mr. Livingston says?—Yes.

14,613. You know Mr. Livingston by sight well?—Yes.

14,614. You could not mistake him?—Well, I might be in a hurry at the time; I cannot say who it was; I was offered the money, and that is all I know about it, and I did not take it.

14,615. You did not take it because it was not enough?—It was not that; I did not wish to draw both sides.

14,616. Were you employed by Mr. Garratt?—Yes, he asked me to paint some canvassing to put up round the palings.

14,617. Did he ask you for your vote?—No, he did not; I was up all one evening after it; and he said if I would make haste and get over it I should be well paid for it. That was all he said; and it was the morning before I could get it finished for them.

14,618. Were you well paid for it?—Yes.

14,619. What were you paid?—I got my charge for it.

14,620. What was your charge?—I think it was 3*l.* I had to alter it once. It was to "Vote for Vanderbyl and Brogden;" no it was "Marshman," in very large letters, in oil painting.

14,621. You had not a vote in 1859?—No.

G. Lawson.

14,631. Who told you that?—Different parties; I cannot say exactly who they were.

14,632. How long before you went there did you hear it?—The night before the election.

14,633. How long before you went to Cattermole's did you hear you would get 20*l.* if you went there?—It might be in the forenoon.

14,634. Who told you?—I cannot say who it was now.

14,635. Did you go by yourself?—Yes.

14,636. What did the gentleman say to you when you went into the room? Did he ask you your name?—Yes, and where I lived.

14,637. Did he look out your number?—I cannot say.

14,638. Did you find anybody else there?—No.

14,639. Do you know a man named Fish?—Yes, he was my owner at the time.

14,640. Did he ask you for your vote?—Yes.

14,642. Whom did he want you to vote for?—For the Whigs.

14,653. How much did you get on the other side?—Nothing.

14,654. Did you not get 20*l.*?—No.

14,655. You swear that?—Yes.

14,656. Did you go up to the "Angel?"—No.

14,657. Did you go up to Mr. Cattermole's?—I was at work at Mr. Cattermole's about a week previous to the election, but never went in about the time of the election.

14,658. You did not receive any money there?—No.

14,659. Did you ever take a ticket?—No.

14,660. Did you ever have a ticket offered to you?—No.

14,661. Do you belong to the Red party?—Yes.

14,662. Would you have taken money on the other side?—No.

14,663. And you swear that you did not?—Yes.

14,664. I suppose you had not a vote in 1859?—No.

14,665. When did you promise to vote for Lacon and Goodson?—About two or three days previous to the election. I was at that time doing some work for Mr. E. O. Johnson, and he asked me which way I was going to vote, and I told him I could not vote against the gentlemen I then worked for, Messrs. Reynolds and Palmer, and several other gentlemen, and he said he would see what he could do for me.

14,666. And you promised when you got the 10*l.*?—I told him I intended to vote that way.

14,667. Were you ever asked for your vote the other side?—Yes.

14,668. Who by?—Mr. Cattermole at the "Army and Navy Tavern."

14,669. What did you say to Mr. Cattermole?—I told him I wanted nothing.

14,670. Did he tell you if you came up to his house you would have some money?—No, he did not tell me I would have some money. He asked me if he could do anything for me. I said no, I wanted nothing from him.

14,671. Do anything for you in the way of money?—Yes.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

14,672. (Mr. Russell.) Do you remember this man?—No; they are so very different in their dress now. Perhaps he might come in from his work to me.

14,673. Did Cattermole give you a list?—I had a list given to me at Cattermole's.

14,674. Was this man's name in it?—Mr. Cattermole did give me one or two names, and I wrote it on the back, "This is by Cattermole." Mr. Cattermole may have some recollection of this case. I do not know.

EDWARD COLLINS sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

E. Collins.

14,675. What are you?—A gardener.

14,681. Were you ever offered any money on the other side?—I never saw any of the party. I was ill a-bed. Mr. Blyth came the night before the election. My daughter came up and said Mr. Blyth wanted to speak to me. He came up-stairs, and laid 15 sovereigns on my bed, and told me if I voted for Lacon and Goodson, I might have it, and if anybody got more I should have more, and if I could get up to vote before 9 o'clock, he would give me another sovereign, and if I could not get up I was to give him 5*l.* back, and keep 10*l.*

14,682. And you did get up and get the extra pound?—Yes, I got it off a little bill.

14,683. You are certain you never got anything from the other side?—I saw nothing of the party. I was ill in bed. The doctor attended me for weeks after.

14,686. What did you get for it then?—Nothing. I see it mentioned that he has got me down on the other side for 10*l.*, but I never saw any of the party. I was ill. After I polled, I was taken back to my bed, and I remained there some time.

14,687. You say you were never asked for your vote on the other side?—No; after I was taken ill, I only saw Mr. Marshman and Mr. Brogden of the Blue party when they first came to my house. They called at my house after I was taken ill. I saw no other party.

14,688. Did you refuse then?—That was the first day that I came out.

14,689. Did you refuse them then?—I part promised them.

14,690. What made you break your promise?—I do not know. I never saw any of the party afterwards. I only saw this man Blyth. That was all that I saw afterwards.

14,691. Do you know Dr. Stafford?—Yes.

14,692. Did he ask you for your vote?—He never asked me for my vote, he never asked me anything of the kind.

14,693. He never did?—No.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite

14,694. (Mr. Russell.) Do you remember this man?—I have been trying to bring him to my recollection, but I really cannot.

JOHN CUBITT NICHOLLS sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

J. C. Nicholls.

14,695. What are you?—A shipwright.

14,696. What did you have for your vote at the last election?—This one just past, do you mean?

14,697. Yes?—15*l.*

14,698. Who gave it you?—It was brought down to my house by Mr. Cooper.

14,699. Did you ask for the money?—I never asked for the money—not a dime.

14,700. He gave it you for your vote?—I suppose so. He left it at my house, wrapped up in a piece of paper.

14,701. Did you get any money on the other side?—I never saw the parties at all.

14,702. Did they canvass you?—They never canvassed me at all.

14,703. And never offered you any money?—I never clapped my eyes upon them at all.

14,704. Had you got a vote in 1859, when Lacon and Stracey stood?—Yes; I got 12*l.*

14,705. Who gave you that?—Well, a man by the name of Downing. That was brought in a similar sort of way. I do not think I was in the way at the time.

14,706. That was Tom Downing?—Yes; I think it is Thomas.

14,707. (Mr. Slade.) Did Downing give you a ticket this time?—I had no ticket. I had no piece of paper of any sort.

14,708. Is John Nicholls, of Caister Road, a relation of yours?—Not that I know of. He possibly may be, but I do not know it. If he is, I know nothing about it.

14,709. Downing says he gave you a ticket for 15*l.*?—So I had.

14,710. But a ticket?—I had no ticket.

14,711. Did you get 15*l.* from Downing?—I had 15*l.* you understand.

14,712. From Mr. Cooper?—Yes.

14,713. But from anybody else?—Not a farthing. There may be a Nicholls in Caister Road. I daresay there is, but I know nothing about him.

14,714. Downing has given us your number on the register, so that there is no mistake about it. No. 901; and Downing says he gave you a ticket. You say that is not true?—I have not had a ticket.

R. Etheridge.

ROBERT ETHERIDGE sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

14,715. What are you?—That is a most difficult question perhaps to answer that I can give you. I am nothing at all. I must leave you to judge in some way.

14,716. Did you receive a bribe for your vote at the last election?—I think I may say I did. I received money at any rate.

14,718. From whom?—I did not know the party at all at the time; I never saw him before. It was left at my house, on the table. I never saw the party before. I did not know him by name. I have never but once seen him since, and that is within the last 10 days; and I have never spoken to him but once since, and that is the same time, within the last 10 days.

14,719. Who is it?—I think his name is Hutchins. I described in the House of Commons where he lived. I did not know his name—that is, when my evidence was taken there.

14,720. Who was it to vote for?—Sir Edmund Lacon.

14,721. And you did vote for him?—I did.

14,722. Did you receive any money from anybody else?—Not any.

14,723. Had you a vote in the year 1859?—Not here.

14,724. Were you canvassed for your vote for Brogden and Marshman?—I was canvassed on both sides, but saw neither party. I did not know either of the parties until I met them in the House of Commons; not even Sir Edmund Lacon. I never saw him before in my life. He came up to me and shook hands with me. I said. "I presume I am speaking to Sir Edmund Lacon," and he said, "You are; and," said he, "You were not at home when I called."

14,725. Did you see nobody on the Liberal side who canvassed you?—Not anybody. In fact, I promised my vote to the Liberal side, to my landlord.

14,726. Who was your landlord?—Mr. John Eagleton was then; but he turned Tory, against his colours.

14,727. Did you promise him when he was a Liberal?—I did so, under Liberal circumstances, without knowing that he had turned his coat.

14,728. You mean to say you turned because your landlord turned?—There is a little bit of something in the whole matter that took me by surprise. I was rather green in the matter. I never knew anything about bribery before in my life. It is something new to me. I have treated a good many men in the course of my time to brandy and water, and wine, and something of that sort; but as to bribery, I knew nothing about it till this election, and I was taken a little aback, what you call rather sold.

14,729. Were you not called on by anybody on that side?—Not anyone, excepting whom they sent, which I have understood since they have explained to you; Mr. Hutchins.

14,730. But Mr. Hutchins was working for Sir Edmund Lacon?—Exactly so.

14,731. On the Brogden and Vanderbyl side you were asked for your vote?—Yes; they tried to bribe me that side.

14,371*a.* Who asked you for your vote?—It was an agent.

14,732. What was his name?—I am trying to remember. I may say I might have had more from them; but having passed my word, I could not of course break it. It was a man by the name of Fox.

14,733. What did Fox say to you?—He merely offered me money, which I declined in toto. In fact, I declined being bribed. I was rather taken aback the other way, or I should have given Mr. Fox my vote freely.

14,734. Why should you have given Mr. Fox your vote?—Because I have always voted Liberal through my life. I am a sort of Liberal Conservative.

14,735. Fox was asking you for the Liberals?—Yes.

14,736. And he offered you money?—Yes.

14,737. How much?—15*l.*; and I daresay it would have been 50*l.* or anything else that was reasonable, but I declined altogether.

14,738. Did you give Fox to understand that you were open to a bribe?—Not in the least, quite the reverse.

14,739. I see in a book that has all the names of the voters, your name has a "t" opposite it, which means "tinnable?"—What is that?

14,740. Open to a bribe.—I beg pardon for asking the question. As I said before, I am rather green.

14,741. This book has all been explained to us?—It is the first time I have given a vote in Yarmouth at a general election; therefore I am a stranger in these matters quite.

14,742. Did you tell Fox at that time you intended to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon?—I did not.

14,743. (Mr Russell.) But he could not get you?—He could not. I declined the bribe. In fact, I was disgusted—the other way. I never took a shilling before in my life. If they come to me for my vote they will have it freely, without any money.

Mrs. H. Cox.

Mrs. HANNAH COX sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

14,744. Are you the wife of Lee Stephen Cox?—Yes.

14,745. He keeps a public-house?—Yes.

14,746. Do you remember the last election?—Yes.

14,747. Did Mr. Bunn call upon you?—Yes.

14,748. Did he give you any money?—Yes.

14,750. Did he say what it was for?—He asked me whether I knew which way Mr. Cox was going to vote. And I said "Yes." He said "Which way." I said "That is my business." Because he said "I "have got some money I can give you, you may as "well take it as anybody else." And he gave 16*l.* I said "Mr. Cox would not allow me to take it." And "he said 15*l.* first. I said "Mr. Cox will not allow me "to take 15*l.*" He said "No one will know anything about it, but you and I." He said "I will give you "16*l.* and I shall mention you and my man Newman "down as expenses. I shall not mention Mr. Cox on "the list at all." And I took it on those conditions.

14,751. How long before the election was that?—I cannot say when it was, a day or two, but I cannot say when it was. It was one night.

14,752. Your husband did vote?—I knew which way Mr. Cox was going to vote, because the week before he told me he should vote for the Tories, and I heard him tell Sir Edmund Lacon he should not vote against him, when Sir Edmund Lacon canvassed him. I knew which way he would vote because he never did vote otherwise.

14,753. He would not vote against him?—He told me that was the way. Our customers round there generally are Tories, and he always did vote their way, so I was confident which way he would vote when I took the money.

14,754. You told your husband I suppose?—I told him when he received the paper. He told me he was summoned; I did not tell him until then.

14,755. Did you not tell him when you received it?—No. I never breathed it. Mr. Bunn said nobody should know it but he and myself. And I said "I can keep mine if you can keep yours." His name is Bunn, but it ought to be Cake, and he ought to be baked, because he promised me that no one should know it.

14,756. Can you make your husband do what you like?—No, I did not control him at all. I did not mention it. Mr. Bunn said he had plenty of money, and I might as well have 16*l.* and I knew Sir Edmund Lacon had got plenty and I got none, so I took it. Sir Edmund Lacon has had plenty of pounds of us, but had I known it would have come to this I should not have taken it.

14,757. What did you do with the money?—I put it where it is increasing I hope. There is no one has seen it only myself, besides where I had deposited it. I hope it is increasing, I have never seen it since.

14,758. Where is that?—In the bank, but not in Sir Edmund Lacon's bank though.

14,759. In whose name?—Of course in my own name no one else.

14,760. (Mr. Russell.) Was your husband very angry when he heard of it?—He was very angry. He said he wished I would let him do his own business, and he would not have had it.

14,761. But was he angry with you because you had taken the money, or that you had not told him before?—Because I had taken the money. He said he wished I had not taken the money, and he wished me to come up this morning. I had a great mind not to come because I was not summoned. But he wished me to be exposed he said.

JOHN JACKSON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

J. Jackson.

14,762. What are you?—A baker in the Moat Road.

14,764. Are you sure it was not 20*l.*?—No, 10*l.*

14,765. Who gave it you?—I went to Wright's on the Church Plain, a gentleman who was at Wright's gave me 10*l.*

14,766. The gentleman says he gave you 20*l.*?—He did not, it was 10*l.* It was Mr. Jones, that was the gentleman.

14,767. What day was it?—Just before the election.

14768. Who told you to go up to Wright's?—Mr. Neave, the tailor, in the North Road.

14,769. Did he give you a ticket?—No.

14,770. No ticket?—No ticket at all.

14,771. Did you get anything on the other side?—Not a farthing.

14,772. Were you offered any?—I might if I liked, and I would not go, I promised the Liberals. I always was a Liberal, and I always voted Liberal.

14,773. Who offered you money, the Conservative side?—I was sent for to go to the North End Retreat and did not go.

14,774. Who told you to go?—A boy came to my house and told me to go to the North End Retreat, and I would not go.

14,775. Were you told how much you would get if you went?—I was not told how much I had promised the two gentlemen, and I would not run away from my promise.

14,776. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

14,777. What did you have for your vote then?—Not a farthing.

14,778. And you voted the same side?—I voted the same side, Liberal.

14,779. Are you sure you had a vote in 1859?—Yes.

14,780. You did not vote?—I do not think I did vote, but I had a vote.

14,781. Do you remember that gentleman, Mr. Jones (pointing to Mr. Satterthwaite)?—Yes.

14,782. Was the money you got in gold?—It was in gold.

14,783. Wrapped up in paper?—No paper at all. The money was not in paper. There was no package. I took it in my hand, in gold.

14,784. Did you ever tell Mr. Neave what you got? No, I did not tell anyone.

14,785. What did you expect to get?—I did not expect to get anything, though I went to Mr. Wright's. I saw the others going, and they told me to go to Mr. Wright's, and when I went there, this gentleman gave me 10 sovereigns.

14,786. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Were you promised anything?—I always did promise the Blues.

14,787. Were you promised any money?—I was not promised any money.

14,788. (Mr. Russell.) Did not Mr. Neave tell you how much you would get?—Not a farthing. Mr. Neave never told me, and I did not know what I was going to get. A gentleman asked me what my name was; I told him, and he counted 10 sovereigns out; and that is the truth.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

C. Satterthwaite.

14,789. This is a case in which you gave a number, and 20*l.* to it?—Yes.

14,790. And he received the money from you?—All I can say is, that he must have got the 20*l.* because there was no 10*l.* paid at Wright's. It was in 15*l.* and 20*l.* paper parcels.

14,791. He is down in this list, curious enough, as a B., that is, 10.?—I have made a memorandum to inquire of Mr. Neave if he knows anything at all about this case; but I do not remember paying any 10*l.* at Wright's. I made those payments up according to the statements on the list, 15*l.* in little paper parcels and the 20*l.* in gold, and just handed it over to them.

14,792. Are you certain you never gave a 10*l.* parcel?—I cannot recollect giving a 10*l.* parcel in that place.

14,793. Do you remember giving any sovereigns not in paper?—No, I should not do that; in fact I sat up at night to do it. I had it wrapt up in 15*l.* and 20*l.* parcels, and then I counted them out as I laid them upon the chair.

14,794. Were they tied up or rolled up?—They were rolled up, but I pressed them at the ends, so that they could not get open; I did that in order that there might be no mistake, and I put C. and D. upon each package; just what the amount was.

14,795. You do not go the length of saying it is impossible you could have given this man the 10*l.*?—No; but I have made a memorandum here, that I will inquire of Mr. Neave if he can give me any explanation about it. He says Mr. Neave sent him, but I do not remember paying 10*l.* in that house.

14,796. Had you any A. packages; If I had it would be according to the list. I think I had one A. package, and I think that was for a Mr. Beales, or for a Mr. Brereton.

NINETEENTH DAY.

C. Satterthwaite.

6 Sept. 1866.

14,797. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Where do you suppose that B. (referring to the marked register) came from; there is only a B. against his name?—I cannot say.

14,798. (Mr. Russell.) Might not this have happened, suppose he came and said, "I have come for 10*l.*?" Would you not have undone the package and given him 10*l.* out of it?—I do not think that would be so. I should ask him his name, and see the amount put down, and pay him the amount that was put down.

14,799. If you saw the amount was 10*l.*, and you were only prepared with 15*l.* and 20*l.*, you would undo the package and give him 10*l.*?—I should have a list previously marked C. and D., and put the package in, and refer to his name. He tells me his name; I look on the list and I find he is C. or D., and I hand him the C. or D. package, as the case might be.

14,800. But when you found he was neither one nor the other, would you not then undo the C. or D. package and give him 10 sovereigns out of it?—He does not ask me for any; he comes in among the rest for his pay.

14,801. And you then refer to the list?—Yes.

14,802. And you see him written down B.?—If it was a C. the list would not correspond with B.

14,803. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) How could he have got into this list as a B.?—That list has nothing to do with the list they gave to us.

14,804. He must have been taken from somewhere?—It is possible he may have been promised that 10*l.* at some time or other, and the markets rose and he wanted money; I cannot tell. Perhaps Mr. Neave can explain, because he says Mr. Neave sent him.

J. Foulsham.

JOSEPH FOULSHAM sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

14,805. What are you?—I am a commission agent and debt collector.

14,806. Did you receive any money at the last election?—15*l.*

14,807. Where did you receive that?—At the "Angel."

14,808. Who from?—Mr. Edwards, I think.

14,809. A strange gentleman?—A stranger; I did not know him at the time.

14,810. Who told you to go up to the "Angel?"—I saw Mr. Livingston, senior, and he took me into the room where Mr. Edwards was, and said, "This is Mr. Foulsham," and Mr. Livingston left the room immediately, and did not hear the conversation which passed between me and Mr. Edwards.

14,811. Did you tell Mr. Livingston why you wanted to see Mr. Edwards?—No; we were talking about the matter, and he asked me which way I was going to vote; I said, "I do not know;" I had not positively made up my mind.

14,812. Had Mr. Edwards got money in front of him when you went in with Mr. Livingston?—There was money lying on the table.

14,813. Mr. Livingston introduced you and he then left the room?—Yes.

14,814. And then you received your 15*l.*?—Yes.

14,815. Did you see Mr. Downing?—No; Downing is quite unknown to me; only just by sight; I never spoke to the man in my life.

14,816. He never offered you any money?—No.

14,817. Had you a ticket?—Not for myself.

14,818. Are you quite sure of that?—Yes, I will swear to it positively. I am here to speak the truth, and I wish to do so.

14,819. Had you any tickets for other people?—I had one for Mr. John Jones, of the Regent Road.

14,820. Who gave you that ticket?—I am not exactly positive; I believe it was Mr. Tom Edwards, the tailor; I believe it was him. He said in his evidence it was him, and that he was known to me personally; I was not acquainted with his name at the time; I believe it was Edwards; I should not like to swear positively it was him or not.

14,821. Do you remember what was on the ticket?—The number of the register and the 16*l.* Mr. Edwards said it was 20*l.*, but it was 16*l.*

14,822. Do you mean the money was written 16*l.*?—16*l.* And Mr. Jones, if you call him up, will prove what I state is true.

14,823. Was there any letter upon it?—Not any letter that I remember.

14,824. A., B., C., or D.?—None whatever, only the number on the register and the 16*l.*

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

14,825. Do you recollect this witness?—I may state I have a recollection of this gentleman as well; I remember seeing him.

14,826. Do you remember giving him money?—I must have given him money, or I should not have had any conversation with him.

14,827. Were there any tickets of the sort he mentions?—No; I remember the whole circumstance of this case.

14,828. What are the circumstances?—He is one of those duplicates, and after the election I think we had Mr. Foulsham up to see who paid him; Mr. Edwards got the money from me, and gave me a ticket afterwards for the amount, C. No. 469. It turned out (in fact mention is made of it here) that Mr. Edwards got the 15*l.*, but he said he had given it to Mr. Hickling; I think that is the name. Mr. Edwards said he had given Mr. Hickling the 15*l.* to give to this person. It turns out Mr. Hickling did not do so, and Mr. Edwards was ordered to get back the 15*l.*

14,829. Did he get the 15*l.* back?—I do not know; that is in Edwards' account; I cannot tell; but it appears to have been struck from mine as correct, my having paid it.

14,830. By that the 15*l.* that Mr. Foulsham received at the "Angel" would be the only 15*l.* that he received?—Yes, it appears so, because there is an instruction here for Mr. Edwards to get the 15*l.* back.

Mr. J. Foulsham.

Mr. JOSEPH FOULSHAM recalled; examination resumed by Mr. RUSSELL.

14,831. Who took you up to the "Angel" to identify Mr. Jones as the man who paid you?—Mr. Livingston took me up to the "Angel," that is all. Mr. Livingston only introduced me into the room as Mr. Foulsham, and left us. There is nothing to mention on Mr. Livingston's part as regards the sum.

14,832. Did Mr. Livingston tell you that there was a difference of opinion between Mr. Jones and Mr. Edwards as to who paid you?—No, I do not remember that he did. I do not remember anything at all about that. A messenger came down to me and said I was wanted, and I went up to know what I was wanted and when I went, in fact I was introduced. I did not know Mr. Jones till I saw him in the box the other day. I was not aware that he was one of the parties that was present, and Mr. Edwards merely asked me, "Did you take more than 15*l.*?" and I said, "No." He said, "Did you not take 15*l.* at the 'Army and Navy,' as well as at the 'Angel?'" I said, "No." He said, "Are you confident of that?" I said, "Yes." He said, "Who paid you at the 'Angel?'" I said, "A gentleman told me his name was Edwards; I did not ask him, he volunteered." And they said, "Is he present?" I said, "I do not see him here; that gentleman had spectacles on." Mr. Edwards put on his spectacles, and I then said, "You are the man that gave me the 15*l.*" And it seems Mr. Jones was satisfied with that.

14,833. Who was in the room during this discussion besides Mr. Edwards?—Mr. Jones.

14,834. Who else? Mr. Jones, Mr. Edwards, and anybody else?—I really do not know whether Mr. Livingston was there; I do not know whether he was or was not; I will not say positively whether he was or was not.

14,835. (Mr. Livingston.) I beg to put Mr. Foulsham right. He says I went down to the "Angel;" I did. He says I introduced him to Mr. Edwards; I did so. It was in a low sitting-room that I introduced him to Mr. Edwards, and left him there. There was no gold there; that I say positively. It was in the sitting-room, because Mr. Jones was out of the way, and I introduced him. What took place afterwards I cannot say.

14,836. Was it in the sitting-room you were introduced?—It was not downstairs, it was upstairs; I know I went up a flight of stairs; this was after the election.

14,837. Did you take John Jones up to the "Angel" to receive money?—No. He did not go to the "Angel," he went to the "Army and Navy."

14,838. Did you go with him?—Yes, I went with him.

14,839. Did you see him get his money?—No, I did not; I gave him his ticket, and he got it cashed.

14,840. That was the only ticket you gave?—That was the only one, and I am very sorry I had anything to do with it.

14,841. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No, I was not in the town at the time.

ROBERT LAXON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

R. Lacon.

14,842. What are you?—A grocer.

14,843. What did you receive for your vote at the last election?—15*l.*

14,844. Who gave it you?—Mr. Jones, I presume.

14,845. Where did you receive it?—At Cattermole's, the "Army and Navy Tavern."

14,846. Did you have a ticket?—No.

14,847. Never?—No.

14,848. Who told you to go to Cattermole's?—I went down as I do sometimes of an evening. Knowing that was the committee-room I thought there might be a little news stirring, and when I got there I found voters were receiving money, and so I made one of them.

14,849. No one in particular told you to go there?—No; I was not told to go.

14,850. Were you offered money on the other side?—No.

14,851. Did you give any other man a ticket, or tell him to go up to Cattermole's?—No; I had nothing to do with anybody else.

14,852. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No; I was not there. I was not in Yarmouth then.

14,853. (Mr. Slade.) You are put down here as "Ale-house?"—I keep a grocer's. I sell beer as well. I have a grocer's shop and a beer-house as well in one.

WILLIAM FOX sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

W. Fox.

14,854. What are you?—A carpenter and joiner.

14,855. Did you receive anything for your vote at the last election?—No.

14,856. You did not?—No.

14,857. Did you receive 15*l.* from Mr. Edwards?—No.

14,858. Nor from anybody?—No.

14,859. Did you receive a ticket?—No.

14,860. No money on either side?—No.

14,861. Did you ever see Mr. Jones?—No, not till I saw him here. That is the gentleman (pointing to Mr. Satterthwaite). That is all I know about it.

14,862. Did you see a stranger before the election?—Where?

14,863. At the "Angel?"—I never was in the "Angel" in my life, and I have lived here 12 years too.

14,864. At Cattermole's?—I have been at Cattermole's, but not for the last five or six years. I used to live down at Tower Road, and then I used to go there sometimes for beer.

14,865. Did you take a list of persons, and ask for a sum of money?—No.

(Mr. Satterthwaite.) It is his brother.

14,866. (Mr. Russell.) Were you canvassed?—Yes, by Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Brogden.

14,867. I see you did not vote at all?—No, not at all.

14,868. Was that because you had no political opinions?—I am a strong Liberal.

14,869. Then why did you not vote for your party?—I was not wanted. I saw the election was lost, and I did not trouble myself about it.

14,870. Had you promised Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl?—No, nobody.

14,871. Did you take an active part yourself in the election?—Not at all.

14,872. Not in canvassing?—No.

14,873. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No, not for the borough. I had a vote for the county. That was in 1857, when the election was. I never voted for the borough.

14,874. (Mr. Slade.) Is your brother in court?—No, I think not; I think he is down at the North End, at work.

14,875. (Mr. Russell.) I think you are summoned by mistake for your brother?—No; it is some other man at South Town that I have been summoned for.

14,876. Do you live in Bath Hill Terrace?—No I live at No. 1, Marine Terrace. I formerly lived in Bath Hill Terrace.

14,877. Is Thomas Fox your brother?—Yes.

14,878. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you live with your brother?—No.

14,879. Did you see your brother at the election time?—No, I do not recolleet. I saw him the evening after the election.

14,880. Did you get any money from him?—No, not at all; nor yet from anybody else.

14,881. (Mr. Russell.) Did your brother ever offer you any money?—No.

14,882. Do you know that he had some?—No, I do not know anything about it. I never received any money yet, nor tickets.

14,883. Are you and he upon intimate terms?—I work for him sometimes. I should have been at work for him now if I had not been here. I work for myself also.

14,884. Did he not tell you he had some money?—No, he did not tell me anything of the kind.

14,885. Will you swear he did not give you any money?—I will swear he did not give me any money, nor tell me anything about it.

14,886. Nor offer you a ticket?—No.

14,887. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did he ask you to vote?—He asked me which way I was going to vote. I told him most likely I should vote for the Liberals; and I should have voted for the Liberals if I had been wanted. I can assure you there is no mistake about that.

14,888. (Mr. Russell.) We have your name returned to us by Mr. Edwards as having had 15*l.*?—Yes, I know you have; but it is a falsehood. I never saw Mr. Edwards, and I do not suppose that he ever saw me in his lifetime. I want to know where I took this money from? They put it down at 15*l.* Where did I take it? That is what I want to know. And who gave it to me? Gold does not buy me; not in electioneering matters, I can assure you.

14,889. (Mr. Russell.) Did you canvass Mr. Etheridge?—No.

NINETEENTH DAY.

W. Fox.

6 Sept. 1866.

14,890. Do you know whether your brother did?—I cannot tell that.

14,891. Do you know Mr. Etheridge?—Oh, yes.

14,892. There is no other William Fox but you?—I do not know of one.

14,893. Mr. Etheridge has told us this morning that William Fox canvassed him, and offered him money for his vote?—No; he has made a mistake. I never offered him any money.

14,894. Do you believe it must have been your brother?—I do not know if it was him or anybody else. I never offered any money. I had nothing at all do with the election whatever.

14,895. (Mr. Slade.) Did you hear Mr. Etheridge examined in court?—Yes.

14,896. Did you hear him mention your name?—I heard him mention Fox; I do not know whether it was William or Thomas. I heard Fox's name mentioned.

14,897. Then it is evidently a mistake?—It is very likely. I do not know anything about any election or anything else.

G. Maystone.

GEORGE MAYSTONE sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

14,898. What are you?—A fish merchant.

14,899. What did you have for your vote at the last election?—20*l.*

14,905. Is he a tailor?—I think he is a tailor. He is a short man.

14,909. He is a painter?—Yes, he is a painter.

14,910. Was that after you had the 20*l.* at Wright's?—That was on the Sunday afternoon he offered me that.

14,911. When did you get the money from Wright's?—On the Monday.

14912. Have you always belonged to the Blue party?—Well, I never had a vote before.

14,913. You had no vote in 1859?—No.

J. Morl.

JAMES MORL sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

14,914. What are you?—A beer-house keeper.

14,915. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—15*l.*

14,916. Are you sure it was not 20*l.*?—I am sure of that.

14,917. Did you have a ticket?—Yes.

14,918. What letter was there upon the ticket?—C.

14,919. Where did you take the ticket to?—To Cattermole's.

14,920. And you were paid by a stranger?—Yes.

14,922. Who gave you the ticket?—Downing.

14,923. Were you offered any money by the other side?—Yes.

14,924. Who by?—By Mr. Lummis.

14,925. And what did he offer you?—He offered me three different prices. First, he offered me 15*l.* That was upon the Saturday. He came to me upon the Sunday and offered me 20*l.*; and I saw him again on the Tuesday, and he offered me 25*l.*

14,926. On what day was it you received the money at Cattermole's?—On the Monday night.

149,27. Then you belonged to the Blue party?—I always was that side.

14,928. Did you see Mr. Lummis about?—I was at work for him.

14,929. Do you know of any other man that Mr. Lummis either gave money to, or offered money to?—No.

14.930. You do not?—No.

14,931. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No, I was not upon the register.

A. Goffin.

ALFRED GOFFIN sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

14,932. What are you?—A marine store dealer.

14,933. What did you have for your vote at the last election?—Firstly, 15*l.*

14,934. Who gave you that?—William Blyth, the painter.

14,935. Did you take anything from the other side?—A small acknowledgment, a small sum.

14,936. How much?—7*l.* 10*s.*

14,937. Who gave you that?—A man answering to the name of Jones.

14,938. Where did you receive it?—At the "Angel."

14,939. When?—On the Tuesday morning.

14,940. Had you a ticket?—No, nothing of the kind. I had a recommendation from Mr. Neave and Mr. Edwards.

14,941. Are you quite positive you did not get 10*l.* from Mr. Jones?—7*l.* 10*s.* I am positive I got no more.

14,942. Did you ask for more?—I asked for the sum which had been previously arranged for.

14,943. And what was that?—7*l.* 10*s.*

14,944. Did Mr. Neave and Mr. Edwards arrange for that?—They did.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

14,945. (Mr. Russell.) Do you remember this man?—Yes, I remember giving him some money, I cannot remember the amount just now.

14,946. It is returned to us as 10*l.*?—I know that I did pay some ten shillingses; I rather think they were larger amounts than that, but I am not certain.

14,947. Did you pay some odd sums on the Tuesday morning?—Well, I cannot tell exactly the day. I think I did pay some odd sums. There is a 12*l.* 10*s.* here I see.

A. Goffin.

ALFRED GOFFIN recalled.

14,948. (Mr. Russell.) Was it loose gold, or wrapped up in a paper?—Loose gold.

14,949. What was the arrangement about your vote with Mr. Neave and Mr. Edwards?—That I should vote for Mr. Brogden.

14,950. I see you voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Brogden?—I did.

14,951. And you got the 7*l.* 10*s.* on condition of voting for Lacon and Brogden?—On account of voting for Mr. Brogden.

14,952. Nothing was said about Mr. Vanderbyl?—They were aware that I had promised Sir Edmund Lacon.

14,953. You split your vote?—Yes.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

14,954. (Mr. Russell.) Do you remember any case of that sort, where half the 15*l.*, 7*l.* 10*s.* was given to a man if he split his vote?—They never told me what arrangements were made. They merely gave me the lists. I did not know what arrangements had been made. They never spoke to me about it, except in some cases. I said, "I suppose you will be up early, and will vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl." I see I have one here 6*l.*

14,955. The man's story is a very natural one, that he had promised he would vote for Mr. Brogden and they gave him half the 15*l.*?—It is possible. It might be so. That may be one of the differences in the accounts. I believe there are two cases which will come out in evidence if the parties will come forward, which will account for 5*l.* That is where I gave 17*l.* 10*s.* instead of 20*l.* You recollect I had 10*l.* overplus.

14,956. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) It is 10*l.* in your account?—That will account for 5*l.* Then there will be 5*l.* more still to account for.

ALFRED GOFFIN recalled.

A. Goffin.

14,957. (Mr. Russell.) Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

14,958. Did you receive anything for that?—Yes.

14,960. Do you remember who gave it you?—Yes.

14,961. Who?—John Eagleton.

14,962. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Whom did you vote for in 1859?—Watkin and his colleague; I think it was Mr. Young.

HENRY RICHES sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

H. Riches.

14,963. What are you?—A baker by profession.

14,964. Did you receive anything for your vote at the last election?—No.

14,965. You are reported to us as having received 20*l.*?—No, I never received a farthing.

14,966. Did you have a ticket given to you?—No.

14,967. Did you ever go up to the "Angel?"—No.

14,968. Nor to Cattermole's?—No.

14,969. Nor to Thompson's?—No.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

14,970. (Mr. Russell.) Do you remember this man?—Well, I do not know that I can exactly say that I remember him. I think I have some recollection of him. Perhaps the Court will ask him who canvassed him, and will get at it in that way.

HENRY RICHES recalled.

H. Riches.

14,971. (Mr. Russell.) Who asked you for your vote?—Sir Edmund Lacon.

14,972. Did you promise him at once?—Yes.

14,973. And Mr. Goodson?—Yes.

14,974. I see you voted for them?—Yes.

14,975. Who canvassed you for your vote upon the other side?—Mr. Brogdon, and Mr. Livingston with him.

14,976. Did you refuse them?—I told them I had promised.

14,977. You told them you had promised Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—Yes.

14,978. (Mr. Slade.) You promised Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marsham?—No. I never saw Mr. Marsham. He never visited me at all.

14,979. (Mr. Russell.) Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

14,980. Mr. Livingston's memory is the same as your own, and no doubt you are here under a misapprehension?—I think so.

14,981. (Mr. Slade.) Did you come forward yesterday to deny this?—I came here yesterday, and I was told to come up this morning.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

14,982. (Mr. Russell.) What is the explanation as to this?—Downing tells me there is another person of the same name, and they may have been confounded.

(Mr. Russell.) There is not another.

14,983. (Mr. Slade.) We have William down as receiving 20*l.* as well?—Then I beg your pardon.

WILLIAM MILLER sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

14,985. Where do you live?—No. 1, Ely Place.

14,991. Were you offered anything upon the other side?—Nothing at all. I never promised. I always go that way.

14,992. Always?—Certainly.

14,993. You voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—Yes.

14,995. Had you a vote in 1859?—I had.

14,996. Did you receive any money for your vote at that election?—Nobody ever gave me anything.

14,998. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Where were you living in 1859?—I was living upon the Quay.

14,999. South Quay?—South Quay.

CHARLES CRICKMER sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

C. Crickmer.

15,000. Is your name Charles R. Crickmer?—Yes.

15,001. What is the second name?—Robert.

15,002. What are you?—A lodging-house keeper.

15,003. In Yarmouth?—Yes. 21 Middle Market Road.

15,004. Did you get any money for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

15,006. Who gave it you?—Mr. Leman.

15,007. Who is Mr. Leman?—A clerk at Gurney's Bank.

15,008. When did Mr. Leman give you this money?—The night before the election.

15,009. Where at?—At my own house.

15,010. Did he say what it was for?—Yes. It was to vote for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl.

NINETEENTH DAY.

C. Crickmer.

6 Sept. 1866.

15,011. Had Mr. Leman asked you before for your vote?—About a fortnight before.

15,012. Had you told him how you were going to vote then?—I told him I could not vote for the Tories, as I was in the employment of the Whigs. But I always had voted for the Tories in the municipal elections, and as I was employed by the Liberals I thought I would not go and vote against them.

15,013. Then why did you take 10*l.*?—He asked me if any money would induce me to vote for the Liberals. I said I would not vote for the Tories; and then he asked me again if any money would induce me to vote on the Liberal side.

15,014. Did you give him to understand you did not intend to vote at all?—I did not intend to vote at all without I was bribed.

15,015. Did Mr. Leman say he would try and get you some money?—Yes.

15,016. Did you arrange with him how much you were to have?—Yes.

15,018. Did he say where he was going to get that 10*l.* from?—No; he did not tell me where he was going to get it from.

15,019. Did he give it you in sovereigns?—Yes.

15,020. Did you understand that Mr. Leman paid you this 10*l.* out of his own pocket?—Well, I do not know where he got it from. He gave it me, but he never informed me where he got it from. I had no idea where he got it from.

15,020. Did you ever hear whether he gave money to other voters?—I do not remember hearing within my own hearing, of his giving money to other persons but me. Being a friend he got it for me.

15,021. (Mr. Russell.) Does Mr. Leman live in Tower Road?—Queen's Terrace, near the Regent Park, or Chapel Denes.

15,022. (Mr. Slade.) Is Mr. Leman a voter, do you know?—Yes.

15,023. He spells his name Leman?—Yes.

15,024. Did you get any money from anybody else?—No.

15,025. Are you aware that Mr. Satterthwaite has said that you had 10*l.* from him?—I have seen it from the papers, but I did not receive any money from him. Whether this money came from him or not I do not know anything at all about. That is all the money that I received, and that is the first and the last.

15,026. This was upon the Tuesday night?—Yes.

15,027. What time?—About 9 o'clock.

15,028. Did you see Mr. Lane at the election time?—Yes.

15,029. Did he make any offer to you?—He said I should have 10*l.* if I would vote for the Tories.

15,030. Benjamin Lane, I mean?—Yes, the rate collector.

15,031. When was that?—Down the Market Road.

15,032. But when was it?—About a fortnight before the election, as near as I can recollect.

15,033. What did you say to Mr. Lane?—Mr. Lane asked me which way I should vote, I said I should vote for the Liberal side. He said "If you like I can get you 10*l.*" "No," I said "I am employed by the Liberals, and if I vote at all I will vote on the Liberal side."

15,034. But you would not vote without money?—I would not vote for the Tories.

15,035–6. But you would not have voted without money?—I should not vote at all without money.

15,037. Had you a vote at the election before this?—No.

H. Leman.

HENRY LEMAN sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

15,038. Are you a clerk in Gurney's bank?—Yes.

15,039. Did you take any part in the last election?—Officially do you mean?

15,040. I mean, did you canvass anybody?—Yes.

15,041. How many?—Only one.

15,042. Charles Crickmer?—Yes.

15,043. You gave him 10*l.*?—Yes.

15,044. Did you, at the time you gave it him, tell him it was for voting for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—Yes.

15,045. Where did you get the money from?—Well, I advanced it myself in the first instance, but I was subsequently reimbursed.

15,046. Who reimbursed you?—Mr. Brand.

15,047. What is Mr. Brand's christian name?—Henry.

15,048. Where did Mr. Brand get the money?—That I do not know.

15,049. Did you ever hear?—No. Whether it was Mr. Jones, or Mr. Edwards, or some other person I do not know.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

15,050. (Mr. Slade.) Have you any explanation to give?—To save the Court time, I gave the money.

15,051. To Brand?—Yes.

15,052. 10*l.*?—Yes; upon Downing's ticket.

H. Leman.

HENRY LEMAN recalled.

15,053. (Mr. Slade.) How came you to be the go-between between Mr. Brand and Mr. Crickmer?—Mr. Crickmer told me he would rather vote for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl for 10*l.* than he would vote for the others for 15*l.* or 20*l.*, inasmuch as his employer being Liberal, he would rather take 10*l.* and vote his way, than take more and vote the other way; but his employer, I believe, never even mentioned the thing to him.

15,054. What made you interfere?—No other motive than people at an election generally interfere.

15,055. Did you know that Mr. Brand could give this money?—Yes.

15,056. You did?—Yes.

15,057. Had Mr. Brand told you that money was going at that time?—Yes, I think so. At any rate he gave me to understand I should have the money.

15,058. Were you aware of this system of agents doling out money by tickets?—No. I did not hear of it till after the election that it was doled out by tickets

15,059. Did you know that Mr. Brand could go to a house and get money by asking for it?—I do not know where he obtained the money from or how.

15,060. What day did you first learn money was to be got?—Do you mean on either side?

15,061. I mean upon the Liberal side at present?—Not till Monday evening, I think, or the afternoon.

15,062. On what day did you pay Crickmer?—The night before the election.

15,063. And when did Mr. Brand repay you the money?—Two or three days after the election; it may be two or it may be three days.

15,064. Did you offer anything to any other voter?—No.

15,065. What day was it that Mr. Brand said to you he could get the money, and authorized you to advance the 10*l.*?—I should not think it was before the Sunday.

15,066. Not before the Sunday?—No, I think not; and then he was not certain about it whenever he did tell me.

JOHN JONES sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

15,067. Are you the dentist?—Yes; I wish I was the dentist. I am one of them.

16,068. You are the dentist whom we have heard of?—Yes, notoriously.

15,069. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—Well, I had a ticket brought me. First of all some money was left at my house by Mr. Eagleton.

15,070. How much?—12*l.*; 24 half sovereigns wrapped up in a piece of paper. It was placed on the mantel-piece.

15,071. Did you see him put it there?—Yes, I saw him put it there.

15,072. What did he say when he put it there?—He said, "Mind, Jones, I do not give it to you."

15,073. What did you understand by that?—Why, I understood if any inquiry or anything took place, I had no occasion to say Mr. Eagleton gave me anything; it was left there. I understood it, of course.

15,074. Did you receive any money from anybody?—Joseph Foulsham called and asked me if I wanted a little money, and I told him I did. In fact I wanted a great deal at the time.

15,075. And he gave you a ticket?—Well, he came and asked if I would take some money. I said I would have nothing to do with it; that I had some money in the house; but I said if he liked to go and get it—if he would do the dirty work—I would pay him for it; that I would not go myself.

15,076. What was upon the ticket?—I did not get the ticket. We were walking down the Tower Road. He said, "Jones, look at the ticket." I looked at the ticket. I saw the number on the register upon it, and 16, with an £.

15,077. That means 16*l.*—Yes.

15,078. What became of that ticket?—We had a walk in the evening down the Tower Road, to a place called the "Army and Navy Tavern," I believe.

15,079. Cattermole's?—Yes.

15,080. And did Mr. Foulsham go in?—Mr. Foulsham went in, and I went in, and after sitting there some time he went up stairs, but he was told he was not wanted; it was the party who had the ticket was wanted, and he gave me back the ticket, and I went into the room.

15,081. Who did you find in the room?—I only saw one man in the room, but I believe there was somebody behind a screen or something of that sort.

15,082. And then you received 16*l.*?—Yes; 10*l.* done up in paper, and six loose sovereigns.

15,083. What did you do with the 12*l.* you got from Mr. Eagleton?—I returned it on the morning of the election, very early in the morning, about 7 o'clock, or a little after, perhaps.

15,084. You voted for the Liberal party?—For the party who paid me; for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl.

15,085. For the one who paid you the highest sum?—Well, Mr. Eagleton had always, for a long time previous to the election, told me he should do something for me at the election, and the fact is I was rather annoyed at so paltry a sum, so that I returned it. I should have voted, even if I had not got any money, for the Conservatives.

15,086. (Mr. Russell.) Are your political principles Conservative?—Yes.

15,087. (Mr. Slade.) Had you been canvassed on both sides before?—Yes.

15,088. Had you promised your vote to anyone?—No, I made no promise. Sir Edmund Lacon called with Mr. Goodson, and afterwards Mr. Brogden was introduced by Mr. Livingston.

15,089. Did you always intend to receive money for your vote?—Well, I was given to understand by Mr. Eagleton, for a year or two previously, that he had a great deal to do with elections, and that he could get me some money. He knew I was unfortunately in a position to require some, and he worked out a little revenge, and I did a little revenge on my own account.

15,090. (Mr. Russell.) Did you poll early on the day?—I polled about eight minutes past 8 o'clock.

15,091. (Mr. Slade.) Did Thomas Fox canvass you?—Well, we always had some talk; we never had any canvass. He did not canvass me.

15,092. Did he try to influence you as to which way you should vote?—No, not at all. I would not be influenced by anyone.

He said, "Brogden and Vanderbyl." I said, "I have not got what I want." Then he asked me what I wanted, and I said 15*l.* He says, "I cannot give you that, they are only giving 10*l.*" He says, "I will see if I can get you 2*l.* more;" and he went away and came back and told me he could get me 12*l.* I said I would vote for that.

15,196. Do you know of Mr. Water's bringing up anybody else to the "Angel ?"—No. In fact he was only two minutes with me; only while he took me close to the door of the room.

15,213. (Mr. Slade.) You got 15*l.* upon both sides ?—Yes.

15,214. Why did you not split your vote then ?—I should have voted the Liberal way if they had not given me anything. I certainly should not have voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

15,215. We have been told that you had 20*l.* ?—Yes; I saw it in the list, but I assure you he has put down rather too much. There is 5*l.* due to me; he gave me only 15*l.*, and he says 20*l.*

15,216. You voted upon that side ?—I voted for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl.

15,217. You seem to have received 20*l.* ?—He has put me down 20*l.*, but he gave me only 15*l.*

15,227. And you did not promise ?—I told him I could not promise him; that I should vote the other way.

15,228. Did you promise Mr. Blyth ?—I did not promise him that I should vote for Sir Edmund Lacon.

15,229. Are you quite sure of that ?—Quite sure.

15,230. (Mr. Russell.) Why did you take the money from Mr. Blyth if you did not mean to vote on that side ?—He asked me which way I was going. I said, "You know I always go on the Liberal side." He said, "Will you get anything for it ?" and then he said, "Will 15*l.* satisfy you ?" I said, "15*l.* is very acceptable;" and then he said, "I will give you 5*l.* now and 10*l.* the next morning.

15,241. Where does he live ?—In the same street, Charlotte Street.

15,242. Is that William Hewitt ?—I do not know.

15,243. Of Church Plain ?—He is the same trade; at least he is a shoemaker, and I am a broker and shoemaker.

15,244. Do you know of any other man whom Hewitt sent up to Wright's ?—No, I do not.

15,245. Do you know if Hewitt said anything more ?—No, I do not know.

15,246. Were you offered any money by the other side ?—There was a man came to me upon the Sunday before the election, and he asked me which way I was going to vote, and by my discourse he found out I did not vote for his party, and he did mention the quantity of money; but he found out it was of no use, and he walked off.

15,251. Do you know the name of the public-house?—No, I do not know the sign.

15,254. Was it Golder?—No.

15,255. Power?—No.

15,257. That is Beales?—Yes, I could not understand you. That is the man. I understood you a different name.

15,258. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

15,259. Did you get anything for your vote then?—Yes, I got 10*l.*

15,260. Who gave you that?—Mr. Wilshack.

15,261. And you voted the same way then?—Yes; I did not vote the same way that I did this time. I voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey then.

15,262. How came you to change your way of voting?—Because between the two elections the party I had received the 10*l.* from, there was a little difference between him and I, and so I changed my colours.

15,263. A little difference between you and Mr. Wilshack?—Yes.

15,264. And so you determined to go over to the other side?—Yes.

15,265. Those are your politics?—I do not understand you.

15,297. Did you promise him?—No, I do not think I did promise him.

15,298. You never promised to vote until you got the 20*l.*?—I did not promise it then. It was offered to me if I would do him the service of voting for them.

15,299. And you did him the service and voted for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—I did it, because I heard such was the case. I do not mind now whether it was the case.

15,300. Had you got a vote in 1859?—Yes.

15,301. What did you get for it then?—I never looked for anything. No more I did this time, if it had not been offered me.

S. Drake.

SAMUEL DRAKE sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

15,304. What are you?—I am a carter by trade. I cart all sorts of things; anything that you please. You may call me a labourer. I am nothing more than a labourer.

15,305. Did you cart away 15 sovereigns of Mr. Brogden and Vanderbyl's?—No, I did not.

15,306. What did you get for your vote?—Well I do not know what I got, but the money was not paid to me.

15,307. Who was the money paid to?—The money was brought and left in my stable.

15,308. How much?—I believe 15*l.*

15,309. When was it you found the 15*l.* in your stable?—The day before the election.

15,310. Who put it there?—It is a gentleman that I never saw before, and I had no knowledge of who brought it. I have a knowledge of the man now, because if I see him I know him again. But he came to me during the time, and he said. "You will get what others get." And I never knew what the others got; but, however, that was nothing to me; he left it.

15,311. Had you never seen the gentleman before?—I had only seen him when he called once before.

15,312. I daresay you would not mind seeing him again?—Well I should have no objection.

15,313. Did you see him put the 15 sovereigns in the stable?—No, I did not.

15,314. How came you to find them?—There were other people in the stable, they received the money though I did not. I was in my kitchen when he went through the kitchen to pay it away in the stable.

15,320. Did your wife see the strange gentleman put the 15 sovereigns in the stable?—I do not know what she did. I cannot speak of that, because I was not there myself. I did not see it.

15,321. Did your wife tell you where you would find it?—No, I never saw it, or never handled it myself.

15,322. Who got hold of it?—Well, my wife, I suppose.

15,323. And then your wife gave it to you?—No, she never came to me and I never saw the money. I never handled the money.

15,324. Never had it at all?—I never had it at all. I stand here in truth in what I speak. Mine is truth. I give it to you as truth.

15,325. When did your wife tell you she had got it?—I know she had got it! I did not know that, because the man went out of my room where I was, and gave it to her I suppose; that I could not tell because I was not there, and I was nowhere in the stable where I could see her, therefore, I could not tell, but he says he paid it to me.

15,326. Did your wife tell you which way you were to vote?—No.

15,327. That 15*l.* was to make you vote for Lacon and Goodson?—Yes.

15,337. Do you know Downing?—Yes, I know Downing very well.

15,338. And he never gave you a ticket?—No.

15,339. Did your wife have any money besides that 15*l.*?—Not any that I can speak to.

15,340. Will you swear you did not have any money at all from the other side?—I swear I never handled the money, or never saw it.

15,341. But I mean from the other side?—Yes. I will swear I never had a shilling. I never had a shilling before in my life from either party.

15,342. Had you got a vote in 1859?—Yes, I had a vote in 1859, but I never received anything.

15,343. Did you get nothing for your vote in 1859?—I never had any before.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

15,344. (Mr. Russell.) Do you know this man?—I cannot remember him. They change themselves, they are so different now to what they were when I saw them before. They are cleaner; and everything of that sort makes a great difference.

15,345. This is rather a remarkable looking man and you might recollect him?—He would have have his hat on at the time.

15,346. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You will not say positively you did not see him?—No.

WILLIAM HOLMES sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

W. Holmes.

15,347. What are you?—A fish curer.

15,348. What did you get?—15*l.*

15,349. Who did you get it from?—I received it at Mr. Cattermole's.

15,350. That was to vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—Yes.

15,351. Did you?—Yes.

15,352. Did you get anything on the other side?—No.

15,353. Were you asked for your vote on the other side?—Yes.

15,354. Who asked you?—Mr. Cooper.

15,355. How long before the election was it?—Three or four days.

15,356. What did you say to Mr. Cooper?—I said I did not know yet which way I should go.

15,357. What did you mean by that? That you would go whichever way they paid you, I suppose?—No, I had not made up my mind which way I should vote at that time.

15,358. What did Mr. Cooper say?—He said he should see me on the election day again.

15,359. Did you tell Cooper that you got money on the other side?—No.

15,360. Did you tell him that you expected money on the other side?—No, I did not expect any.

15,361. Did you not tell Cooper he was too late; you had got money the other side?—No.

15,362. Are you sure?—I never told him any such thing. I was offered money the other side.

15,363. Who offered it you?—Downing.

15,364. When did Downing offer you this money?—On the Monday night.

15,365. Did you get this 15*l.* through a ticket?—I had no ticket; he said I did not want any.

15,366. Who sent you to Cattermole's?—Downing himself.

15,367. Did Downing show you any tickets?—No, I never saw any.

15,368. Is that the 15*l.* that Downing offered you?—Yes, got on the Monday night at Cattermole's upstairs.

15,369. Did you vote in the year 1859?—No, I was rather too late.

15,370. How were you too late?—I had not been in the house long enough where I lived.

15,371. You had no vote?—No.

15,372. Where was it that Downing offered you the money?—In the Market Place.

15,373. When?—On the Monday night.

15,374. When was it Downing told you first you could get some money?—That was on the Saturday.

15,375. You had told Cooper before that that you had been offered money?—I do not think I had.

15,376. When did you tell Cooper you had been offered money?—That was on the Monday morning that I told Cooper.

15,377. Was that the first time that Cooper had canvassed you?—No, I spoke to him before.

15,378. What did you say to Cooper then?—I told Cooper I had not made up my mind.

15,379. Did you not tell him then you had been offered money?—No, not until the Monday morning.

15,380. Are you quite sure of that?—Quite sure.

NINETEENTH DAY.

J. Hart.

6 Sept. 1866.

JAMES HART sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

15,381. What are you?—A fisherman.

15,382. Did you get any money for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

15,384. Who gave it you?—George King.

15,385. Where did he give it you?—In my own house.

15,386. On what day?—On the Thursday, the day after the election.

15,387. Had you agreed with him that you were to vote on his side for 20*l.*?—Yes, before the election.

15,388. Were you canvassed on the other side—No, on neither side.

15,389. You were canvassed by King?—Yes, that is all.

15,390. Had you ever voted before?—No, not this election.

15,391. Did you vote in 1859?—No, I was about three months astern of that.

15,392. Then that is all the money you had?—Yes.

T. Leak.

THOMAS LEAK sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

15,393. What are you?—A carpenter.

15,394. Did you have any money for your vote at the last election?—Yes, 15*l.*

15,395. Who gave it you?—Mr. Johnson.

15,396. Were you offered any money by the other side?—I was offered, I think, 25*l.*, but I do not know who it was. I never saw him any more, and I do not know what party they belonged to.

15,397. Where were you offered 25*l.*?—Just this side of the chapel.

15,398. In the street?—Yes; whether it was done as a joke or what I could not say.

15,399. Did you refuse it?—No; they said they should see me again.

15,400. You never did see the gentlemen again?—No; if I had I do not think I should have known them.

15,401. Was 15*l.* all the money you got?—Yes.

15,402. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No; this was the first time I voted.

Adjourned till to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

TWENTIETH DAY.

TWENTIETH DAY.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 7th September 1866.

C. Satterthwaite.

7 Sept. 1866.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

15,402*a*. (Mr. Slade.) Do you wish to give in any more names to the Commissioners?—William Overton Longhurst, of Beckett's brewery, who paid money away. Then there are two names of people, some I have paid down at Cattermole's, that are not down on the list, and there may be some mistake in keeping them off the register. Their names are Clarence Kirkham, of Brighton Terrace—

15,403. What did you pay him?—15*l.* And the other is Henry Bambridge, of Gaol Street, 15*l.*

15,404. How did you ascertain these names?—From gentlemen who met me and said, "You have not got "so-and-so upon your list, and you paid them at Cat- "termole's." A person of the name of Juler told me of one of them.

15,405. Of your own knowledge you do not know that you paid them money?—He said he knew that I had done so.

15,406. You have no memorandum or voucher of it?—No. That is what I wanted the register for yesterday. The register tells me everything. Also there are remarks. I have no doubt I could have given a deal more information if I had had that register.

15,407. Do I understand that Longhurst was one of the Captains?—I was told that he was a party that had to do with giving money away, and I wish to have all those, as perhaps we might get some light through them.

R. Balls.

RICHARD BALLS recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

15,408. We do not want to have a lot of useless statements here, but your name has been mentioned as receiving money from Mr. Jones?—I see it is in the paper.

15,409. Do you deny that?—Yes.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

15,410. (Mr. Slade.) Did you give in the number to the Commissioners of 57 as having received money?—No.

J. Skinner.

JOHN SKINNER sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

15,411. You live in the Blackfriars Road?—Yes.

15,412. Your name was given in as having received 15*l.* from Mr. Jones?—So I see in the paper. I never received a farthing. I never spoke to one of the parties at all.

15,413. What are you?—A fishowner.

15,414. Were you canvassed at the last election?—Sir Edmund Lacon canvassed me.

15,415. Were you canvassed on the other side?—No. I believe the people called at my house, but I never saw one of them.

15,416. What answer did you give to Sir Edmund Lacon when he called?—I told him if I voted I should vote for him.

15,417. Are you sure you promised Sir Edmund Lacon when he first called?—Yes; the first time I saw him I told him.

15,418. I am sorry to say that in this list you are put down with a "T" against your name, which means that you wanted money?—No, I did not.

15,419. You are not put down as a promise to Sir Edmund Lacon even in his list?—I promised Sir Edmund Lacon, and told him if I voted I should vote for him.

15,420. It was not a promise at once; it is put down in pencil?—I never saw Sir Edmund Lacon but that once, and I told him if I voted I should not vote against him.

15,421. Did you vote at the election before the last?—I did.

15,422. Whom did you vote for?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey.

15,423. Did you receive anything for your vote then?—No, I did not.

15,424. How many times did Sir Edmund Lacon call at your house?—I cannot say. I only saw him once.

15,425. Had you heard of his being there?—Yes.

15,426. How often?—I cannot say. My wife used to tell me when he came. It might be two or three times, or four times. But when Sir Edmund Lacon came Mr. Hunt, the rate collector, came with him.

15,427. That was when you saw him, when Mr. Hunt was with him?—Yes.

15,428. You have had the opportunity of denying it, and we have nothing more to ask you. You got nothing for your vote at all?—I got nothing, only a thank. That is all I got.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

15,429. (Mr. Slade.) Do you recollect this man?—No. Still he might come.

WILLIAM DICKSON HUMPHREY sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

W. D. Humphrey.

15,430. Do you live in the St. George's Road?—No.

15,431. Your name is William Dickson Humphrey?—Yes.

15,432. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—No.

15,433. Do you know Mr. Brand?—No, I do not know him. I knew his father, but I do not know him.

15,434. Were you offered any money at the last election?—No, not by any one at all.

15,435. You voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—Yes.

15,436. It was Edwards who mentioned your name. It was a mistake evidently.—That is my name, William Dickson Humphrey.

15,437. But you never received anything?—Not a farthing from any one. I can take my oath of that.

THOMAS DOWNING recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

T. Downing.

15,438. Do you remember this gentleman?—It is another William Humphrey. I telegraphed for him from Newcastle. This is Captain William Humphrey, of St. George's Road. He was telegraphed for to come from Newcastle.

15,439. Is he on the register?—Yes. He lived in the St. George's Road.

15,440. We are not talking of Mr. Jones's list.—No; it is Mr. Edwards's list. It is perfectly right.

15,441. George Humphrey, Blackfriars Road; is that the man you mean?—No; William Humphrey, St. George's Road.

15,442. He is put down as 20*l.* in Mr. Jones's list?—He was in Mr. Edwards's list. He had, I think, 25*l.*, 20*l.* and 5*l.* for his expenses; and that was paid by Mr. Parker, so I am satisfied it went through Mr. Edwards's list. I gave the money to Parker myself for Mr. William Humphrey, so I know that is perfectly right.

15,443. Do you know this gentleman?—Yes, I knew of him all my life. I should not have attempted to have done anything with him, nor yet have allowed anyone else. I was quite certain it was of no use.

JAMES BUTLER sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

J. Butler.

15,444. Your number on the register is No. 242, and you live in Charlotte Street?—Yes.

15,445. Mr. Jones mentions your name as having received 15*l.*?—He does.

15,446. Is that true or false?—That is false.

15,447. Did you receive anything for your vote at the last election?—I had no vote. This was the first.

15,448. I mean this election?—No; I never received anything at all in any shape whatever.

15,449. Had you promised your vote to anybody?—Mr. Brogden called upon me. He asked me if I would vote for him. I did not promise him I should, but I told him if I voted I should vote for him. That is the only answer I gave him.

15,450. When did you tell Mr. Brogden that? how long before the election?—On the Wednesday I believe it was, as near as I could see. He was in the street on the Wednesday.

15,451. What are you?—A cabinet maker.

15,452. You voted for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl?—Yes.

15,453. Do you mean the Wednesday before the polling day?—Yes.

15,454. That is a week before the election?—Yes.

15,455. You promised him then?—Yes. That is what I said to him. I told him if I voted I should vote for him, and I did so.

15,456. Did you say you had made up your mind?—He asked me, when I told him I should not promise him, he asked if there was anything in his principles that I wanted him to explain. I told him no, there was nothing. He tapped me on the shoulder and said, "I know you are a Liberal at heart," and that is how we parted.

15,457. Had you a vote at the election before this?—No.

15,458. Did you know at the last election that money was going about?—I do not know that I heard much about it, that there was money going about.

15,459. I ask, did you know there was money going about?—No; I say I did not know there was.

15,460. When did you first find that out?—Most of it I have learnt since this inquiry has been going on.

15,461. When did you first learn money was being given for votes?—That I could not say.

15,462. Before the election?—I do not say that I could say that there was money passing for votes before the election.

15,463. Did you hear money was being given to voters for their votes before the election?—I do not know it. I was told that there was money being given, but I take my oath I did not know that anybody was giving away money. I had a conversation, at least I heard Mr. Jones was coming before.

15,464. Who told you that?—Mr. Thompson.

15,465. Mr. Thompson told you Mr. Jones was coming?—Yes.

15,466. Did he say what he was coming for?—He said, "We want to do the thing properly; Mr. Jones "was coming to conduct it."

15,467. That will not do. You know what he came for?—He came into my shop and asked me the price of a piece of paper; at least he did not ask me, he asked Mrs. Butler, and Mrs. Butler told him it was 4½*d.* or 5*d.* I cannot say what it was in particular, and he said, "If I went anywhere else, people would "say it was 10*l.* or 15*l.*" She said, "You are on "electioneering matters; if so, I will not call Mr. "Butler." He said "No." Then when I went to him he asked the price of the piece of paper, and he said his master wanted to know; Mr. Brogden I believe he said he was; and I asked him whether Mr. Brogden was going to paper the "Angel." That is the remark I made to him. That is how the conversation came up about Mr. Jones. He said they were "Going to do the thing properly; the election would "be settled." This was the Thursday before the election when I saw Mr. Thompson.

15,468. "Going to do the thing properly?"—Yes.

15,469. What did you understand by that?—I suppose what he meant was, what business they were going to do was that which nobody should find out.

15,470. Did you not know he meant you to understand money would be given?—I do not know whether he knew himself money would be given or no. He asked me if 10*l.* or 15*l.* would pay for the piece of paper for my vote. That is what he said to me.

15,471. Who is Mr. Thompson?—He lives across the Market I believe.

15,472. Is he a voter?—I do not know.

15,473. James Thompson you mean?—I do not know whether his name is James or not.

15,474. The man at whose house the money was paid?—That I do not know.

15,475. You have heard since, have you not?—I have only heard it in this affair.

15,476. I mean that very man?—His name is Thompson. That is as far as I can say.

15,477. You had a conversation with Mr. Thompson about the money?—That is how he drew me in for that conversation, by coming into the shop about the piece of paper. That is how it was led into, and in that way. How he came I cannot say.

15,478. You knew from the conversation that took place, that money was being given for votes?—Of course I could not say it would be given. He did not tell me he was going to give money. He said, a Mr. Jones was coming. I do not know whether he knew Mr. Jones was in the town at the time, or anything.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

15,479. (Mr. Slade.) Do you recollect anything about this?—There is something peculiar about this case. It appears in going over the list, his name has been omitted, and in coming to check it off again to see whether I was correct or not, it is put down in ink. A ticket must have been found, and it is put down in ink different to the others; so that I think he must have been paid; and I would almost take an oath that he has been paid.

J. Butler.

JAMES BUTLER recalled; examination resumed by Mr. SLADE.

15,480. When you had the conversation with Mr. Thompson about Mr. Jones coming, what did he tell you about Mr. Jones? Did he say he was coming down to conduct the election?—He told me a Mr. Jones was coming down.

15,481. Did he say who Mr. Jones was?—No. I asked him of course as a matter of talk several questions for my own information, so far as it goes.

15,482. Tell us what you asked him. We shall have Mr. Thompson here?—I will speak the truth.

15,483. Go on and tell us what passed?—He told me about Mr. Jones coming down, and they were going to do the thing properly this time. The election would be settled, I think he told me, before the Friday; but I suppose he meant before the Friday night.

15,484. Did he say Mr. Jones was come down?—He either said he had come down, or was coming down; I will not be positive.

15,485. Did you ever receive a ticket?—No. I never heard of a ticket until I saw this inquiry here.

15,486. Are you sure on what day this conversation took place?—The Thursday before the election.

15,487. Are you sure of that?—Yes. It must have been the Thursday. I cannot say whether the Thursday or Friday, but I believe it was the Thursday.

15,488. Are you sure it was the Thursday?—I am pretty well sure it was the Thursday. I do not see what other day it could be.

15,489. How did Mr. Thompson tell you that he had learnt that Mr. Jones was coming?—He did not tell me how he heard it. I did not get it from him. He told me he came from his master, Mr. Brogden. He said that was his master.

15,490. He said Mr. Brogden was his master, and Mr. Brogden told him Mr. Jones was coming?—I would not say that.

15,491. I ask what Mr. Thompson told you as to how he knew that Mr. Jones was coming?—I say he did not tell me that. I did not get it from him.

15,492. What did you say about his master?—He told me his master wanted to know the price of a piece of paper. That is what I said at the commencement. I saw another person afterwards on the election morning. That was Mr. Tingay in the Market Road. That was the election morning. I saw nobody else during that time, not to have any conversation with at all about the election. Mr. Tingay called on the morning, and I went to him, and he asked me if I was going to vote, I said, "Yes." He asked, "Who for?" I told him "For Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl." In fact, I took a voting card, which I received the night before, and showed him who I was going to vote for. I suppose he was not satisfied with that. He asked me whether I had seen Mr. Fowler, and I told him "No," as I had never seen Mr. Fowler.

15,493. What made him ask you if you had seen Mr. Fowler?—I do not know. He said, Mr. Fowler should have called upon me.

15,494. Did you never see Mr. Thompson again after that conversation on the Thursday?—No.

15,495. Not till after the election?—Not till after the election.

15,496. That you take your oath to?—Yes.

15,497. Had you promised Mr. Brogden your vote at the time you had this conversation with Mr. Thompson?—He called the day before; on the Wednesday, I think, Mr. Brogden called.

15,498. And you promised him that day?—Yes; that is what I told Mr. Brogden.

15,499. That is what you told Mr. Thompson?—That is what I told Mr. Brogden. You are asking about Mr. Brogden.

15,500. You promised him your vote?—Yes.

15,501. And the next day Mr. Thompson came to you?—The next day Mr. Thompson came into my shop.

15,502. And told you Mr. Jones was come, or coming?—He began this conversation about the piece of paper; and that is when he told me about Mr. Jones, that he either had come, or was coming, I cannot say which.

15,503. What authority had Mr. Thompson to offer you this money for the paper?—I cannot say.

15,504. Did he say anything?—He wanted to know for his master, Mr. Brogden.

15,505. And you never had the curiosity to ascertain whether Mr. Jones had come or not?—No.

15,506. Never thought any more about it?—I never saw anybody, or spoke to anybody about the election.

15,507. Or never heard of money being spent?—I never heard no more than that.

15,508. Never heard of any people having been bribed?—I never heard anybody was bribed before the election.

15,509. You never heard of anybody going to Thompson's to be paid?—No; I knew nothing of that kind.

15,510. Nor the "Angel?"—Nor the "Angel."

15,511. Nor Cattermole's?—Nor Cattermole's.

15,512. It is all new to you?—Yes.

15,513. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Are you a married man?—Yes.

15,514. Did your wife receive anything?—No; in no shape whatever. We never received a farthing, I can take my solemn oath, in no shape, by direct or indirect means in any way whatever. If the money was drawn in my name it was drawn falsely; but if it was drawn as Mr. Jones has stated he can take his oath to, he says he took certain tickets, and that is the only reference he has to it, and the only check he has against those people, and of course he had a right, when the person came with the cheque, to take and strike off those names that he gave the ticket to.

15,515. Do you know Mr. Thompson well?—No; I only know him by seeing him.

15,516. How came he to come to you, and question you about the election?—I do not know any more how he came to come into me, whether he was sent round, or what it was, I would not say.

15,517. Where did this conversation take place?—In my shop.

15,518. He came to you?—I saw him in my front shop. He asked the price of a piece of paper.

15,519. Did he come there for any other purpose than to have this conversation with you?—That was the only conversation I had with him.

15,520. What did he come into your shop for?—I told you, he came in and spoke to Mrs. Butler first about the piece of paper, and he said, if he went anywhere else people would say 10*l.* or 15*l.* for this piece of paper, and she said, "If you are on electioneering "matters I will not call him down," and he assured her he was not, and upon that she called me down.

15,521. Do you mean a piece of paper for papering a room?—Yes. That is my business. That is what I sell.

15,522. Did you mention just now the name of Fowler?—Yes, that is the name Mr. Tingay said. He asked me if I had seen him.

15,523. When did you see Mr. Fowler?—I never saw him at all.

15,524. It was this man Tingay met you?—Yes.

15,525. He asked if you had seen Fowler?—Yes.

15,526. Was it Fowler or Flower?—Tingay is the man who asked me.

15,527. Do you know who Fowler is?—He is a draper, I believe, in the Market Place.

15,528. That is the man that he met?—Yes.

15,529. Who is Mr. Tingay?—He is a confectioner living in the Market Road.

15,530. (Mr. Russell.) Are you a Liberal?—Yes, I profess to be.

15,531. Why did you not promise Mr. Brogden to vote for him like a man when he first came?—I do not know that I am exactly bound to promise.

15,532. A man that gives a shuffling and evasive answer when he is canvassed for a vote lays himself open to the imputation of being ready to take a bribe, and there is no moral difference between the man who is ready to take a bribe and the man who does take one; there is nobody to blame but yourself?—Of course I must bear the blame, if there is blame, but I take my oath I never received a penny in any shape whatever.

15,533. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know a man named Flower?—I know Mr. Flower in the market.

15,534. Do you know whether he received a bribe?—No.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE re-called.

C. Satterthwaite.

15,535. (Mr. Slade.) You do not recollect this man?—As to this person that he names, I have just had given to me another name of Tingay, or whatever it is. It seems he has been a partizan to the election with reference to paying money away. I have just got a name here that this man bribed; perhaps he may throw some light upon this.

15,536. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Was Fowler one of the committee men who gave in names?—Not who gave me names. I believe he was one connected with the committee, but I had no communication with him.

15,537. Was Mr. Tingay?—I did not know till just now. A voter has been put into my hand that Tingay came and got money for on the morning of the election, or it was sent by Mr. Tingay to the voter, whose name I have here. I do not know whether he is on my list.

15,538. That is another name?—Yes, not this man; but this man says he knew nothing about bribing. Perhaps Mr. Tingay might say whether he paid him or named bribing to him.

RICHARD BALLS recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

R. Balls.

15,539. Did you receive a ticket from Downing at the last election?—No.

THOMAS DOWNING recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

T. Downing

15,540. Did he receive one?—No.

15,541. Is he in your list?—No.

15,542. He is down as Richard Balls, Market Road?—That is wrong, I can assure you.

15,543. Here is your list with the number 57 and the "C" against it?—It is wrong; that is only a list of what might be got; that is not the list that I drew for.

15,544. That is the list you gave me?—That is the list that I spoke to. I spoke to Mr. Balls the Saturday. I did not say I had bribed those parties. You asked me for the parties I had seen.

15,545. I asked you for the parties you had given tickets to?—It is quite a mistake.

15,546. Is there not a "C" put against his name?—I know that I gave in those parties that I had spoken to.

15,547. Why did you put a "C" against their names?—It is merely to suppose what they got the other side. I found afterwards what they asked me. I saw Mr. Balls, the Saturday, and he said there was him and Spencer and several more that he gave me on the Saturday. I was rather afraid to meddle with them, and so I did not touch them. If you take this as a list of parties I bribed you take it as quite wrong.

15,548. Why do you put a "C." against their names?—Only from a conversation that I had with some of them. I had agreed for so much money, but there is not one of those out of the whole that I had except Jay, and that I put down as returned. You must have misunderstood me there. This "C," if you recollect, I explained meant that they did vote the Conservative side, and the "L" meant Liberal, there was Conservative and Liberal; you asked me, if you recollect, to explain what "C" meant, I said that means Conservative, and that they had voted Conservative.

15,549. Did all those men with the "C" against their names vote for the Conservatives?—Yes, I took it from the poll book. I gave you that list, and you recollect you particularly asked me about that list. I said they voted Conservative. They were men I had spoken to previous to the election, and they were going from me.

15,550. I asked you for a list of men you gave tickets to?—Begging your pardon, you asked me for all I could recollect giving tickets to, and I told you then.

Mr. (Satterthwaite.) I can call Mr. Downing's attention to something which might remind him of the circumstance of this Mr. Balls. He called on me in the evening, and said Mr. Balls's money was got by a person of the name of Fisk, but he did not get it, it was transferred to another party. The money was given to another party, that may refresh his memory.

15,551. (Mr. Slade.) Do you remember this?—Parker had 200*l.*, and he will be able to give you the party he gave it to, but I have not his list.

15,552. Did you give in a list of names to Mr. Jones?—Yes, I believe I did.

15,553. How many names?—That I cannot say.

15,554. You know you gave them a list, do you not?—If a party comes to me and gives a list, I carry it to Mr. Jones. For instance, Parker brought me a list of 10 names, Parker and Seago. I took that to Mr. Jones, and from what I recollect, Humphrey was one, and Edward Jacks was another. After he gave me the numbers I took them to Mr. Jones. If Parker and Seago were here they would tell you the names, I gave the amount of the money for them.

15,555. I understand that you saw this gentleman, Mr. Balls?—Yes, on the Saturday.

15,556. And gave him no ticket?—No, I gave him no ticket.

15,557. Or did not send him for any money?—No, you have made a mistake in that list. You asked me to give you a list of what I could recollect that was bribed on the other side, and that list I brought you, of what I considered was bribed on the other side to my knowledge, and that list represents the men I had spoken to, which I thought you would understand, that those were the parties that I could recollect. You asked me whether I would bring a list of what I thought was bribed the other side, and those were parties I spoke to and had conversations with, therefore I gave it you on that account.

15,558. Will you give me a list of whom you gave tickets to?—I can only give it you from Mr. Jones's list. I could pick them out if I had his list.

15,559. Did you give any tickets?—Oh, yes.

15,560. Do you mean that list Mr. Jones has before him?—If I had the register, no doubt there are several parties I could tell.

15,561. There is the register, and the 20*l.* against them (handing it to the witness). Do it yourself, and write it down on paper; but before you do that, give me the names of those people that gave in lists to you?—I do not think that I paid any money, only to Parker and Seago.

15,562. Parker and Seago brought you a list?—Their list was in one. I gave them 200*l.*

15,563. Did anybody else bring you a list?—Not that I gave any money to.

15,564. Did anybody else give you a list?—Yes, several of them. Mr. Edwards gave me a list. He gave me a list, and I wrote tickets.

15,565. I do not want to know about the tickets, but who gave you lists to take to Mr. Satterthwaite?—Mr. Edwards did.

15,566. Tom Edwards you mean?—Thomas Edwards brought me a list, but at the time I could not recollect every one.

15,567. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You mentioned Parker just now; that we never heard of before?—Parker and Seago I am certain. I gave them the money in the "Angel."

15,568. (Mr. Slade.) Did Fowler?—I will not be certain whether he took tickets of me or no. I cannot positively say. I have no doubt he took some.

15,569. Did Neave?—No, he did not I know.

15,570. Newman?—I would not say whether he had one.

15,571. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) I see you did mention Parker's name before.—Yes, I did.

15,572. Did Thompson have some tickets?—He says he has not. I fancied he had. I asked him afterwards and he said he had no tickets of me. I have asked him since, and he says no he had not any.

15,573. (Mr. Slade.) Have you your canvass book?—I gave it to Mr. Edwards. I do not think there is another man. You have Westoby junior.

15,574. Do you know Edward R. Edwards, Tom Edwards' brother?—Yes.

15,575. Did he give in any list?—No, I think not.

15,576. Was he busy at the last election?—No, I do not think so. I never knew that he was busy. I thought he was rather inclined to stand neutral. I knew he would not vote.

A. Stebbings.

ALFRED STEBBINGS sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

15,577. Where do you live?—High Road, Gorleston.

15,578. I have nothing against you.—I am very glad of it. I had a vote for 16 years, and I never took a farthing.

15,579. What did you wish to say?—I was ordered.

15,580. Were you summoned?—Yes.

15,581. I thought you came to deny receiving money?—I do deny it. I have voted 16 years, and I never received a penny.

15,582. Did you receive a summons?—Yesterday, and I came up, and I gave in a note to deny what had been said. Warner said I was a likely person to take a bribe, and he believed I did so.

15,583. There is nothing against you.—I should wish to know, because my name is in the paper.

15,584. (Mr. Russell.) Warner having said you were likely to take a bribe was rather in your favour than anything.—Yes; it was meant from spite, and nothing else.

W. Glanfield.

WILLIAM GLANFIELD sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

15,585. Your number on the register is 515?—I do not know. I have never looked.

15,586. It is a mistake. You wish to say you never received anything for your vote?—Not a penny.

W. Blake.

WILLIAM BLAKE sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

15,587. Do you live at St. Nicholas Road?—Yes.

15,588. Your name on the register is No. 141 for 20*l.* That you wish to deny?—Certainly.

15,589. What are you?—A fish merchant.

15,590. Were you canvassed at the last election?—No; I think Mr. Livingston called at mine. I think he came. I will not be certain.

15,591. Was Mr. Livingston the only gentleman who asked you for your vote?—Yes, he was the gentleman who asked me, because I made up my mind to go and try when Mr. Livingston came and asked me. I said I should vote red, and it was no use. I was under compulsion to vote blue before, on account of a legacy. I voted blue, but I wished the red to get in. It was on account of my uncle. He was a hot blue, and I was obliged to vote that way on account of a legacy to my wife, but after he died I was at liberty to vote which way I pleased.

15,592. Were you canvassed by Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes; I told him I should vote for him; and the previous election before I told Sir Edmund Lacon I should vote dead against him. I was compelled so; it was no use asking me. If I had not done it, I should have lost the legacy.

15,593. That must have been the reason that the Liberals could not understand your vote?—I suppose so; I do not know.

15,594. They knew you ought to vote their side, and you were not going to?—Because I was compelled.

15,595. They thought you wanted money ?—I told Mr. Livingston when he came about me.

15,596. They put you down in their list as wanting money ?—I did not want any.

15,597. Some gentleman has drawn 20*l.* in your name ?—If they have, it is under a mistake.

15,598. (Mr. Russell.) You voted for Watkin and Young in 1859 ?—Yes.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

15,599. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you recollect him ?—I do not. It is in Mr. Edwards's district, so I am informed ; I have just been inquiring.

WILLIAM MOSS sworn ; examined by Mr. SLADE.

W. Moss.

15,600. Do you live in the St. George's Road ?—No. St. George's Street.

15,601. Your number on the register is No. 874 ?—I do not know the number.

15,602. You are down on the list as having received 20*l.* for your vote ?—I never received 20 shillings, nor yet 20 pence.

15,603. Then it is not true ?—It is not true.

15,604. You promised Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman ?—I did.

15,605. And you voted for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl ?—Yes ; I promised Mr. Brogden, I think, within two days of his first coming.

15,606. And you voted for them ?—Yes.

15,607. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Were you canvassed on the other side ?—Sir Edmund canvassed me, and Mr. Goodson, and I was canvassed by Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman.

15,608. (Mr. Slade.) Had you a vote in the election before the last ?—Yes, I have voted at a great many elections. My first election was with Wilshire and Baring, and I have voted since, and never received a penny at any time.

15,609. Always voted blue ?—Yes.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

15,610. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know this witness ?—No, I do not think he got it from what I hear. They say he is a man that would not take it.

15,611. Somebody drew a ticket in his name ?—There is no doubt of that. A good many of them say there will be transfers. If they would only come forward and give the name of the transfers, they would save a great deal of time. If the gentlemen who say they have transferred them to others will give a list of whom they state they have transferred them to, it would save a deal of trouble.

15,612. What gentlemen do you know who have stated that ?—Mr. Downing has transferred several names. I am placed in this position that parties tell me tales and afterwards they contradict me.

15,613. (Mr. Russell.) If a man transferred a ticket, when he came to present it it was the wrong number on the transfer ?—That was not the way they did it. For instance, Downing would bring me a certain number of tickets. He takes the money himself to pay away. On going to look over the register, we find the party has not had the money. Then where has it gone ? He says he transferred it to some one ; unless we did not pay that party we were too late, and it is put on the register, the number of the ticket I received, not who they paid afterwards, because they drew the money for that party.

EDWARD SMITH sworn ; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

E. Smith.

15,614. What are you ?—A painter.

15,615. Where do you live ?—In Southtown.

15,616. What did you come here for ?—I had a summons sent to me yesterday.

15,617. Did you receive anything for your vote at the last election ?—I had no vote.

15,618. You had the other day ?—No. I have not been in the house long enough to have a vote ; the last house I lived in was a 6*l.* 10*s.* a year house ; so that that did not give a vote.

15,619. Here you are No. 1,599 on the register, "House, High Road, Southtown" ?—It cannot be me, for I have not a vote.

15,620. I think the summoning officer must have got hold of the wrong Edward Smith ?—I suppose so. It is not me, that is all I know.

15,621. If you have not got a vote, you certainly did not get any money for it ?—I had nothing.

JAMES SHATTOCK sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

J. Shattock.

15,622. What are you ?—I have no business now.

15,623. What were you ?—A shoemaker.

15,624. Do you know a man named Bensley ?—Yes. Perhaps it would save time if I gave in a list.

15,625. Answer the questions first. Did you rereceive some money before the last election to buy votes with ?—Yes, I received 20*l.* for each of those votes.

15,626. How much money did you receive altogether ?—240*l.*

15,627. Who gave you that money ?—That is the gentleman. Mr. Jones, I think.

15,628. Where did he give it you ?—In my own house.

15,629. When ?—On the Monday previous to the election.

15,630. Had you given him a list of men whom you could buy with that money ?—No, I had nothing to do with it till he brought me the money ; nothing at all.

15,631. How was it, then, you would buy these votes ?—I did not buy them. Mr. Brand introduced Mr. Jones to me, and asked me if I would be kind enough to hand the money to those names, which I did.

15,632. That list was given to you by Mr. Brand ?—Not this list, but a list of which this is a copy.

15,633. A list containing those names ?—Yes.

15,634. Will you be kind enough, one by one, to give us the names of those men who you bribed with the money ?—Brown on the Southtown Common.

15,635. Thomas Brown of Fen Street, Gorleston, and Road to Common, Southtown ?—That is the same man.

15,636. What did you give him ?—20*l.* At least I supposed it to be 20*l.* It was all screwed up in brown paper parcels, and I was to give them each two, and I believe there was 10*l.* in it.

15,637. What is the next ?—Duffield.

15,638. What is his Christian name ?—Henry, I believe.

15,639. Where does he live ?—On the same common as Brown.

15,640. Is it George Noah Duffield, Road to Common, Southtown ?—Yes, that is it. Then Charles Veale Gardiner, Burnt Lane, Gorleston.

15,641. The next ?—John Durrant, gardener.

15,642. Of Fen Street, Gorleston ?—Yes. Samuel

TWENTIETH DAY.

J. Shattock.

7 Sept. 1866.

Pestell, of the "Guardian Angel," Southtown. A man of the name of Wright, in Burnt Lane.

15,643. Joseph Wright?—Yes. Benjamin Bradnum and William Fleming.

15,644. Of High Street Gorleston?—Yes, a baker.

15,645. And the next?—J. Bensley, bricklayer, of Fen Street.

15,646. High Road, Southtown?—Yes. Thomas Humfrey, carpenter.

15,647. Is it Henry Thomas Humfrey of Fen Street Gorleston?—I do not know whether it is Henry Thomas, but his name is Thomas Humfrey I know, he is a carpenter in Fen Street, Gorleston; and William Smith, cattle dealer.

15,648. Does he live in Fen Street?—Yes, that is all of this list, but I have one more that I received 10*l.* from Mr. Brand for.

15,649. You received 240*l.*?—I had 20*l.* left which I was to have given to a party named George Durrant.

15,650. Of High Street, Southtown?—Yes.

15,651. Did you offer it to him?—I did but he had received 15*l.* on the other side, so he would not take it.

15,652. What did you do with that 20*l.*?—I have it my pocket now, and I offered it to Mr. Brand the week after the election, but he said he could not take it, the accounts were made up.

15,653. You were just telling me about 10*l.* you received from Mr. Brand?—10*l.* I received from Mr. Brand afterwards.

15,654. When?—The morning of the election.

15,655. Did you ask Mr. Brand for the money?—No, he brought it me and told me who to give it to.

15,656. Who were you to give it to?—I gave it to Joseph Godbolt, a cooper.

15,657. What Godbolt, where did he live?—He did live at the house the polling went on at that time, but I do not know where he lives now.

15,658. There is Frederick Godbolt, and John James Godbolt.—He lived at the house the polling was at.

15,659. Both of them lived in the High Road, Southtown.—No. This was the man who occupied the house the voting was held at; I do not know his name any more than Godbolt.

15,660. What is he?—A cooper.

15,661. Has he got a shop?—No, he is a labouring man now. I think he works in King Street, but I know very little about him.

15,662. Did you give this 10*l.* to Godbolt yourself?—I did.

15,663. Was he a man you knew by sight?—He lived neighbours to me within two or three doors. I knew him of course by sight.

15,664. What sort of a looking man?—He was a tall thin man. He works for a person of the name of French, I think now in King Street, as a journeyman cooper.

15,665. Are you sure this man had a vote?—I have no doubt about it. All I had to do was to hand him 10*l.* I did not ask any questions, I knew nothing about it. Mr. Brand gave it to me, and asked me if I would give it to Godbolt, and I gave it him, and I think he voted on the other side as well, and had 10*l.* the other side, I have understood so.

15,666. That is Frederick Godbolt?—I do not know, I would not be sure about that.

15,667. Was that all the money that you received?—That is every farthing that passed through my hands.

15,668. Did you receive the 10*l.* to give to Godbolt after you had offered the 20*l.* to George Durrant?—I did.

15,669. Did you tell Mr. Brand then you had 20*l.* over?—I did not think of it at the time. He merely came to me, and being in confusion the morning of the election I forgot it.

15,670. Who canvassed you?—Sir Edmund Lacon called, but I told him I should vote the other side. I always had been a Liberal 20 years, and had always voted for the Liberals.

15,671. Did Mr. Brogden canvass you?—He did, and I promised him.

15,672. Did you promise him?—I promised him at once.

15,673. You are returned to us as having received 20*l.* from Mr. Jones?—That 20*l.* was left by Mr. Jones with me for a friend that I said I thought would vote, that was George Durrant, but when I got there with the 20*l.* the other party had been beforehand with the 15*l.*, and three days after the election I said to Mr. Brand, "I still have 20*l.* which I wish "to return." And he said "Dear me I do not know what to do with it, the accounts are made up now." I said "What am I to do with it." He said "Let it "stand over." And I have it in my pocket now, and shall be glad to give it back.

15,674. Mr. Satterthwaite says he shall be happy to take it.—If you take my name off as being bribed I will return it.

15,675. (Mr. Slade.) We cannot do that. Your name will be on as a briber and bribee.—I do not wish to be on as a bribee. I named it to Mr. Brand, and I said I should be glad to return it.

15,676. You are in this list with the letter D. against you also.—That is not right, I promised there and then. I have voted for 20 years in London, and always voted for the Liberals.

15,677. (Mr. Russell.) You do not mind bribing poorer men than yourself, but you are highly indignant at thinking it is supposed you did the same?—I am highly indignant at having it put down to me. I did not take it on those terms.

15,678. Why did you not return it before the election?—I thought a few days after would make no difference. I offered it to Mr. Brand the Wednesday, I did not know where to find this gentleman, but I offered it to Mr. Brand.

15,679. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No, not down here.

15,680. Do you know Mr. Rivett?—I knew two or three Mr. Rivett's in the neighbourhood, but never spoke to any.

15,681. Do you know Mr. Lummis?—I never spoke to him to my knowledge. I know Mr. Rivett by being on the road only.

15,682. (Mr. Slade.) What did you get for your services?—Nothing at all.

15,683. What made Mr. Brand come to you?—I do not know, I should have had nothing to do with it had not Mr. Brand have come to me with this gentleman, Mr. Jones. I knew nothing of this gentleman, I had not the slightest idea they were coming until they were in the house.

15,684. Had Mr. Brand spoken to you about it before the election?—Nothing but asked me for my vote, and spoke about other neighbours, but nothing connected with money matters, nor did I know they were coming until they were in the house, nor should I have had anything to have done with it had not Mr. Brand been with this gentleman.

15,685. Did Mr. Brand say you had better keep this 20*l.*?—No, he did not say keep it; he said "You "had better let it stand over for the present," as if he would make further inquiries about it.

15,686. When did you offer this money back to Mr. Brand?—I think the Monday or Tuesday after the election he might come to the house, I never went to his house.

15,687. (Mr. Russell.) Did you understand from what Mr. Brand said that you would ever be called upon to return that 20*l.*?—I did not understand that I should or should not, but I fully expected it. I always had it by me ready to return at any moment, and when this inquiry was going on I fully expected I should hear from this gentleman, or some one who I could return it to.

15,688. Do you mean that you had in money the identical 20*l.*?—No, I will not say the same, because I have at one time taken out five sovereigns and put in a 5*l.* note, and once 10 sovereigns for a note.

15,689. Do you swear you have always kept the specific 20*l.* ready to return?—Yes.

15,690. And you always intended to return it?—I never wished to keep it. I should be most happy to give it up now. Will you take me off as a bribee?

15,691. I do not think you will find any difficulty in getting people to take 20*l.* in Yarmouth?—If I am to have the slur I may as well keep the money.

15,692. Do you prefer to keep it?—No. But if I am to have the slur I will keep it! If I am considered still as a bribed voter. I wish to give it up on those terms.

15,693. Is Mr. Brand in court?—He said he would be here.

15,694. That will do. We have nothing more to ask you?—Am I to suppose if I give up the 20*l.* I shall be taken off?

15,695. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Our decision will be communicated to Her Majesty.—But am I to understand if I give up the 20*l.* I shall be considered as a bribed voter?

15,696. (Mr. Slade.) We cannot give our opinion to you, we are not allowed to do it.—Thank you. If I am to remain a bribed voter I may as well keep the money.

15,697. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You must exercise your own judgment, and do what you consider honest in the matter, and we will do what we consider honest.—Then I will give it up.

(The witness handed 20*l. to Mr. Satterthwaite.*)

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

C. Satterthwaite.

15,698. Do you remember this man?—Yes; I know him very well.

15,699. What is the impression on your mind. Do you remember the case about Durrant?—Yes; I remember it, and I had not Mr. Durrant's name upon it. I inquired of him his name, and I put it down where the money was wanted, as a check for myself. That is the reason I should put his name for the 20*l.* He would give an explanation of it, if it came to an explanation afterwards. Not having his list or his name, they did not know anything about this man suggested, so I put his name down, but I did that merely for my own check.

15,700. (Mr. Slade.) George Durrant's name stands on your list for 20*l.*—You will find as to one or two names he has read over, I have not got them on my list. As I said before I cannot exactly call to mind the names, but I know I gave the 20*l.* to this person for the man to be paid. And we had a list of the names, and I think I got a ticket, I do not know what it was, but I got something as a security that I had given him 20*l.*

15,701. What I mean is this, George Durrant, 1451 on the register, stands in your list as having received 20*l.*?—Yes.

15,702. And Mr. Shattock, this witness also stands in your list for 20*l.*?—Yes, he does.

15,703. Therefore you see the 20*l.* cannot be made to do duty for both.—Do not you see there are one or two names I have omitted, and it is just possible I may have made a mistake. There are one or two names that have received 20*l.*, that I have not got on my list now. Mr. Brand returned me 20*l.* Of course I did not put that down, I kept it out of this list. I cannot explain anything about this, but I know I left 20*l.* with him, and asked him for this money, in order that I could put it in my bag as a check, or as a voucher, that is all. I did not pay any money without vouchers.

15,704. (Mr. Russell.) It is very evident Mr. Brogden has paid 20*l.* for Durrant and 20*l.* for Mr. Shattock. I wonder whether Mr. Brogden would have received it back if there had not been a Commission?—I am certain he would not.

15,705. Did you have much money returned to you after the election?—I rather think it was on the election day, I will not be certain, or when we were making up our accounts. Only from Mr. Brand, that was all.

15,706. What was the sum Mr. Brand returned you?—I do not know whether it was 20*l.* It was 20*l.* or more, but I can speak to 20*l.*

15,707. When did you leave Yarmouth?—I think I stayed nearly a fortnight. I think so, but I am not quite certain, a week or 10 days after the election.

15,708. What day was it the accounts were closed between you, Mr. Salmon, and Mr. Johnson?—I was anxious to get home. We commenced with the accounts the following morning after the election.

15,709. When had you closed the accounts?—We never had closed them properly until we went away. They were kept open to make certain inquiries, and things were found out afterwards.

15,710. I need hardly ask you if any money had been offered to you, you would have taken it?—We should have been most happy to receive it.

HENRY HOLT BARBER sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

H. H. Barber.

15711. What are you?—A shipping agent and coal merchant.

15,712. What part did you take in the last election?—Very little indeed.

15,713. Are you a Liberal?—Yes.

15,714. Will you tell us what you did? Had you anything to do with the bribery?—No; nothing at all.

15,715. Were you a committee man?—Yes.

15,716. In what ward?—Nelson Ward.

15,717. Where did they hold their meetings?—At different places; one was at Mr. Fill's, up a loft.

15,718. Do you know the names of any of the parties who were bribed on your side?—No, not one of them except what I have seen in the papers and heard about.

15,719. You know nothing at all about it?—Not about bribery.

15,720. I do not know why you were summoned?—I do not know myself.

15,721. (Mr. Slade.) Has that paper you have in your hand anything to do with the inquiry?—Nothing at all. I am only here to answer any questions you like to ask me. I know nothing about it.

15,722. You were summoned as being one of the committee?—Yes, my name was mentioned and I suppose I got a summons for that.

SAMUEL FLEMING sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

S. Fleming.

15,723. What are you?—A pilot.

15,724. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

15,732. And you got nothing?—No.

15,733. (Mr. Slade.) Are you a brother of William Fleming?—I am a brother of William Fleming.

15,736. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Have you heard him say so?—I have heard him give very broad hints to that effect.

15,737. You have?—Yes.

15,738. I daresay your brother will not wish to be summoned?—I daresay not. I feel pretty well positive you will find the answers I give you correct. I tell you plainly we were detained at home with our vessel 6 or 7 days with a promise that we should be satisfied for our trouble; that is the sum and substance of it.

15,739. (Mr. Russell.) Your brother is at sea?—He is at sea; at that time of year it was nothing particular in our pockets I assure you.

15,740. (Mr. Slade.) Can you tell us anybody else Mr. Rivett gave money to?—I really cannot say with any positiveness no further than I should be like other people. I should think it is very likely my other two shipmates took the same as I did.

15,741. What are their names?—Leggett and Stanford.

15,742. Thomas Leggett?—Thomas Leggett and Joseph Stanford. I cannot say positively if it is the case, but it is very likely.

15,743. Did you ever hear them say anything about it?—Yes; I heard them say that from which every one would suppose it was the case.

15,744. You have no doubt they received the same as your brother and yourself?—I have no doubt whatever.

15,745. Are they at sea?—No, they are at home.

15,746. They are at home, are they, now?—Yes.

15,769. Were you offered any by anybody else?—No.

15,770. Did you get anything in 1859?—I was not in this country.

15,771. You had no vote?—No.

15,772. (Mr. Russell.) Who offered you first, Mr. Shattock or Mr. Bunn?—Well, I think Mr. Shattock did. I will not be positive who did. They were pretty much in the yard together; one was at the house and the other at the yard.

15,773. You do not remember whether you had Mr. Shattock's money then?—No, I had not the money then.

15,774. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You chose the side that offered you the largest sum?—Yes.

15,783. Who from?—Mr. Stalworthy.

15,787. Was that to vote on the same side?—Yes.

J. Duffield.

JOHN DUFFIELD sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

15,788. What are you?—A carter.

15,789. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—Nothing.

15,790. You got nothing at all?—No.

15,791. (Mr Slade.) Where do you live?—Southtown.

15,792. Mill Road?—Yes, Southtown.

15,793. 20*l.*, was it not, you got?—No.

15,794. Do you know Mr. Lindoff?—I do. He brought 15*l.* and gave it to my wife. I was not at home.

15,795. I thought somebody had it?—Yes, but he received it back again.

15,796. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Mr. Lindoff got it back again?—Yes.

15,797. Did you order it to be returned?—Yes.

15,798. What about the 20*l.*?—I never received a penny.

15,799. Did your wife?—No.

15,801. Who did you vote for?—For Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Brogden.

15,802. (Mr. Russell.) Why did you return the money to Mr. Lindoff?—Because I did not like the idea of taking it.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

15,802. Do you know this man?—I do not. Have I got him on my list?

15,803. 1448?—I think it is Noah. I have 1448.

15,804. 20*l.*?—Yes.

15,805. Did you give the 20*l.*?—It is very likely.

15,806. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Your list in Gorleston is a very short one; perhaps you can recollect the parties who gave you the names in Gorleston?—They were strangers to me.

15,807. Was there more than one given to you? Mr. Shattock has given us a good many?—I think a party named King had something to do with it. I am not certain. I remember him having something to do with it. I think when he comes up I can give an explanation about it.

J. Duffield.

JOHN DUFFIELD recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

15,808. What are your politics, Red or Blue?—I am not so very strong for either of them.

15,809. Tell me how did you vote?—I voted for Lacon and Brogden.

15,810. Red and Blue?—Red and Blue. I am not so hot in the cause as many people.

15,811. (Mr. Russell.) Mr. Lindoff told you to give him back the 15*l.* because you would only vote for Sir Edmund Lacon?—I voted for Lacon and Brogden.

15,812. Mr. Lindoff took the money back?—Yes, Lindoff took the money back.

15,813. Because you would not vote for Lacon and Goodson?—Not for that that I know of. I told him I should not.

15,814. That is what he says, that you would only promise to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon?—I never promised him anything, nor yet none of the party. I promised Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Brogden too; he was not a canvasser.

15,815. How much did you receive on Mr. Brogden's side?—None at all; not a penny.

15,816. Nor your wife?—No, nor yet no one belonging to me. I did not wish to have any. If I wished for money I should not have given the other up.

15,817. Did not Lindoff give you 15*l.* for your vote in 1859?—Yes.

15,818. You did not return that?—No, I did not.

15,819. He did not ask you to give it back?—That he did not.

15,820. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) If you took it in 1859, why did you not take it at this election?—It was in the same way that this was brought in. I did not wish for the money then. Mr. Lindoff told me that 15*l.* was for all voters, and he brought me the 15*l.*

15,821. Who canvassed you on the other side?—When?

15,822. At this last election?—Both parties.

15,823. Did anybody offer you money on the other side?—No, not a penny.

15,824. Nor offered your wife?—No; I stand before you as fair as any man.

15,825. (Mr. Slade.) You promised everybody, did you not?—What do you mean by everybody? I promised two men.

15,826. You promised Brogden and Marshman, and Lacon and Goodson?—I never promised, only Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Brogden.

15,827. I have Mr. Livingston's list here as promising Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman?—I did not do so.

15,828. Then I have Mr. Reynold's list as promising Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—I did not do so.

15,829. Here you are put down as promising Lacon and Goodson?—I did not do so.

15,830. Are you sure you did not?—No.

15,831. Did anybody else receive the money for you?—No.

15,832. You are sure of that?—Yes.

15,833. You are sure your wife would never get any money?—I am sure she did not, only what she took from Mr. Lindoff, and that she returned to him again.

J. Christmas.

15,834. What are you?—I keep a beer-shop in Southtown.

15,835. Did you receive any money for your vote?—No, not a farthing from anyone.

15,836. Do you know a man of the name of Bonney?—No; I know one at Gorleston, but I have not spoken to him for these three months that I know of; he has a fishing boat or two building out that way. That is how I came to know him.

15,837. Joseph Bonney?—I do not know him.

15,838. Do you know Mr. Bunn?—No, I never saw the man in my life that I know of.

15,839. Mr. Bunn told us that he gave a man named Bonney 15*l.* for you?—He does not know me, and I do not know him. There is a man named Christmas Watson living round that way.

15,840. You got no money from either side?—No, not a farthing from nobody, nor yet half a one.

15,841. On two or three occasions we have found ladies would take money, but gentlemen would not?—There was not a farthing ever brought into my house in any shape or way whatever.

15,842. Have you a wife?—Yes.

15,843. She did not take anything?—Not a farthing; there was never a penny-piece brought into my house for that purpose, neither from one party nor the other.

15,844. (Mr. Slade.) That is how the mistake has arisen; it is Christmas Watson?—Yes, it has nothing at all to do with me; they did not know me, I know.

15,846. What did you receive for your vote at the last election?—20*l.*

15,849. Where did you get the 20*l.*?—In Queen's Road.

15,850. At Thompson's?—Yes.

15,851. Tell me how came you to go there?—I was drinking half a pint of ale at a public-house with three or four people who had votes, and they asked me if I was minded to go with them; they were going to see if there was anything allowed at all, and I went up with those other people.

15,852. Did anybody give you a ticket?—No.

15,853. Who had canvassed you before; had anybody offered you money before?—No.

15,854. Who did you see when you first got to the house; who showed you up to Mr. Jones?—Well, I cannot exactly say. There were one or two went up before I that were in the house; I believe Mr. Peck showed me the way.

15,855. Who is Mr. Peck?—A man who keeps a Tom and Jerry shop in Friar's Lane.

15,856. When you got into the room with Mr Jones, what did Mr. Jones say to you?—He asked me my name and where I lived, and he turned to a

15,860. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

15,861. Who did you vote for then?—The Liberal party.

15,862. Did you get anything then?—I think somewhere about 5*l.*

15,863. Who gave you the 5*l.*?—A man of the name of George Clements.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE. C. Satterthwaite.

15,966. Do you wish to make a statement?—I do not know if I shall be out of order. I presume this is Gorleston; when I arrived there with the list I inquired of one of the men who was acting as a captain, I do not know exactly whether he was a captain, however a man who appeared to be a fisherman; I read over to him the list, and I wanted to know if they were there, and if not, I said he must send for them; there were several men there when I got there, and I said, if the parties are not here you had better send for them, so that I shall not be here all night.

JOHN THURSTON recalled; further examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. J. Thurston.

15,967. Do you know Henry King?—Yes, I know the man.

15,968. Was he the man that fetched you?—No, I do not know I have any particular knowledge of the man who came down for me. I walked up to the house myself.

15,969. Had you agreed beforehand with anybody to receive the 20*l.*?—I had some talk with Henry King about it.

15,970. Did you receive anything in 1859?—No.

15,971. Had you a vote?—Yes.

15,972. Did you vote?—I always voted for the Liberals, on the Liberal side.

15,973. And you received nothing in 1859?—Nothing at all.

ROBERT HARBORD sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. R. Harbord.

15,974. What are you?—A dairyman.

15,976. Are you certain it was 15*l.*?—Yes.

15,977. Who from?—I cannot tell you the gentleman's name, but it was at Thompson's house, close to the market.

15,978. At Thompson's?—Thompson's, the eating house, at his house.

15,979. That is in Yarmouth?—Yes.

15,980. Who sent you there?—I was in the market, and I saw Thompson with some more men in the market-place, and he came up to me.

15,981. Had you a ticket?—He gave me a ticket then and there.

15,982. Thompson, you say, gave you the ticket?—Yes, the man keeping the eating house.

15,983. Had you arranged with Thompson for the 15*l.*?—No; he there and then asked me a few questions and he gave me the ticket.

TWENTIETH DAY.

R. Harbord.

7 Sept. 1866.

15,984. Had you a vote in 1859?—No, this was the first time.

15,985. (Mr. Slade.) Are you put down in the Gorleston list as living at Mill Road, Southtown?—Yes; I formerly had premises there; at that time I had premises there.

15,986. What did you get for being on the Gorleston list?—I had not anything. I had not a vote for Gorleston.

15,987. You did not vote for Gorleston, I know. What did you get for Gorleston?—I never voted for Gorleston. I voted then for Yarmouth. That is the only place I voted for.

15,988. Did you not also at Gorleston receive some money?—No; I never received any money only where I have just mentioned, the eating house. I was not on the register only at one place.

15,989. Yes, you were. You are the same man. You are on the register for Yarmouth, as well as Gorleston. You voted for Gorleston?—I do not know anything about being on the register for the other. I never was canvassed at all, not even for Yarmouth, because I have been out of town a goodish bit of my time.

15,990. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Who did you vote for?—Brogden and Lacon, one and one.

15,991. (Mr. Slade.) What did you get for voting for Sir Edmund Lacon?—I never got anything.

15,992. You were paid 15*l.* to vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—I told Mr. Thompson I should not go for both of them. He said, "Nonsense! you "must go for them." I told him I should not, as I was situated in business. He says, "Here is a ticket, "come along;" and I went with him and took the money.

15,993. Do you get your grains from Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

15,994. Do you recollect this man?—No.

15,995. The money was drawn at all events?—There is no doubt I should pay the money on the ticket.

15,996. The money was drawn at Gorleston as well?—I cannot speak to Gorleston, except what I paid to Warner.

R. Harbord.

ROBERT HARBORD recalled; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

15,997. Do you know Mr. Warner?—Where did he live?

15,998. In Gorleston?—No; I know very few people there. They are people in the dairy line, but very few people I know.

15,999. (Mr. Slade.) You swear you only received 15*l.*?—Yes, that is all I received.

16,000. From anybody?—From anyone.

16,001. (Mr. Russell.) And somebody else received 20*l.* that was meant for you?—I never heard the slightest of it at the election nor since. I never knew anything of it.

F. Crisp.

FREDERICK CRISP sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

16,002. What are you?—A painter.

16,004. Who from?—From the Liberal side.

16,005. Who was it?—Well, I really do not know who it was.

16,006. Where did you get it at?—At the "Angel."

16,007. Were you offered anything on the other side?—No.

16,008. Are you known to be a Liberal?—Yes.

16,009. Did you get anything in 1859?—I had not a vote then.

16,010. Did you get a ticket to go to the "Angel?"—No.

16,011. Who had you arranged with?—I did not arrange with anyone. A neighbour of mine that got it called on me, and was surprised to think I had not got any.

16,012. Who was that neighbour?—It was Mr. Holmes, the hairdresser.

16,013. Where does he live?—Gaol Street.

16,014. George Martin Holmes?—Yes.

16,015. You told him you had got nothing, and he recommended you to go to the "Angel?"—Yes.

16,016. And you went there?—Yes, I went there.

G. M. Holmes.

GEORGE MARTIN HOLMES sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

16,017. What are you?—A haircutter.

16,018. Did you hear the last man's evidence?—Yes.

16,019. Did you take him up to the "Angel?"—Yes.

16,020. What did you receive for your vote upon the Liberal side at the last election?—20*l.*

16,021. Where were you paid?—At the "Army and "Navy" tavern.

16,022. Did you have a ticket?—No.

16,023. Who sent you up there?—Mr. Moore.

16,024. You received something upon the other side too?—Yes.

16,026. Who gave you that?—Henry Savory.

16,027. When did you get that money from Savory?—Something like a fortnight before the election.

16,028. Do you mean you got the promise of the money or the money itself?—I had the money.

16,029. Did Savory tell you where he got it from?—No.

16,030. And you had no idea?—I had not.

16,031. Are you certain that was a fortnight before the election?—Not within a day or two. It may have been a day or two before or a day or two after, I cannot say which; but something within two days either way.

16,032. You got the 10*l.* of course for your vote?—Yes.

16,033. Did you promise to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson when you got it?—Yes.

16,034. And you afterwards took 20*l.* and broke your promise?—Yes.

16,035. Now I see that in 1859 you voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Watkin?—Yes.

16,036. Did you adopt the same ingenious plan upon that occasion?—I do not exactly understand the question.

16,037. Did you take money upon both sides?—Yes.

16,038. How much did you get on the Conservative side?—15*l.*

16,039. Who from?—A man of the name of Barwell.

16,040. Whom did you receive the money from on the other side?—A man of the name of Steward, a pawnbroker.

16,042. Where does this man Steward live?—This man Steward lives in King Street.

16,043. Is it Arthur or Christopher?—Christopher.

16,044. Did you send up any men besides Mr. Crisp?—No.

16,045. You did not put Crisp up to the dodge of getting money on both sides?—No.

16,046. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) When Savory gave you that 10*l.* a fortnight before the election did he promise you any more money?—Yes.

16,047. What did he promise you ?—That I should have as much as the others would give me.

16,048. The others ?—The opposite party. What they gave I should have.

16,049. When the election came on did you ask him for more ?—No.

16,050. Why not ?—For the very reason that I thought I had then quite sufficient. It was very acceptable to me at the time, and I took it.

16,051. (Mr. Slade.) You could not ask Savory for more, because you voted against him ?—I did not ask him.

DANIEL HARBORD sworn ; examined by Mr. SLADE.

D. Harbord.

16,052. What is your Christian name ?—Daniel.

16,053. Are you upon the register ?—Yes.

16,054. Had you a vote ?—Yes.

16,055. What did you get for your vote ?—My son gave me 15*l.*

16,056. Who did your son get that from ?—He told me somebody gave it to him at the "Army and Navy" tavern. He did not know the man.

16,057. What are you ?—A bricklayer.

16,058. What is your son's name ?—George.

16,059. Is he a voter ?—Yes.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

16,060. (Mr. Slade.) Can you explain this ?—If the Court recollects, a person came up very indignant the other day, to say, that his father had received no money. It appears to be a mistake of the printer, he has put it down wrongly. It is not printed as it was upon the register. In this case, the son divided it with the father. The son got 10*l.* and the father 20*l.* The son took the father the money. It was 10*l.* for one and 20*l.* for the other. He would divide the two, and give his father one half, 15*l.*

DANIEL HARBORD recalled ; examination resumed by Mr. SLADE.

D. Harbord.

16,061. Is your son here ?—No.

16,062. Did your son tell you how much he got himself ?—He told me what he got.

16,064. Your son I see is too unwell to leave his bed ?—Yes, he is.

16,065. What is your son by profession ?—A bricklayer.

16,066. Had you a vote at the election before the last ?—No, I had not.

16,067. Had your son ?—No.

WILLIAM NEWMAN sworn ; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

W. Newman.

16,068. What are you ?—A tailor.

16,069. You took a very active part in the last election ?—Not a very active part till within the last four days. I was about at different times previous to the last four days, but I took no active part till the last four days.

16,070. Are you a voter ?—No.

16,071. In what way did you take an active part ?—Do you mean the last four days ?

16,072. Yes ?—Upon the Saturday morning Mr. Livingston wished me to give up the whole of my time till the election was over. He impressed upon my mind, that I was to see all I could see, but to offer no inducement, I was to see in which way they were going to vote, and I did so upon the Saturday.

16,073. In consequence of what Mr. Livingston told you to do, what did you do ?—I went all through the ward to every one I had an idea had not promised, to see the reason why they had not promised, and what their intentions were. I had no power to hold out any inducement to anyone. That was entirely impressed upon my mind.

16,074. Did you go through the ward and see everybody ?—I saw all that I possibly could see. I did not see every one.

16,075. Did you hold out any inducement ?—Certainly not.

16,076. During the election did you know of the doings going on at the "Army and Navy" tavern ?—Yes.

16,077. Did you ever send anybody up there ?—Yes.

16,078. And to the "Angel" ?—Yes. I went with one to the "Angel" on the election morning.

16,079. And to Cattermole's ?—That is the "Army and Navy" tavern.

16,080. Thompson's ?—No.

16,081. Who did you send up in this way, can you tell us the names?—On the Monday morning I received an order to meet a Mr. Edwards at the "Angel."

16,082. Who from did you receive the order ?—A messenger employed by the name of Aldous came to me. I was going up the town and I met him. He said, "Is not your name Newman?" and I said, "Yes." He said, "Will you meet Mr. Edwards at "half past 10 this morning."

16,083. On Monday ?—On Monday. I saw nothing more of Mr Livingston from the Saturday morning. On the Monday morning I was sent for to see Mr. Edwards. When I saw Mr. Edwards, he said, "Con-"fine yourself to the Regent Ward, and get a fresh "list by half-past 2 in the afternoon ;" and from the words he spoke, I inferred there was something intended to be done, but I did not know positively from the words he used to me. I inferred so. I did not offer anything, but I made it my business to see what the voters wanted.

16,084. When he told you to get a fresh list of voters, do you mean you were to get a fresh list of voters that had promised, or had not promised ?—I cannot say what he meant by it. Whatever may have been done, I do not know anything about. He said, "Go and get a fresh list of voters by half-"past 2."

16,085. Did you understand by that, a list of voters to be paid ?—The fact was I then thought there was something going to be done some way or other. I was not at all in the secret. As I said before, a party came to me. Previously to the Saturday, I had lost some little time in going about, but on the Saturday morning when I was asked to give up the whole of my time, I did so; and on the Monday this was the information I received from Mr. Edwards.

16,086. Did you get him a list ?—It was a difficult matter for me to see many before dinner time. I did get a list of some perhaps six or seven. When I say a "list" I had no list, no more than I have now. I took it from recollection, and if you wish, I will give you the names of all I saw during the time.

16,087. Did you see anyone on Tuesday ?—Yes, I saw some on Tuesday.

16,088. Did you take up a fresh list to Mr. Edwards on Tuesday ?—No, I took no list, neither to Mr. Edwards nor to anybody else. It was like this ——

16,089. You said you did take up a list ?—I said I did not take up a list. I gave in the names, for I put nothing to paper. I gave him the names that I had got.

16,090. You gave him the names upon the Monday ?—I gave him the names upon the Monday.

16,091. Did you give him more names upon the Tuesday ?—No, I do not think I did. I am now speaking wrongly. I think I gave one extra name upon the Tuesday.

TWENTIETH DAY.

W. Newman.

7 Sept. 1866.

16,092. How many names were there altogether that you gave in in that way?—I should say about eight.

16,093. Can you give them at all?—Yes.

16,094. Then do so?—The first on the Monday was Jacob Shimmon. I called upon him, knowing that he had always voted Liberal. I said "I understand "Shimmon you have not promised," and he said "No, I have not." I said I was surprised; "How is "it you have not?" He said, "The fact is, I am offered "20*l.* and 12 months work in the employ I am now "in." "What!" I said, "20*l.* and 12 months work?" And he said "Yes." And I said "Do you intend "voting that way?" and he said, "I do not know I "am sure, I do not feel at all inclined to do so." Then I said "Is there any inducement I can offer "that would induce you to vote the other way?" He said, "I would rather vote according to my own "principles." I said, "What would it be to induce "you to forsake the 20*l.* and the 12 months work?" He said, "I hardly know;" and after some little talk, I said, "Would a consideration of 10*l.* be of any "benefit to you?" and he said, "If you make it 15*l.* "I will take it into consideration." I said, "I can "do nothing of the sort." I said, "It may be "arranged for you." Then he said, "You know I "work for Mr. E. O. Johnson, and a man by the "name of Brooks, Mr. E. O. Johnson's foreman, was "down here on Sunday morning with 20*l.*, and Mrs. "Shimmon was terribly annoyed to think he should "take 20*l.* there on the Sunday morning."

16,095. Then you handed his name in to Mr. Edwards?—No; I did not see Mr. Edwards any more. I suppose about half-past 4 or 5 on the Saturday. I was at the "Angel" at half-past 2 and got no information till between 4 and 5, and then the names I got, I got the tickets from Downing for, and those tickets I took to the parties. I did not tell them I could possibly give it them, because I did not know whether I was thoroughly right or not.

16.096. You gave us the name of Jacob Shimmon. You got a ticket for him from Downing?—Yes; for 15*l.*

16,097. Give us the other names.—James Crow, a carpenter, in the Albion Road, I think. I was under the impression that it was to be 12*l.*, but I see by the published list in the papers he got 15*l.* That I did not know of. I understood he was to have only 12*l.* Whether he got 15*l.* or 12*l.* I cannot say.

16,098. Is it John Crow?—It may be John Crow; I will not say about the Christian name.

16,099. You had arranged, at all events, with Mr. Crow for 12*l.*?—Yes.

16,100. Will you give us the next?—Henry George, Geneva Terrace.

16,101. What was the arrangement with him?—15*l.*

16,102. Now the next?—The next is James Saunders, 15*l.*

16,103. He was to have 15*l.*—Yes.

16,104. The next?—Jeffrey Brown, the Crown Road.

16,105. What was he to have?—15*l.*

16,106. Now the next?—Edward Wright, Providence Place, 10*l.*

16,107. The next? There are two more I think. Have you a list?—I have not a list. I think I have given you the names of Shimmon, George, Saunders, and others. There was a Mr. Rackham, a baker, in Crown Place.

16,108. Do you know his Christian name?—No; I do not know his Christian name, but I think it is Charles Rackham. I fancy so.

1,6109. How much?—I imagined it was 10*l.*, but I find it appears 15*l.* in the list.

16,110. Is it John Rackham?—No; I think there is only one Rackham. It is in Crown Place. I know the place quite well.

16,111. He got 20*l.*—I know nothing about what he got, for I never had any money. I never saw any money, and never touched any money.

16,112. Now the next?—I think that finishes the list as far as the Monday was concerned.

16,113. Then the one on Tuesday?—The one on Tuesday. I might say upon the Tuesday morning, about something like 10 o'clock, I cannot say exactly, I was down at the committee room in the Regent Ward, and I was sent for to go to the "Angel." When I got there, there were four tickets put into my hands, one for Mr. Laxon, in Gaol Street; one for Mr. Baker, the hatter, in Howard Street; one for a Mr. Brady, in some row. There is a number to the row, but I do not exactly recollect the number of the row. That would be the four I think.

16,114. No. You have only given Laxon, Baker, and Brady.—I know what made me say the fourth. I had one put in my possession for Joseph Draper, and on the afternoon of Tuesday there was a man by the name of King, living in the Market Place, or that is where he stood upon the register. He comes from Norwich. He is living at Norwich. I met him in the afternoon, and he told me that Mr. Bullimore had him in tow, and that he had been seen to at Cattermole's, and all the rest of it; and he mentioned various sums that he had been offered, from 10*l.* to something like a score and a half. I cannot say the truth of it. Ultimately he told me if I drew him a C ticket he would come by the first train in the morning, which would come in about 9 o'clock, and if I met him, he would vote. The consequence was I drew a C ticket for him in the afternoon, and upon the election morning I met him at the station, and I first of all, as he stood upon the register for the North Ward, took him to the North Ward committee rooms, with the expectation of seeing Mr. Jones there, but Mr. Jones was not there. I then came to the "Angel" with him, and when we got to the "Angel" Mr. Jones said, "Why did you not draw this money last night?" My answer was, that I had nothing at all to do with money. He said, "I think you are too late; I do not "think there is any money left." I said, "I know "nothing at all about it." King had not the ticket. I had the ticket, and I put the ticket into Mr. Jones' hands. What King got I cannot say, and I know nothing about it. All I know is when he came out of the "Angel," he says, "Newman, about my expenses "from Yarmouth to Norwich?" I said, "I do not "know anything at all about it." I said, "The "fact is this, you and I have been very good friends; "you have been in the Liberal cause, I do not think "you will vote the other way now. I will see that "you shall have them in some way or other, if I pay "them out of my own pocket."

16,115. And you did?—I did.

16,116. What did they amount to?—Well, I am sure I do not know. I never cast them up.

16,117. How much did you give him out of your own pocket?—Well, I suppose it was about a month after the election he called upon me, and I laid him down two sovereigns, and he gave me half-a-crown out.

16,118. What was his Christian name?—Henry King.

16,119. Market Place?—Market Place.

16,120. Did you get that 1*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* repaid to you?—No, I paid it out of 7*l.* which Mr. Livingston gave me.

16,121. You paid it out of 7*l.* which Mr. Livingston gave you! You said just now you paid it out of your own pocket?—Yes, I consider it was out of my own pocket, because Mr. Livingston never knew anything at all about it. I never said anything to Mr. Livingston about it. When the election was over I took a bill in to Mr. John Clowes, the auditor, for four days for which I received 2*l.*, I met Mr. Livingston two or three days afterwards, and he said "What "have you got for the election?" I told him; he said, "You have not been paid sufficiently." I saw Mr. Livingston no more for a week, or it might be longer, and then he said, "Newman, if you come here, I will "give you some money for your services," and he gave me 7*l.*; and I should say it was about a month after the election when King called at my house, not particularly for his expenses, I said, "King, you may as "well have your money for your expenses," and I gave him two sovereigns. I did say, "These are the "two sovereigns for your expenses," and his answer was, "Are you going to have anything to drink," I said, "No;" and he flung down half-a-crown and said, "You can get yourself a pint of wine."

16,122. Were you paid anything by Mr. Clowes?—Yes 2*l.*, I think it is returned.

16,123. What for?—For the four days.

16,124. Did you tell Mr. Clowes how you had been employed during those four days?—Yes; I was employed as a general messenger.

16,125. You were paid at the rate of 10*s.* a day?—Yes.

16,126. For a general messenger?—Yes.

16,127. Did you tell Mr. Clowes how you had been employed?—I cannot say how the bill was worded, but Mr. Clowes had the bill.

16,128. Do you think Mr. Clowes would have paid you the 2*l.* if he had known how you had been employed?—I think very likely not, I do not know anything about that. Upon the Saturday morning, I came down, and made arrangements with Mr. Savory about his room.

16,129. I do not want to hear all that you did. I dare say you did a good deal of work. Is that all you know about voters receiving money?—That is all I know about voters receiving money. I never saw a farthing, I never touched a farthing otherwise than I am now telling you of.

16,130. You know young Mr. Livingston, I suppose?—Yes.

16,131. Did you ever have any conversation with him after the election?—We have been very intimate. We have frequent conversations together.

16,132. Did he at any time ask you to furnish him with a list of parties that had been bribed on your side?—He never asked me to furnish him with a list; in fact, I could not have told him, they were mostly only from what I have heard spoken of from hearsay.

16,133. Did you ever give him any names?—Not pointedly. There may have been names passed between us. He may have said, "Mr. Newman, do "you know what So-and-so got;" and supposing him to know as well as I did, I might have said So-and-so. But I never met young Mr. Livingston with the idea of giving him a list at any time.

16,134. Did you ever see a register with the names of the parties who had been bribed marked upon it?—No.

16,135. Who first told you about the tickets?—I heard just about half past 4 on the Monday afternoon, when I was waiting to know what was to be done at the "Angel."

16,136. Who from?—I think Mr. Downing. He said it was to be done by tickets, and tickets were to be given to parties, and they were to be cashed through Mr. Jones.

16,137. Were these tickets written in Downing's handwriting?—Yes, I saw Downing writing them, because he asked me what I required, and I mentioned the names, and he gave me the tickets.

16,138. Did he write the tickets on Tuesday as well as on the Monday?—I do not know who wrote the tickets I had on the Tuesday. They were put into my hands, and I know nothing about them.

16,139. Who put them into your hands?—I think it was Mr. Jones; I am pretty sure it was. I do not think I saw anybody else but him; he was just going out at the time, I recollect.

16,140. (Mr. Slade.) Did you give Downing the sums of money these men expected?—Yes.

16,141. Then he wrote a ticket at your dictation?—Yes, according to what I told him the man required. He put a letter on to the ticket notifying the amount.

16,142. Who was in the room besides you and Downing?—I really cannot say. There might have been some 12 of us there at one time, but before I left they were pretty well all gone, except me and Downing, for it was the Monday afternoon when it was apparently to be decided what should be done, whether the tickets were to go out, or money to be spent or not.

16,143. Was Downing writing the tickets in the presence of all these 12 men?—No; when I asked Downing for the tickets there were not many there. He said, "Now, Newman, what is it you require?" and I told him.

16,144. I suppose you went up in regular order, one after the other?—No. It appeared to me we were required to attend there the Monday afternoon to see what was the result that could be done on the Monday, and to give in such probable numbers, that we might get, provided we could get at them in time, when they fancied, I suppose, there was a chance. After two hours and a half consultation they determined to go into the matter, and each party I suppose, that was there, was satisfied with what they wanted, and went away to their work; that, I think, and suppose, was the business.

16,145. Did you see anybody else take tickets?—I do not know that I did. I could not positively swear I saw anybody take tickets but myself.

16,146. Tell us who were there and we will judge?—The first part of the afternoon, when we first met, there was Mr. Brand, a man from Gorleston; I think Mr. Lawn was in the room, and Mr. Downing was there, and I think Mr. Henry Barber was there; I fancy so, but I do not think I could enumerate the whole of them, for I might make a mistake, and I should not wish to make a mistake about it.

16,147. You say that Downing called out to you, "Well, Newman, what is it you require"?—He did not call out to me. When the parties were leaving he said, "Newman, what is it you require?"

16,148. I understand what it was. Downing was there giving out tickets?—I never saw Downing giving tickets to anybody but myself. He might have done so.

16,149. When you came out he was writing tickets?—I do not know whether he was or no.

16,150. When you came up to him?—We were in the room all together, as we might be here. I cannot say how they got the tickets, but the parties went out. I said, "So and so is the case; if you are going "into the election, I want tickets for these people," naming them. I had no list, and, according to my dictation, he gave me the tickets, because, when I came to the 12*l.* for Crow, he said, "This is a strange "ticket to make out; I do not know what to put "upon it; it is a strange ticket for 12*l.*"

16,151. I do not want to know about that. I want to know who went up to Downing before you went?—That I cannot say. I do not know that anybody went up to him.

16,152. You were in the room?—I was.

16,153. Who was in the room with you?—I have mentioned several. I cannot say whether Downing only wrote all the tickets.

16,154. But you have only mentioned three?—There might be, perhaps, twelve or thirteen.

16,155. Give me another name?—I cannot give you the names, because, although I have been on the Liberal side all my lifetime; there are a good many strangers that I am not in the habit of meeting.

16,156. Just think of somebody else's name. You know who was there as well as possible?—No, I do not; and I should be very sorry to say anything that I do not know.

16,157. Do not be afraid of that, and I will tell you why. The gentlemen will come here and deny it?—I would not deny anything.

16,158. Tell us who you think were there. Do not be so mealy-mouthed about taking away the gentlemen's character?—I do not know; and I do not know that I am very mealy-mouthed about it.

16,159. Give us some names. You have given three, and there were a dozen there?—I really cannot speak positively.

16,160. Tell us who you think were there. Was

Moore there?—He might be there, I cannot say; and so might Fill, but I should be very sorry to say so on my oath.

16,161. (Mr. Russell.) Anybody might be there?—I could not say positively who was there.

16,162. Do you know Mr. John Gartside Overend?—No.

16,163. Were you a canvasser?—No, only from the Saturday morning, and then I was by myself. I never went out with a canvassing party.

16,164. What part did Mr. Aldous take?—I never saw him only when he came down to mine, and from what I understand afterwards, he had been employed as a general messenger, and I found when I was employed in getting up the evidence for the petition, that he had been a messenger employed throughout the whole time of the election, and something occurred, he was annoyed, and some particular paper and book he destroyed for fear they should come to light. But I cannot say anything more of it. I know nothing more of him than that.

16,165. Is that John Aldous, of the Caister Road?—No; I think he lived somewhere on the Blackfriar's Road; I fancy so.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

16,166. (Mr. Slade.) Can you explain this?—I think I can explain this away. I can remember in reference to tickets there was a meeting of the whole of the gentlemen; I was not among them; to take into consideration the question of going on with the affair. In the afternoon I was waiting the result in a bed-room, I believe; I believe Mr. Downing was the first person that came to me, and said it was agreed they should go on with the election. Mr. Downing and I then went into a room a little lower down, on another flat. We went into a private room, and there I showed him the ticket system, and it was there that the tickets began. There was no one but Mr. Downing and I, and this person, when he came for the tickets. He is confounding the meeting; I do not know whether they would allow him to be there or not. I do not know his position as far as his influence might go, but I know he is confounding the two meetings, because I was sitting in a bed-room for a half or three quarters of an hour, waiting the result of that meeting, to know whether they would go on, or whether I was to leave the town. If I am instructed right he is a party who can tell us about the money that was drawn from me to pay Jones, and which was transferred to Robinson. He may be able to tell us who the parties were that got the money. I am instructed he would be able to throw some light upon it.

16,167. All the names that he has given us here have received the money?—I am not speaking of his own, but others. He has heard conversations passing.

W. Newman.

WILLIAM NEWMAN recalled; examination resumed by Mr. FITZGERALD.

16,168. Can you give us any names that were substituted for others?—I imagine that Mr. Jones has heard as much as I have myself, because it was in the presence of Mr. Jones, and if it is to put anything straight I have no objection to bring anything out. I suppose Mr. Jones referred to Richard Balls, who was up this morning. The night before last I, Jones, and Downing were together, and the name of Mr. Balls was mentioned, and Mr. Downing said, "The money I drew for him was transferred to some one else," and he said the same as to a man of the name of Fisk, and Byford. I do not know whether that is what Mr. Satterthwaite alludes to.

16,169. Do you know any other case?—Yes; there is the name of Jay.

16,170. (Mr. Russell.) Did you say you heard Downing say the money he had drawn for these men had been transferred to other men?—Quite right.

16,171. Did he say whom the men were to whom it had been transferred?—No.

16,172. Have you ever heard that before?—No, not until the night before the election.

16,173. Did you ever receive any money yourself?—No. Only what I am now speaking of.

16,174. No money to give to voters?—No. Not a farthing, nor never saw a farthing only what I have explained to you now. I saw by the first evidence of Mr. Cooper that I gave a man by the name of Henry King, a carter, of Row No. 92, 20*l.* I do not know that I ever spoke to the man. I think that has been contradicted before, so I did not think it was worth noticing it.

16,175. When Mr. Livingston paid you the money, did he know the way in which you had been employed?—I do not know I am sure. I do not see he should because I do not know that I spoke to him scarcely after the Saturday. I saw him the Saturday evening.

16,176. You were only employed four days?—I was only employed to give the whole of my time for four days. Previous to that, I had been applied to to get information where so and so was removed to, or if anyone had left the town, if I could make out were they were gone to, and little matters of that sort of no importance, but there were very few days but what I had some little matter to look after.

16,177. Did you ask Mr. Clowes for any money for that?—No, for I thought the way the bill was made out as a special messenger for 10*s.* a day, would compensate me for the whole of the time I had given to it; and when I saw Mr. Livingston, he said he did not consider that was sufficient to pay me.

16,178. You thought it enough?—I should not have asked for more, and I do not know that I should have grumbled if I had had nothing, for I have frequently worked and had nothing on that side.

16,179. Did Mr. Livingston know how you had been employed the last four days?—I do not believe he did; I have not the slightest idea, because when he said the Saturday morning, "I should wish you to "give up the whole of your time;" he said, "Be par- "ticular, and hold out no promise; offer nothing to "anyone."

16,180. Who said that?—Mr. Livingston; the Saturday morning.

16,181. Why should he say that?—I do not know why he should, but he made a remark to me on the Saturday morning. It was the Monday I saw Mr. Edwards. I was very particular in not doing so.

16,182. I suppose he was afraid you would?—I do not know what he was afraid of, I only tell you the real facts. His fears I knew nothing of.

16,183. You thought 2*l.* was good pay for the four days?—I was satisfied with it.

16,184. Why do you suppose Mr. Livingston gave you 7*l.*?—I do not know, I am sure.

16,185. You thought you deserved it?—It was given to me, and I did not refuse it.

16,186. Have you any doubt Mr. Livingston knew the way you had been employed?—I do not think he did; if he did, he had it from some other source than mine.

16,187. I do not say you told him?—I did not, certainly.

16,188. (Mr. Russell.) How is it, being such a partizan as you are, that you are not on the register?—The fact is, I went off the register in 1860, and you know, unfortunately, if a Liberal once gets off the register it is a difficult matter to get on. I put in a claim at the last registration, but it was of no avail. I daresay if I had been a Conservative I should have had no bother about it.

16,189. Do you mean you have a qualification?—Not for a Parliamentary vote. I have not had a qualification for Parliamentary voting.

16,190. What rent do you pay for your house?—8 guineas.

16,191. And you do not think it worth your while to pay the extra 1*l.* 12*s.* to get on the register?—The fact is this, the house I am now living in suits me very well.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

16,192. (Mr Russell.) Had these been tickets that were transferred, the money could only have been obtained in the way of personation?—You see the parties come here to contradict it, and the money has been drawn from me as having been drawn by those parties.

16,193. If the tickets had been issued, and you honored the tickets, and the money got to the wrong man, somebody must have personated the right man?—I do not know whether the Court understand it properly. In several instances Mr. Downing presented a certain quantity of tickets to me, and I handed Mr. Downing the money over that those tickets came to. Mr. Downing was to pay that money himself. He had a list as well.

16,194. (Mr. Slade.) Then Mr. Downing must know who got the money?—Yes.

THOMAS DOWNING recalled.

T. Downing.

16,195. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know who got it?—I received a certain amount of tickets from Mr. Parker, and I delivered him the money, as I explained the other day; but I cannot recollect all the names. I received a certain amount, and as I received it from Mr. Edwards I turned it over to Mr. Parker. I only came out of one room into the other. 195*l.* I think was the amount, but I think I gave him 5*l.* more to make up 200*l.*, but part of those names appear to be in Mr. Parker's list.

ROBERT FISK sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

R. Fisk.

16,196. What are you?—I keep a beerhouse and drive a cab.

16,197. Did you get anything for your vote at the last election?—No, I do not consider I got anything for my vote. I got something for my services.

16,198. What did you get for your services?—For driving people to the poll voters.

16,199. How much did you get?—20*l.*

16,200. Who employed you to drive the cab?—I do not know who he was. I went the night before the election to Mr. Cattermole's room, where the Liberals engaged the room, to get work for the cab for the next day.

16,201. And did they engage you?—Yes, they asked me what I wanted for my day's work for my cab, and I told them I thought 20*l.* was not out of the way.

16,202. And you got paid then?—Yes.

16,203. At Cattermole's?—Yes.

16,204. Did you send in your bill to Mr. Clowes?—No, I never sent a bill.

16,205. Do you know Mr. Clowes?—I never sent a bill.

16,206. Do you know Mr. Clowes?—Mr. Clowes the lawyer?

16,207. Yes.—Yes, I know him.

16,208. Did you know he was the election agent?—Yes, I knew he had something to do with it; he had nothing to do with me or my cab.

16,209. You did not know that by law you were bound to send it to him?—I took the 20*l.* for my services.

16,210. Are you surprised to hear that the Act of Parliament requires you to send in to the election agent your bill?—I did not send any. Some gentleman engaged me and my cab to drive for the purpose of taking voters up to the poll, and that is the money I received for it.

16,211. Was you cab employed on the election day?—Yes.

16,212. No other?—There was plenty of cabs employed, I believe.

16,213. But no other day?—No; not for their services.

16,214. Is that the usual rate you get paid for your cab?—No; but that is what I charged them.

16,215. 20*l.*?—Yes; and that is what I got.

16,216. Did you vote for them?—Yes.

16,217. (Mr. Slade.) Did you bring in your bill in the shape of a D ticket?—No bill at all, nor any ticket.

16,218. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) And you cannot tell me who employed you?—No; I did not know the man; no more I do not now.

16,219. Had you a vote in the election of 1859?—Yes.

16,220. Had you a cab then?—No.

16,221. Did you have any money then?—No; nor did not vote.

16,222. You got no money at all?—No.

16,223. (Mr. Russell.) Do you know Mr. Cooper?—Yes; I know Mr. Cooper.

16,224. Did he not give you some money in 1859?—No.

16,225.—You swear he did not?—To the best of my knowledge he did not.

16,226. Do you swear he did not?—I do not remember Mr. Cooper giving me any money in 1859; if he did, I have forgotten it. That is all I know about it.

16,227. You will not swear he did not?—I will not swear either way. I cannot recollect so long back as that. I can recollect this last election, and that is all I can recollect about it.

16,228. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Would you have voted this election if they had not employed your cab?—Of course I should. I should have voted for Brogden and Vanderbyl, and I did do so.

16,229. Twenty pounds was only a reasonable payment?—I think it is very reasonable, if you come to risk your own head being broken, and your cab smashed to pieces. I think it is very reasonable, and not anything too much, not in election time. If I had got my trap knocked to pieces I should have got no recompense.

16,230. Was it knocked to pieces?—It was injured to a great extent inside, the lining, and other things.

16,231. What did it cost to repair it?—I do not know. I have not paid the bill yet.

16,232. Have you had a bill sent in?—No.

16,233. It could not have been very much damaged?—It was not damaged to a great extent, still it was injured. It did not look so well as when it went there. You know what people are when they go to vote; they light pipes, and set fire to things, and do all that sort of thing.

HENRY FISK sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

H. Fisk.

16,234. What are you?—I am a fruit merchant.

16,235. What did you get for your vote?—Nothing at all.

16,236. You got nothing?—No, not a shilling of either party, never in my life.

16,237. It seems somebody got a ticket in your name ?—It seems so, and I have lost a deal of my custom through the job that has been put in the paper about my receiving 20*l.*

16,238. Did you vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl ?—No, I voted for Lacon and Goodson, the way I have voted ever since I had a vote ; and they never came but once to the house, either party. I gave Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl a denial first, and to the other gentlemen I said on the day of the election I should vote for them.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

16,239. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you recollect this man ?—I think, if you remember, Mr. Newman gave a man's name.

16,240. (Mr. Slade.) No. 456 is his number ?—I think this is the man. If you remember, Mr. Newman said he remembered Balls, Fisk, Byford, and Jay ; this money was drawn for them and was transferred.

T. Downing.

THOMAS DOWNING recalled.

16,241. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Is this a case in which you gave the money to Parker ?—I will not swear ; I think it might be one. Parker gave me a list of 10*l.*, but perhaps Mr. Fisk would answer the question whether Parker called upon him.

H. Fisk.

HENRY FISK, examination resumed by MR. FITZGERALD.

16,242. Did he call ?—On the Monday night before the election, I was sitting in the back parlour, and the barmaid came into me and said, "A gentleman wants "to speak to you." I said, "Send him in," and the barmaid went back and she told him ; and she came back again to me and said, "The gentleman wants to "speak to you by yourself in the parlour." When I went there, who should sit there but Parker ! and Parker says, "Old boy, I have got 15 for you." I laughed at him and said, "That is no use." He said, "I will give you 20." I said, "You have not got "money enough to buy me at any price ;" and about three or four days afterwards, in and among a dozen of us, I told him openly, "Parker, you offered to buy "me for 20*l.*, but you did not get me."

16,243. When was this ?—This was the Monday before the election.

16,244. I suppose you are very glad you have had the opportunity of coming here to contradict it ? — I am, and it has done me a deal of harm.

J. Fransham.

JEREMIAH FRANSHAM sworn ; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

16,258. Did you have anything for your vote at the last election ?—Yes.

16,260. Where did you receive it ? — From Mr. Downing.

16,262. Were you offered any money on the other side ?—No.

16,263. Was that all you received ?—That was all.

16,264. Had you got a vote in 1859 ?—No.

16,265. Did anybody go with you to Downing's ?—No, I went into the "Angel" tap promiscuously, and I went into the yard for a necessary purpose, and I saw Mr. Edwards, and he said, "What are you up "to ?" I said, "Nothing particular." Downing came into the yard and spoke to me. It was all done in two minutes, and no one was present.

16,266. No one saw it done ?—No.

16,267. Do you know of any other man who had money from Downing ?—No, I do not.

16,272. What is Brown's christian name ?—Edward.

16,273. Did he live in Row No. 145 ?—I do not know.

16,274. What is he ?—A cooper.

16,275. Did Brown tell you where he had the money from ?—No.

16,276. Where did he give it you ?—He gave it to me up in King Street, not in any house at all.

16,277. He met you in the street ?—Yes.

16,278. Do you know of any other man that Brown gave money to ?—No, I do not.

16,279. Were you offered any money by the other side ?—No.

16,280. Had you got a vote in 1859 ?—No.

16,281. You got the 15*l.* from Mr. Brown to vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl ?—Yes.

FREDERICK GODBOLT sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

16,282. What are you ?—A cooper.

16,283. How much did you receive at the last election ?—15*l.*

16,284. Who gave you that ?—Charles Bunn.

16,285. Do you know a man named Shattock ?—Yes.

16,286. What did he give you ?—10*l.*

16,287. Which did you first take, the 15*l.* or the 10*l.* ?—The 15*l.*

16,288. That was to vote for Lacon and Goodson ?—For Lacon only. I promised Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Brogden. Those were the two I promised. I never promised Mr. Goodson.

16,289. You got the 15*l.* to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon? —Yes.

16,290. And the 10*l.* to vote for Mr. Brogden ?—Yes.

16,293. Had you got a vote in 1859 ?—Yes.

16,294. What did you get for it then ?—10*l.*

16,295. Who gave it you ?—Mr. James Bunn.

16,296. Did you receive any more than that in 1859? —No.

JAMES BLAND sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

J. Bland.

16,297. What are you ?—I am a fishowner.

16,298. What did you have for your vote ?—Not anything.

16,299. Are you quite sure of that ?—Yes.

16,300. Did you not have 20*l.* ?—No ; I was offered 20*l.*

16,301. Who by ?—Mr. Neave.

16,302. Mr. Neave the tailor ?—Yes.

16,303. What did you say when he offered you 20*l.* ?—I told him I did not want it.

16,304. How came Mr. Neave to offer that to you ? —I do not know. He came to my house.

16,305. Had you ever taken money before ?—No.

16,306. You did not take any money in 1859 ?—No, I did not vote.

16,307. You voted for Sir Edmund Lacon, and Sir Henry Stracey, I see, in 1859. You said you did not vote at all ?—No more I did. I think not.

16,308. You lived in Elm Walk ?—Yes.

16,309. And you voted for Lacon and Stracey ?—I am very sure I did not take any money.

16,310. Do you know Mr. John Eagleton ?—No, I do not know him.

16,311. Do you mean to swear you did not have any money at the last election, or in 1859 ?—Yes.

16,312. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Were you at Wright's the day before the election ?—No ; I know Wright's very well.

16,313. (Mr. Russell.) If Neave had 20*l.* for you, you never had it ?—I never had it, nor yet a farthing.

16,314. Nor yet a ticket ?—No.

16,315. Were you offered any money by the Liberal side ?—No.

16,316. Or the Conservative side ?—I was offered by Neave, nobody else.

16,317. Why did you refuse the money ?—I do not know the reason of it particular. I told him I did not want him nor yet his money. I did not mean to vote for him.

16,318. Do you remember John Eagleton giving you money in 1859 ?—No, never in my life.

16,319. And when he found you had not voted the right way, coming and getting it back again ?—No, never.

16,320. Are you sure of that ?—Yes, I am quite sure of that. Mr. John Eagleton cannot say so, I know, before me.

16,321. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know a man of the name of Mainprice ?—Yes, right well.

16,322. Did he call on you ?—No.

16,323. Or ask you for your vote ?—No, nor ever mentioned it to me.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

C. Satterthwaite.

16,325. Do you remember anything about this man, he is No. 144 ?—No, I do not know that I do. He would be one of Wright's.

16,326. He says he was not paid at all ?—I think he is on Wright's list. Perhaps this is the 20*l.* that Neave returned.

16,327. (Mr. Slade.) This man's number is 144 ? —Yes, 15*l.*

16,328. That will not tally, you see ?—No, it will not, but Neave returned me 20*l.*

16,329. And you gave him a receipt for 20*l.* ?—Yes, so that this cannot be the same party.

WILLIAM LODGE sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

16,330. What are you ?—A keeper of a beer-house, on the North Quay.

16,331. Did you receive any money for your vote ? —Yes ; I received 15*l.*

16,332. Who from ?—Mr. Buston.

16,333. Were you offered any money on the other side ?—No. They called on me, and I told them it was no use their coming.

16,334. Had you got a vote in 1859 ?—No ; this was my first vote.

16,335. Had you taken money when the other side came to ask you ?—No. They never offered me anything. I told them not to trouble me.

16,336. When did you get the money from Buston ? —On the Sunday night.

16,337. And when were you asked for your vote on the other side ?—I can hardly tell you the day, but I think it was on the Friday or the Saturday, I cannot say.

16,338. Before you got the 15*l.* from Mr. Buston ? —Yes.

16,339. Would you have voted if you had not had the money ?—Certainly I should.

16,340. The same way ?—Yes.

16,341. Did you promise Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson when they first canvassed you ?—Yes. I told them I should not go the other way.

16,442. Were you ever a servant of Mr. Nightingale's ?—No. I have drawn beer for him.

Adjourned till to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 8th September 1866.

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled ; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

C. Satterthwaite.

8 Sept. 1866.

16,343. I believe you can give us some information with regard to John Jackson's case ?—That was the case referred to yesterday of Mr. Bland. They could not make out where the 15*l.* had gone which Mr. Neave returned. Mr. Bland came here, and said he had not any money from Mr. Neave yesterday. His was only 15*l.*, and we could not account for it, how it was that Mr. Neave returned 20*l.* Mr. Neave explains it in this way. He said he drew a D ticket, and a C ticket. That he drew the D ticket for Stanley, and the C ticket for Bland ; but it appears he only gave Stanley 15*l.* instead of 20*l.*, so that that would leave 20*l.* Taking the C taken by Bland, and the 5*l.* he had left out from Stanley's, the Court could not understand why he should have a C ticket, and Mr. Neave return 20*l.*

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

C. Satterthwaite.

8 Sept. 1866.

16,344. (Mr. Slade.) They changed tickets did they ?—Yes.

16,345. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) And the man who had the 20*l.* ticket kept it ?—No. Neave drew two tickets, a C and a D from me, or the amounts rather, and instead of giving Stanley the money, the 20*l.*, he only gave him 15*l.* Neave presented tickets to me, and I paid him those amounts.

16,346. Stanley has not been called yet ?—I think not, but Bland has. I have got a lot of transfers here. I have 11 names of transfers, and I was thinking whether the Court would have the kindness to go through the rest of the witnesses before I hand them in. I might have some more. These are the parties names that have been transferred, and the money paid over to them instead of to the parties mentioned in the list.

16,347. (Mr. Slade.) You had better give the names in, and not read them out ?—I will. And I am also happy to inform the Court, that I have received an anonymous letter, containing 10*l.* for Mr. Brogden of conscience money. That makes a total of 50*l.* that I have received since I came.

16,348. We must try and guard against that gentleman coming here and swearing he received nothing at all for his vote ?—He does not send his name.

16,349. If you can possibly find out who it was, we should like to know, because we expect he will deny having received the bribe ?—We shall know who it is. 10*l.* is an amount that is not very common.

M. Watts.

MATTHEW WATTS sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

16,350. What are you ?—I keep a lodging-house.

16,351. Did you receive anything for your vote at the last election ?—Yes, about 15*l.*

16,352. Who from ?—Thomas Downing.

16,353. Did he give you a ticket or the money ?—Money.

16,354. And an offer in money on the other side ?—No. I promised without being asked.

16,355. That was all you received ?—That was all I received.

16,356. Had you got a vote in 1859 ?—I had, but I did not vote. I was not in Yarmouth.

16,357. Did you not sell a teapot about the time of the election ?—Just before. That was on account of the election.

16,358. Was that the 15*l.* ?—That was the 15*l.*

16,359. What was the price of the teapot at the election time ?—About 2*l.*

16,360. Did you understand that the extra 13*l.* was for your vote ?—I did.

16,361. Downing bought the teapot ?—Downing did.

F. Wright.

FRANCIS WRIGHT sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

16,362. What are you ?—A seaman, and captain of the Hull steamer.

16,363. What did you have for your vote at the last election ?—I can hardly answer the question, because I received it in the dark, and took it home as I received it. I did not see it for a day or two after that, and a man came for some commission, and I asked him if it was $2\frac{1}{2}$ or 5.

16,364. Where did you get it ?—I believe at the "Army and Navy." I engaged a man in my room to take the ship down, and I said, if there was anything to be disposed of, we would go shares in it.

16,365. Who took you down to Cattermole's ?—My mate.

16,366. Who is he ?—Ablett.

16,367. Do you mean that Ablett was to have a commission on what you got ?—No. The man whom I engaged to go down in my room in my ship. I engaged a qualified man to take my ship to Hull. I would run the risk, and if I got anything we were to go shares in it.

16,368. How much did you give him ?—I gave him 5*l.*

16,369. What was his name ?—Captain Elliott. His ship was laid up at the time at Lowestoft undergoing repairs.

16,370. I am told you had 17*l.* 10*s.* ?—So I had to the best of my knowledge.

16,371. You believe that is right ?—I am sure I did not count it ; and if they had been farthings I should have taken them the same, because I am a Liberal, and I should have voted if there had been nothing.

16,372. Did you have a vote in 1859 ?—Yes. I have had a vote ever since I have lived in Yarmouth.

16,373. Do you remember what you got for your vote ?—Nothing. I never was offered anything before.

16,374. Was this money paid over into your hands first, or into Ablett's ?—I took it from a gentleman in the dark, I do not know who he was, or what he was, from a table, made up the same as a parcel of copper, and I never opened it till I got home the following day. It was about the length of my finger I think it was.

J. Thirkettle.

JOHN THIRKETTLE sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

16,375. What are you ?—A fish merchant.

16,376. What did you have for your vote at the last election ?—I was away. I went away just before the election, and I was sent for. I was close by London. I did not think of coming home. I was sent for by the parties, and I came home, and Mr. Balls gave me 20*l.*

16,377. What day did you receive that ?—The day before the election.

16,378. Were you offered any money on the other side ?—They came down to my house, but I would not have anything to do with them.

16,379. Who came down ?—Mr. Edwards the tailor came down.

16,380. What did he offer you ?—He never offered anything, because I told him I should not go that way. I had an independent vote, and I went. I had a freight of herrings at the time that were all spoiled, and sold for manure.

J. Thrower.

JAMES THROWER sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

16,381. What are you ?—A shoemaker.

16,382. What did you have for your vote ?—Fifteen pounds.

16,383. Who from ?—I do not know the gentleman I had it from.

16,384. Where did you receive it ?—The "Army and Navy."

16,385. Did you have a ticket ?—Yes.

16,386. Who gave it you ?—Mr. Walsh, the hatter.

16,387. Do you remember what was on the ticket ?—No, I do not.

16,388. Was it a letter C ?—There was some letter, but what I cannot say.

16,389. Were you offered any money on the other side ?—There was some offered, but I did not take it.

16,390. Who offered it ?—I do not know who it was at all.

16,391. How much ?—I was offered 10*l.*

JAMES THOMPSON sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

16,393. Do you keep a public-house opposite the "Angel"?—No; it is an eating-house, coffee and dining-rooms.

16,394. Was a room in your house engaged at the last election?—Yes.

16,395. On what day was it engaged?—From the Friday until the election, five days.

16,396. Was it used as a committee-room?—Yes.

16,397. Who engaged it?—Mr. John Clowes.

16,398. And what were you paid for it?—Two pounds is what I charged them.

16,399. Where was that room?—In the front of the house, a large dining-house; I think about 18 feet by 12.

16,400. What floor?—The second-floor.

16,401. Was that the only room engaged at your house during the election time?—The only one, except for a few hours.

16,402. Which was the one which was engaged for a few hours?—The bed-room, the side of the dining-room.

16,403. Was that a bed-room?—Yes, my own bed-room.

16,404. On what day was that engaged?—I think on the nomination day, the Tuesday; I think so. I cannot swear to the day, but I think it was the Tuesday, at least I am almost sure it was.

16,405. Who engaged that?—I do not know. No one engaged it, and the gentleman walked in. I knew who it was. I said, "If a gentleman comes, you can "let him go into the bed-room for a little while."

16,406. How did you know a gentleman was coming?—Because I was told so.

16,407. Who told you that?—Some of the committee; I cannot say now exactly. I was always along with them from the beginning to the last, and I heard Mr. Jones would be at my house to pay one or two, and I said, "That will be all right."

16,408. Were you told by more than one person?—No, I do not think I was. I rather think Mr. Jones told me so himself, I will not swear now, but I think it very likely.

16,409. Was that room engaged on the same day that the gentleman came?—Only by myself. I sleep in it myself. It is my own bed.

16,410. But did the gentleman come on the same day that he took the bed-room?—He merely went into it. I did not let the bed-room. I charged nothing for it.

16,411. Are you sure that Mr. Jones himself came, and said he should want the room?—I will not swear to that, but I think very likely, I being along with Jones several times before the election. He might say, "Mr. Thompson, I shall be at your house so "and so."

16,412. You said at first one of the committee told you?—There were so many of us together.

16,413. I wish you would try and tell us who it was?—I cannot tell you; I think very likely Mr. Jones himself, but I will not swear it. I could not swear to it, it is so long back.

16,414. What time of the day was it that Mr. Jones came?—I think just before 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

16,415. Were you at home at the time?—Not when he came, I was not.

16,416. When did you return?—I returned just after he had been in a few minutes. I cannot say how long he had been in. My wife told me a gentleman was upstairs.

16,417. Did you go into that bed-room?—No.

16,418. Did you see any voters come to your house at that time?—Yes.

16,419. Can you give us at all an idea how many?—There might be 20.

16,420. Did you show them into this bed-room?—Yes, after I came home I did.

16,421. After you came home you showed them in?—I showed them upstairs, and told them to knock at that door.

16,422. I suppose you have seen in the paper the names that Mr. Jones has mentioned, as having paid money to?—Yes, I have seen several names.

16,423. Can you give us any names that have not been mentioned in the paper?—Not one; I do not know any one of them. I had nothing to do with that part of the case. I was along with the candidates. I was employed to be with them, to show them where the voters lived.

16,424. Did you vote?—Yes.

16,425. Who for?—Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl.

16,426. Did you receive any money for your vote?—I never did in my life.

16,427. Is 2*l.* all you received for the use of your house for the election?—Yes, that is all I charged them.

16,428. Did you see any tickets?—No, I never saw one at all.

16,429. At any time?—I never saw one. Mr. Downing made a mistake when he said he thought I had some, but I was not there at the time. I was at Gorleston along with the candidates at the same time.

16,430. Did you canvass any voters yourself?—I think on the Tuesday morning I went to a man of the name of Ruthen.

16,431. We had him before us?—He mentioned my name. They said, "Thompson, go and see if you can "see Ruthen," and he said, "Mr. Thompson, I do not "want you." I said, "I do not mind giving you 15*l.* "for a piece of paper if you will vote for Brogden "and Vanderbyl," and he said, "No."

16,432. I think you are speaking of a man of the name of Butler?—Yes, Butler, of Howard Street.

16,433. Do you know the man?—I know him to speak to.

16,434. You know him by sight?—Yes.

16,435. Did you go to his shop before the election?—Yes, I went into his house.

16,436. What for?—To try and get his vote. We called on him when we canvassed. He would not answer, or give us a promise, and some one said, "Thompson, go down and see if you can do anything "with Butler."

16,437. Who said that?—I do not know, there were so many of us together. They talked, and one said, "Do so and so," and I went to Butler.

16,438. Do you recollect the conversation about the paper?—Yes.

16,439. That was true, was it?—Oh, yes; I do not deny it.

16,440. Do you recollect what day it was?—I think on the Tuesday morning, the day before the election.

16,441. Mr. Butler told us it was on the Thursday before the election?—On the Tuesday before the election, the nomination day.

16,442. Are you certain of that?—Yes.

16,443. It makes a great difference, because Butler says you told him Mr. Jones was coming?—I never knew anything of Mr. Jones coming until I saw him. I had no idea of any money going to be spent until the Tuesday morning.

16,444. Did you tell him the Tuesday morning Mr. Jones was coming?—I told him if he would take 15*l.* I would give him a piece of paper, and a gentleman would call upon him.

16,445. Did you mention the name of Mr. Jones?—Yes.

16,446. What did you mean by giving him a piece of paper?—With the number upon the register on the piece of paper, with 15 underneath it.

16,447. That is a ticket?—That was the piece of paper. I had no ticket.

16,448. But you meant a ticket?—Yes; I would make a ticket for him myself.

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

J. Thompson.

8 Sept. 1866.

16,449. What did you mean by saying you knew nothing about the tickets ?—I never knew anything about the tickets being at the "Angel."

16,450. You offered the ticket to Mr. Butler ?—Yes, afterwards, on the Tuesday.

16,451. You told me just now you knew nothing about the tickets ?—I had no tickets from the "Angel."

16,452. Had you any tickets yourself ?—Only that piece that I should make myself.

16,453. You had no right to make a ticket ?—I was told how to do it.

16,454. Who told you ?—Mr. Jones told me how to make them.

16,455. How many tickets had you authority to make ?—I made four.

16,456. Tell us whom you gave them to ?—I gave one to Robert Harboard, a cowkeeper.

16,457. Who else ?—John Bell, of South Market Road, 10*l.*

16,458. What letter was that ?—No letter at all. I put on the number on the register, and 10*l.* underneath it. That is how I did mine. I did not know anything about the letters ; I never heard about them, only I heard about it here.

16,461. Did you arrange with Mr. Jones that you would get these four men for those sums ?—No, I think Mr. Fowler sent me after them, and they were to meet at my house at such a time, and take the money.

16,462. Did Mr. Fowler give you authority to write these tickets ?—No, I think Mr. Jones did so, but I will not swear to that now.

16,463. Did Mr. Jones ask to see your handwriting ?—I forget now, it is so long back ; I hardly know how it was done, I did so little of it. It did not interfere with business. I had no idea of it till the nomination morning. We found people would not promise, and they said would I go and ask, I knowing the people.

16,464. Did you send any men to your house without giving them tickets ?—No, certainly not.

16,465. Did you give any list of names to Mr. Jones ?—No.

16,466. Do you know William Harman ?—Yes.

16,467. Did you have anything to do with him on the election ?—Nothing at all ; merely on the morning of the election I went and got him up to the poll. I had nothing to do with anything else.

16,468. You took him up to the poll ?—Yes.

16,469. Whom did you take up to the poll besides Harman ?—Everyone I could get hold of on our side.

16,470. Were they all men who had been paid for, do you know ?—I do not know. I did not know anything about any of them being paid.

16,471. How many men did you take up to the poll on that morning ?—I am sure I cannot say, about 20. It being divided into wards, some people came up to the Market Place that ought to poll in the North Ward. I was there to see, and if I saw any mistake I used to take them down to the North Ward polling place.

16,472. Did Mr. Fowler know you were going to offer these four men money ?—I do not know that he did ; perhaps not.

16,473. Do you think he did ?—I do not think he did. I do not think he knew anything about it.

16,474. What did he say to you ?—He said, "You "may go and see if those people who have not pro- "mised want anything," but he did not tell me to offer anything.

16,475. I ask you whether he had any idea they wanted money ?—Certainly, he had an idea of it, because we found they were hanging back, we knew that.

16,476. In fact, he told you to go and see if they wanted anything ?—Yes.

16,477. And you went and offered them 10*l.* and 15*l.* ?—Yes.

16,478. Did you tell Mr. Fowler you had done so ?—No, I do not think I saw Mr. Fowler any more that day. They might get the tickets one five minutes, and get the money the next. As soon as they got the tickets they came up to my house.

16,479. Where did Mr. Fowler send you after these men ? Where was he at the time ?—I think it was up in my room. There were several of them looking over the list, and we found some had promised and some were in that way. They all lived in the Market Road, where my house is situate.

16,480. Was not Mr. Fowler one of the most active men in the ward ?—No, I think not.

16,481. What made him send you ?—Knowing I knew so many people, and being on the canvass all the time.

16,482. What part did Mr. Fowler take ?—Sometimes he went canvassing, very seldom, but very often he took a little part in it.

16,483. Was he one of the committee ?—I do not know. I was not there much. I was there, perhaps, half-an-hour in the day.

16,484. What was Mr. Fowler ?—I do not know. I was not at home. I do not know who was on the committee, in fact, I do not know who was in my house. I went out with the candidates canvassing, and there were people in my house, but who they were, I do not know.

16,485. What is Mr. Fowler ?—A linendraper. I generally used to go out at 9 in the morning, and sometimes was not home till 10 o'clock at night.

16,486. Were there many people in the room when Mr. Fowler sent you after those four men ?—Perhaps five or six of us.

16,487. Did you hear Mr. Fowler direct anybody else to go and look after voters ?—No, I did not.

16,488. Do you know anybody else that was sent off on the same errand as yourself ?—No, I do not.

16,489. Was your house used as a committee room in the election before this, in the year 1859 ?—I did not live in it then. I believe it was used for a committee room then on the other side. A man of the name of James Olley lived there then.

16,490. What has become of Olley ?—He is now living down by the jetty. He keeps an eating house there now.

16,491. Had you a vote in 1859 ?—Yes.

16,492. Were you engaged as a messenger in this election ?—Yes, as a kind of pilot they called me to show them where the voters lived that was my place I had my walking list of a night to show the candidates where the voters lived the next day, and after I had done one day, I had to go and get my list for the next, the same as Mr. Hunter was the other side.

16,493. You kept a canvass book ?—No, merely a walking list from door to door where the voters lived. I generally have done that the last 16 or 17 or 18 years, in municipal elections and borough elections.

16,494. Did you have this office in 1859 ?—Yes, and so I had when Sir Charles Napier and Mr. McCullagh were here.

16,495. Always the same office ?—Yes.

16,496. What did you get paid for that ?—10*s.* a day this election I was allowed by the auditor, and Mr. Clowes paid me.

16,497. I dare say you can give us some information about the election of 1859 if we call you ?—Just the same, I think, as this one.

16,498. (Mr. Russell.) Was your house used as a committee room in 1859 ?—I did not live there.

16,499. Where did you live ? — In King Street along with my brother-in-law, at a ham and bacon shop.

16,500. Was your house at King Street used ?—No.

16,501. Was 10*s.* a day all that you received ?—Yes, I did not know what I was to have at all, until Mr. Clowes told me and said, "That is what the auditor "allows, and we shall pay you what is allowed by the "auditor."

16,502. Were you paid nothing for bringing up the voters on the election day ?—Nothing at all. I never charged anything.

16,503. Or any commission for getting the four men ?—No, I never did at any election, and I have worked at many elections for nothing many times, my own side. I always was a Liberal and always shall be.

16,504. What day were you first engaged ?—I am sure I cannot tell you, the day after Mr. Brogden came down. Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman.

16,505. You said you were paid 10*s.* a day. How much did you receive altogether ?—I am sure I forget now. I cannot say. The bill was sent in to the auditor.

16,506. The whole was returned ?—Yes, every farthing I got. The bill was paid for by the auditor, and 2*l.* for the room. That was allowed, and Mr. Clowes told me some got 5*l.* and I said, "I shall not "charge Mr. Brogden more than 2*l.*" That is what I always got for municipal elections "10*s.* a day, and I "shall not charge any more."

CHARLES TEASDELL sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

C. Teasdell.

16,507. What are you ?—A greengrocer.

16,508. Did you receive anything for your vote ? 15*l.*

16,509. Who from ?—I suppose it would be Mr. Jones.

16,510. Where did you get it ?—At the "Army and Navy."

16,511. Did you have a ticket ?—If I had a ticket Mr. Holmes gave it me, but I am not positive that I had.

16,512. Where did Mr. Holmes live ?—In Howard Street, 70 Row, I think it is.

16,513. Is it William Holmes, Row No. 70 ?—It is in Howard Street. I do not know the number of the house. He is a fish merchant.

16,514. If Mr. Holmes did not give you a ticket, it was Mr. Holmes who sent you up ?—Yes.

16,515. Were you offered anything on the other side ?—Yes.

16,517. When ?—The day before the election.

16,518. By whom ?—Mr. Cooper.

16,519. Was that after you had been paid, at the "Army and Navy" ?—No, before.

16,520. Did you refuse the 15*l.* ?—Yes.

16,521. Why ?—Because I did not wish to go on the other side at all.

16,522. You belonged to the blue party ?—Yes.

16,523. Had you got a vote in 1859 ?—No.

ROBERT SEWELL sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

R. Sewell.

16,524. What are you ?—A greengrocer in Gaol Street.

16,525. What did you have for your vote at the last election ?—I had 10 sovereigns from the Liberal party, and voted for Brogden and Vanderbyl.

16,526. Who gave you the 10*l.* ?—I did not take it from anywhere, it was brought to my shop.

16,527. Who brought it ?—Mr. Frederick Palmer. I come here to speak the truth.

16,528. Is that Mr. Palmer the magistrate ?—I had nothing the other side. I made up my mind to vote for the Liberals, and I did not take money the other side.

16,529. But was that Mr. Palmer the magistrate ?—The solicitor in Regent Street. I did not go to any house at all. I did not leave that evening off my work. My wife told me.

16,530. You took nothing on the other side ?—No ; I took nothing on the other side. I thought it would be too bad to do so. I had made up my mind to vote.

16,531. Had you got a vote in 1859 ?—No ; I was not on the register.

JAMES LARN SAUNDERS sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

J. L. Saunders.

J. Turrell.

JAMES TURRELL sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

16,624. What are you?—A fisherman.

16,625. Are you a relation of the man we examined just now?—He is my brother.

16,631. Who was it?—I cannot say what his name was, I am sure.

16,632. A stranger?—A strange gentleman.

16,633. Were you offered any money by the other side?—They came to my house, Mr. Harvey and another gentleman, and offered me 15*l.* and 20*l.* if I liked. I said No, I should go the other side.

16,634. Who offered you that?—Mr. George Harvey.

16,635. Why did you not take it?—I had a mind to go the blue side.

16,636. Do you know that your brother had 20*l.*?—No.

16,637. Had you got a vote in 1859?—Yes.

16,638. Did you get anything for that?—Yes.

16,639. How much?—Fifteen pounds.

16,640. Who from?—Mr. Benjamin Powell.

16,641. Mr. Benjamin Powell the elder or the junior?—The elder.

16,642. Of King Street?—Yes.

16,643. Is it King Street or Chapel Street?—Chapel Street is King Street.

16,644. Were you offered money on the other side in 1859?—No.

16,645. Is Mr. Powell on the Liberal side?—The red side.

16,646. Was it Mr. Parker who sent you to the "Army and Navy"?—Mr. Parker and Mr. Downing told me to go up there.

16,647. You received the 20*l.* all at once?—Yes.

16,648. How came you to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey in 1859, and Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl at the last election?—I had a mind to go red at that time.

16,649. You seemed to have a mind to vote where you got your money, is that it?—I do not know I am sure about it.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

16,650. (Mr. Slade.) Do you recollect this man?—This is the Turrell I had. I should not have had anything to do with the other man.

16,651. They both received 20*l.*, the numbers are 1257 and 1258?—I have them here, one is only 15*l.* and the other is 20*l.*

16,652. This man is No. 1257?—I have got him for 20*l.*

16,653. He acknowledges that, and the other man you have got as 15*l.*, he acknowledges 20*l.*?—I think Mr. Downing can explain one of these cases. I do not know anything about it.

THOMAS DOWNING recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

T. Downing.

16,654. Do you know anything about these cases?—Mr. Parker drew the money first of all and he could not find him, and the money I think was returned to me and I put 5*l.* to it and sent it down, and accounted to Mr. Jones again for it. I made it up 20*l.*, I remember the circumstance quite well.

16,655. You gave Mr. Jones the 5*l.* afterwards and Mr. Jones has forgotten it?—I gave it in our accounts. When we finished up the accounts tallied. I recollect the circumstance quite well, Mr. Parker had the money and I sent a party down for it. Whether he returned it to me I do not know, but we settled it in account. It was transferred to some other man. Mr. Parker will be able to tell you how he spent his money.

16,656. The money came through Edwards?—The money came through me.

16,657. And then to Mr. Parker?—Yes.

16,658. Is that Edwards the gas collector?—Yes; this man's money did not come through Mr. Edwards. I do not mean Thomas Turrell's money. It was this man's money I paid Mr. Parker for.

16,659. Then there is 20*l.* in Mr. Jones' account. He acknowledges receiving 20*l.*, and the other one Thomas Turrell had 20*l.* and 15*l.* was drawn for him?—That might be. I had nothing to do with Thomas Turrell, but I recollect this circumstance very well, because I recollect the Monday night he had not the money, and I sent him down for it.

EDWARD TRIPP sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

E. Tripp.

16,660. What are you?—A shoemaker.

16,661. What did you have for your vote at the last election?—Fifteen pounds.

16,662. Who paid you?—I do not know the gentleman.

16,663. Where did you receive it?—At the "Army and Navy."

16,664. Who sent you up to the "Army and Navy"?—I cannot say who it was, but it was talked about by two or three people, and I went up and received the money. Who it was I cannot say.

16,665. You do not know who sent you?—I do not know.

16,666. Cannot you remember?—No. I do not know who it was at all. It was talked about, and I went up in the evening and received the money.

16,667. Were you offered money on the other side?—No. They only came once to solicit my vote, and I told them I should not vote for them.

16,668. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

JAMES SMITH sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

J. Smith.

16,669. What are you?—A painter.

16,670. Where do you live?—In Northumberland Place.

16,671. Are you on the register for Church Plain?—No.

16,672. What did you have for your vote?—Eighteen pounds.

16,673. Who paid you?—Mr. Wilshack.

16,674. Did he bring it to your house?—No; I went to his house for it.

16,675. Had he told you to come up there?—No; William Smith did, or William Smith took me there.

16,676. Is William Smith a relation of yours?—No, none at all.

16,677. Where does William Smith live?—Northumberland Place.

16,678. Did you see Wilshack pay William Smith?—No.

16,679. Did William Smith tell you he had been paid?—No.

16,680. How came you to take 18*l.* Did you not want 20*l.*?—No.

16,681. Did you only ask for 18*l.*?—I asked for 15*l.* the day before the election, and on the election morning we said the price was going up, so we had 3*l.* more.

16,682. You were paid the election morning?—The day before the election I received 15*l.*, and about a month or five weeks after I received three more.

16,683. It was at Wilshack's house you received the 15*l.*?—I received the whole of it there.

16,684. When did you receive the 3*l.*?—About a month or five weeks after, something like that; I cannot say exactly which it was.

16,685. How came Wilshack to give you the 3*l.*?—I suppose because he was afraid he should lose us. I do not know any other reason.

16,686. Did you ask him for it?—Yes, we asked him for it.

16,687. You say "we;" who is the other person?—William Smith.

16,688. Did you see him get any money then?—I did not see him take any money.

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

J. Smith.

8 Sept. 1866.

16,689. You heard him ask?—I heard he had got it.

16,690. Was not the arrangement Mr. Wilshack made with you this, that you were to have 15*l.*, and if you voted all right, then he would give you the 3*l.* afterwards?—No. We asked for the 3*l.* the morning of the election, and he agreed to give it to us, but he did not say when we were to have it.

16,691. Were you offered any money on the other side?—None at all, not a farthing.

16,692. Do you know Mr. Skinner, the miller?—Yes, I know the man.

16,693. Did he offer you some money?—I did not see him at all the election morning. I neither spoke to him nor saw him.

16,694. Mr. Wilshack has sworn that he went up to your house on the morning of the election, and heard Mr. Skinner offer you and William Smith 25*l.*?—I did not see him at all. I was in William Smith's parlour, and Mr. Skinner came into the shop, so by that means I did not see him at all. I was not called into the shop, and never spoke to Mr. Skinner nor he to me.

16,695. Then it is not true that he offered you 25*l.*?—He did not offer it to me, but whether he offered it to William Smith I cannot say.

16,696. You do not know?—He did not offer it to me because I did not see him.

16,697. Whose shop is it, yours or William Smith's?—William Smith's, I have no shop.

16,698. Did you tell me William Smith is no relation of yours?—None at all.

16,699. What did you get on the other side?—Nothing at all.

16,700. Were you offered anything on the other side?—No.

16,701. By nobody?—No, not a farthing. I will take my oath to that. I did not receive a halfpenny only from Mr. Wilshack.

16,702. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Who did you vote for?—Lacon and Goodson.

16,703. (Mr. Russell.) Your name has been given in as having received 20*l.* on the other side?—I saw it in the paper, but I can contradict it.

16,704. That you deny?—I deny that. I never received one halfpenny.

16,705. Did anyone ever tell you if you went up to Cattermole's or the "Angel" you would get 20*l.*"—No.

16,706. Never?—No.

16,707. Would you have taken money on the other side?—No.

16,709. Do you belong to the Red party?—Yes.

16,710. Did you promise Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson when they canvassed you?—I did not see them. They did not come to me at all.

16,711. It seems very much as if somebody had given in your name, and received the money?—So I understand, but it is a great mistake. Them that did it ought to be severely punished for it, for I never received one farthing only from Mr. Wilshack. That is all I took.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

16,712. (Mr. Slade.) Do you remember this man?—No. I have him down on my list.

W. Parker.

WILLIAM PARKER sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

16,713. What are you?—A fish merchant.

16,714. Did you receive any money from Mr. Downing at the last election?—Yes, 180*l.*

16,715. What did Downing give you this money for?—To give to the people that wanted money to vote. He asked me if I knew of anybody among the voters. I told him "Yes," and named to him some of them.

16,716. Did you pay away that 180*l.* to voters?—I can account for a good deal of it. First of all, there is Edward Jex of South Quay, 20*l.*, and Henry Ames either 15*l.* or 20*l.* I do not know whether it is 20*l.* or 15*l.*, but he will tell you if you will call him. Then James Elmer, 30*l.*; 15*l.* for his own vote, and 15*l.* he took for another voter, as he said, but I think he voted the other way.

16,717. Did he give you the name of the voter?—No, he did not. And there is William Humphrey, Saint George's Road, is the next. He had 25*l.*; he was down at Newcastle, and he had 20*l.* for his vote, and 5*l.* for his expenses backwards and forwards; but that was given to the woman. He was not at home when I gave it, but I gave it to the woman, and she telegraphed to her husband. And I think the next is Sam Seago. He had 75*l.* altogether.

16,718. Did you give it to him?—Yes. And I think there is a man of the name of Wales that I sent up to the "Angel." He went up, and Mr. Jones gave the money.

16,719. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) That did not come out of this?—No, Mr. Jones gave him that himself. Charles William Wales, a cattle dealer at the north end. And Mr. Secret, I think he went to the "Army and Navy" and took his.

16,720. You did not give Mr. Secret any money?—No. He went to the "Army and Navy" and took it.

16,721. (Mr. Russell.) Did you keep the balance of the money?—I had no balance.

16,722. Take that at the highest it comes to 170*l.*?—It cost me five or six. I might have two or three left. I cannot have more. I had a pony and cart, running about for a day or two.

16,723. You kept the rest for yourself?—I had no money left. I certainly spent it all; but I see they have me down for 20*l.* for a vote, and I never took twenty pence.

16,724. Your name is down as having been paid 20*l.* by Mr. Jones?—I never took a penny.

16,725. You did not?—No. They have got Mr. Fisk down. I should like to exonerate him. He never took a penny, I know. I asked him if he had a mind to vote, and he said, no money would buy him, and I know he was not bribed.

16,726. We took his word and struck him out.—I know. I asked him for his vote, and he said he should not take any money for it.

16,727. What did you get for your vote?—I got nothing at all, and did not wish for anything, and never asked for anything. It is the first time I ever voted in my life, and I think it will be the last, what I can see of it, after all this trouble. That is all I know of the election business. I had no tickets. I took the money from Downing for the few names that I wanted it for.

16,728. William Humphrey, St. Georges's Road, he had 25*l.*?—He came from Newcastle. He had 20*l.* for his vote, and 5*l.* for his expenses.

16,729. Did you give Mr. Humphrey the 20*l.* yourself?—I gave it to his wife. He was at Newcastle.

16,730. Did he come up and vote?—Yes.

16,731. Is Mr. Humphrey in Yarmouth now?—No. I think he is at Shields or Newcastle. I gave it to his wife. If you choose to call her you can.

16,732. We must see her. Did you get any tickets?—No; I had no tickets. There were general memorandums I had upon a bit of card. That is all I know of it.

16,733. Do you know William Newman?—No; I do not know him.

16,734. William Newman, the tailor, said yesterday, "I gave money to Parker?"—No. I never received a penny from Newman. I only did from Downing.

There are two Parkers, William Parker, the miller, which corresponds with my name.

16,735. You always went in couples with Seago, did you not?—Yes. If Mr. Newman is in court perhaps he can say, if you ask him, whether it is me or not. I do not know such a man.

16,737. You were going to tell us about Henry Fisk; did you not offer him any money?—I asked him if he would oblige me and vote for the Liberals, and he said he did not think he should. I said, "I "can give you 20*l.*" and he said, it would not buy him.

16,738. At the "Feathers"?—Yes.

16,739. Had you anything to do with the Turrells?—Not anything. I think I did go after one of the Turrells, but he said he had been and voted at the "Army and Navy." I think it was one of the Turrells, I will not be certain. It would be James, if it was anybody. I know little James, the last witness examined.

16,740. Did you receive the money for Turrell?—Not that I am aware of; I forget, if I did I gave an account for it; I do not think I did though.

16,741. Did you receive any money from anybody else except Downing?—No.

16,742. No money from Jones?—No.

16,743. Did you give an account to Downing of the money you had spent?—No; I never was asked for it, not to the best of my knowledge; I might though, I forget.

16,744. What part did you take in the election by your giving this money away?—No other part than what I now tell you; that is all.

16,745. Did you canvass?—No; I only assisted Downing, that is all. I went and voted myself, and then Downing asked me if I knew any voters, I told him I thought I did, and they were those I mentioned I gave the money to.

16,746. Had you found out beforehand what those men would take for their votes?—No. There were plenty of them asked, I was going to say, two 15*l.*'s. There were plenty of them voted the other way, who said I was too late, and all that; there were plenty of them like that. In fact, I think if Mr. Brogden had been ruled by Downing he would never have spent a penny.

16,747. Did all those people come to you for the money, or did you go to them?—They were waiting about in the market place, and I went to them, some of them.

16,748. Were they all waiting about?—Some were waiting about, and some I went to their houses.

16,749. There were only five of them, you know?—Yes.

16,750. How many did you go to the houses of?—I am sure I cannot recollect; I cannot tax my memory with it.

16,751. Do I understand you when you went in the market place they were waiting about?—The people were all standing about there, waiting for it, of course, some of them, a good many of them.

16,752. What day was it when this money was paid?—I am sure I do not know whether it was the Monday or the Tuesday; I am sure I could not say.

16,753. If they were waiting about I suppose it was the nomination day?—That I could not say. When was the election day? the Wednesday?

16,754. Yes.—It would be the Tuesday, I should think, but I am sure I could not be positive.

16,755. The William Humphrey you mean lives in St. George's Road?—Yes. He is a mariner.

16,756. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do I understand you received 180*l.* from Downing?—Yes.

16,757. Did he give it you all at once?—Yes, it was all in one lump.

16,758. And after that you received no more money?—No.

16,759. From him?—From him nor anybody else.

16,760. And he never gave you any money for any tickets?—No.

16,761. When he gave you that money you were at liberty to dispose of it as you chose?—Yes.

16,762. He did not give you any names with it?—No; I had no restrictions. I gave him a few names that I thought wanted money.

16,763. You gave him a few names; he gave you no names?—No.

16,764. (Mr. Slade.) When you paid this money to those people did you go in the company of Seago?—Some of them. I and him were at Edward Jex's, South Quay, and perhaps at two or three others.

16,765. There were only five?—We were together a good part of the time, I and Seago.

16,766. Were you with Seago when you went to James Elmer?—Yes.

16,767. Were you with Seago when you went to Mr. Ames?—No.

16,768. And were you with Mr. Seago when you went to Mrs. Humphrey?—No, I know I was not.

16,769. Did Mr. Downing know you were going to Edward Jex?—Yes, I should think he did. I put them upon a bit of card, but I have not got it now.

16,770. All the names?—Not all of them, some of them; but they had lots of them been and voted, and those were crossed out.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

16,771. (Mr. Slade.) Have you any statement to make?—I was going to make this statement. The difficulty I am placed in, in a case like this, is, here is a man coming forward with a list of names that I have not got. Downing presents a certain number of tickets to me, I take the tickets, and ticked them off the register. It comes out afterwards that money drawn for those parties is given to some one else. I am not cognizant of it. It still remains as having been paid to the parties that have not had the money. Those tickets came to me, and I gave Downing the amount. The money has been spent, and it is put down as having been paid to these parties. Downing gave me a lot of tickets, and I gave him the money for them.

16,772. Take for instance Henry Ames?—I have not that at all.

16,773. Look at No. 19 on your list?—That is crossed out.

16,774. Henry Ames, you see, Parker gave him 20*l.*, and he would have stood in the same way as Jex probably?—He might or might not.

16,775. The next case of James Elmer is not upon your list at all?—No.

16,776. James Elmer, 429. You have no 429 in your list?—I have not. If they would have allowed me to carry out the suggestion for me to pay every voter myself, and they to have the tickets and not money, I should have been able to give an account of the money. But you see, as it is, they would not agree to that. They would have the paying of the money themselves. They came to me with a certain number of tickets; I calculated the amount that it would come to, and handed the money to them, and then I took those tickets; but in many instances, it turns out, they did not give the parties in whose names they drew the money the amount, but they gave it to some one else. Downing says the reason of it was this, when they went to the parties with the money they had voted for the other side.

16,777. Was the money brought back to you?—No, never.

16,778. (Mr. Russell.) The proper course would have been, in such a case, to have returned the ticket to you, and to receive in lieu of it a ticket for the other person?—The proper course would have been to have brought the money back to me, and said, "Number so and so has gone on the other side."

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

C. Satterthwaite.

8 Sept. 1866.

They should have brought the money back to me, and if they gave me another name, and they brought that name to me, which they did not do, I should have given another ticket. But they kept the money. My system was to pay all the money myself to each voter, and not to pay them till after they had voted. That is what I wanted to do. Perhaps it will be as well to state, this morning I had two names given to me as having been bribed, and it turned out they were dead men, and I refused to take them.

16,779. If you can get hold of the man who took the money that will be sufficient?—The party could not tell me the names: I thought that it was a get off. I believe it will turn out this Elmer has received money twice over. I was instructed he was engaged, and was well paid for his services, as a runner or messenger. Besides that money he had, Mr. Livingston tells me he was employed the whole time of the election.

16,780. Was his name sent in in the return?—Yes, I believe so.

T. Downing.

THOMAS DOWNING recalled.

16,781. (Mr. Slade.) Will you give us the names of those persons that had the tickets transferred to them?—We keep finding out several names upon the list now, that were not upon the list before, who have been paid, therefore they are omitted; and if you balance one with the other, you will find they will come all right at last.

W. Parker.

WILLIAM PARKER recalled; examination resumed by Mr. SLADE.

16,782. Edward Jex is put down as being paid 20*l.* by you?—That is a name given in. That was given in along with the others.

16,783. We will take Henry Ames to have received that 20*l.*?—I think he lives somewhere by York Road. I will not be certain whether it was 15*l.* or 20*l.* Ames will tell you.

16,784. You gave in a list?—Yes.

16,785. Is James Elmer dead?—Yes, I think he is dead.

16,786. Did you give James Elmer the 15*l.* yourself?—Yes.

16,787. Into his own hands?—Yes.

16,788. Surely you found out who his friend was?—He told me at the time. Seago was along with me at the time.

16,789. Have you forgotten it?—I never made any memorandum of it.

16,790. I ask you if you recollect it?—No, I do not. I cannot tax my memory.

16,791. Did James Elmer vote?—Yes, all the people that I gave money to voted for Brogden and Vanderbyl.

16,792. Were you upon the register in 1859?—No, I never voted before.

16,793. Did you take any part in that election?—No.

16,794. Were you in Yarmouth then?—Yes.

R. Wright.

RICHARD WRIGHT sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

16,795. What are you?—A coal carter.

16,796. Did you receive anything for your vote at at the last election?—15*l.*

16,797. Who from?—From Mr. Jones.

16,798. Where at?—At the "Angel."

16,799. Did you have a ticket?—No.

16,800. Who sent you up to the "Angel"?—A man of the name of Botwright.

16,801. Were you offered any money by the other side?—Yes.

16,803. Who by?—By Dr. Stafford.

16,804. When did Dr. Stafford offer you 15*l.*?—Four or five days before the election.

16,805. Is Dr. Stafford treating you?—No.

16,806. Did he come to your house?—No.

16,807. Is he attending you in any way?—He called me into his surgery.

16,808. Were you outside in the street?—Yes, in my cart.

16,809. Tell me what Dr. Stafford said to you?—He said he would give me 15*l.* if I would vote for Lacon and Goodson.

16,810. What did you say?—I said, no, I should not go that way.

16,811. Was that before you received the 15*l.* at the "Angel."?—Yes.

16,812. Did anybody else offer you money?—No.

16,813. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No. I have not had a vote since Lennox and Coope put up.

16,814. Did Dr. Stafford mention your name?—He knew me, and I knew him.

16,815. I mean in his evidence?—Not that I know of.

16,816. You did not hear of it?—No.

16,817. (Mr. Russell.) Have you ever been a patient of Dr. Stafford's?—He is doctor to my house.

16,818. You are quite satisfied that Dr. Stafford offered you the 15*l.*?—He said, if I liked to vote for them, he would give me 15*l.*

16,819. Did he say where he could get it?—No. I did not hear him say that.

C. W. Wales.

CHARLES WILLIAM WALES sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

16,820. What are you?—A cow-keeper.

16,821. Did you receive any inducement to vote at the last election?—Yes.

16,822. What did you get?—20*l.*

16,823. Who paid you?—Mr. Jones.

16,824. Where at?—At the "Angel."

16,825. Did you have a ticket?—No.

16,826. Who sent you up to the "Angel?"—I went up to the "Angel" twice. First, I went up with Mr. Waters.

16,827. Azariah Waters?—Mr. Waters, living in the Market Row, I do not know his other name. He is a linendraper.

16,828. What did you get the first time?—Nothing.

16,829. How was that?—Because I would not promise to vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl.

16,830. How came you to go back again?—Mr. Parker met me in the market. He said, "Have "you voted?" I said, "No." He said "What do you "want?" I told him 20*l.* Then he went up with me, and they gave me the 20*l.* I told Mr. Jones before that, I should only vote one and one.

16,831. Mr. Parker went up with you?—Yes.

16,832. Then you went into Mr. Jones' room, and got the 20*l.*—No. Jones came to the door, and gave me the 20*l.*

16,833. Were you offered any money by the other side?—No.

16,834. How did you vote?—Brogden and Lacon.

16,835. (Mr. Slade.) That was because of the grains?—I voted for them because my living laid that way. I told them at first, when they first saw me, that I should vote one and one.

16,836. (Mr. Russell.) You received the 20*l.* to vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—I told them that I should vote one and one.

16,837. Which party do you belong to?—The Liberal.

16,838. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No, only for the county.

16,839. Did you vote Liberal for the county?—Yes. I might have had money from the Tories to vote for them, but I voted for the Liberals for nothing.

16,840. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you count the money?—Yes, after I got away.

16,841. Are you sure it was 20*l.* and not 15*l.*?—Yes.

16,842. They say they gave you 15*l.*?—I think I can account for that. When Mr. Waters took me up, Mr. Jones spoke to me; I think it was Mr. Jones, a man with a pair of spectacles on. He spoke to me in a bedroom, and said, "Which way are you going "to vote?" I said, "Lacon and Brogden." He said, "That is one and one." I said, "I shall not vote any "other way?" and then he says, "You can go." I went downstairs again. After I had been in the market some little time, Mr. Parker came up to me, and said, "Have you voted?" I said, "No." He said, "What do you want?" I said, "20*l.*" He said, "Come along with me." I went down with him to the "Angel." Mr. Parker went in, and spoke to Mr. Jones, and he came out and said, "Your name is "down for 15*l.*" I said, "I have not taken a penny." I had not received a farthing then. And Mr. Jones, that is the gentleman (pointing to Mr. Satterthwaite), says, "You have had 15*l.* already." I said, I had not had one farthing, and then he gave me 20*l.*

16,843. (Mr. Russell.) You were not paid by the man in spectacles?—No. That is the man who gave me the money. I will swear to him.

16,844. And he gave you 20*l.*—Yes.

16,845. You had refused to take 15*l.*?—I had. I think that will account for 20*l.* Mr. Parker named me when he came up here. What Mr. Waters stated about me is quite false.

16,846. What did he say?—He said that I met him in the market, and I asked him for 15*l.*, and he said my wife said that she would spend half of it in his shop if she got it.

16,847. Azariah Waters' evidence is gradually dwindling away?—I assure you that is quite false what he stated about me. In fact, I could face him upon that.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

C. Satterthwaite.

16,848. Do you recollect this man?—I think on the morning of the election I saw him.

16,849. He says you gave him 20*l.* on the morning of the election, and you said first his name was down for 15*l.*?—Yes.

16,850. And he said he had not had a farthing, and then you gave him 20*l.*?—I remember seeing his face; but I cannot remember the circumstances. I do not see why I should not have the 20*l.* down as well.

16,851. You see he is down on your list for 15*l.* and he says he received 20*l.*?—Will the Court have the kindness to look at Mr. Edwards's account.

16,852. (Mr. Russell.) There is 15*l.* in Edwards's list?—That is C.

16,853. You ought to have 20*l.* on your list, and you have omitted to put it there?—Yes; you will remember I am 10*l.* over.

JOSEPH DRAPER sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

J. Draper.

16,854. What are you?—A butcher.

16,855. Did you receive anything for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

16,857. Who gave it you?—Mr. Stannard.

16,858. Did he tell you where he had it from?—No.

16,859. He did not mention Mr. Bunn's name?—No.

16,860. Were you offered any money on the other side?—No.

16,861. You voted for Lacon and Goodson?—Yes.

16,862. How did you vote in 1859?—I voted Liberal then.

16,863. You voted for Watkin and Young?—Yes.

16,864. How come you to change?—To turn to the other side, do you mean?

16,865. Yes.—Because I was offered money.

16,866. Did you not get any money in 1859?—No.

16,867. You did not?—No.

16,868. If you had had no money at all would you have voted on the Liberal side this time?—I think I should.

16,869. You belong to that party?—Yes.

16,870. You voted against your party for 15*l.*?—Yes.

16,872. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

16,874. Who from?—Well, I am sure I do not know.

16,875. Where did you receive it?—At Cattermole's.

16,876. Had you a ticket?—Yes.

16,877. Who gave you the ticket?—That I do not know, I had it at the "Angel"; but I do not know who gave it to me.

16,878. Was it a stranger who gave it to you?—Yes.

16,879. A gentleman in spectacles?—That I do not know, I am sure; I cannot say.

16,880. Who sent you up to the "Angel"?—Mr. Parker, I think.

16,881. Were you paid any money by the other side?—No, I was not paid any money by the other side.

16,882. Had you a vote in 1859?—No, I had not.

16,884. Did you have any money for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

16,886. Who paid it you?—I was paid at the "Army and Navy" tavern. I cannot say who paid it me.

16,887. Did you have a ticket?—No.

16,888. Who sent you up to the "Army and Navy" tavern?—Not any one.

16,889. How came you to go?—Well, it was talked about in the Tavern Road on the day before the election, and I, with some others, went that night to the "Army and Navy" tavern and there I got paid.

16,890. Who went with you?—I do not know, I am sure; not anyone that I know, not personally.

16,891. Were you offered any money by the other side?—No.

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

J. Fulcher.

8 Sept. 1866.

JAMES FULCHER sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

16,892. What are you?—A superannuated Trinity pilot.

16,893. Did you receive any money at the last election for your vote?—Yes.

16,895. Who gave it you?—A gentleman of the name of Whiting, in Southtown.

16,896. Is that all you received?—Yes.

16,897. Were you offered any money on the other side?—No.

16,898. You voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Brogden?—Yes.

16,899. How came it you voted half and half?—I do not know; I made no promise particularly.

16,900. Which side was Mr. Whiting?—Liberal, I believe. Yes, he is Liberal.

16,901. What did you get for voting for Sir Edmund Lacon?—Nothing; it was given to me by Mr. Whiting, 5*l.*, and I never received any more.

16,906. Did you not hear that more money was being given?—No, I did not hear about that; 5*l.* was given to me, that is all.

16,907. Do you know a man named John Garrod?—No, his name is familiar, but I do not know the person.

16,908. Had you got a vote in 1859?—Yes.

16,909. Did you receive anything for it then?—No, I went to sea two days before the election.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

16,910. Look at 492?—12*l.* 10*s.*

16,911. Do you remember this man?—No. In this case perhaps the person who gave him the money can explain the 7*l.* 10*s.* balance. He gets it through a second party.

16,912. (Mr. Slade.) He got 5*l.* from Mr. Whiting?—Yes.

16,913. (Mr. Russell.) How do you account for this 12*l.* 10*s.*?—I cannot say.

16,914. You divide the 25*l.*?—They must have presented tickets to me for this amount 12*l.* 10*s.* I cannot say how they have distributed it. I have paid the money over to some one. All I want is for my own satisfaction, all this should be cleared up; how this money has gone.

16,915. I mention Mr. Garrod's name, because he is the other man who received 12*l.* 10*s.*?—They must have got 25*l.* from me and given me tickets.

W. Riches.

WILLIAM RICHES sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

16,916. What are you?—A grocer.

16,917. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—I did.

16,920. Where were you paid?—At Wright's on the Church Plain.

16,921. Did you have a ticket?—No.

16,922. Who sent you up to Wright's?—Mr. Neave I think told me, and Tom Edwards I believe.

16,923. Were you offered any money on the other side?—I was, 15*l.*, but I was always Liberal.

16,924. Who offered you the 15*l.*?—Mr. Blyth the painter. I told him I never did vote that side.

16,925. And you refused it?—I did so.

16,926. You had not a vote for 1859, had you?—Yes, I had.

16,927. What did you receive for it then?—5*l.* Mr. Edwards sitting there gave it to me.

16,928. You voted Liberal then?—I did.

C. Towner.

16,934. Not inside it?—Not inside it.

16,935. In the street?—No.

16,936. Where at?—At Thompson's.

16,938. Who told you to go upstairs to be paid?—I was not upstairs.

16,939. Who told you to get your money?—Nobody told me to get it, there were other parties there and therefore I took it as well.

16,940. How did you know there was a stranger paying money at Thompson's?—I saw him.

16,941. Had you seen him before?—No.

16,942. Did you see him paying money?—No, I did not see him pay money, only to me.

16,943. How did you know he was paying money?—I heard that he was paying money.

16,944. Were you offered money by the other side?—No, not any.

16,945. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No, I was not on the register then.

16,953. Were you offered any money by the other side?—No.

16,954. Had you got a vote in 1859?—Yes.

16,955. What did you get for it then?—Nothing at all.

16,956. You voted at the last election for Lacon and Brogden?—Yes.

16,957. How came you to split your vote?—I do not know; it took my fancy just at that time.

16,958. How came you to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon?—Because I had voted for him before.

16,959. You had taken money to vote for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl?—No.

16,960. You got the 15*l.* to vote for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl?—No; you will not find that written down in the list, Brogden and Vanderbyl.

16,961. No. What were you paid the money for?—I got all the money I received from this gentleman sitting there (pointing to Mr. Satterthwaite).

16,962. What did you get it for?—I do not know; they offered it me and I took it, and I wish it had been as much more, I should have taken it.

16,963. Do you think you got it to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon?—Well, I know this gentleman very well, I knew the money would do me good and I took it.

16,964. I see you split your vote in 1859 ?—I daresay I did ; I am sure I forget, it is so long since.

16,965. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You vote as you please and take money when you can get it ?—I should like to have some one to come and give me some money now, I should be glad enough to take it.

FREDERICK PALMER sworn ; examined by Mr. SLADE.

F. Palmer.

16,966. What are you ?—A surgeon.

16,967. Did you give Harriet Sewell 10*l.* at the last election ?—I am not aware of it ; I gave her a parcel.

16,968. What kind of a parcel was it ?—A small paper parcel.

16,969. Brown paper ?—Yes.

16,970. Who gave you that parcel ?—I am not quite clear on that point, but, I think Mr. Fill ; I would not swear that Mr. Fill gave it me, but that is my impression.

16,971. Was it a sized parcel that might contain 10 sovereigns ?—I should say something of that kind.

16,972. When you gave it her did you say anything to her about her husband's vote ?—Not a word.

16,973. What passed between you and Mrs. Sewell when you gave her that parcel ?—Nothing at all.

16,974. Did you go into her shop ?—I perhaps could better explain to you exactly how it happened ; I was asked if I was going past Sewell's shop in Gaol Street ; I said Yes. If Mr. Fill gave me the money, and I think he did, I will not be positive on that point, he said, Will you leave this parcel there. I saw her in the shop and I gave it to her. Of course, I believe it was money, but as to what it was, whether it was 10*l.* or 5*l.* or 20*l.* I had not the slightest idea.

16,975. What did Mrs. Sewell say when you gave her this parcel ?—Nothing at all ; she made no remark whatever.

16,976. Did you make no remark at all to Mrs. Sewell ? — I think I could say positively not ; I merely gave it to her. I was asked to take this parcel into the shop, and seeing her in the shop I gave it to her and made no remark at all.

16,977. Mrs. Sewell has told us you said to her words to this effect, take care that your husband is early at the poll to-morrow morning ?—I should say I said nothing of the kind.

16,978. Are you sure you did not ?—I am nearly certain I said nothing of the kind.

16,979. Did you ask Mr. Fill why he asked you to give this parcel to Mrs. Sewell ?—I asked him no questions because I supposed what it was for ; I asked no questions about it. I merely considered myself in that case to be a sort of messenger. He said, Are you going past a certain place, if you are will you deliver this.

16,980. You have no doubt it was money ?—I have no doubt it was money.

16,981. To be given to her for her husband's vote ?—I should say I cannot have any doubt about that.

16,982. Did you give anybody else any money at the last election ?—No.

16,983. No one else ?—No.

16,984. Had Mr. Fill many of these parcels, when you saw him, in his hands, or how was it ?—I saw nothing else but that.

16,985. You knew what it was ?—I supposed it was money. I knew the man to be a voter. I knew the person living in that house was a voter. I supposed it was money ; perhaps if I had thought of it I should not have carried it. It was done in the haste of the moment ; he said, Are you going past so and so, and I said, Yes, and he said, Just deliver that parcel."

16,986. (Mr. Russell.) Is Mr. Sewell a patient of yours ?—No.

16,987. (Mr. Slade.) Had you taken any part in election matters before this ?—Yes.

16,988. Were you on a committee anywhere ; upon any committee ?—I do not know if you can call me on a committee at all ; I was acting, but I took a very inactive part in it.

16,989. Were you on a committee in any particular ward ?—I think from what I have seen in the papers I was put on in the St. George's Ward, but I have no recollection of it.

16,990. Did you canvass at all ? — I would not positively say that I did or did not. I think I might have gone out on one occasion.

16,991. Do you mean with the canvassers ?—With the canvassers.

16,992. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) What acquaintance had you with Mr. Fill before this ? — I have known Mr. Fill for the last 20 years.

16,993. Were you attending him then ?—No, I have known him merely as an inhabitant of the town and a man I have met on many occasions.

16,994. How did you happen to be in his shop on this occasion ?—I was not in his shop, I think it was in the street.

16,995. Being at the election time you could not doubt what it was ?—I am bound to tell the truth, I had no doubt it was money.

16,996. At the time he gave it you ?—I have no doubt of it.

16,997. (Mr. Russell.) Do you not consider it rather a reversal of position for Mr. Fill to make a messenger of you ?—I suppose he had more money than I had to do with at the election. I had nothing whatever to do with money except this individual case, and if I had considered I certainly should not have taken it ; it was given to me at the moment by simply asking me, Are you going past, and I said, I am, and then he said, Will you deliver this. That is all I have done in the matter.

16,998. Have you any particular influence with Mrs. Sewell ?—None whatever.

16,999. You are not aware of any reason why Mr. Fill should have selected you as the emissary ?—Not the slightest.

17,000. Was it a casual meeting in the street between you and Mr. Fill ?—Yes ; I had seen Mr. Fill at different places, at the "Angel" and other places at the time of the canvass. Do not understand it was the first time of my meeting Mr. Fill during the election.

17,001. Was Mr. Fill on his way to Mrs. Sewell, do you think ?—No, Mr. Fill was coming the other way.

17,002. Was it near Mr. Sewell's house you met him ? — No ; I should say it is somewhere near where we are now.

17,003. How far did you have to go ?—About 100 yards, I think.

JACOB SHIMMON sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

J. Shimmon.

17,005. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election ?—I did.

17,007. Where were you paid it ?—At the "Army and Navy" tavern.

17,008. Did you receive a ticket ?—Yes.

17,009. Who gave you the ticket ? — Newman, William Newman, I think his name is ; he came to my house on Tuesday morning.

17,010. Were you offered any money by the other side ?—I was.

17,012. Who by ?—E. O. Johnson, my master that I then worked for, a builder.

17,015. Why?—I told him I was Liberal in principle, and had always voted on the Liberal side and never took a shilling for my vote in my life.

17,017. Were you offered any?—Yes, I was offered some.

17,018. Who by?—By young Fayerman, I think it was.

17,019. How much were you offered?—I was offered 5*l.* but I did not take it.

17,020. Who is Mr. Fayerman?—He was a grocer's foreman, in a grocer's shop, or something of that sort.

J. Crow.

17,040. Can you remember when you were offered it?—I think it was about the Saturday week previous to the election, if I am right.

17,041. Are you sure it was as long before the election as that?—Yes.

17,042. Had you a vote in 1859?—No, I was not in Yarmouth.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

17,043. This man received 12*l.* and he is down for 10*l.*; he says he got a B ticket with a dash after it?—Mr. Downing has been telling me he made that ticket out, and he put two dashes. I should not understand the dashes; there were no instructions about those dashes, I know. It will bring me a little nearer in my account.

17,049. Did he tell you where he had it from?—No.

17,050. What did he say?—He asked me on the morning which way I was going to vote; I told him I should vote Liberal, and he gave me that money.

17,051. Were you offered any money on the other side?—I was offered 10*l.* by a man named Carter, a tobacconist; whatever the Liberals gave he said he would give.

17,052. Where does Carter live?—No. 1, York Terrace.

17,053. What is his Christian name?—I cannot say; Thomas, I think.

17,054. Do you know if he is a voter?—Yes; it is just by St. John's Church.

17,055. Is it James Carter?—Yes.

17,056. Did you refuse it?—Yes.

17,057. Why?—Because I wished to go on the other side.

17,058. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

17,077. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No; I was in the same place, but I was not on the register.

17,078. (Mr. Slade.) Let us have exactly what Mr. Ellis said to you?—Well, if I recollect right, the first time I met him was on the quay. He said, "Trorey, I should like to turn you into a Conservative." I said, "Would you, sir?" He said, "Yes." He says, "What do you say?" I said I was not that way inclined. Afterwards he came into my shop. He said, "What do you say; will you go our side?" I said, "No; I have no wish to do that." He said, "Why not?" I said, "I wish to be on the other "side." He says, "Will you take something?" I said, "What is it?" He said, "15*l.* is what they are "giving." He said, "I have had nothing to do with "it before. I should like to have you come over. CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

17,079. Do you remember this man?—I think I have a recollection of him. I will not be positive. I have him on my list 15*l.*

ROBERT BACON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

17,080. What are you?—A hatter.

17,081. Did you receive any money at the last election for your vote?—Yes.

17,083. Who from?—From Mr. Jones.

17,084. Where were you paid?—The "Army and Navy" tavern.

17,085. Did you have a ticket?—Yes.

17,086. Who gave you the ticket?—A man by the name of Newman.

17,087. Were you offered any money on the other side?—No.

17,088. Had you a vote in 1859?—No, I was off the register.

EDWARD COOPER ALDRED sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

17,089. What are you?—A junior partner in a woollen draper's in London.

17,090. Where do you live?—12, High Holborn.

17,091. Did you ever reside in Yarmouth?—15 years back I was an apprentice here.

17,092. For how many years were you apprenticed here?—Seven years.

17,093. During those 15 years have you ever paid visits to Yarmouth?—The last six years I have; for six or seven years I have.

17,094. During the last six or seven years?—Yes.

17,095. And during the last six or seven years how often have you visited Yarmouth?—Two or three times a year, as my business brought me down here.

17,096. Were you a traveller for this house?—I travelled occasionally.

17,097. When you say your business brought you down two or three times a year, was that travelling for your house?—Yes.

17,098. How long did you stay when you came down here?—Two or three days, as my business kept me.

17,099. What is the greatest number of days that you stayed at one time?—I really cannot tell you. It entirely depends on my business whether I am detained here three or four days.

17,100. I want to know what is the greatest number of days you stayed here at one time?—I cannot recollect. I have taken no notice of it.

17,101. Give us an idea; I will not tie you for a day?—I may have been down here for four or five days, but I really cannot tax my memory as regards that. I am down here occasionally for a holiday, that I do not reckon.

17,102. When you come down for a holiday how long do you stop?—That entirely depends. Sometimes I have been here as long as a week.

17,103. Would a week be a long holiday for you?—It entirely depends. Sometimes I take a week now and a week then. I do not take a holiday at a regular time. As my business is, so I go away for a week or a fortnight.

17,104. How many times have you been down for a holiday during the last six years?—I may have been down three times in the six years.

17,105. Not more?—I should think not.

17,106. When was the last time you came down here for a holiday before the election?—I think I was down here for a week some time last year. I think it was in the beginning of June.

17,107. Can you tell me how long you stayed at that time?—I stayed a week.

17,108. When you are down here on your business I presume you move about the town for orders?—I do.

17,109. In fact I suppose you are continually moving about the whole time you are here?—I am.

17,110. And coming here two or three times a year on business, and coming down for your holiday, I presume you are tolerably well known in Yarmouth?—No, I should think not. I only call on my customers, and that is all. I do not call on tradespeople individually. I call on a certain class of customers, and there my business ends.

17,111. Do not you make it your business to know people?—No, certainly not. I have enough to attend to my own.

17,112. Are you rightly described to us as being a perfect stranger to Yarmouth?—I do not exactly understand that. I am a stranger because I have left here now 15 years, and not being down for six or seven years, I should consider that I was a stranger to the town.

17,113. You have been down here in the last six years three times a year on your business?—I do not say three times a year; I say two or three times, as my business brings me.

17,114. And you come down occasionally for your holiday?—Yes, when I am down here for a holiday you understand I do not spend all my time in the town.

17,115. Where do you spend it?—I go up the water three or four days fishing. I am not in the town.

17,116. You are in the town sometimes for a week, and walk and sail sometimes?—Yes, but I may stop out three or four days.

17,117. You may stop out three or four days sailing?—Yes.

17,118. Have you ever done so?—I have.

17,119. When you come down for a holiday whom do you stay with?—My father.

17,120. Who is your father?—A silversmith.

17,121. What relation are you to the mayor?—Nephew.

17,122. When you come down here, do you frequently see your uncle the mayor?—I call in perhaps once or twice, or two or three times, as I am passing.

17,123. You are on very familiar terms with him?—I am.

17,124. Are you aware that your uncle the mayor is a strong Conservative?—No.

17,125. Have you ever met with gentlemen of that party at his house?—When I called in, I think, the Saturday before the election.

17,126. I ask you, have you ever at your uncle's house met with gentlemen of the Conservative party?—Certainly not.

17,127. Do you know any of the Conservative party of this borough?—Very few.

17,128. Do you know any?—Very few indeed.

17,129. Whom do you know?—Mr. Charles Diver, Mr. Reynolds, Mr. Fyson, and two or three more.

17,130. I want to ask you a question, and be careful how you answer it. Do you remember Mr. Cooper?—I did not know him prior to the election.

17,131. Never saw him?—That I will not swear to.

17,132. Never spoke to him?—Never spoke to him.

17,133. Did not know him by sight?—I might have known him by sight.

17,134. Did you?—I might have known him by sight, but I did not know it was Mr. Cooper. I will be on my oath I never spoke to Mr. Cooper or knew him prior to the time of the election.

17,135. I do not say know him, but did you know him by sight?—I think I can hardly go so far as that. Of course it is a thing gone by with me.

17,136. The thing is all over, and we have found out the whole of this, but I want to know whether you knew Mr. Cooper before the election?—No, I did not.

17,137. Had you ever heard of Mr. Cooper?—No.

17,138. Did you ever hear politics discussed in Yarmouth?—No.

17,139. Never?—Not since I left, 15 years back.

17,140. You heard them discussed then?—Yes.

17,141. Does your recollection carry you back 15 years?—No.

17,142. Why do you say you recollect politics being discussed then?—Because I was bound apprentice for seven years, to take up my freedom.

17,143. That had nothing to do with your politics. I ask if you heard politics discussed?—Yes, at that time I did.

17,144. Was it a frequent matter of discussion with you?—No, not myself.

17,145. Did you take an interest in politics 15 years ago?—Yes, I did, because I had an idea when my time was up I should have a vote for the borough, and the freemen have been disfranchised since.

17,146. Coming down to Yarmouth so often as you do, have you ever taken an interest in the Yarmouth politics since?—No, I have not.

17,147. Did you ever hear of a contest in Yarmouth?—I have read it in the paper.

17,108. Never heard anyone mention it?—I never heard anyone mention it from Yarmouth.

17,149. You never heard of bribery I suppose until you came down here?—No, of course; excuse me, the freemen were disfranchised for bribing.

17,150. You heard of that?—Yes.

17,151. But you never heard of bribery going on since the freemen were disfranchised?—I have not.

17,152. You never heard of Sir Edmund Lacon canvassing the place?—No.

17,153. And you never heard of rich people coming down here to spend money?—No; it did not concern me.

17,154. And you never heard of Mr. Cooper?—No.

17,155. And you never heard of Mr. Nightingale?—Yes, Mr. Nightingale I have.

17,156. You knew him?—Yes.

17,157. Did Mr. Nightingale give you this money?—Mr. Nightingale told me there was a parcel, which I took to Mr. Cooper. He did not say anything about money.

17,158. Where did you meet Mr. Nightingale?—At my uncle's house.

17,159. On what day?—The Saturday evening.

17,160. What time?—I really cannot tell what time, some time in the evening, after tea.

17,161. Who sent for you?—No one.

17,162. What did you go there for?—Merely in a casual way, to call and see my uncle.

17,163. Who was there besides Mr. Nightingale?—No one.

17,164. And was your uncle present?—I went into my uncle's private room, and Mr. Nightingale and my uncle were in the breakfast room.

17,165. Is that the same room?—It is in connexion with the room. There is a door from the private room to the breakfast room.

17,166. Was your uncle present when Mr. Nightingale gave you the parcel?—Yes, I think he was.

17,167. When he gave you the parcel, what did he say to you?—He asked me if I knew Mr. Cooper. I said no, and he then directed me to Mr. Cooper's shop.

17,168. How did he describe it?—Opposite the police station. I had to inquire my way after I left there. I was not quite sure. I inquired my way to Mr. Cooper's shop.

17,169. Did you know what was in the parcel?—I did not.

17,170. Do you mean to say you did not know where Mr. Cooper's shop was?—I did not.

17,171. Did Mr. Nightingale say you were to give it to Mr. Cooper himself?—To Mr. Cooper himself.

17,172. Well, go on?—That is all. I was to give it to Mr. Cooper myself.

17,173. You did not know Mr. Cooper?—I inquired, and was directed to the shop. I inquired for Mr. Cooper. Mr. Cooper came forward, and I gave it him, and said, "There is a parcel for you."

17,174. Did Mr. Nightingale describe Mr. Cooper to you?—I really cannot say. I did not take so much notice as to be able to go into that sort of thing. The time has gone by so long. I cannot tax my memory.

17,175. You knew the parcel contained money, I presume?—I did not.

17,176. It was, I take it, a brown paper parcel of small size, and very heavy?—Yes, very heavy.

17,177. What did you think it contained?—I formed my own opinion that it was money of some kind, but I did not know whether it was either gold, silver, or copper. I did not know, and did not wish to know.

17,178. And so you took it to Mr. Cooper?—I did.

17,179. And when you got into the shop you asked for Mr. Cooper, and Mr. Cooper came forward?—He did.

17,180. What did Mr. Cooper say?—He said, "Put the parcel down." And I put the parcel down.

17,181. Did he say anything about some more being wanted?—I think I asked him, "Do you want any more parcels of this kind," or something of that sort, something to that effect; but I really cannot tell you, to speak truthfully.

17,182. What did he say to that?—I think he would be in on the Sunday afternoon, if there was any more required, but that I would not be positive about. I mean to say that I really cannot give the verbal conversation.

17,183. I will not ask you word for word, but was not there an arrangement made for the next day?—I think there was.

17,184. That you were to bring some more money?—I was to bring another parcel. I will not say there was money mentioned, because I did not know there was money in the parcel.

17,185. Did you go and tell Mr. Nightingale you had given him this money?—No.

17,186. When did you see Mr. Nightingale again?—I called in at my uncle's as I was passing the Sunday afternoon, and Mr. Nightingale was there.

17,187. Was that after church?—It was before church; it was in the afternoon.

17,188. But was it after morning service?—It was after morning service.

17,189. Did you tell Mr. Nightingale that Mr. Cooper wanted another parcel?—No, certainly not.

17,190. Did Mr. Nightingale give you another parcel?—Mr. Nightingale gave me another parcel to take down to Mr. Cooper.

17,191. What did Mr. Cooper say to that?—"Here "you are again," or something of that sort. I really cannot tell you what he said.

17,192. Did he say he wanted another, or did you ask him if he wanted any more of those parcels?—I cannot say; I really cannot.

17,193. You took him another parcel on the Monday?—On Monday evening I think I did.

17,194. Where did you get it from?—From the same source.

17,195. At your uncle's house?—At my uncle's house.

17,196. From Mr. Nightingale?—From Mr. Nightingale.

17,197. Was anybody present when you got the parcel?—No.

17,198. Did you see Mr. Nightingale in the same room?—I cannot tax my memory about the Monday's parcel. I took it, I am aware, but I cannot say. I think the parcel was left for me. I do not think anyone was there, but I think the parcel was left for me.

17,199. Do you mean left for you with the servant?—No.

17,200. Where ?—Left in my uncle's private room.

17,201. Addressed to anybody ?—No.

17,202. But a similar parcel to what you had taken on the Sunday ?—A similar parcel to what I had taken.

17,203. You knew what it was for ?—I supposed what it was for. I was not told what it was for.

17,204. Had Mr. Nightingale on the Sunday given you to suppose there would be a parcel for you the next day, Monday ?—If there was a parcel required, I should find it at a certain place in my uncle's room.

17,205. He said that ?—As near as I can recollect; something to that effect.

17,206. Were you to ascertain from Mr. Cooper whether another parcel was required or not ?—No.

17,207. How would you know whether another parcel was required ?—I went to the drawer specified, and I found it, and took it down.

17,208. How did you know it was required ?—Because the parcel was there.

17,209. Being there you knew it was required ?—I knew it was required.

17,210. When you took the last parcel to Mr. Cooper, was anything said ?—I do not think there was.

17,211. Did you understand from Mr. Cooper, when the last parcel came, that that was enough ?—No. I left Yarmouth the next day.

17,212. I want to know whether Mr. Cooper gave you to understand he would not want any more parcels ?—He did not. I left Yarmouth the next day.

17,213. When did you take the parcel to Mr. Shuckford ?—The Saturday evening.

17,214. Before or after Mr. Cooper's parcel ?—After Mr. Cooper's parcel.

17,215. Had you got Mr. Shuckford's parcel in your pocket when you took the parcel to Mr. Cooper ?—No.

17,216. Then you went back to Mr. Nightingale ?—Then I went back to Mr. Nightingale.

17,217. To your uncle's house ?—Yes.

17,218. What did you say to Mr. Nightingale ?—That I had delivered the parcel.

17,219. Did you tell Mr. Nightingale more would be required ?—I told him I had made an appointment with Mr. Cooper for the Sunday afternoon.

17,220. And what happened then about the parcel for Mr. Shuckford ?—He gave it to me, and asked me if I knew where Mr. Shuckford lived; I said I did not. He directed, and I took it.

17,221. Did you know Mr. Shuckford by sight ?—I knew him by sight.

17,222. Had you ever spoken to him ?—I may have spoken to him when I was at my uncle's on business, and nothing more. I never passed any words with him until I delivered that parcel to him, to the best of my recollection.

17,223. Mr. Shuckford was not a stranger to you ?—He was not a thorough stranger to me.

17,224. You knew him ?—I should not have known him if I had met him in the streets.

17,225. Not by sight ?—No.

17,226. You say you had spoken to him ?—When you come to recollect and put 15 or 16 years on to a man's life, there is a great alteration in a man's features. I should not at that time have sworn it was Mr. Shuckford. If he had been put with 20 or 30 men I should not have been able to pick Mr. Shuckford out.

17,227. Had you kept up your acquaintance with Mr. Nightingale, or was he a stranger to you ?—I have seen him occasionally at my uncle's when I have called in.

17,228. You knew Mr. Nightingale very well ?—Yes, as a friend of my uncle's.

17,229. Do you know most of your uncle's friends ?—No. Mr. Nightingale was a particular friend of my uncle's. I have seen them together several times. I have not seen him there in particular, but I have seen them walking together.

17,230. Is Mr. Shuckford a friend of your uncle's ?—Not that I am aware of.

17,231. What did Mr. Shuckford say when you brought him this parcel ?—To put it down in one of the holes at the back where he was sitting. Little pigeon holes in the back of his office.

17,232. Did he make any remark ?—No.

17,233. Did he ask what it was ?—No.

17,234. Did he seem to you to expect it ?—No. He was sitting quietly at the desk. I went in and asked him if it was Mr. Shuckford. He said "Yes." I said "I have a parcel." He said "Put it down." And I walked out, and he seemed satisfied.

17,235. He did not express the slightest astonishment ?—I think not. I really cannot tax my memory as to astonishment; but he treated it in an off-hand way. All he told me was to put it down. I did not stop to see his astonishment; I delivered it and went out.

17,236. You took it as a matter of course ?—Not as a matter of course. I was ordered to deliver the parcel; I delivered it, and went away. I did not wish to know what the parcel contained.

17,237. You did not tell Mr. Shuckford who it came from ?—I did not.

17,238. And he asked no question ?—He did not ask any questions.

17,239. I suppose you were sufficiently a stranger for the purpose of the election. These gentlemen might say they did not know you, though you were always about the town ?—I do not exactly understand. Who do you mean by "these gentlemen ?"

17,240. I mean Mr. Cooper and Mr. Shuckford ?—Certainly not. They did not know me.

17,241. And had not the slightest notion who you were ?—Certainly not, to the best of my knowledge; and I did not know them.

17,242. Or where the money came from ?—I did not know that it was money; nothing was said to me about money.

17,243. You did not think it was anything else but money, did you ?—That was a conclusion of my own.

17,244. You knew it was money ?—I did not know it was money when the parcel was given to me.

17,245. Directly you had it in your hand you knew it was money ?—I supposed so. What it was I could not tell.

17,246. You knew it was coin of the realm ?—I supposed it was money.

17,247. (Mr. Russell.) Did Mr. Nightingale tell you to be very careful of the parcel ?—No.

17,248. Did he tell you to take care you did not deliver it into any hands but Mr. Cooper's ?—No.

17,249. When you saw Mr. Cooper in his shop, did you recognize him as a man you knew by sight ?—No; I asked if it was Mr. Cooper, when I went into the shop.

17,250. Were you nervous at that time ?—Not particularly so; not that I am aware of. I might have been a little nervous.

17,251. Mr. Cooper says you were nervous ?—I might have been so.

17,252. Do you think you were sufficiently nervous not to recognize a man you knew by sight ?—Certainly not.

17,253. Were you in Yarmouth before the election of 1859 ?—No.

17,254. Had you ever taken a parcel in this sort of way before ?—Never.

17,255. Did you know Mr. Green ?—Do you mean a man called Teapot Green ?

17,256. He is dead now, and I was not sufficiently intimate with him to know his nickname ?—I do not know him.

17,257. He was the gentleman who managed for the Conservatives before Mr. Cooper, in the same manner ?—I was not aware of it.

17,258. You never gave him a parcel ?—Never.

17,259. You are not aware of ever having a transaction of this sort before ?—Never

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

R. Rushmer.

8 Sept. 1866.

ROBERT RUSHMER sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

17,260. What are you?—A carpenter and joiner.

17,261. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

17,263. Who from?—I do not know from what hand I took it.

17,264. Where were you paid?—At the "Army and Navy."

17,265. Are you sure it was not 15*l.*?—Yes, I am sure it was not 15*l.* I see it is 15*l.* on the sheet, but 10*l.* I received.

17,266. Did you get a ticket?—No.

17,267. Who sent you up to the "Army and Navy"?—There was a message came down to mine in the evening, about 8 or 9 o'clock, previous to the election, that I was to go down to the "Army and Navy" tavern.

17,268. Who was the message from?—I do not know ; I cannot say.

17,269. Had you bargained before for 10*l.* for your vote?—No, I made no bargain with anyone or communicated with anyone, neither party.

17,270. Who canvassed you for your vote?—Both parties.

17,271. Did you promise neither side?—No, neither.

17,272. Did nobody tell you you would get 10*l.* if you went up there?—No ; I was not made any promise at all, nor did not expect it.

17,273. Were you offered any money on the other side?—Yes.

17,274. How much?—15*l.* brought into my house.

17,275. Who by?—I do not know ; it was brought in two or three times.

17,276. By a stranger?—Yes.

17,277. Did the stranger say where he could get the 15*l.* from?—No. He said I was to blame that I did not take it.

17,278. Did you count your money when you got it?—Yes ; 10 sovereigns was the sum, neither more nor less.

17,279. Did you ask the gentleman for that?—No, I never asked, or was never asked the question at all. Mr. Cattermole was the man that called me upstairs. I went up on the stairs, and some gentleman was sitting at the table, and he handed 10 sovereigns to me, and said, "Here is a present for you, my old friend," and who the man was I do not know from Adam.

17,280. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Would you know him if you saw him again?—No, I did not see the man's face, only a sort of a side face.

17,281. (Mr. Russell.) Had you got a vote in 1859?—Yes.

17,282. What did you get for it then?—Four sovereigns.

17,283. Who gave you that?—From my son. He persuaded me to take it.

17,284. Where did your son get it from?—I do not know. He brought it to my house, and persuaded me to take it ; I said I would not, but he persuaded me to take it, and I did take it. He told me he got 5*l.* and kept one for himself.

17,285. Your son got 5*l.*?—No, my son was not a voter.

17,286. What is your son's name?—Charles Aldous Rushmer. He is not to be come at now ; he is dead.

17,287. Did you get that 4*l.* to vote for Watkin and Young?—Yes.

17,288. Were you offered any money then by the other side?—Not any.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

17,289. (Mr. Russell.) Do you remember this man?—I do not remember him, but I have him down on my list for 15*l.*

S. Seago.

SAMUEL SEAGO sworn ; examined by Mr. SLADE.

17,290. What are you?—A fish curer.

17,291. Did you receive any money at the last election?—75*l.* ; I think it was 75*l.*

17,292. Who from?—William Parker.

17,293. What did you do with it?—I had four names. There was Samuel Drake, Mr. John Horth, Simon Woods, and John Wisker.

17,294. The only Horth on the register is James Horth?—I think his name is James Horth ; he lives in the Quay Row. Wisker is a publican.

17,295. He lives in Southtown?—Yes, he voted for Southtown.

17,296. The Ferry Farm, Southtown?—That is right.

17,297. What did you give these men?—I got the money for Mr. Horth, but I did not see him after that.

17,298. How much did you get for Mr. Horth?—I got 20*l.* for him, but I was sent to Mr. Sumner, of the Jetty Road, by Mr. Edwards, to give it to him, as I never saw Horth.

17,299. What is Sumner's name?—I do not know what his name is.

17,300. There is a Sumner in St. Peter's Road and a Sumner in the Albion Road?—It is in the St. Peter's Road. That money I gave to him instead of Horth, as I did not see him. I was sent to him by Mr. Edwards.

17,301. Then you gave Mr. Horth's 20*l.* to Sumner?—It was 15*l.* or 20*l.*, I forget which. The next one, Samuel Drake, the carter. I had not the money when I went to him first in the morning, but I found he was inclined to have something for his vote ; I asked him what he would have, and he said 10*l.* if he voted, and I left him a little while, and I went to him again ; I had got the money then, and he said, "Now I will have 15*l.*" I said, "You should have "told me so before, and that would have saved me "some trouble." I had got 15*l.* for him, and then he wanted 20*l.*, so I said, "You are a rum sort of "old customer," and he said, "Look here, Mr. Rey-"nolds has been here;" and after he mentioned Mr. Reynolds to me of course I never showed him the money, or offered it to him, as I thought if anything happened afterwards I might be called on, so I left him, and he got nothing from me. The next was Simon Woods 20*l.*, and he cost me 2*l.* or 3*l.*, as he was a little forward in drinking.

17,302. Did you give him 20*l.*?—Yes.

17,303. And when did he have the 2*l.* or 3*l.*?—That was his expenses in drinking. I had to get him up in a cab, and two or three of them. Then John Wisker, he is 20*l.*

17,304. What did you do with the money you had for Drake?—I did not expend that in any way, only what I have laid out during the election.

17,305. You kept that?—Yes, I kept the remainder ; it might be 12*l.* or 13*l.* I had left. He might have taken it ; I do not know that he would not have taken the 20*l.* However, I found what he was upon ; of course I did not show him the money. I told him I had it.

17,306. What did you get for your vote?—Not anything, not a penny ; I never asked for it.

17,307. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You took the 12*l.* or 13*l.*, you had that?—So I understand ; some of them had 100*l.*, but I did not take it for my vote. I tried to lay it out, but I was not going to give it to a man twice over.

17,308. (Mr. Slade.) You are put down in Mr. Jones's list as having received 20*l.*?—I never received a penny, nor yet anything of the kind did I ever ask for.

17,309. You saw Edward Jex with Parker?—Yes; Jex upon the quay.

17,310. Did you see Parker give him 20*l.*?—Yes; I was along with him when he gave the 20*l.*

17,311. Did you know a man named James Elmer?—Yes.

17,312. He is dead?—He is dead.

17,313. Did you see him in the company of Parker?—Yes.

17,314. Did you see Parker give him any money?—Yes. I think it was 30*l.* or 35*l.*; 30*l.* I think it was.

17,315. Do you know whether it was for himself and another man?—He said it was for another one besides himself.

17,316. Do you know who the other man was?—No, I do not.

17,317. Did he mention his name?—He did mention his name, but I forget now; I do not remember it.

17,318. Have you ever met with the name before?—I do not know that I have. I know Elmer, because he used to do the chief of my writing for me; that is how I came to know him.

17,319. You know he got 30*l.*?—I know he got 30*l.*

17,320. Did you get any more money besides this at the election time?—Not a penny.

17,321. Did you offer anybody any money besides these people?—No. I sounded one, that was Christmas Frosdick, to know, but I found he was hard on the other side, and I never offered it because I had it not.

17,322. When you did not see James Horth you gave Sumner the money?—Yes.

17,323. Was that for himself?—That was for himself.

17,324. For his own vote?—Yes.

17,325. Not for him to give Horth?—I never saw Horth after that; and Edwards knew by some means or other I had some money, and so he told me to go and carry it to Sumner.

17,326. And Sumner kept it?—And Sumner kept it.

17,327. How much did you give him?—It was either 25*l.* or 20*l.*, I do not know which. It could be only 15*l.*, because I had 12*l.* or 13*l.* afterwards.

17,328. It would be only 15*l.*?—I think it was only 15*l.*

17,329. That would make the 20*l.* over, which you kept, which went for your vote?—No, that it did not, because I spent some of it during the election, so it could not be for my vote. I kept it, and I might have had 20*l.*, 30*l.*, or 60*l.* if I liked. In fact, I might have kept what I did get. I tried to lay it out, as I told you before. Old Drake, I might have given him 20*l.*, but after I found the other party had been there, I took myself off out of the yard.

17,330. Did you offer the 20*l.* to Mr. Parker?—No; I had not 20*l.* to offer.

17,331. Yes you had?—There was 20*l.*; but there was 3*l.* or 4*l.* short of it.

17,332. Well there were 17*l.*?—No; I never offered it him.

17,333. Did you ever offer it to anybody?—No.

17,334. You did not offer to return it?—No.

17,335. Do you know Mr. Jones?—No.

17,336. Did you hear of him?—I heard talk of him.

17,337. Did you hear of him at the time of the election?—I knew nothing of him.

17,338. Did you know where Mr. Parker got the money from?—He got it from Mr. Downing, I think.

17,339. Did you ever offer the 17*l.* to Mr. Downing?—No.

17,340. You used to see Downing very frequently?—I have seen Downing very frequently.

17,341. (Mr. Russell.) Do you know who Downing had the money from?—No, I do not.

17,342. If Drake had taken it, it would have been a bribe?—Yes; of course it would.

17,343. But you taking it, it was not?—It was given to me to lay out; and I tried as hard as I could to lay it out without giving it twice over. I have no doubt he would have taken it if I had given it him, but I fancied he had got it when I called.

17,344. (Mr. Slade.) Were you at the "Angel," or at Cattermole's?—No, I was not at Cattermole's. I went to the "Angel" once or twice, but was never at Cattermole's at all.

17,345. Did you see people at the "Angel" who were receiving money, to your knowledge?—I never saw anyone take anything at the "Angel."

17,346. Did you see them after they had taken it?—No, I do not recollect that I saw anyone. I remember one or two being there. I think Holmes was there, but I do not know whether he got money.

17,347. You knew money was being given away there?—I fancy so, because Mr. Parker had it there.

17,348. Were you in Yarmouth at the election in 1859?—Yes.

17,349. Did you do anything of this sort then?—No. It is the first time of my having anything to do with it.

17,350. Did you vote?—Yes.

17,351. Did you receive anything for your vote?—No.

17,352. Did you receive any money at all?—No.

17,353. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Whom did you vote for in 1859?—I think it was Mr. Watkin and Mr. McCullagh.

17,354. (Mr. Russell.) Watkin and Young?—Yes. Watkin and Young I think it was.

17,355. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You lived in King Street in 1859?—No.

17,356. "Samuel Seago, of King Street?"—North Quay, was it not?

17,357. (Mr. Russell.) Then, you voted for Lacon and Stracey?—I am sure I forget. It might be Lacon and Stracey.

17,358. You have changed your politics since?—I am sure I do not know about that. I thought it was Watkin and Young, and I do not know but what it was now.

17,359. What did you get for your vote in 1859?—I do not recollect getting anything for it.

17,360. Did you see Mr. Cooper in 1859?—No; I never had any money from him in my life—not a penny.

17,361. Did you know Green?—I knew Mr. Green very well.

17,362. How much did Mr. Green give you in 1859?—Not a halfpenny. I never had a halfpenny in my life.

17,363. What made you vote for Lacon and Stracey then, and Brogden and Vanderbyl this time?—I do not know. Mr. Fill behaved a little unpleasant to me, and for that reason I did not vote that side.

17,364. Do you call yourself a Liberal, or a Conservative?—I always fancied the Liberal the best.

17,365. And you vote for the Conservatives and the Liberals turn and turn alike?—I often turn about, but I tell you, Mr. Fill once did behave very bad to me. He helped to break me up, and that like, and that is the reason I did not vote that way. He was the principal cause of it, and that is the reason I did not vote that side.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

17,366. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know anything of this witness?—He is one who was dealt with through intermediate parties. I should not know much of him. He is one of Downing's.

17,367. I mean, did you pay this man?—The money would be drawn from me in another manner entirely.

17,368. Not personally?—No; the same as that other man that was paid by Parker.

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

R. B. Ellis.

8 Sept. 1866.

ROBERT BEANE ELLIS sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

17,369. We hear that you offered William Trorey 16*l.*—That is quite correct.

17,370. What did you offer it him for?—For his vote.

17,371. Did he take the money?—No, I did not show him the money either, it was not enough for him.

17,372. Had you 16*l.* to give him?—Not of any other money, but my own money.

17,373. Did you know where you could get that money repaid you?—Yes. I could have got the money from Mr. Cooper if I had given it him. I had no money of Mr. Cooper's when I offered it him.

17,374. Had you any authority from Mr. Cooper to offer him this money?—Yes, in this way. This man Trorey I have befriended, and been a great friend to his son-in-law. I saw him go to a tobacconist's shop opposite mine, previous to the election. I called him in, and asked him if he would oblige me by voting for the Conservatives. He said no, his circumstances were poor, and a little money would do him some good. It came out that way. I am one of the overseers of the parish, and being connected with Mr. Cooper, so far as he is the printer for the overseers, and being about the time of the registration preparing in the month of July. I told him, when I was speaking of the election matters, I said, "I "think I can get a vote, only he wants some money." He said, "If you can manage him for 15*l.*, you can "go so far as that." I offered Trorey 15*l.* at first, and he said it was not enough. I said, "I shall give "you 16*l.*," for which I should have given a sovereign out of my own pocket; and so I left him.

17,375. How long before the election had you this conversation with Mr. Cooper?—On the Sunday.

17,376. Was this the only vote you told Mr. Cooper you could get?—The only person I ever asked. I should not have asked him, but I thought in gratitude he had a right to oblige me, as I had befriended his son-in-law.

17,377. Were you in Yarmouth in the year 1859?—Yes, all my life.

17,378. Did you do anything at the election of 1859?—Nothing.

17,379. Did you canvass at all?—No.

17,380. Take no part?—No part whatever.

17,381. Did I understand you are a tobacconist?—No, I am a brushmaker. I say Trorey kept a small shop, and I saw him go to a tobacconist's opposite my house.

Adjourned till Monday at 11 o'clock.

TWENTY-SECOND DAY.

TWENTY-SECOND DAY.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 10th September 1866.

Mrs. E. Humphrey.

10 Sept. 1866.

Mrs. ELIZABETH HUMPHREY sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

17,382. Are you wife of William Humphrey?—Yes.

17,383. Where is your husband?—I do not know where he is, but at sea, on his passage up from the North.

17,384. Did you receive any money for his vote at the last election?—I did.

17,386. Who from?—Mr. Parker.

17,387. Was that divided into two, 20*l.* for his vote and 5*l.* for his expenses?—Just so.

17,388. For whom did your husband vote?—Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl.

17,389. Did you tell your husband you had received 25*l.* for his vote?—No, only 5*l.* for his expenses.

17,390. And said nothing about the 20*l.*?—No.

17,391. Does he know now that you had 20*l.* for his vote?—Yes, he was told of it in the market a fortnight since.

17,392. Have you told him yourself?—No.

17,393. Did he tell you he heard of it?—Yes, he did. Of course I was obliged to acknowledge it then.

17,394. Did you ask him to vote for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl?—Yes.

17,395. And did he vote for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl because he had 5*l.* for his expenses?—Yes.

17,396. Had your husband a vote in the election before the last?—No, he had not.

M. Gurney.

MATTHEW GURNEY sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

17,397. What are you?—A fish curer.

17,398. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—20*l.*

17,399. Who from?—A man called Jones, I think.

17,400. At Cattermole's?—No, at Wright's on the Plain.

17,401. Had you a ticket?—No, I never heard of one until this inquiry was on.

17,402. Who sent you to Mr. Jones?—Mr. Neave called at my house, and told my wife to tell me to go there.

17,403. Which Mr. Neave was that?—I asked my wife, and she told me Mr. James Neave had called.

17,404. For whom did you vote?—Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl.

17,405. Did you receive any money on the other side?—No.

17,406. Had you any offer on the other side?—Yes.

17,407. Who was it by?—Mr. William Blyth.

17,408. What did he offer you?—He offered me 7*l.*, then he offered me 10*l.*, then he offered me 12*l.*, to vote for Mr. Goodson, for one vote he said.

17,409. Did he know you were going to vote the other side?—No, not that I know of.

17,410. What did you mean by saying "for one vote?"—It was on Monday night after I had been to Mr. Wright's; still I did not tell him I had been there, and he said Sir Edmund Lacon was safe, and Mr. Goodson they were afraid of, and he said he would give me 12*l.* if I would vote for Mr. Goodson.

17,411. Why did you not take the money to vote for Mr. Goodson?—Because I told him a grievance I had before when I had to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon, and I should not vote for him this time.

17,412. What was the grievance?—I used to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and all the parties free of the other party, and Sir Edmund Lacon gave a dinner at the theatre to invite his friends to, it was said in the bill, but I think they were his enemies instead of his friends, for I was not allowed to go in or look in, although Mr. Buston asked one to look in. He asked me to go the night before the dinner; he said, "Will you come and look at it, it is worth looking "at." And when I went in the evening, I took two men with me who voted for the council and the county, and when we got there Mr. Buston said, "You are "just in time, come in and look in," and the door-keeper said, "They must not come here." He said, "You must go round by the side door." When I went to the side door, the man said, "You must not come "in here."

17,413. Is that your grievance?—I said, "Mr. "Buston sent me here;" he said, "You are not "allowed in;" and when I came back to the front door I told Mr. Buston of it, and he burst out laughing, and I thought it was very unfair of Mr. Buston, as I voted for the parties free all the time, that he should make such a laugh of me, so I intended not to vote for the party for the borough. The next day I went round, the day of the dinner, with a man of the name of Richards, who keeps the "King's Arms;" he is dead now, and they would not allow me in then, and a few days after the dinner I found people were there who voted one and one.

17,414. Still you did not vote for the other side without being paid for it?—I did for the municipal elections, not for the borough, because there was not one until then.

17,415. You voted for Sir Edmund Lacon in the year 1859?—Yes, and 1857 too.

17,416. Did you receive any money for your vote in 1859?—No, I always promised Sir Edmund Lacon when I saw him, and this time I did not see him at all; this last election he never asked me.

17,466. Where?—At Mr. Cattermole's.

17,467. Who sent you to Cattermole's?—Mr. Houghton, the baker, told me money was to be paid there, and Mr. Morl, the shoemaker, in Gaol Street. It was generally talked about from one to the other, if we went to Cattermole's we could get the money.

17,477. The election before the last did you vote?—I voted every election. My first maiden vote was McCullagh and Watkin. That is all about it.

17,487. He is not in your list; he is No. 254?—No; I have 255, but not 254; I have got 253 and 255. It is possible I may have put it down opposite the wrong name in this case. I do not know. If it is so it will make some one come up and say they have not been paid.

17,523. You gave it him?—I must have given it him.

17,524. He says he was not paid twice over, so we must take his word for it; but there seems a confusion about it?—There is sure to be a confusion where there are two payers. But I must have paid him, I think. In fact, I should not have had him on my register if I had not.

GEORGE FRANCIS sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

G. Francis.

17,674. What are you?—I am a rope maker by trade, but I do a little business in the fishing way, but it is very little in comparison.

17,675. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—I got 15*l.*

17,676. Where?—Mr. Edwards and Mr. James Neave made an agreement with me, and I went to Mr. Wright, the shoemaker in Church Plain, and took it.

17,677. Were you offered anything on the other side?—No.

17,678. In 1859 had you a vote?—Yes.

17,679. And did you get anything for it then?—No.

17,680. I see you voted for Lacon and Stracey then?—Yes.

17,681. How came you to vote for him; are you a Conservative? Do you belong to the Red party?—I do. I voted for Sir Edmund Lacon then in 1859.

17,682. Was it the 15*l.* that converted you to the other side?—They were neighbourly people that I knew very well, and I suppose that is how it was done, nothing more than that.

M. Brereton.

MATTHEW BRERETON sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

17,683. What are you?—A master mariner.

17,684. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—Nothing.

17,685. Did you get anything for your services?—Nothing.

17,686. Are you sure you did not get 5*l.*?—I am certain I never got five farthings.

17,687. Do you know Mr. Fill?—I do.

17,688. Did he give you any money at the election time?—Certainly not.

17,689. Did Mr. Fill offer you anything?—Certainly not.

17,690. Did he buy anything for you?—No. Not that I know of.

17,691. Mr. Fill has said that he drew 5*l.*-for you?—I never received a farthing in my life from electioneering. Not even a glass of grog, or the price of one.

17,692. Had you a conversation at that time with Mr. Fill about some flags?—Yes.

17,693. Did you ask him anything?—I asked him during the election whether he could send me up a flag or two to fly at the election time, and three little flags were sent down to my house. That is all I know about it.

17,694. Who by?—I suppose by Mr. Fill's servant in his shop. I was not at home when they came.

17,695. What did you do with the flags?—Hoisted them on my pole in the garden, the three little flags, the same as they hoist on the beach.

17,696. Were the flags worth anything?—Yes. They were worth something.

17,697. Have you kept the flags?—Yes. I would have paid for them since, but Mr. Fill said it was of no consequence. That is since the election; I said I had better pay for them.

17,698. You said you had better pay for them?—Yes.

17,699. And he said it was of no consequence?—Yes. Of no consequence.

17,700. Mr. Fill bought the flags?—They were second-hand ones and new. I buy a great many of him at different times.

17,701. The only thing is, at this time he did not make you pay for them?—No. I got them for the garden. He asked me whether he could send me a flag or two to fly at the election.

17,702. And you offered to pay for them, and he said it was of no consequence?—That was since the election, when the noise came about them, when he said he had charged for them. I said I would rather pay for them. I had nothing to do with bribery all my life.

17,703. It had nothing to do with your vote?—Nothing at all.

17,704. He put you forward as the only man having anything to do with bribery, and forgot the important case of Mrs. Sewell?—I had nothing to do with bribery, I would not take it. I have voted every election, and they never asked me for anything.

S. Aldridge.

SAMUEL ALDRIDGE sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

17,705. What are you?—A fish merchant.

17,706. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—20*l.*

17,707. Where did you get it?—At Mr. Wright's shop.

17,708. Had you a ticket?—No.

17,709. Who sent you there?—Mr. Thomas Edwards sent me there.

17,710. Were you offered anything on the other side?—Nothing at all.

17,711. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

17,712. Did you get anything then?—Yes.

17,713. How much?—10*l.*

17,714. Who from?—Thomas Edwards.

17,715. The same man?—Yes.

17,716. To vote for the Liberals?—To vote for the Liberals.

S. Howard.

SAMUEL HOWARD sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

17,717. What are you?—A baker.

17,718. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—15*l.*

17,719. Who from?—Mr. Jones paid me.

17,720. Where?—At Mr. Wright's shop in Church Plain.

17,721. Who sent you there?—Mr. Edwards, the tailor.

17,722. Had you a ticket?—No.

17,723. Did you vote in 1859?—No.

17,724. Had you a vote?—No.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

17,725. He is not on your list I see?—He is one scratched out of my list I think. A good deal of this was done to set another person's account right. I cannot conceive any other reason. You see I pay the men. I have it on my register as having paid him, and then it is struck off here.

17,726. Do those additions at the bottom of your paper include the sums we have gone through?—No. Not in the writing. In the blacklead I cannot make some of them out, but this 510 omits this 20*l.* It was added up in blacklead first.

17,727. It was added up afterwards in ink?—Yes.

17,728. And omitted in the ink?—Yes.

TWENTY-SECOND DAY.

C. Frosdick.

10 Sept. 1866.

CHRISTMAS FROSDICK sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

17,729. What are you?—A cooper.

17,730. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—10*l.*

17,731. Who from?—Mr. Hudson.

17,732. That was to vote for the Conservatives, was it not; for the Red?—Yes.

17,733. Did you get anything else?—No, not a farthing.

17,734. From nobody else?—From nobody else.

17,735. Were you asked by the other side; were you offered money on the other side?—No. No money on the other side.

17,736. Did you get 15*l.* from that gentlemen, Mr. Satterthwaite?—No. I never saw the gentleman.

17,737. Were you at the "Army and Navy"?—No.

17,738. Nor at Wright's?—No.

17,739. Nor at Thompson's?—No.

17,740. Were you canvassed by the Liberals?—No.

17,741. And asked for your vote?—No.

17,742. Not by the liberals?—No.

17,743. Did they not ask you for your vote?—No. When I met them one day, they said "It is no use asking him."

17,744. You said that?—No, they said that.

17,745. "It was no use asking you?"—The gentleman said so.

17,746. Why was it no use asking you?—Because I would not vote for them.

17,747. Are you a staunch Conservative?—Yes.

17,748. Always have been?—Always have been. Always voted a Tory.

17,749. You are quite certain you did not receive any money from the Liberals?—Not a farthing.

17,750. You would not take it if it was offered you, I daresay?—No. That I would not. Not from a Blue, that I would not.

17,751. Did you vote Red in 1859?—Yes.

17,752. Did you get anything then?—No. Not a penny piece.

17,753. When did Mr. Hudson give you this 10*l.*?—I shall reckon about a week before the election.

17,754. A week before the election?—Yes; or it might be two or three days, I cannot say to a day or two.

17,755. Do you think it was as early as the Saturday before the election?—I do not know what day it was. I cannot tell you.

17,756. Did he promise you any more at the time?—No, not a halfpenny.

17,757. Is that Mr. Thomas Hudson?—Yes.

17,758. The smack owner?—Yes.

17,759. Do you know Mr. Seago?—Yes. I know Mr. Seago well.

17,760. A relation of yours, is he not?—No, no relation at all.

17,761. Did he ever talk to you on the subject of politics?—What, about the election?

17,762. Yes. —Yes; he asked me whether I would vote his way, and I told him no, I would not.

17,763. Did he press you very much?—No, he did not press me, he only asked me. I told him, "You and I are pretty good friends together, but I "am going to vote against you; I shall not vote on "the Blue side at all."

17,764. Did he not tell you they would pay better on that side?—No; he never told me any such thing.

17,765. And never offered you money?—No, not a farthing.

17,766. Or nobody else?—Nobody else.

17,767. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know Downing?—I know him well.

17,768. Did he talk to you about your vote?—No; he never talked to me about anything, because Downing and I are not good friends, and Downing never talked to me about anything.

17,769. Mr. Thomas Hudson forgot that he had given you 10*l.*?—That I do not know anything about, whether he forgot it; he did give it me whether or no.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

17,770. Have you got this man, No. 489, on your list?—Yes, 15*l.*

17,771. Do you recollect him?—No, I cannot recollect him, but perhaps we shall be able to know who called upon him to canvass him.

W. Fleming.

WILLIAM FLEMING sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

17,772. What are you?—A Trinity pilot.

17,773. Did you receive anything from Mr. Rivett?—Yes.

17,774. How much?—15*l.*

17,775. When did he give it you?—The night before the election.

17,776. Did you know Mr. Rivett well?—Yes, remarkably well.

17,777. Do you know any other men that he gave money to?—Not positively.

17,778. Are there any men that you had reason to believe had money from him?—I think my partners had, the same as myself.

17,779. Give me the names of your partners?—Thomas Leggett and Joseph Stanford.

17,780. You do not know of anyone else?—Not anyone.

17,781. Were you offered any money on the other side?—No.

17,782. You voted for Lacon and Goodson?—Yes.

17,883. I see that in 1859 you voted for Watkin and Young; you voted on the other side?—I think not; I voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Charles Napier in that year.

17,784. In 1859?—Yes, Watkin and Young.

17,785. How came you to vote for Watkin and Young in 1859 and Lacon and Goodson in 1865?—Through the interest of Thomas William Clark; he was a landlord of mine, and he solicited my favour, and I voted for his interest.

17,786. Was that in 1859?—That was for Watkin and Young.

17,787. Did you have any money in 1859?—Not a farthing.

17,788. Merely the influence of Mr. Clark?—Not a farthing.

17,789. If you were left alone which side should you vote, Liberal or Conservative?—I should vote Conservative at the present time.

B. Crisp.

BARKER CRISP sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

17,790. What are you?—I keep a public-house on the Caister road.

17,791. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—I did not get anything, I only gave my vote, but my son took 20*l.*

17,792. Did he give the money to you?—No, it was in the house I suppose, somewhere. I never saw anything of it; I came up and gave my vote, and that was all I had to do with it.

17,793. When did your son get the 20*l.*?—He got 20*l.*

17,794. But when did he get the 20*l.*?—I think the day before the election.

17,795. Did he tell you on that day he had got it?—He told me after he had got it.

17,796. That he had got it?—That he had got 20*l.*

17,797. Did he tell you who he got it from?—No;

he never told me who, nor I never spoke to anybody to know who it was. I did not know who the man was.

17,798. Did he tell you where he got it?—No.

17,799. Who did you vote for?—Brogden and Vanderbyl; I had nothing to do with it but just vote.

17,800. Is your son a voter?—No.

17,801. He has no vote?—No, he is my son, and he lives at home along with me.

17,802. (Mr. Russell.) When did your son tell you?—I think about, perhaps it might be that day; I do not know at all exactly.

17,803. Had you a vote in 1859?—No, I was not in Yarmouth, I was laid up.

17,804. Were you asked by the other side for your vote?—Yes.

17,805. Were you offered any money?—Sir Edmund came up to me to my house, and asked me if I would favour him with my vote. I told him I was quite independent of Yarmouth, and I should give my vote where I thought proper, so I left it to my son to say who, and he thought I had better vote the other way.

17806. You did not tell your son to take that money back again, did you?—No.

17,807. You let him keep it?—Of course he took it.

17,808. And he kept it?—No, it was for the house.

17,109. It was spent in the house?—Yes.

JOHN WILLIAM DAVEY sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

J. W. Davey.

17,810. What are you?—A grocer.

17,811. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—Nothing at all.

17,812. (Mr. Russell.) You voted for Lacon and Brogden?—Yes.

17,813. How came you to split your vote?—Sir Edmund Lacon, in a general way; I believe he was considered a bit of an old slow coach, according to the present time, and I thought if I could assist by way of introducing Mr. Brogden, that would stir him up.

17,814. What do you consider your politics?—I suppose gentlemen might call me a Liberal Conservative, as I vote one and one. Sir Edmund Lacon came and canvassed, and pressed very hard, but I told him I objected very much to the system, as he canvassed. I had no objection to hear him, but I thought I was competent to walk down to the hustings, and vote without canvassing. I told him so, and I told Mr. Brogden the same.

17,815. You got nothing from either side?—No.

17,816. Were you offered anything?—No.

17,817. By neither side?—No; both parties had some little conversation with me, but there was no promise, not in the shape of money.

17,818. (Mr. Slade.) You are put down as having promised the Liberals in their canvass-book?—I never promised the Liberals. Sir Edmund Lacon came first, and Mr. Goodson, and I believe Mr. Reynolds was there, and some other gentlemen. Then, after that I think Sir Edmund Lacon came down, but I never promised him once, no more did I Mr. Brogden. I wished to have it left open.

17,819. In Mr. Livingston's book he has the word "if," which means, "if you vote you will vote the other side?"—That was a mistake on Mr. Livingston's part.

17,820. In Mr. Edward's book you are put down as having promised Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman?—They were a little too fast; I never promised either party, and I never would if I voted 20 years. I would never promise a man that came canvassing, because I think there is intimidation in the way it is done.

GEORGE DUNNELL sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

G. Dunnell.

17,821. What are you?—A shoemaker.

17,822. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—15*l.* I deny the statement made by Mr. Jones; it is false. He stated that I got 20*l.*

17,823. Where did you get it at?—At the "Angel."

17,824. Who gave it you?—Mr. Jones, I suppose it was; I do not know him.

17,825. Who sent you there?—Mr. Moore.

17,826. Had you a ticket?—No.

17,827. Were you offered anything on the other side?—No.

17,828. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

17,829. What did you get then?—Nothing.

17,830. You did not vote, then, did you?—Yes; I always voted Liberal. I voted at the election before.

17,831. I am talking about 1859. Are you sure you voted?—Yes, I have always voted.

17,832. You had no vote in 1859. You were not upon the register?—Yes, I voted.

17,833. (Mr. Russell.) Who did you vote for—For the Liberals.

17,834. Who?—I forget the members names, but I voted, I will swear.

17,835. Did you vote for Watkin and Young?—Yes, I think it was; I voted at any rate for the Liberals.

17,836. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Your vote was not recorded, then. You may have voted in 1857, but you had no vote in 1859?—Yes, I had.

17,837. (Mr. Slade.) Had the gentleman who gave you the 15*l.* got spectacles on?—I do not know; it was such a man as that (pointing to Mr. Satterthwaite).

17,838. Cannot you recollect who gave it you?—No.

17,839. What sort of man was he?—I cannot swear to the man.

17,840. What time was it?—It was about 9 o'clock in the evening, I think it was.

17,841. You were at the "Angel?"—Yes.

17,842. What day did you get it?—The night before the election.

17,843. (Mr. Russell.) Did you give any money to anyone else?—No.

17,844. Were you to keep all this money for yourself, this 15*l.*?—Was I to keep it?

17,845. Yes, I suppose I was if I could.

17,846. Do you know a man named James Thurlow?—No.

17,847. Was not half the 15*l.* that you received meant for Thurlow?—No.

17,848. You are sure of that?—I do not know such a man.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

17,849. (Mr. Slade.) This man is upon Edwards' list as well as yours. It is No. 409, 20*l.*?—I have got him 409, 20*l.*

17,850. He received 15*l.*, and he is upon Edward's list as having received 15*l.*?—Yes.

17,851. Do you recollect whether you gave it to him?—No, I do not know; I could not recollect. It is possible he may have been drawn before. Perhaps he may live somewhere near the "Army and Navy" Tavern. I should be at Cattermole's at that time.

TWENTY-SECOND DAY.

G. Godbolt.

10 Sept. 1866.

GEORGE GODBOLT sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

17,852. What are you?—In the fishing business.

17,853. What did you give for your vote at the last election?—Not anything.

17,854. Were you canvassed?—Yes.

17,855. And were you offered anything?—No.

17,856. They say you got 20*l.*?—I should like to see the person who would come and say so. That is the point I want to know.

17,857. Then it is not true?—No, it is not. I should like to know the party that said I took 20*l.*

17,858. (Mr. Slade.) Somebody gave your name to that gentleman (pointing to Mr. Satterthwaite)?—I should like to know who did it.

17,859. You wanted money for your vote?—No, I never asked for any.

17,860. Were you canvassed on both sides?—Yes. Mr. Brogden came into my place. I told him it was no use his coming, that I should vote for Lacon and Goodson.

17,861. And it was no use his coming?—Yes.

17,862. Why?—I said I daresay I should vote for Sir Edmund Lacon.

17,863. You daresay you would?—Yes.

17,864. About the other side. Did Mr. Brogden canvass you?—Some of his party did, and I told them I should vote for Lacon and Goodson.

17,865. Did you vote for Lacon and Goodson?—Yes.

17,866. Do you know Downing?—Yes, I know him very well.

17,867. Did he ever ask you for your vote?—No. He was the first man that did come to me. There were two or three more.

17,868. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Somebody had the impertinence to draw money for you and to give it to somebody else?—Some one has done it, no doubt. A man read it to me in the paper. I have no learning.

17,869. Do you know Mr. Moore?—I know Mr. Moore.

17,870. And Mr. Fill?—Yes, I know him.

17,871. Do you know Thomas Edwards?—No, I do not.

17,872. You do not know him. No; I cannot say that I do.

17,873. I suppose Downing knew very well you were upon the other side?—I daresay he did. I never saw him after the first time he came into my yard, him and two or three more.

17,874. Do you know George Burton?—Yes, I know him. He lived a little way from me.

17,875. Do you know whether he got anything?—No; I do not know whether he got anything. I cannot say.

17,876. Is he your brother-in-law?—He is a brother-in-law of mine.

17,877. Then I suppose that is a mistake?—Well, sir, it must be; I do not know anything about that.

17,878. (Mr. Slade.) Will you send your brother-in-law up here?—Yes, I can send him up here.

17,879. Then send him?—Very well.

17,880. (Mr. Russell.) I see you did not vote in 1859?—No.

17,881. How was that?—I daresay I had moved out of one house into another. I did not care but very little for it. I have been in Yarmouth 13 or 14 years. I have always paid the 10*l.* a year rent or more, but I found they had taken me off for some time.

17,882. Were you offered any money in 1859?—No.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

17,883. (Mr. Slade.) Can you explain this?—Perhaps I can save the Court a good deal of time with reference to this. I got a paper this morning saying that "George Godbolt" should have been "George Burton, Lancaster Road." You see it crossed out in my list.

17,884. (Mr. Russell.) Who gave you that?—I do not know. There is no name attached. There is also a Samuel Boulton sent to me as well. It strikes me very forcibly both of these sums have been drawn, and as this man has not got the 15*l.* it is a mistake. This name not being upon my list it has been returned as a transfer. There is a party here who has had an opportunity of seeing my list since the Court opened, and he has seen those names crossed off, and they may transfer them now that they are crossed off.

17,885. Are you going to give us another substituted name?—Yes; Samuel Boulton, senior, Blackfriars Road.

17,886. Did he get a ticket?—They sent this as a transfer to me.

17,887. Do you mean to say that he got money?—It is understood this represents it. This is a transfer from Samuel Boulton, junior, to Samuel Boulton, senior. The junior has been up to deny having received the money.

17,888. The junior Boulton has been examined?—Yes.

J. Heath.

JOSEPH HEATH sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

17,889. What are you?—A grocer.

17,890. Did you get anything for your vote at the last election?—No, they sent me 10*l.*

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

17,891. (Mr. Slade.) Have you any explanation of this? You gave him 10*l.* It is 626?—Yes, 10*l.*

17,892. Do you know him?—No, I do not know him.

J. Heath.

JOSEPH HEATH recalled; examination resumed by Mr. FITZGERALD.

17,893. Did you send back the money?—I took the money back to Mr. Thompson. He would not take it, and the consequence was he said, "Keep it." He says, "You will get me into trouble." I am interested on the Liberal side and I kept the money, but I am willing to give it up if it is required.

17,894. (Mr. Slade.) Do I understand you to say that you got no money?—Yes, I said so because I promised Mr. Brogden.

17,895. Now you wish to withdraw that, you had money?—I must withdraw it, and I will tell you the circumstances.

17,896. Answer my question. Did you get 10*l.* for your vote?—No, I do not consider I got anything for it. The 10*l.* came into my possession in this way; it was brought in when I was out in the afternoon. I knew nothing about it. I went to Mr. Thompson's in the evening, and I said, "What do you mean by this? I will not take this bribe. My principles are Liberal." He said, "I dare not take it back."

17,897. Did you offer it to Mr. Thompson himself?—I did.

17,898. You do not know who brought the money to your shop?—No; I was out.

17,899. What made you take it to Mr. Thompson's?—Because the party who brought it said it came from Mr. Jones, at Mr. Thompson's.

17,900. Mr. Thompson refused to take it back?—Yes, he refused to take it. He said he dared not take it.

17,901. Did you offer it to Jones?—No; I did not know there was such a man.

17,902. Did you ask Mr. Thompson where Jones was?—No. He said, "Keep it; you will get me into trouble;" and I should have got him into trouble if I had said anything about it. I was in the very act of going and delivering it up. I did not want the money. I am poor enough God knows, but not poor enough to take a bribe. I am willing to give the money up at your orders.

17,903. Who asked you for your vote on the Liberal side?—I was canvassed in the market. I was in the market on business, by the "Angel." I think Mr. Livingston was at the back of me, and Mr. Brogden came out and said, would I support him. I said, "I am right." Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson called on me. I was not at home, and I did not see them, nor any other party, not one.

17,904. What day was the 10*l.* left at your shop?—The day before the election I think. It was as nigh as possible half-past 3. I was out. I did not take it. I think that was about the time.

17,905. When did you go up to Mr. Thompson's?—In the evening about 7 o'clock.

17,906. Did you take any other steps to return this 10*l.*?—I did not. I ought perhaps in a legal point of view to have done so; but I did not want to get him into trouble. He no doubt thought it was a kind act to me. He might think so, however.

17,907. Did you ever repeat the offer to Thompson about returning it?—No; I do not recollect that I did. I do not know.

17,908. When you went to Thompson to return it, did he say you had better keep it?—I do not know. I cannot say whether he did or not.

17,909. Did Thompson give you to understand, that other people were having money at his house?—He said the Liberals were throwing their money away, or something of that kind, and he says "I thought you might as well have a little of it as anybody else." I said, "I will take no money as a bribe; I will not have it." I defy anyone to say I ever asked anyone for money. I never thought of such a thing. He did a kind act; I will acknowledge that.

17,910. Did you never hear of Mr. Jones from that time to this?—I never knew Mr. Jones. I do not know Mr. Jones any more than Adam.

17,911. Did you ever hear that Mr. Jones had been to Thompson's?—No, not till after it came out. I do not know no more how the money came than that chair does.

17,912. (Mr. Russell.) You see a man who takes 10*l.* the night before the election, and walks about with it 14 months in his pocket, puts himself in a delicate position?—I did not walk about with it in my pocket at all. What was I to do?

17,913. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) What did you do with the money?—It was in the business. I am prepared to pay the money. I did not consider it my money, and any order you may make I am prepared to give it up. I did not ask for it.

17,914. We know that. But did you ever tell anybody after the election you had been offered this 10*l.*, or that this 10*l.* had been left with you?—Yes.

17,915. Who?—Well, I think John Herring.

17,916. Who is John Herring?—Down King Street.

17,917. How soon after the election did you tell him 10*l.* had been left with you?—In fact, I told him before. If the truth must be told, I took him up as a witness that I wanted to return it.

17,918. To Thompson's?—Yes. I took him as a witness that I wanted to return it; but unfortunately I did not know that I should be called to-day, and he has gone to London this morning.

17,919. (Mr. Russell.) You say Mr. Thompson refused to take it?—Thompson said, he dared not take it; he would not have anything to do with it.

17,920. If you had taken the same course then, it would have been all right?—I wish I had. I shall remember the next time.

17,921. Did you tell anybody else besides John Herring at this time?—No.

17,922. Have you ever told anybody else from that time till this Commission?—No.

17,923. You have never told anybody?—Not anyone.

17,924. In fact, you never mentioned it till No. 626 was read out by Mr. Jones?—I did not know how the money was obtained. The money was left just in the same way as they leave valentines. It was thrown in, and said, "It is from Mr. Jones at Thompson's." That is all I know about it.

17,925. Did you believe Mr. Thompson gave you the money out of his own pocket?—No; I could not.

17,926. Did you ask him where he had it from?—I did not.

17,927. Why did you not, if you wanted to return it?—I do not know why I did not, I am sure. He said, "They are giving the money away, and I think you may as well have some of it as anybody else."

17,928. I ask you, why did you not ask him who it came from, if you wanted to return it? I admit that it is a difficult question to answer?—I did not want the money. Had it come from the other side I should have thought it was a tempter, but they are too honourable for that.

17,929. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Is Mr. Herring your brother-in-law?—He is.

17,930. Was he at the shop at the time you received it?—No.

17,931. How soon after you got it, did you go and tell Mr. Herring?—7 o'clock in the evening. I called upon my way home.

17,932. (Mr. Russell.) Mr. Herring is Thompson's brother-in-law, is he not?—Yes.

17,933. Then Mr. Herring would probably know all about it before you told him?—I cannot say.

17,934. I want to know what you did from that moment till the opening of this Commission?—You never told anybody?—No, I did not.

17,935. What did you do with the 10*l.* after Mr Thompson refused to take it back?—After it came I used it as a matter of business.

17,936. You made use of it for sugar?—Yes, or tea, or anything else. Where was I to take the money to? Nobody knew Mr. Jones, and I did not know him, I am sure.

17,937. Whom did you vote for?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

17,938. You had no vote in 1859?—No; I was not in Yarmouth, and I should not care if I had not been at this time.

SAMUEL PAGETT BRACEY sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

S. P. Bracey.

17,939. What are you?—I was a sailor, but I have left the sea for this five or six years.

17,940. Have you any profession now?—No, I occasionally go on board ships and take account of their cargoes.

17,941. Did you vote at the last election?—Yes.

17,942. Who for?—For Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl.

17,943. Did you receive anything for your vote?—Yes.

17,944. How much?—15*l.*

17,945. Who from?—Well, I cannot answer that. I went to the "Angel."

17,946. Did you have a ticket?—Yes.

17,947. Who gave it you?—That I do not know, it was a stranger to me who gave it me on the stairs. I went I recollect down stairs to a lower room.

17,948. At the "Angel"?—At the "Angel."

17,949. He gave you a ticket as soon as you arrived

TWENTY-SECOND DAY.

S. P. Bracey.

10 Sept. 1866.

there?—Yes, nearly so. Five minutes might elapse, but not more.

17,950. Who took you to the "Angel" that night?—There was a message left for me to go.

17,951. Do you know who left the message?—No, I do not know who left it.

17,952. Did you ever hear?—No, I did not hear, but I walked up along with a Mr. Fox, who lives in Marlborough Terrace.

17,953. You walked up with him?—Yes.

17,954. From your house?—From my house.

17,955. Is that Fox, of Bath Hill Terrace or Caister Road?—No, Marlborough Terrace.

17,956. Is he a voter?—I really do not know. I do not know whether he is a voter or not; he went up with me.

17,957. Did he receive any money?—That I cannot say, I am sure I do not know.

17,958. Is that the man they call Captain Fox?—No, certainly not.

17,959. Did Mr. Fox come and fetch you?—No, he did not, he was going past at the time when I came out of my back door, and we walked up together.

17,960. Did he say, "Come along"?—That I really cannot say about that, we were both going up to the "Angel." He said, "Are you going up to the 'Angel'?" I said, "Yes," and I went up with him.

17,961. It would be Thomas Fox I suppose?—I do not know his christian name. I know he lives close by.

17,962. Did you and Fox pick anybody else up on the road?—No, not a soul.

17,963. Did you see what letter was on the ticket?—No, I do not recollect; I had it but a short time. I went round to this lower room, and was paid the money for it.

17,964. Did you go to Cattermole's?—No.

17,965. Did you receive any other money besides the 15*l.*?—No.

17,966. Did you vote at the election before last?—Yes.

17,967. Who for?—For Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey. I was sent for from Seaham. I was down at Seaham.

17,968. Did you get your expenses paid?—Yes, they were paid. My own nephew, the late Mr. Hilton, sent for me by letter and I came up.

17,969. What did you get for your expenses in 1859?—That I really cannot tell you now, the expenses as near as could be; what I got was near upon what it cost for coming as possibly could be. I think so. I think none of us received more than what it would cost.

17,970. It was paid to you in money?—Yes.

17,971. Is it J. Hilton?—John Hilton, the partner of Mr. Bessey, the ship owner.

17,972. Then you changed your politics this time?—Yes.

17,973. Why?—I should always have voted that way myself. I was rather fearful of voting the other way that time.

17,974. You are a Liberal are you not?—Yes, I certainly am.

17,975. Did the mere fact of being sent for and your expenses paid, cause you to vote then for the Conservatives?—No. I do not know it did, but I might have lost employment if I had not done so.

17,976. What day was it you went to the "Angel"?—I think it was the night before the election, but I will not be sure about that.

17,977. The Tuesday night?—I think so.

17,978. About what time in the evening?—I should think about 8 or half-past 8. I had been to a shop that night. I was not at home at my house till half-past 7.

17,979. Are you sure you got no other money in 1859?—Perfectly sure.

17,980. Did you say John Hilton was dead?—He was the nephew of Mr. Bessey, the ship owner, whether he was a partner or not I do not know, he always acted as the owner.

17,981. Is he dead?—Yes.

17,982. Probably Fox will be able to tell us whose ticket you got?—Really he may; I do not know.

17,983. Did Mr. Fox give you the ticket himself?—Not that I know of; really I do not know now. I went up in a hurry; my impression is it was a strange gentleman that gave it to me: that is my impression; but he might, I really cannot tell you. I really do not know. I only know I received a ticket and took it into the room, and I think that is the gentleman who paid me the money (pointing to Mr. Satterthwaite), and if he recollects I was there in the room I should think 10 minutes, it was a long time I know from some cause or other, either there was a mistake about it, or something of that kind, that was my impression; I stood at the door.

17,984. You had somebody else's ticket?—That I was not aware of. There was certainly something at the time.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

17,985. I thought you were at some other place than the "Angel" on that night?—I was to and fro. I had a cab waiting for me always outside. I did not stop at one place. I was going to say Samuel Pagett Bracey is a transfer. I gave it on Saturday as a transfer.

17,986. You did?—I have it sent to me as a transfer.

17,987. I understand that is why he is summoned?—Yes.

W. Howes.

WILLIAM HOWES sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

17,988. What are you?—A market gardener.

17,989. Did you get anything for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

17,992. Do you live in King Street?—No.

17,993. You live in Apollo Walk?—My garden is in Apollo Walk.

17,994. Where did you receive this 20*l.*?—At Thompson's across the market.

17,995. Did the gentleman who gave it you wear spectacles?—I am not certain.

17,996. It was a stranger?—It was a stranger to me. I should not know the man if I was to see him.

17,997. What day was it?—On the day before the election.

17,998. Who took you to Thompson's?—Not anyone, I walked there myself.

17,999. Who told you to go there?—Edwards, the tailor and William Neave, they told me to go to the "Angel."

18,000. Did you have a ticket?—Yes.

18,010. Are those your principles?—No, those principles are not mine.

18,011. The blues are your principles?—The blues are my principles. I had a reason then to vote the other way.

18,012. You had 15*l.* from Mr. Buston?—I had another reason.

18,013. What was the other reason?—I did it in the interest of a brother-in-law of mine; he was working for Sir Edmund Lacon, and he had transgressed, and was wanting bread, and I voted to get him employment again.

18,014. Who was your brother-in-law?—Benjamin Haines, he has worked under Sir Edmund Lacon for years.

18,015. Was he a voter?—No, he was not a voter.

18,016. Were you offered any money at the last election by the Conservatives?—I was offered a little money, the money was not mentioned by Mr. Buston.

18,017. What did Mr. Buston say to you?—He said before the election, he met me—I was in a pony cart, coming from market—he asked me whether I had promised, I said I stood the same way as before, and he said "If you like to come over here you can have 20*l.* in two minutes."

18,018. Did you understand he had the money in his pocket?—No; the money was not mentioned.

18,019. He mentioned 20*l.*?—I beg pardon, I made a mistake there, he said 20.

18,020. You said 20*l.*?—I made a mistake, he told me I could have 20, the name of money was not mentioned, and I remarked that at the same time.

18,021. You knew very well he meant 20*l.*?—No doubt that he did.

18,022. Did you take any money from Mr. Buston?—At this last election?

18,023. Yes?—No.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

C. Satterthwaite.

18,024. Have you any explanation you wish to make?—This is another person substituted. I do not seem to have him in my printed list.

18,025. He received it from Edwards?—He could not have received it from Edwards if he received it at Wright's.

18,026. He received it at Thompson's?—Mr. Edwards did not pay at Thompson's, nor Wright's, nor Cattermole's.

18,027. Mr. Edwards gave us this man's name?—I have it here crossed out here 20*l.*

18,028. That is right; evidently your first impression was right, he had that 20*l.*?—Yes, I copied it from my register, but this has been struck out afterwards; not only that, I got this as having paid it myself from a party that was doorkeeper at Thompson's, he gave me this in a list of the parties he could remember I paid.

18,139. Did you have a ticket?—No.

18,140. Who sent you up to Cattermole's?—Mr. Moore.

18,141. Did Mr. Moore tell you you would get the money if you went up to Cattermole's?—Yes.

18,142. Were you offered any money by the other side?—No.

18,143. Had you a vote in 1859?—I am sure I do not know. I do not know whether it was 1859 or 1857 I am sure.

18,144. Did you vote for Watkin and Young in 1859?—Yes.

18,145. Did you receive any money for your vote then?—9*l*.

18,146. Who gave you that?—Mr. Scarles. The man is dead.

18,147. Were you offered any money by the other side in 1859?—No. I do not think I was. It is so long ago I forget.

18,148. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Which side was Scarles, red, or blue?—Blue.

MILES JULER sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

18,149. You are not a voter are you?—No.

18,150. Did you give any money to men to vote at the last election?—No money at all.

18,151. Any tickets?—Yes, some tickets.

18,152. Who did you give tickets to?—Seven tickets I believe were given to me.

18,153. Who by?—Mr. Jones. I did not deliver them all.

18,154. Tell me who you gave these tickets to?—I had one for Mr. Henry Bambridge, but I did not give it to him, but he had it through another party.

18,155. Why did you not give it to him?—Because I understood he was trying to get it on both sides, and I would not give it to him. He had it at last.

18,156. He had the very ticket?—Yes. He had the very ticket.

18,157. Who gave it to him?—Mr. Humphrey came, and I gave it to Mr. Humphrey.

18,158. What Mr. Humphrey?—Mr. George Humphrey.

18,159. The next?—The next was Bickers.

18,160. William Bickers?—Yes.

18,161. Did you give him a ticket?—I gave it to the child against the door, to take to his father. I put it in an envelope.

18,162. The next?—The next was I had one for Thomas Bee, but I understood he had been paid on the other side, so I would not give it him.

18,163. Why did you not give it to Thomas Bee?—I was told he had been the other side, or was supposed to have it on the other side.

18,164. Did you hear who had given him money on the other side?—I did not know who it was. I called upon him. I found he was altered, so I said nothing to him.

18,165. Did he tell you he had got money on the other side?—No.

18,166. Was it from what he said, you inferred he had money on the other side?—It was some friend I was speaking to, as I went along.

18,167. Do you know who it was?—I do not remember who it was.

18,168. What did you do with the ticket that you had for him?—That I destroyed. The next was William Dye; I gave it to him, but he said he was obliged to vote on the other side—William Dye in King Street.

18,169. He is dead?—Yes, he was obliged to vote the other side.

18,170. Did he tell you so?—Yes.

18,171. Did he say he had been bribed the other side?—His principles were Liberal, but he should be obliged to go the other side.

18,172. Did he say why?—I do not know, I am sure. I think it was something about his uncle.

18,173. What did you do with the ticket?—I left it with him, but he told me, two or three days after, he did not go for the money, because he was obliged to go the other side. He was a Liberal.

18,174. You know he did not present a ticket?—I took his word for it. I believe he would not tell a story about it.

18,175. The next?—The next was Butler, on the Jetty Road. St. Peter's Road you will find it.

18,176. William Butler?—Yes.

18,177. Did you give him a ticket?—Yes.

18,178. Did he take it?—Yes.

18,179. The next?—The next was Hammond.

18,180. Which Hammond. Robert Hunting Hammond?—What place does he live in?

18,181. He lives in Lancaster Road?—That is the one.

18,182. Did you give him one?—Yes.

18,183. Did he take it?—Yes.

18,184. The next?—The next was Robert Webb. He is down for the South Quay, but he lives in Alfred Terrace.

18,185. He kept it?—Yes. Richard Webb I think it is. I forget whether it is Robert or Richard.

18,186. Robert Webb, South Quay?—That is the one.

18,187. Were those all the tickets you received?—Those were all the tickets I received.

18,188. Who introduced you to Mr. Jones?—I believe it was Mr. Livingston. I do not remember exactly, but I believe it was him.

18,189. When were you introduced to him?—That was on the Monday before the election.

18,190. Where?—At the "Angel."

18,191. Who was there when you were introduced to him?—I can hardly tell you; Mr. Brand was there. I do not remember anyone else.

18,192. Can you not remember anyone else?—I cannot remember anyone else.

18,193. Do you think there were more gentlemen present?—I think not.

18,194. Have you ever had a vote?—I never did vote in my life.

18,195. Did you take a part in the election of 1859? No.

18,196. You did not distribute any money?—No. I had nothing to do with that election.

18,197. Did you see Sir Edmund Lacon about much during the election?—I saw him several times.

18,198. Can you remember if you saw him in Yarmouth on the Sunday before the election?—I cannot say that I saw anything of him on the Sunday, but I know he was in the town. He came in about half-past 3 in the afternoon.

18,199. How do you know that?—A man named Whittaker told me he saw him come in about half-past 3 in the afternoon. He was also at the market gate at 1 o'clock on the Monday morning.

18,200. Who is Whittaker?—He lives in Row No. 26; he is not a voter, I believe. There were two of them together when he saw him come in.

18,201. Do you say Sir Edmund Lacon was seen again?—Seen again about 1 o'clock on the Monday morning.

18,202. Where?—At the market gates, down the Middle Market Row.

18,203. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you mean 1 o'clock at night?—Yes, Sunday night, or rather 1 o'clock Monday morning.

18,204. (Mr. Russell.) Who saw him?—A man named Wilmot saw him there.

18,205. Is he a voter?—No, he is not. He lives in the Middle Market Row. Standing against his gate he saw them going past.

18,206. Do you know of any other people who saw Sir Edmund Lacon in Yarmouth on the Sunday?—I do not.

18,207. Or in the middle of the night?—No, I do not.

18,208. How much did you receive for your services in distributing these three tickets?—I had other things to do besides; Mr. Livingston gave me 3*l*.

18,209. And what else did you get?—I sent in an account; I think that was 5*l*.

18,210. Who did you send in the account to?—Mr. Clowes.

18,211. Did Mr. Clowes pay you?—Yes. It was for conducting the committee-rooms and so on during the election.

18,212. Was the 3*l*. for distributing the tickets and the 5*l*. for the committee-room work?—I do not know what the 3*l.* was for; I suppose Mr. Livingston thought my services were worth it; I do not know what it was for.

TWENTY-SECOND DAY.

M. Juler.

10 Sept. 1866.

18,213. (Mr. Slade.) I have no doubt your services were worth quite what you were paid?—I do not know anything about it.

18,214. What are you?—A jeweller, watch maker, and commission agent.

18,215. Who recommended you to Mr. Livingston?—I have been friendly with Mr. Livingston for several years.

18,216. Have you ever taken a part in previous elections?—No.

18,217. Do you know these men, Whittaker and Wilmot?—I know them quite well.

18,218. What is Whittaker?—A gardener, I believe.

18,219. And Wilmot?—A brazier.

18,220. Are they men who know Sir Edmund Lacon personally?—I should think they do; of course they do.

18,221. And not likely to be mistaken?—I should say Whittaker had known him these 20 years.

18,222. What did Mr. Livingston give you the 3*l.* for, what service?—I cannot tell.

18,223. Did Mr. Livingston know what you were doing?—I do not think he did. He said I was not well enough paid; I was about a very great deal for him, canvassing, and one thing and another; I should not think he knew what I was doing.

18,224. Did you tell Mr. Livingston anything about the tickets?—No. He particularly impressed upon me not to offer anything to anybody. At different times he impressed that on my mind.

18,225. Did Mr. Livingston know you had anything to do with the tickets?—I should not think he did, because he always kept cautioning me not to offer anyone anything.

18,226. Did you ever mention to him that you had taken tickets?—No.

18,227. Are you sure?—I never mentioned such a thing; I never told anyone.

18,228. And you believe Mr. Livingston was wholly ignorant of what you had been doing?—As far as I was concerned.

18,229. You never told him?—I never told anyone.

J. Lawson.

JAMES LAWSON recalled; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

18,230. What are you?—Head ostler at the "Victoria."

18,231. Did you ever drive a cab?—Occasionally.

18,232. Did you ever drive Sir Edmund Lacon during the last election?—During the canvass I did.

18,233. Did you drive him on the Sunday before the election?—Never.

18,234. You did not?—Never on a Sunday in my life.

18,235. Have you ever driven Sir Edmund Lacon in the middle of the night?—No.

18,236. Not once during the election?—Never.

18,237. Did you ever drive Sir Edmund Lacon over to Gorleston?—The election morning I drove to Gorleston. I was out from 8 in the morning till 4 in the afternoon.

18,238. Do I understand you to mean you drove Sir Edmund Lacon into Gorleston?—I was engaged with a private party that day. I began at 8 in the morning and finished at 4 in the afternoon.

18,239. On the election day?—Yes.

18,240. Was that the only time you drove Sir Edmund Lacon into Gorleston?—No; when they had been holding a meeting. It might be Thursday or Friday before the election, there was a meeting at Gorleston, and I drove him down.

18,241. At what o'clock?—About half-past 6 in the evening.

18,242. Did you drive Sir Edmund Lacon into Gorleston between the Saturday and the day of the election?—No, I think not.

18,243. Are you sure you did not?—I will not be quite certain about that. I think it was Thursday or Friday evening the meeting was there.

18,244. As far as you can remember you did not drive Sir Edmund Lacon into Gorleston until the election morning?—I do not think after the Thursday or Friday evening. I think it was the Thursday or Friday evening. I am not positive about that.

18,245. Did you ever tell anybody you had driven Sir Edmund Lacon into Gorleston in the middle of the night on Sunday?—No.

18,246. Never?—Never.

18,247. Did you ever tell Mr. Costerton that you had?—Certainly not.

18,248. Do you know Mr. Costerton?—Quite well, and so I do that gentleman (pointing to Mr. Livingston), who is telling you all about it. I should like for him to give up his author.

18,249. If any one has said you said you did drive Sir Edmund Lacon into Gorleston, you deny it?—It is quite false. I had always done my business by 11 or 12 o'clock at night.

J. Eagleton.

JOHN EAGLETON recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

18,250. Do you wish to make any statement?—I wish to correct an error that occurred in Robert Brown's examination on Thursday.

18,251. He said that he got 15*l.* either from you or Hutchins?—I think Mr. Russell made a remark of this sort, that both Eagleton and Hutchins had sworn they gave him 15*l.* That was not a part of my evidence. I did not give Robert Brown anything at all. I said that was a name that was on Hutchins' list. You asked me to recollect some of the names that were on Hutchins' list, and I mentioned him.

18,252. Then he got the 15*l.* from Hutchins?—Yes, and not from me.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

18,253. Have you any further names to give us?—There is John Francis, at North End. That has been substituted. He was not on the list; he is on the Gorleston list, and I am told that I paid him.

18,254. He is on your list?—No, not as having been paid.

18,255. Yes, No. 1473?—I see it is on my list. Then there is William Gedge and James Elmer. I am told he is dead.

18,256. He had the money?—He is one that is substituted.

18,257. However he is not mentioned in your list at all?—No.

18,258. He did not have a ticket, he had the money?—This is returned to me by parties who have drawn money, and they say, "We gave this money to such and such persons, and not to the persons we first drew it for."

18,259. They did not draw it in James Elmer's name, because it is not in his name?—I have them not on my list.

18,260. And they did not give it to him because he had the money. You mean to say he had both the money and the ticket?—No, they did not in the first instance draw it for James Elmer; they drew it for some one else. They were too late in the field for the other party, and they gave it to Elmer. It is put down as another party receiving, but that is James Elmer receiving.

18,261. I have down that Elmer received 15*l.* in money?—But they say it was drawn for somebody else

18,262. I understand the money was drawn for

Elmer, not by ticket at all?—No, I want to explain the substitutes. I have a large quantity in my lists as having drawn money, and the parties have not got it. Then I want to know from the parties interested in the affair how it is those parties names are down, and they have not got it. Then they give the names and say, "We gave it to other parties whom you have not got on your list," and it stands in many cases against parties who say they have not received it.

18,263. James Elmer had 30*l.* from William Parker for himself and another man. It does not appear that Mr. Parker drew a ticket for Elmer at all?—That is what I want to explain, and that is what I want the substitutes to be understood for. It goes forth to the country that I have paid a certain amount of money to different parties. They come up here and deny having received it. In the first instance, those persons that I put down on the register are the persons the money was drawn for. The parties do not give them the money, but give it to someone else, of whom they have not given me the name, so that these are names which, if they had not been transfers, would have been extra names, and would have made more money be expended. Here are 13 names that there is no account of in the list. I do not know whether the court understand me properly.

18,264. I understand you. The reason I am puzzled is that Downing had 180*l.*?—He had a good deal more than that.

18,265. He did not have tickets to represent that; he had the money itself, had he not?—When Downing came to me in the first instance he showed me a quantity of tickets of such and such numbers. He gave them to me, and I counted them out and put them in my bag, giving him the amount of money. Then after I became disengaged, I entered the tickets according to number on the register, with a "C." opposite the name. Of course, he might draw for a deal of persons, and the parties not get the money, but other people would get it.

18,266. Then James Elmer is put down as the man who received money, although he was not on your list?—Yes; you see some one else is blamed as having received the money who has not received it.

18,267. And Elmer I must put down as having received 15*l.*?—I do not know what he got.

18,268. He got 30*l.* for himself and a friend?—I do not know what he got.

JOHN WATTS sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

J. Watts.

18,269. What are you?—A baker.

18,270. Where do you live?—In the St. George's Road.

18,271. You are down here as Symond's Square?—That is right.

18,272. What did you receive for your vote at the last election?—I do not know; I hardly know what to say, whether I received anything or no. I received it, I consider, for my services. I received 15*l.* some three or four days after the election. I cannot say which, but I know the Sunday intervened.

18,273. Who gave it you?—Mr. Buston, through Mr. Cooper.

18,274. Had Mr. Buston canvassed you during the election?—Yes, several times; he is my landlord.

18,275. And did you tell him you would vote for Lacon and Goodson?—Yes, I did, some time before the election.

18,276. Did he tell you if you did you should then have the money?—No, not a fraction.

18,277. When did you hear you should have the money?—The first time I heard it was when I met Mr. Cooper, the night before the election, when he told me he would make it all right for me. I told Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl when they came that I intended to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

18,278. When Mr. Cooper met you on the Saturday night, did he tell you you would have some money?—He would see it was all right.

18,279. You understood you were to have some money?—You know what electioneering promises are, but as long as I made any promise I kept it.

18,280. You got the money after the election?—I saw Mr. Cooper a day or two after the election, and he said it was all right, and he would give it to Mr. Buston for me.

18,281. Were you offered money on the other side?—I do not say I offered any. I did try to induce three or four to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson. I said they could have 15*l.* I had not got it to offer.

18,282. Whom did you tell?—Mr. Mobbs in the Market Place.

18,283. Do you know whether Mr. Mobbs did have some money?—I believe he took 12*l.* I saw it in the paper on the other side.

18,284. Who else did you say could have money?—I induced Mr. Paston, a publican, close by me. I secured him too, when the other party next morning tried to take him by force, and offered him 20*l.* to go into the country and get out of the town, and brought a horse and cart to take him, because he was a cripple. I believe he received the money from Buston. Mr. Rushmer. I do not say that I exactly went; at least, I did go with a man who did offer him the money, but Mr. Rushmer was too conscientious.

18,285. What is Mr. Rushmer's christian name?—I think his name is Robert Rushmer.

18,286. Who else?—I went to another place, Mr. Humphrey or Captain Humphrey, in the St. George's Road. I could not get him; he got too high a price on the other side, 25*l.*

18,287. Mr. Humphrey would not take it?—He would not take 15*l.* when he could get 25*l.*, it is not likely.

18,288. Is it that Humphrey on the St. George's Road?—Yes, I see in the paper he got 25*l.*

18,289. Anybody else?—That is all.

18,290. Who authorized you to offer money to these people?—Nobody.

18,291. Did you do it entirely on your own responsibility?—Yes, I did it on my own account; nobody offered a fraction.

18,292. You knew Mr. Cooper had the money?—Mr. Buston told me to look after Paston. That was the only one he asked me to look after, and after I looked after him I looked after several more.

18,293. Were you offered yourself any money by the other side?—Yes, Mr. Harbord, I think, the night before the election, told me he could take me where I could get 20*l.*, and I told him I had promised Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson, and if I did not get the money I would vote for them just the same.

18,294. Did you not take money on the other side?—Not a fraction.

18,295. Did you not take 15*l.*?—No, nothing.

18,296. Are you quite sure of that?—I am certain of it.

18,297. Is the other John Watts any relation of yours?—No.

18,298. Where did Mr. Harbord say he would take you?—He never said.

18,299. Did anybody besides Mr. Harbord tell you you could have money that side?—No.

18,300. Did you have anything for your vote in 1859?—Yes, on the Liberal side.

18,301. How much?—10*l.*

18,302. Who gave you that?—Mr. Eagleton on the Liberal side that was.

18,303. To vote for Watkin and Young?—Yes.

18,304. And you did vote for them?—Yes.

18,305. And were you offered money by the Conservatives in that election?—No.

TWENTY-SECOND DAY.

C. Satterthwaite.

10 Sept. 1866.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE.

18,306. (Mr. Russell.) Do you remember this man?—I do not know that I remember him, and I do not remember the Harbord that offered him the money. I do not remember Mr. Harbord at all, but I will make a little inquiry about this case to-night, because I have a great suspicion I can make something of this man, I think I have seen him before.

Adjourned till to-morrow at 10 o'clock.

TWENTY-THIRD DAY.

TWENTY-THIRD DAY.

T. Downing.

11 Sept. 1866.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 11th September 1866.

THOMAS DOWNING recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

18,307. Can you give us the names of any more persons who received money from Jones who are not marked on his list?—Only I think what you have had.

18,308. We have had about eight names mentioned to us, amounting to a sum of 120*l.*, and we have had three names mentioned to us who have received 5*l.* more than Mr. Jones said they had; and on the other hand we have had 20 names I think given us who were on Mr. Jones's list who have come forward, and say they have not received any money?—Have you got Richard John Harrod, No. 1,491, 20*l.*?

18,309. That is to say Richard John Harrod had 20*l.* from Benjamin Lindoff?—But he had 20*l.*, too, from me through Mr. Robert Martins as well.

18,310. Did you give Martins the money for Harrod?—Yes. Then there is another one I think I recollect, No. 677, Charles Hunt, 15*l.* I do not know whether you had it before. I do not know whether it is on the list.

18,311. George Charles Hunt; he is in Mr. Jones's list for 15*l.*?—I gave him that.

18,312. But he is in Mr. Satterthwaite's list?—I daresay that is the same thing. Then Crisp is not down on his list, No. 345*l.*, for 15*l*

183,13. Mr. Edwards gave him in?—No, I do not think that. I had forgotten it. Then there was Thomas Wooden; I did not recollect until I heard it the other day.

18,314. Frederick Crisp is down in Mr. Edwards's list?—I have no doubt I gave the name in afterwards, but still I paid him the money.

18,315. Mr. Edwards expended 1,662*l.* 2*s.* 0*d.*?—Yes.

18,316. That is quite a distinct list from Mr. Jones's?—So it may be, but some might be given in to Mr. Edwards. I have recollected all the parties that I gave money to myself, although I did not have tickets. There are 14. That is all that I can recollect that I gave money to.

18,317. How many of those names have not been given in by Mr. Jones?—I do not know; I have not looked at his list.

18,318. How many tickets did you draw money for from Mr. Jones, do you know?—No.

18,319. How much money did you receive from him in cash?—I do not know now.

18,320. Cannot you give us some notion?—No. After the election I settled up, and gave either Mr. Salmon or Mr. Edwards the books of all that I paid away, all the names, and what they had. The books were all taken and put together.

18,321. You gave the names, but there are 20 names who come forward and say they never received the money?—There is not one that I have given in I know but what have received it all right, because I was very particular who I gave it to.

183,22. (Mr. Russell.) Can you remember what balance you had in hand after the election?—I was 4*l.* short from the Monday morning until the Thursday. When I went out the Monday morning I had between 7*l.* and 8*l.* in my pocket, and when I left off after the election I was about 4*l.* minus.

18,323. Then you gave back no money at all?—I had none. I tell you I was 4*l.* minus.

18,324. (Mr. Slade.) Did you tell Mr. Jones anything about Francis Jay's 15*l.* that he returned to you?—Yes. He returned that to me the morning of the election, and I directly gave 10*l.* of it to Mr. Beales. Mr. Moore was along with me when I gave him the money.

18,325. You gave 10*l.* of it to Beales?—I gave 10*l.* of it to Beales in the "White Lion."

18,326. Can you give me any idea how many names you drew for?—No; I should not say I drew for above 10, not of my own accord. I drew the names for other parties, such as Edwards and them, in tickets.

183,27. How many captains drew for names?—I cannot say. I had not the least idea. I was very busy the Monday, and I did not write the tickets after the Monday. Some wrote one, and some wrote another. After that I wrote them as fast as I could. They kept coming to me as I was writing them, and gave in the names. The register lay before me, and I ticked them off and gave them the tickets.

18,328. Who were the captains who drew names?—I know Mr. Edwards was one, but I should not positively like to swear other parties took some. Some might, and some might not. It is so long ago I forget.

18,329. Mr. Edwards was one?—Mr. Edwards was one, I am certain.

18,330. Who was another?—Mr. Walsh had some tickets, but I should not like to swear other parties had any.

18,331. Did Mr. Walsh take tickets from you?—Yes; he had seven or eight. He drew for Sillis, junior, Gravener, Thurlow—

18,332. We have had those, have we not?—Yes. I cannot recollect any more but what I have given you. You see I did not take the names down. I only put the number on the ticket and then put the number on the register, and the register was given up.

18,333. You are a man who lived in Yarmouth, and who agreed with Mr. Jones, the stranger, about the ticket system?—Yes.

18,334. Therefore you must know who the people were who had to draw the names?—I knew they were all right.

18,335. Then you knew who the men were?—I cannot recollect. It is a year and a half ago.

18,336. Nonsense; you can recollect?—I cannot recollect next week what I do this week. There are some I can recollect.

18,337. You have only recollected one, that is Edwards?—They were all there. I cannot recollect who took them. Perhaps if I were to say I suppose such a man took it he would come and deny it, and say he did not take it.

18,338. There are 200*l.* to be accounted for of Mr. Jones's money?—I do not know anything about it.

I believe there are a great many people not down that will escape.

18,339. We must ask you these questions in the face of Mr. Satterthwaite, because I know this, if we come back here again, and Mr. Satterthwaite happens to be in Preston, it will be all put on his shoulders?—I cannot see that.

18,340. It is sure to be, and therefore you must explain it now or never.—I do not see what I have to explain. If I gave a man a ticket I knew he was a voter, and I knew he was a man who wanted the money; and if I gave him a ticket he carried it to Mr. Satterthwaite and took his money.

18,341. You say you only had 10 names yourself?—Those are all the names I can recollect I had.

18,342. And you will not tell us the names of the captains who drew those names, except Mr. Edwards?—I do not know. I know there were several parties about, but I cannot say. You sit at a table writing, and you do not take particular notice. I knew it was nothing to me, as I was not going to pay the money away. They came and asked for tickets for so many people.

18,343. But who were they?—For instance, Mr. Parker and Mr. Seago came, and they drew for about 10 people.

18,344. We have had them?—Then Mr. Edwards came, and had 10 or 12, and perhaps some one else might come. I cannot say who they were. I know there were certain parties had tickets.

18,345. Can you say whether you gave in any single name of these gentlemen who did not receive money, although they were put down on Mr. Jones's list?—Which gentlemen?

18,346. Who come forward and deny it. There are 20 names who come forward and deny upon oath that they received money, and they are put down upon Mr. Jones's list?—I think you are under a wrong impression.

18,347. There is Spencer Thomas Smyth?—That I am sure I should not have paid to.

18,348. There is Francis Sloman Holmes?—Him I should not have put down.

18,349. Walter D. Pettingill?—Him I know nothing about.

18,350. John Skinner?—Of North Road? There are several Skinners about.

18,351. Of the Blackfriars Road?—I never saw him in the course of the election.

18,352. James Butler?—He did come under my notice. He was mentioned to me two or three times, but I cannot swear that the man had the money, but I have every reason to believe that he had. I know it was mentioned to me several times by different parties.

18,353. And you may have given his name in?—No; I have not given his name in, not in my list, I know.

18,354. William Glanfield?—Certainly not.

18,355. William Moss?—I do not know him.

18,356. Henry Fisk?—He would not take it. That was one that Parker drew for. If you recollect it was explained. It is included in that 180*l.* that he and Seago had.

18,357. Who gave in his name, I want to know?—Mr. Parker; I told you so before.

18,358. Henry G. Cadywould?—I do not know him.

18,359. You gave Parker the money?—Yes.

18,360. And to cover that money you gave in a certain number of tickets to Mr. Jones?—Yes.

18,361. Then Henry Fisk's name was put down as 20*l.*?—I am quite certain it was one, though he had not the money, I am quite certain of that.

18,362. However, you gave his name in?—I gave it in to Mr. Jones for Mr. Parker, as the money passed through my hands. When I got that money from him, I gave him so many tickets to represent the money, so that there was a check upon him, and a check upon me too.

18,363. Edward Collins?—Where is that?

18,364. Of the Caister Road?—No. I know the man, but I had nothing to do with him. I should not have gone to him. If he had had it two or three times over I should not have wondered at it.

18,365. He was bribed the other side?—He never does vote without being bribed.

18,366. Did you give his name in as a man who would take a ticket?—No. I never went anywhere down to the north end, no further than the market.

18,367. Samuel Drake?—That is another Mr. Parker drew for.

18,368. Did you give the name in?—Yes. Mr. Parker had agreed with him for 15*l.*

18,369. James Smith, Northumberland Place?—I would not be certain whether Mr. Walsh did not draw a ticket for him. It came under my notice, I know; but I have been recollecting about that man, and I almost fancy Mr. Walsh took a ticket for him, but I could not positively swear.

18,370. 20*l.* was drawn for him by Mr. Walsh?—I would not swear to that.

18,371. Robert Jones?—I do not know the man.

18,372. Christmas Frosdick?—That Mr. Seago drew for.

18,373. John Duffield?—I know the man, but I never saw him all the election.

18,374. George Dunnell?—I think he had a ticket from Mr. Walsh. I think he was paid.

18,375. George Dunnell is put down as receiving 20*l.* from Mr. Jones in his list. It appears he received 15*l.* from Mr. Edwards at the "Angel?"—I think I can recollect. I do not know whether it is the same man, but has he been called?

18,376. He has been called, and has sworn he received no money from Mr. Jones?—I paid a ticket to Walsh, and I think that is about the man. About 9 o'clock at night a man came out to the "Angel," and said he had not received his money, and begged hard of me to get him his money. I am almost inclined to think this was the man. I gave Mr. Walsh the ticket. There was a great dispute about this man not having received his money. He came up, and Mr. Edwards paid him over again. If he had it not, some one else took his ticket and got it for him. I do not know whether Mr. Satterthwaite heard anything about it. It was the night before the election, about 11 o'clock. He came to the "Angel," and said he had not received a ticket; but I can see the man in the course of the day.

18,377. He has been examined before us, and he only acknowledges to receiving one sum of 15*l.*?—He said he had not had his ticket. What I recollect is, that Walsh came and got a ticket for him along with Sillis and the others. I think Dunnell is the name of the man. I know there was a dispute about one ticket, and the man was represented to be paid twice over; but it was settled there and then, because we could not determine where this ticket went to. That was the night before the election, and I think this is the man.

18,378. Do you explain it by saying George Dunnell was paid twice over?—He came up and said he should not vote if he had not the money; and I said, "I have delivered your ticket. Your ticket is down, and you are represented as paid." That is the only case I heard of at the time where the parties said they were not paid, and I am almost certain this was the man. There was one of that sort, and I think this was the man. Does not Dunnell live in Charlotte Street somewhere?

18,379. Yes?—Then I think that is the man.

18,380. Are you certain Walsh drew his ticket?—Yes. I am certain Walsh drew the ticket for Dunnell, I am certain of that.

18,381. Now George Godbolt?—I do not know. I heard his name mentioned once or twice, but I did not draw for him, because he had promised Mr. Brogden early, and I knew that the parties were after him on the other side.

18,382. You do not know who drew for him?—No, I cannot say. I know some one came up about him,

TWENTY-THIRD DAY.

T. Downing.

11 Sept. 1866.

but it was transferred. I said, "It is of no use, you must transfer it to some one else," because I knew the parties were after him.

18,383. A ticket was drawn to your knowledge?—A ticket was drawn, but I cannot say by whom. I have been trying to think of it when I heard his name mentioned. He had not the money, I know, because he had a place next to mine, and I put the question to him, and he said, "You are too late." In fact I should never have gone to him, because I was along with Mr. Brogden when he promised he would vote for him, as he did Mr. Marshman.

18,384. Then why did you not stop the ticket being drawn, if you knew he would not vote for you?—I did not know it at the time the ticket was drawn.

18,385. I thought you said you had been to him before, and found he was going to vote the other side?—After this.

18,386. You cannot say who drew the ticket?—No, I cannot; but I do not think the ticket was ever made any use of.

18,387. The 20*l.* was made use of?—There was no money got for it.

18,388. There must have been, because Mr. Jones has accounted for it?—I will tell you how he accounts for it directly. This ticket was given. It does not matter how many tickets were returned; they were not checked off afterwards.

18,389. I understand the tickets were given in to Mr. Jones, and Mr. Jones gave 20*l.* for a ticket?—I should not take that account at all. That is not the corrected account. They had a corrected account gone through after the election, and that is not the corrected account.

18,390. This is most important, because directly Mr. Satterthwaite has gone his accounts will be blown upon by everybody?—Mr. Satterthwaite had nothing to do with it, because Mr. Edwards and Mr. Salmon had the whole of the accounts, and the whole of the amended accounts, because I went through those accounts, and gave a description of the men that I knew had it at the time. I gave a description of the whole of the transactions on the amended accounts.

18,391. We have had accounts given in to us by Mr. Salmon, and they tally exactly with the accounts Mr. Jones has before him. Mr. Jones's is 3,912*l.* 10*s.*, and that is entirely accounted for in the account Mr. Jones has before him. Then where is the error?—I do not know. All I know is, I took two or three days, and the register was laid before me and the names were called over, and I said such and such a name was paid, and it was put down who was paid.

18,392. And who was paid?—I cannot recollect. Mr. Salmon had the whole of the accounts. If they had come about this thing, they ought to have sent the whole of the accounts and books which they took away with them, and then it could be explained.

18,393. We have the most important account, which is the one before Mr. Jones?—I do not consider that; I consider the other the most important one of the two, and the parties whose names have been paid would all be there.

18,394. It is not our business to square Mr. Brogden's accounts. Our business is to schedule those gentlemen who have received bribes?—That is what I say. There are a great many who will escape, and others who are innocent get put on. There is not the slightest imputation against Mr. Satterthwaite's keeping any back, because I do not believe he had the accounts.

18,395. Mr. Salmon was perfectly content to receive from the captains all the names of the 20 gentlemen who come forward and swear they never received a penny?—That may be so.

18,396. Samuel Boulton, junior?—I know nothing about him.

18,397. John Watts?—No, I do not know him, or I know him, but I had nothing to do with him.

18,398. Now tell us the names that you substituted in the place of these gentlemen who never received the money?—How can I tell; I cannot recollect the names a year or two ago. I do not know that I substituted them. I said, when they were called over, so and so had the money.

183,99. But you squared the account?—I assisted to do it, and I gave in my book, and a list of all the people at that time. They had a list. I did not keep a list and if I had kept a list, I could have given you the information about it. The lists were handed to Mr. Salmon, and he had every scrap of paper. I cannot recollect a year and a half ago a lot of names. I gave them the whole of the names, and the whole of what the parties had drawn, for every scrap of paper that I could find was given to Mr. Salmon; he paid for them, and I knew no one had more right to them than he had.

18,400. We have not yet gone through the entire of Mr. Jones' list, but as far as we have gone, I make out that tickets were drawn from Mr. Jones' to the amount of 335*l.*, and that we have substituted names for those to the amount of 145*l.*, so that there is 190*l.* unaccounted for?—I should think there are not many elections but what if you have to come and bribe 200 or 300 people, there would be some mistakes, when you have to carry it all in your head especially; you see that would not be, at about 20*l.* a head, some of them, above nine names, and you would be sure to have some that you would not recollect, and especially the little time there was to do it in. I can swear I never had a farthing in my life. I have been at it 20 years, and I never had a shilling, but always have been money out of pocket.

18,401. We give you this opportunity of explaining it?—I know that. I know I never had a shilling in my life, that I can positively swear.

18,402. How much money did you receive from Mr. Edwards?—I think 195*l.*

18,403. You gave 180*l.* to Mr. Parker and Mr. Seago?—Yes.

18,404. It was not Mr. Edwards's money you gave to Mr. Parker?—I am sure I cannot say. I know I gave him the tickets for the money when I took it, just the same as I did Mr. Jones. They would neither of them look to Mr. Parker, they would look to me to give an account of it, and I should look to them to give an account of it to me.

18,405. Then I may take it you cannot give us the names of any more persons who received substituted tickets?—No, I have tried and thought of everyone I could think of.

18,406. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) When you went through these accounts with Mr. Salmon and Mr. Satterthwaite, was Mr. Salmon satisfied that you had found a name for all those?—Yes, for all those.

18,407. For all those who had not received the money?—Yes.

18,408. Mr. Salmon was perfectly satisfied of that?—Perfectly so.

18,409. Did you go through the accounts with Mr. Satterthwaite and Mr. Edwards?—I was not there the full time. I was off and on different times. He said, "Here are so and so." I said he had not the money, I am quite sure.

18,410. Did he say that in reference to any of the names that have been mentioned before us?—Yes, some of the names.

18,411. The parties have come here and have sworn they did not receive it?—Not in every case, because perhaps some of them may have had it. The men are the best judges who swore to it. He knows whether he is swearing right or wrong. All I know as far as this is, I gave Mr. Salmon all my books and everything I had in connexion with it. I gave him the canvass books checked off, and an account of every man most likely to receive a bribe, and my private memorandum book, everyone that had been paid and given a ticket to.

18,412. Had you a private memorandum book containing all the names?—The whole of them.

18,413. At that time?—At that time.

18,414. And you gave that to Mr. Salmon ?—I gave that to Mr. Salmon with all my papers.

18,415. If we had that before us would that satisfy us with regard to all these names ?—I cannot speak to all of them, because I did not draw for all of them. I had only the tickets for the Monday ; what they did the Tuesday I cannot be accountable for.

18,416. Did anybody else besides you go to Mr. Salmon and satisfy him money would be drawn for the parties named ?—You may be certain that out of that number there would be some mistakes.

18,417. Did Mr. Salmon see any other of the captains ?—I do not know who was there, but on account of the tickets going through me the first day I thought I was the only one.

18,418. When you gave in the names to Mr. Salmon I understood that Mr. Salmon expressed himself satisfied ?—I found some names that he had not got down the same as now. There are several names, but we shall never arrive at the whole of them. We might come at it by their evidence, if there are any more to come. Very likely you would not have arrived at these, only they came and spoke of it themselves.

18,419. (Mr. Russell.) When I examined you on the first occasion, you said you had written all the tickets yourself ?—All on Monday, I told you then personally, and on Tuesday the thing got into confusion, and was helter skelter then, and I knew nothing more about it. Up to the Monday night or the Tuesday morning everything was going on well.

18,420. It is now alleged that tickets written for certain voters were not delivered, but that their money was given to substituted persons. But we have it in evidence that tickets were unquestionably written in favour of men who any resident in Yarmouth must have known would not have taken a bribe.—Those were not written by me.

18,421. When they were written they must have been written with the intention of pocketing the money ?—I do not believe tickets were written for those people at all. Some one must have represented the men and been paid, because Mr. Jones and Mr. Edwards both paid money without tickets. You cannot say tickets were drawn for these people though they were on Mr. Jones's list as paid. I should not have been simple enough to have written a ticket for Mr. Smyth. I should have known better than that.

18,422. I will mention that one name as an illustration of what I mean, Dr. Spencer Thomas Smyth ?—I must have been crazy to have written a ticket for him.

18,423. Some one must have had a ticket written for him, or his name must have been handed in on a list to Mr. Jones ?—It was either a mistake in taking the number, or he was represented by some one else. I cannot say, perhaps it might be in this way. I have never looked at the register to have seen. The man before his name or the man after his name might be upon the ticket, that I will not say ; I have not seen it, but by seeing I might throw some little light upon it.

18,424. Did not Mr. Jones consult you as to who would be the reliable men to appoint captains ?—That I am not aware of if he did. I know a great deal of it was left in a great measure to me, but I cannot be responsible for everything at a time like that ; and I think for my own part there never was an election conducted but what you would find some few short, and if there are nine or ten, it is as much as you would expect anyone to do in a time like that.

DANIEL READ FOWLER sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

D. R. Fowler.

18,425. What are you ?—A linendraper.

18,426. We have heard that you summoned a small meeting to consider what should be done with reference to the shaky voters ?—Not the shaky voters, to go through the register generally.

18,427. You did summon a meeting ?—I did.

18,428. When ?—I think the Thursday night before the election.

18,429. By whose authority did you convene that meeting ?—On my own account.

18,430. Whom did you ask to attend ?—That I am sure I cannot remember. There were only about four or five.

18,431. Tell me as many of them as you can remember.—I think Mr. Waters, Mr. Overend, and I do not remember anybody else. I think there were four, but I could not tell the names.

18,432. Mr. Reeder ; was Mr. Reeder there ?—I think he was.

18,433. And Mr. King ?—I do not remember his being there. He might be there, but I do not remember.

18,434. Mr. Rivett ?—No, I do not think Mr. Rivett was.

18,435. Will you tell me as briefly as you can what took place at that meeting ?—We went through the register to see how the promises stood for Brogden and Vanderbyl and Lacon and Goodson, and those that had not promised on either side. I asked them to go round and ask whether they would promise at once, and report to me.

18,436. Was any inducement whatever to be given to those men who had not promised ?—Not the slightest, not by me.

18,437. Did you take an active part before that in the election, in canvassing and so forth ?—Yes.

18,438. Were you on any committee ?—I do not know of any committee, only a meeting at the "Angel." I do not think there was any committee called or named. I do not remember.

18,439. When did you first become aware that these shaky voters were receiving money ?—I did not know anything about the receiving of money ; that is a part of the business I had nothing to do with. I have always taken an active part in canvassing, therefore I have kept aloof from everything in the shape of bribery of any kind.

18,440. I suppose, in following the canvass, you detected all of a sudden the shaky men had become firm ones ?—There was no firmness about them, I did not go after them. I never went near the voters after I had been round with Mr. Brogden.

18,441. Are you aware of any voters who did receive money ?—Not one.

18,442. Did you know a man named Butcher ?—Where does he live ?

18,443. Henry James Butcher ?—Yes, in the Market Place.

18,444. Did you give anybody money for him ?—No, I gave it him myself for the use of his committee rooms. I gave him 10*l.* for the use of his committee rooms, which we held for a fortnight as agreed to.

18,445. Did you engage his room by any authority ?—No.

18,446. Did you send in the account to Mr. Clowes ?—I did not.

18,447. You paid that 10*l.* out of your own pocket ?—No.

18,448. By whom were you reimbursed ?—I saw a man by the name of Hickling, whom I knew had been engaged in buying voters, and I asked him, "What money have you left ?" and he said, "About 12*l.*" Then I said, "I want 10*l.* for Butcher's rooms, and therefore you may as well give it me.

18,449. You were aware that Mr. Hickling received this money to buy votes ?—Yes.

18,450. And there being a balance of that money over, you asked him for it and obtained 10*l.* ?—Yes.

18,451. Was that the only money dealing you had in the last election ?—The only one.

18,452. How did you know that Mr. Hickling had money ?—I knew that he was going about bribing voters on the day of the election. I think it was on the day of the election only, I am not certain.

18,453. Who told you so ?—Well, he told me himself.

TWENTY-THIRD DAY.

D. R. Fowler.

11 Sept. 1866.

18,454. Was it on the day of the election that you got the 10*l.* ?—Yes, after the election was over. I think it was the evening of the election he gave it to me ; I think so.

18,455. Where are Butcher's rooms ?—They were in the Market Place, opposite my house, at that time.

18,456. What use did you make of it ?—I used to go backwards and forwards there, so that they did not come to my place of business. Anyone who wanted to see me had to go to his rooms.

18,457. Who were the people who would require to see you ?—To ask any question. I took an active part, and therefore no matter who it was. Anyone in the Market Ward, if they had any question to ask, would come and ask me.

18,458. Why could they not go to your own house ?—I did not want them to come to my place of business.

18,459. Why ?—It interferes with my business.

18,460. Did you go at stated hours to those rooms ?—No ; I used to go occasionally across and ask if there had been anyone to see me, and if there was I said I would be there again shortly.

18,461. Did the shaky voters call upon you ?—I never saw them.

18,462. Who were the parties that came ?—The parties that were at my house were Mr. Waters—

18,463. Did Mr. Hickling come ?—I think he came once from Mr. Waters, and those people I went to see might come to that place.

18,464. Did Mr. Hickling report to you at that room how he was getting on with bribing voters ?—No.

18,465. Did anybody ever make such a report to you there ?—No.

18,466. You are quite sure of that ?—Quite sure.

18,467. Mr. Butcher's house is close to Thompson's, is it not ?—Yes.

18,468. Did you ever make reports at Thompson's of what you heard at Mr. Butcher's ?—No.

18,469. Do I understand you to mean that you kept all this information to yourself ?—Yes.

18,470. Then what practical good did you consider it to be ?—If there was anything of importance to come under my observation I would go and report it to the room at the "Angel," at head-quarters.

18,471. Did you canvass Mr. Butcher for his vote ?—No ; I was not with him when he was canvassed ; but I know he promised the first time Mr. Brogden saw him.

18,472. Did you say anything to him about his vote when you engaged his room ?—No. He had promised to vote for Mr. Brogden the first time Mr. Brogden called upon him.

18,473. You are not able to give any more satisfactory information of the use you made of this room than what you have told us ?—No. That was the only use I did make of it. I used it for the purpose of going backwards and forwards.

18,474. Did not these men, who came and reported to you at Mr. Butcher's, say such and such a voter wanted money ?—Not there. If I saw them about I would say, "How do you get on ?" and they would say they could do nothing further, "So and so will not promise."

18,475. From that you inferred that so and so wanted money ?—I thought they wanted some consideration.

18,476. Was that the object of their reports ?—That was the object of their reports.

18,477. And did you not give a list of those people to anybody ?—I do not think I did. I might mark them off in the register, but I sent in a list I think. I went to Mr. Edwards, and I think I went through the list.

18,478. Which Mr. Edwards ?—Mr. Brogden's man who was here. I think he was the man I made the report to. He kept the general canvass.

18,479. If I understand you it was this. You marked these non-promised men on your register, and then took the marked register to Mr. Edwards ?—Yes.

18,480. For his guidance ?—Yes.

18,481. When did you deliver him that ?—I used to see him generally almost every day.

18,482. Did you give him a marked register on the Saturday before the election ?—I gave him a list of promises, and a list of names who would not promise, I think, on the Saturday before the election ; I think I did.

18,483. Did you yourself know at that time the use that Mr. Edwards would make of such a marked register ?—I did not. He was there for keeping the register, and for nothing else that I was aware of.

18,484. You were not yourself aware that the men who you so returned to him as not promised would be paid for their votes ?—No, I was not certain of that.

18,485. You have heard now that that was the use that was made of it ?—Yes.

18,486. But you were unaware of it yourself ?—I was unaware of it.

18,487. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Mr. Edwards had a register of his own ?—Yes, he kept a register.

18,488. Did he from your register correct his own ?—Yes.

18,489. Did you see him put any note against the names you gave him ?—No.

18,490. You did not see him put the letter "T" against it ?—No ; I did not see that part of the business at all.

18,491. Tell me why you did not return to Mr. Clowes the account for this committee room ?—The 10*l.* ?

18,492. Yes.—I had paid him the money, and therefore I thought I did not require to return it to Mr. Clowes, or make Mr. Clowes a return, as it was paid.

18,493. Having nothing to do with the bribery, why did you choose to take the money in an illegal manner instead of a legal manner ?—I saw Mr. Hickling, and I said, "Have you any money ?" He said, "Yes ; 10*l.* or 12*l.*" I said, "There is 10*l.* for Mr. Butcher's room ; hand me over the money."

18,494. You knew that Mr. Hickling had the money for the purpose of bribery ?—I did.

18,495. Why did you mix yourself up in the mess by taking that money, instead of going to Mr. Clowes and getting it legally ?—I think I did it without a thought. I could have gone and got the money from Mr. Clowes, because it was a legal transaction. I got the money from Mr. Hickling. I thought there was 10*l.*, and I thought I might as well have it.

18,496. You did not expect a commission ?—It would have made no difference, because it was 10*l.* I asked him for to pay, and I could have made the return to Mr. Clowes, and as the thing was settled I thought there was no necessity to do so.

18,497. You preferred to take the money in an illegal manner ?—It was not a preference. I could have got it either way. There was 10*l.*, and I thought I could ask him for the money.

18,498. I suppose you are not aware you were committing a misdemeanor by so doing ?—I am not.

18,499. (Mr. Russell.) Do you know a man named James Butler ?—Yes.

18,500. Did he come to ask you for money ?—No. He came and abused me.

18,501. Why ?—Because he did not get his money. I understood he was promised some money, and he waited too long, as I understand.

18,502. This man has denied that he took or wanted money ?—From the information I received I think he required rather a larger sum than they were disposed to give him.

18,503. Do you know what sum ?—No. He came to me the night after the election in my house, and I was obliged to order him out of my place.

18,504. Why should he select you ?—Because I had taken an active part with the members when they came down here.

18,505. Not in the disbursement of money ?—No.

18,506. Or in the recommendation of voters for the payment of money ?—No.

18,507. Did he mention any sum that he required ?—No, he did not. He came and asked me about the money. I said, "I know nothing about your money." I did not know the man. "And I do not know who you are." He told me his name was Butler. I said, "I know nothing about you."

18,508. Are you aware that he held out for a large sum ?—Yes ; I was told so.

18,509. Who told you ?—I think it was Mr. Thompson, but I cannot say whether it was Mr. Thompson or not.

18,510. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know Mr. John Webster Tingay ?—I do.

18,511. Did you see him at the election time ?—I saw him about the election time, but he had nothing whatever to do with the working of the election.

18,512. What part did he take ?—That I do not know. I do not think he was active in the election at all.

18,513. Mr. Tingay was not one of your committee ?—No.

18,514. Was he engaged in illegal practices ?—Not that I am aware of.

18,515. He sent Mr. Butler to you on the election morning, did he not ?—No. I did not see Mr. Butler till after the election that I am aware of.

18,516. Were you bringing the men up to the poll on the election day ?—I was.

18,517. And was Tingay ?—I think not. I do not remember seeing Mr. Tingay engaged in the election. In fact I did not know the man until some time after the election. I did not know Mr. Tingay. I have seen him since. Of course I know him now very well.

18,518. How came you to make his acquaintance since ?—By being a tradesman in the town and seeing him at his place of business.

18,519. Nothing to do with the election ?—No ; I think he had nothing whatever to do with it.

18,520. Did you before the polling day ever see Mr. Satterthwaite ?—Yes.

18,521. When did you first see him ?—I think it might be a few days before the election.

18,522. Were you introduced to him by Mr. Edwards ?—No, I think not. I met him in the smoke room at the "Angel," where we used to meet. He used to be there. I did not know who he was. He never used to say anything. He used to sit down and smoke a pipe.

18,523. Did you know Mr. Jones as being engaged in spending money ?—No, I did not know him until the Monday. I think the Monday it was before the election that he was to be the agent employed.

18,524. You found out, however ?—Yes.

18,525. How did you find that out ?—I heard a conversation going on, that is all.

18,526. Who told you ?—No one told me. I heard the general conversation.

18,527. Not in the public room ?—No ; in a room upstairs.

18,528. You mean a room at the "Angel ?"—Yes.

18,529. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Can you tell me what Butler said to you at the time he abused you ?—He came in and wanted to know where his money was that he was to have for his vote.

18,530. Can you tell me what he said ?—I could not tell you more than that. I said, "Be out of the place directly."

18,531. Did he come in and ask you where his money was ?—I think he did.

18,532. Did you understand that to be money he had been promised for his vote ?—Yes.

18,533. You cannot tell me the words he used ?—I could not. He was very abusive, and I told him to be off out of the place.

18,534. Why should he come to you ?—Because I had taken an active part in the election. I had taken the Market Ward as my jurisdiction.

18,535. He thought you were responsible for getting him money ?—I suppose so.

18,536. Had he any ground for that ?—No.

18,537. Had he ever asked you about it before ?—No ; I do not think I ever saw the man before he came to my house. I did not know him. I had to ask him who he was.

18,538. Did he tell you anybody had promised him ?—I do not think he did. He came and asked me why he did not get his money, and I said, "You have overshot the mark. You have waited a little too long. I know nothing of you, and you must be out of my place."

18,539. Can you tell us who promised him money ?—No.

18,540. Or with whom he bargained ?—I do not know. I think Mr. Thompson was the man who reported him to me.

18,541. Reported him to you as a person that would not promise ?—As a person that would not promise, and that he would not vote unless he was paid. I remember sending down several times for him to come up and vote as he had not voted. I sent down for him.

18,542. (Mr. Slade.) You mean Mr. Thompson, the man at whose house Jones gave the money ?—Yes.

18,543. Were you at Mr. Thompson's house yourself ?—Yes, I was backwards and forwards ; that was where we kept the register.

18,544. I mean during the time Mr. Jones was spending the money ?—No.

18,545. Were you there on the Tuesday evening ?—No ; I was there only the day of the election.

18,546. (Mr. Russell.) Were you not at the meeting at the "Angel," on the Monday forenoon, at which it was determined to resort to bribery ?—I think not.

18,547. You would not forget that if you were ?—I was there in the afternoon. I do not think I went in the morning about 12 or 1 o'clock.

18,548. That was the meeting at which it was determined to resort to money ?—I do not know anything about that.

18,549. We have heard so from Mr. Brand.—I know nothing about that.

18,550. You were not present when that resolution was come to ?—No, I did not hear it.

18,551. Did you take an active part in the election of 1859 ?—Yes.

18,552. What part did you take ?—Going round to canvass with the candidates.

18,553. Were you cognisant of money being spent illegally at that election ?—Not at the time.

18,554. You were subsequently, of course ?—Oh, yes.

18,555. Did you adopt the same plan at that election as you did at the last, of ascertaining who the non-promised voters were, and returning a list at head-quarters ?—I should think in all probability I did.

18,556. Can you tell me who you delivered such a list to ?—That I do not remember ; whoever took the leading part.

18,557. Who had the custody of the register at head-quarters then ?—I forget who had the custody of it then. Mr. Livingston was about the principal man who was there.

18,558. Did you engage a committee room at that election in the same way ?—I think I had. Yes, I think so.

18,559. Where did you engage a room ;—I think we always had Mr. Thompson's place for that purpose.

18,560. Mr. Thompson's ?—Yes ; I think it was his rooms we had then. No, I think not. I do not know whether Thompson lived there at the time. I forget where we had the rooms.

TWENTY-THIRD DAY.

D. R. Fowler.

11 Sept. 1866.

18,561. Was it the same house as Thompson now has?—I think we had not those rooms in 1859. I think the Conservatives had those rooms in 1859.

18,562. You did engage a room, but you cannot remember where it was?—I think we had rooms. Whether it was the 1859 election that we had Goodrick's rooms I do not recollect.

18,563. Where is Mr. Goodrick's?—In the Market Place. We had those rooms one year, but whether it was 1859 I am not able to say.

M. A. Pye.

MARY ANN PYE sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

18,564. You are the wife of Robert Pye?—Yes.

18,565. Who lives in Gaol Street?—Yes.

18,566. What is your husband?—He is a mariner. A grocer I suppose he is put down there. He is not able to attend.

18,567. We have a certificate here from Mr. Palmer to say he is too unwell to attend?—Yes; it has been the case for the last twelve months past.

18,568. Did you receive any money for him at the last election?—No; he had nothing to do with it before.

18,569. But did you receive any money at the last election?—This election? Yes.

18,570. What did you receive?—15*l.*

18,571. Who gave it to you?—My son-in-law, Joseph Moore. It came from Mr. Jones.

18,572. You say your son-in-law brought it to you from Mr. Jones?—Yes.

18,573. And what is his name?—Joseph Moore.

18,574. Is your son-in-law a voter?—No.

18,575. Had your son-in-law a ticket?—Not that I know of.

18,576. Where does your son-in-law live?—In London.

18,577. Did you hear from your son-in-law who told him to go to Mr. Jones?—Mr. Steel, a friend of his.

18,578. Is that Richard Steel?—I am not sure of his christian name.

11,579. Does he live in Howard Street?—I am not sure where he lives; I cannot say. I think it is Richard Steel.

18,580. Is he a clerk upon the quay?—I think he is.

18,581. Then it is Richard Steel. Did you give that money to your husband?—No.

18,582. You kept it?—I spent it.

18,583. Did your husband know that you had received that money?—Yes, of course he knew that I received it.

18,584. Did he know that you had received it before he gave his vote?—Yes; but he was very ill then.

18,585. Did your husband vote at the election before the last, in 1859?—Yes.

18,586. Do you know whether he received any money at that time?—I am quite sure he did not, nor would he have done it now but his health has been very bad for a long, long time.

H. Brand.

HENRY BRAND sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

18,587. What are you?—A woollen-draper.

18,588. We have heard your name mentioned very often. What part did you take in the last election?—A very slight part indeed; a very little indeed.

18,589. Is your name Henry Jermyn Brand?—No.

18,590. (Mr. Russell.) Do you know a man named Leman?—Yes.

18,591. Is Mr. Leman a voter?—He is.

18,592. It is Henry Leman?—Yes, I believe that is the same party.

18,593. Did you receive a sum of money from him? From Mr. Henry Leman?

18,594. Yes.—No.

18,595. Did you give him a sum of money?—I gave him a sum of money.

18,596. How much?—10*l.*

18,597. When?—I think it was a day or two after the election.

18,598. Why did you give him the 10*l.*?—He asked me for it. He said he had given it to a man named Charles Crickmer out of his own pocket, and he asked me to procure it for him.

18,599. Charles Robert Crickmer?—I do not know if it is Charles Robert. It is a man named Crickmer.

18,600. Then you reimbursed him?—Yes; at least I got the money for him. He asked me to do so.

18,601. From whom did you get the 10*l.*?—I am not quite certain. I have an impression that I had it from Mr. Edwards; but really my mind is not certain about it. I find Mr. Jones says I had it from him; possibly I might.

18,602. Do you remember where you received this?—At the "Angel."

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

18,603. (Mr. Slade.) Do you wish to make a statement?—There is some little peculiarity in this case, as you will find when it is explained. I wish the Court to ask Mr. Brand if he did not find a ticket in my possession with the letter B—a B ticket. I should like to know whether he did not find it himself. He was there when I was balancing my accounts.

H. Brand.

HENRY BRAND recalled; examination resumed by Mr. RUSSELL.

18,604. Do you remember that?—Mr. Jones showed me a ticket.

18,605. At the time?—No.

18,606. Did you go there when Mr. Jones was balancing his accounts with Mr. Salmon and Mr. Edwards?—Yes; I went upstairs to them.

18,607. Was that the occasion when he showed you a B ticket?—Yes; I did not know what it was.

18,608. A ticket representing the 10*l.* you paid to Mr. Leman?—I cannot say. I really do not know whether I had the money from Jones or not. My impression is I had it from Edwards.

18,609. Was Mr. Jones present?—I should think he was.

18,610. Did you receive not more than 10*l.* when you were at the "Angel?"—No.

18,611. Was that the only money that you had?—That was the only transaction I had at all with the election.

18,612. Did you take an active part in the election of 1859?—No.

18,613. Had you a vote?—I had a vote.

18,614. And did you vote upon the same side?—I have always voted Liberal.

18,615. How came you to know that you would be reimbursed the 10*l.* if you went up to the "Angel?"—I had no doubt about it. It was perfectly understood that Mr. Jones or those other gentlemen had money. Mr. Leman came to me about it. I declined to have anything to do with it, but he came to me and said he had paid it out of his own money; and then I went and asked whoever it was at the "Angel" for the money.

18,616. Why should Mr. Leman select you to get it?—This man is in my employ. A great deal has been said about this man, that I should coerce him to vote upon the side that I voted. I had never seen that man, and I did not know that man had a vote till Mr. Leman came to me. It appears Mr. Lane, a rate collector, a Conservative and a very strong partisan, went to this man. This man had never had a vote till that year, and my opinion is, that he would have voted without money if it had not been for Mr. Lane. Then that man went to Mr. Leman, and Mr. Leman came to me, but the man might have voted which way he pleased. I never should have thought of coercing him.

18,617. Had you seen Mr. Jones before you went up to the "Angel?"—I had seen him before, but never spoken to him.

18,618. Had you seen Mr. Edwards before?—I had seen him but never spoken to him.

18,619. Did you ever hand in a list?—No; I had no list.

18,620. Never?—Never. I never asked a man for a vote.

18,621. (Mr. Slade.) It appears that this man Crickmer had 10*l.* drawn from Mr. Edwards and 10*l.* from Mr. Jones, from both of them?—It seems so.

18,622. Can you tell me whether the gentleman who gave you the money was a gentleman in spectacles?—I have always had the impression that I received that money from Mr. Edwards. I have read since in the papers Mr. Jones said he gave it to me. If he says so, then I must have been mistaken. Had I not seen that observation of his in the paper I should have said most decidedly I received it from Mr. Edwards.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

18,623. (Mr. Slade.) Do you wish to make a further statement?—What I want to call to Mr. Brand's attention is this—whether I did not show him a B ticket with the man's number upon it, and ask him if he could recognize the number.

HENRY BRAND recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

H. Brand.

18,624. Did you see that ticket?—Certainly. Mr. Jones showed it to me. That is the first ticket I ever saw of anyone of the tickets, and the only ticket that I ever saw. May I be allowed to make a short statement about my having attempted to coerce this man? I never exchanged a word with him upon the election matter.

WILLIAM UTTING sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

W. Utting.

18,625. What are you?—A fish merchant.

18,626. You had a good deal to do with the election?—No.

18,627. Had you not?—No. I received 30*l.* from Mr. Downing, that is all.

18,628. And what did you do with it?—I gave 15*l.* to Westoby and 15*l.* to Haylett.

18,629. What else?—Nothing else.

18,630. What is Mr. Haylett?—A beachman.

18,631. Samuel Haylett?—Yes, Samuel Haylett.

18,632. Was that all you did?—Yes.

18,633. Did you ask Mr. Downing for this money?—Well, when he asked me if I knew any voter, I told him there were two that would take 15*l.* each, and he said, "Take the money." I said, "I would rather not have anything to do with it." "However," he said, "take it," and I did take it. That is all that passed.

18,634. And you got nothing for yourself?—No, I did not want any money for myself, nor never took any.

18,635. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

18,636. Did you get anything in this way in 1859?—No, I voted in 1859.

18,637. Is that all you can tell us?—That is all.

18,638. (Mr. Slade.) Did you not get 40*l.* from Mr. Downing?—It was only 30*l.*; and Mr. Downing knows it was only 30*l.* I saw it in the paper that he said 30*l.* or 40*l.*

GEORGE WILLIAM MOORE sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

G. W. Moore.

18,639. What are you?—An engineer.

18,640. Will you tell us what you did at the last election?—I sat in a recess at the "Army and Navy" tavern.

18,641. When Mr. Jones was there?—Yes, when Jones was there.

18,642. Was that all you did?—Yes, that is all I did there.

18,643. Is that all you did at the election?—Well, I certainly called upon a voter or two. I think you have had that in evidence.

18,644. I want you to tell us yourself what you have done. Whom did you call upon?—I think I called upon Holmes, the barber—Martin Holmes I think it is—Gaol Street.

18,645. Did you call upon him to give him money?—No, not to give him money, but to ask him which way he was going to vote.

18,646. Had you money through any part of the election?—I had money. I will explain that there were two captains who came up from Newcastle to vote, and they asked me if they voted for Brogden and Vanderbyl whether I could get them their expenses, and they both of them handed me in a bill. I went up to the "Angel" with the bill and gave it to Mr. Edwards. He said he thought he could not pay it, but I had better go and see Mr. Jones. That was on the morning of the election. I saw Mr. Jones, and Mr. Jones gave me the money, and I gave it to the two captains.

18,647. Will you tell us the names of the two captains?—Woodcock was one.

18,648. Is that Thomas Woodcock?—I think it is Thomas.

18,649. Who is the other?—James Johnson; he is a captain also; they both came up from Newcastle together.

18,650. What did you get for Woodcock?—I think I drew either 17*l.* 10*s.* or 18*l.* for him, I will not be certain which. He gave me the bill, and I handed it in when I drew the money.

18,651. And Johnson?—15*l.* I think for Johnson.

18,652. James Johnson?—I think his name is James.

18,653. Do you know where he lives?—No, I do not know where he lives.

18,654. One Johnson lives in Row No. 108, and the other lives in Queen's Road. However, Woodcock will tell us?—Yes, Woodcock will tell you.

18,655. Do you know if he lives in Bridge Road, Southtown?—No, I do not know where he lives. He was a stranger to me; he was with Captain Woodcock at that time. They both came up from Newcastle that morning.

18,656. Was that all the money that passed through your hands?—Well, there were two others, two more captains.

18,657. Will you give us their names?—One is Captain Barnard, of the floating light.

18,658. Is it William Barnard?—Barnard. I do not know whether it is William or Robert.

18,659. Where does he live?—Somewhere down South-end.

18,660. What did you give him?—He had 10*l.*

18,661. And who was the other?—Captain Cotton. He belonged to the floating light too.

18,662. Is it Charles Cotton or William Cotton?—I do not know his christian name.

TWENTY-THIRD DAY.

G. W. Moore.

11 Sept. 1866.

18,663. Do you know where he lives; does he live in Apsley Road?—I think that is the place he lives at.

18,664. That is William John Cotton. What did he get?—He had 10*l.* I must tell you, these two men had to send men off on board the light for a month, at the time they came on shore, and they handed me in an account of their expenses. I also took that to Mr. Edwards and he referred me to Mr. Jones, and I left the account there.

18,665. Who gave you the money?—Mr. Jones, up at the "Angel."

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

18,666. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Can you explain this?—I can explain that there is another case similar to that, which Mr. Edwards referred to me, and Mr. Edwards showed me the account. I said to Edwards, "That is an illegal expenditure; it had better come "through me; the auditors will not pass these things, "and you had better let me pay them in the ordinary "way of tickets. If any more come, send them to "me." I said, "I am sure they are very illegal, and "they will not be passed."

18,667. You have not included Cotton in your account?—It has been omitted. I do not know how it is.

18,668. I will tell you how it may be explained. Robert Barnard is put down in your list as having received 20*l.*, whereas he only got 10*l.* He drew two 10*l.* and gave one to Cotton?—That will be the reason.

G. W. Moore.

GEORGE WILLIAM MOORE recalled; examination resumed by Mr. SLADE.

18,669. Is that so?—Yes. I must tell you these captains did not take it as a bribe at all; they considered it for their expenses.

18,670. It was an illegal payment?—They were not aware of it at the time. That made me hand in the accounts to Mr. Edwards.

18,671. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Is that all the money that passed through your hands?—That is all the money that passed through my hands, except 2*l.* that I paid to Mr. Cattermole.

18,672. What for?—For the room, I suppose.

18,673. Did you get that from Mr. Jones?—No, Mr. Fill gave me that. He was paying some little accounts, and I said, "There are 2*l.* for Cattermole," and I gave Mr. Fill a receipt for it.

18,674. Besides those payments you made, did you also send up voters to different places where money was being disbursed?—Not to different places.

18,675. Then to one place?—The parties I canvassed said, "I am offered money on the other side." I said I had nothing to do with money, "but if you "go to the 'Army and Navy' tavern, they will "settle there with you."

18,676. You did send up voters to the "Army and Navy" tavern?—I believe I did, one or two.

18,677. Can you recollect the names?—Holmes the barber, and Pope the publican.

18,678. Are those the only two?—They are the only two that I can recollect.

18,679. What Pope is it?—He lives in Gaol Street.

18,680. George?—Yes.

18,681. Did you canvass with Mr. Fill?—I was perfectly alone. I went over the ground too fast for Mr. Fill.

18,682. Several voters say they were sent up by you and Mr. Fill. Have you given us the names of all?—There may be one or two that I may have seen.

18,683. James Johnson?—I have given you that name.

18,684. George Dunnell?—I do not recollect anything about him.

18,685. He says he was sent up by you?—I do not believe it.

18,686. (Mr. Russell.) Frederick Bellamy?—I saw a report in the paper about that, but I do not know him.

18,687. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Can you give us any other names that you sent up?—There was Ablett spoke to me.

18,688. Did you send him up?—I certainly did; I think I did.

18,689. Any more?—That is all I can recollect.

18,690. Now what did you do in 1859?—Nothing.

18,691. Did you vote then?—Yes; I have always voted a Liberal all my lifetime, and I hope I shall always do the same while I live.

18,692. Do you know anything at all about the bribery in 1859?—Nothing.

18,693. You received nothing for your own vote?—No, I should think not.

18,694. (Mr. Slade.) When did you make Mr. Jones's acquaintance?—I think it was the Monday before the election.

18,695. Were you introduced to him?—I was introduced to Mr. Jones by Mr. Edwards.

18,696. Mr. Jones told you that he was going to pay these gentlemen at that room where you went to afterwards, behind the screen?—He asked me if I would walk down to the "Army and Navy" tavern in the evening, and he said I might hear a little fun.

18,697. Was that from curiosity?—It was from curiosity I went there I assure you, and I was very much amused at the time.

18,698. What amused you?—By hearing Mr. Jones lecture some of the voters.

18,699. What lecture did he give them?—He told some of them he thought by their appearance they ought to be above taking a bribe, and they made some frivolous excuses that they were hard up for money, and that it would do them a good deal of good, and he handed them the money, and said, "There it is, and I hope it will do you good."

18,700. Did you recognize who those voters were by their voices?—I recognized them when they gave in their names.

18,701. Did you see them?—No.

18,702. Mr. Makepeace was one of the lectured?—I remember one. Makepeace is one name.

18,703. Do you recollect any other name?—Captain Wright. He gave him a little bit of a lecture.

18,704. That was your friend?—He was my friend.

18,705. Who else?—There were several others. I cannot recollect their names now.

18,706. When I said "your friend," you have not given us his name yet?—Yes, I did; I gave him with Ablett. I think it is Francis Wright. I tell you why I think I did give the name, because the one is the master of the boat and the other is the mate.

18,707. Ablett is the mate?—Yes.

18,708. Tell me, is not Francis Wright the man who got 17*l.* 10*s.*?—Yes.

18,709. And not Thomas Woodcock?—Yes; Thomas Woodcock is another captain. Woodcock came up from Newcastle.

18,710. The thing is this, Francis Wright is put down as 17*l.* 10*s.* in Mr. Jones's list?—Yes.

18,711. Whereas Woodcock is put down as 20*l.*?—And Ablett is put down as 17*l.* 10*s.*; 35*l.* the two.

18,712. You sent up Ablett and Wright to Mr. Jones?—I told them to go up there.

18,713. And they got 35*l.* between them?—Yes.

18,714. Can you account for Thomas Woodcock having drawn a 20*l.* ticket?—He did not draw a ticket; I took his bill in and I got the money. Whether it was 17*l.* 10*s.* or 18*l.* I cannot tell you.

18,715. You drew 20*l.*?—No, I did not; I only drew the amount of the bill.

18,716. Did you give any ticket to Mr. Jones?—No, I gave no person any ticket.

18,717. Are you certain that Woodcock got 17*l.* 10*s.* or 18*l.*?—I cannot say; it was done in a minute

They handed me the account in the street at 12 o'clock in the morning, when the election was virtually over. I may say again they said they had come all the way from Newcastle to vote for the Liberals, and it would be very hard for them to pay the expenses themselves.

18,718. You have told us all that you know as regards giving money?—Yes.

18,719. (Mr. Russell.) You went about in company with Mr. Fill?—No; I was principally by myself, because I could go along over the ground quicker than Mr. Fill.

18,720. You have been so mentioned?—I was, I think, in the evidence, but it is not correct.

18,721. Who employed you, or did you do it upon your own authority?—I did it on my own authority, being a partisan.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

18,722. (Mr. Slade.) Can you explain this?—He gave me a bill.

18,723. You put it down 20*l.*?—I cannot say how that is. It may be some portion of the 10*l.* overplus, I cannot say. He gave me a bill for this. You know that I have 10*l.* balance, and there is possibly one or two that I might make mistakes about. Altogether I have now 7*l.* accounted for; I have 3*l.* balance yet; I have still 3*l.* over.

EDWARD ROBERT EDWARDS sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

E. R. Edwards.

18,724. What part did you take in the last election?—Very little indeed.

18,725. What was it?—I think I was about two hours in it; that was on the Monday evening prior to the election.

18,726. I forgot to ask you what you are?—I am a fish salesman and agent.

18,727. Are you brother to Thomas Edwards?—I am his elder brother.

18,728. You say you were there on the Monday evening previous to the election for about two hours?—Yes.

18,729. What did you do in that two hours?—I was waiting for some money.

18,730. Did you get it?—Yes.

18,731. How much?—120*l.* I think so; it might have been 115*l.* or 120*l.*, I cannot speak positively.

18,732. Who did you get it from?—I got it from Mr. Edwards, the gentleman who came from Preston.

18,733. What did you do with it?—I gave it to different voters; there was first of all 20*l.* to Samuel Boulton, Blackfriars Road—Samuel Boulton, the elder.

18,734. Did you give it him?—Yes. Then George Burton, Lancaster Road.

18,735. How much did he have?—20*l.* Thomas Turrell, Queen's Road.

18,736. How much?—20*l.*

18,737. The next?—Robert Brown, I do not know whether it is Row 117 or Row 112, 15*l.*; Alfred Brown, 15*l.*; Samuel Kelf, Marlborough Place, 15*l.*; and James Palmer, King Street, 15*l.* That is all.

18,738. That is 120*l.*?—Yes, I think so.

18,739. Is that all the money that you had?—Yes; that is all the money that I had.

18,740. Did you give Mr. Edwards tickets for those?—No; I was introduced to Mr. Edwards at the "Angel," and I received the money in a small room.

18,741. Did you give him a list?—I think I did hand him in a little piece of paper.

18,742. With the names written on it?—Yes, and he asked me who I was. I told him I had been a Liberal many years although I had never voted, and he asked some gentlemen round about whether they knew me, and they said yes, they knew me to be perfectly right, and the money was handed over to me.

18,743. Did you go to those people's houses to give it to them?—I think I did some of them, they were personal friends of my own.

18,744. Is that all that you know about the election?—That is all.

18,745. Do you know anything about the election in 1859?—No; I have been on the register, I think, for about 16 years, and I never did vote yet.

18,746. Did you vote this last time?—No.

18,747. (Mr. Slade.) Though you did not vote you might have taken some part in it?—I never took any part till this last election; that was just on the spur of the moment in fact I have never canvassed or done anything at any election since the election of 1848, at the time Mr. Rumbold and Mr. Saunders were returned for this borough. I canvassed with Mr. Rumbold that year as a clerk, and that was the last election I was in.

18,748. (Mr. Russell.) Why did you not vote in 1865?—I have never voted.

18,749. Why?—For reasons peculiar to myself. I took a fancy to not voting.

18,750. Why did you take a fancy?—I do not know. I had a right to do as I liked with my vote.

18,751. You had a perfect right, but you go and buy a number of votes?—I should not have done that had not those parties said something to me about the matter, that was all.

18,752. What are your own political principles?—My own political opinions are Liberal; I was born a Liberal, and I hope I shall die one.

18,753. Why did you not vote for Mr. Brogden and Vanderbyl?—Because I always promised I would never vote up to the last election.

18,754. Whom did you promise?—I made that promise to myself.

18,755. Can you give me no reason?—I had no particular reason; it was a fancy I had.

18,756. Had anyone used any inducement with you not to vote?—No; I have been employed in various positions in this town of great trust, and I have never used any influence till this last time, and neither did I choose to vote.

18,757. Has Mr. Shuckford ever canvassed you?—Mr. Shuckford did ask me once whether I intended voting, and I told him no; that was all that passed between us.

18,758. Did he say to you if you would not vote for Lacon and Goodson he hoped you would not vote at all?—Certainly not; Mr. Shuckford knew me too well for that.

18,759. I understand you drew all this money from Mr. Edwards?—Yes, I did.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

C. Satterthwaite.

18,760. Have you 170?—No, I have not; I have 171.

18,761. It would not come into your list at all?—No.

18,762. 171 is Samuel Boulton, jun. I see from your list he has 15*l.*?—Yes.

18,763. That man has denied receiving any money?—Yes; and I remember now some one has sent me a paper stating that I have been mistaken, that it was not Samuel Boulton, jun., but Samuel Boulton, sen. I gave it to one.

18,764. In that case Samuel Boulton, sen., was paid twice over?—However, the money was drawn twice over. I do not know that he was paid twice over.

18,765. This man Edwards gave 20*l.* to Samuel Boulton?—One is for the son and the other the father. The son denies having received it. Somebody says I am mistaken, that it means the other. I am not mistaken, because Edwards seems to have paid Samuel Boulton, sen. I cannot be mistaken, the money has been drawn for him.

TWENTY-THIRD DAY.

E. R. Edwards.

11 Sept. 1866.

EDWARD ROBERT EDWARDS recalled; further examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

18,766. Do you think Samuel Boulton drew the money twice?—I have no opinion that Samuel Boulton, the elder, received the money twice.

18,767. (Mr. Russell.) Have you any reason to believe that Samuel Boulton, jun., did receive the money?—I do not know the man; I do not know anything about it.

18,768. You did not hear that he did?—No.

18,769. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know Samuel Boulton, the younger?—I think I do; he is the son of the man I gave the money to. I know there is such a person, but I know very little about him.

18,770. You did not canvass him?—No; I never canvassed anybody.

J. Carter.

JAMES CARTER sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

18,775. Are you aware that your name has been mentioned?—I saw it in the papers, that Mr. Livingston did mention it, but he had no right to do so.

18,776. Are you quite certain you did not offer him any money?—Quite certain, not in reality; I will take my oath of that.

18,777. You said just now if you had offered him money it was your own idea?—It had nothing to do with the election.

18,778. Did you ever offer any money?—Not in reality.

18,779. In a joke?—Well, I have said, "How are "the markets this morning, will seven and a half be of "any use to you?" but only out of joke. I did not even know that any bribery was going on, no farther than people coming and talking and said bribery was going on. It never interested me either one way or the other.

18,780. Did you not receive any money whatever?—No.

18,781. Did you promise as soon as you were canvassed?—I promised Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

18,782. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

18,783. How did you vote then?—For Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey.

18,784. You are quite sure if you ever mentioned the subject of money it was jocularly?—It was entirely in a joke.

18,788. Who was it to?—To Mr. Newark.

18,789. What did you offer him?—He said, "I will vote for 10*l.*" I had a deal of trouble with him; when I say a deal of trouble, it was this, I was out with the canvass one day and they called at Newark's and he was out; I said, you need not trouble yourself about him I am certain he is all right, I will see after him. I called two or three times, and he said, "I never had a vote before and I never intended to vote." I called several times, at last he said, "If I have 10*l.* I will vote." I met Mr. Hickling; I said, Hickling, there is a case, but you must not carry the money to him, bring it to my house and I will forward it to him.

18,790. And then you gave Newark the 10*l.*?—Yes.

18,791. For his vote?—Yes, for his vote.

18,792. What made you go to Mr. Hickling for the money?—I saw Mr. Hickling in the market.

18,793. Do you ask everybody you meet in the market for money?—No, I saw Mr. Hickling in and out of the "Angel."

18,794. Did Mr. Hickling say he would get you the money?—Mr. Hickling brought me the money on the Tuesday morning.

18,795. Did Mr. Hickling ask you if you could get any more voters for money?—No.

18,796. What else did you do besides that?—Nothing else. I brought up Butler on the morning of the election, but I never offered him any money.

18,797. Did Mr. Butler say he wanted money?—Butler told me he wanted 20*l.*

18,798. And did he ask you to get it for him?—No.

18,799. Why did he tell you he wanted 20*l.*?—I really cannot tell. I asked him which way he was going, and he said, "I really do not know." I said, "Do you mean to say there is anything you want," and he said, "Yes, 20*l.*"

18,800. Go on.—That is all that passed, with the exception of this; all I said was, "I really know nothing about any money. I have nothing to do with it." The next morning he called on me and said, "I voted yesterday, but I have not got my money, where am I to go?" "My dear fellow," I says, "I know nothing about money." He says, "Who is the leading man?" I says, "I do not know of anybody, without it is Mr. Fowler," and I believe he called on Mr. Fowler the next morning.

18,801. Daniel Read Fowler?—Mr. Fowler, in the market.

18,802. We hear he went to Mr. Fowler and abused him?—That I know nothing about at all. I know that he came back and said I cannot get it. I said, I know nothing about money and I wished he would not come bothering me, that was on the Thursday morning after the election.

18,934. What are you?—A publican.

18,935. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—20*l.*

18,936. Who from?—Well, I do not know the man I got it from. I got it at the "Army and Navy" tavern.

18,937. Were you offered anything on the other side?—No.

18,938. Did you get anything at the election of 1859?—I had not a vote, not for the borough.

T. M. Miller.

THOMAS MOORE MILLER sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

18,939. What are you?—A labourer.

18,940. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—15*l.*

18,941. Where did you get it?—At the "Army and Navy" tavern.

18,942. Had you a ticket?—No.

18,943. Who sent you up?—I was told of it by other people, and I went up on my own accord.

18,944. Do you know who told you?—No, I cannot say who it was.

18,945. What day was it?—The day before the election, or the night before the election.

18,946. On Tuesday night?—Yes.

18,947. When did you hear about it?—On the afternoon before the election.

18,948. In the afternoon you heard that money was being given away?—Yes.

18,949. Did you hear it said it was going to be given away at night?—No. I was told money was being given away, and I went down the same as other people.

18,950. Was that the gentleman who gave it you (pointing to Mr. Satterthwaite)?—I cannot tell you the man who gave it to me.

18,951. Are you sure you got 15*l.*?—I am sure I got 15*l.* and no more.

18,952. Was it not 20*l.*?—No.

18,953. Did you count it?—I did.

18,954. Who canvassed you?—Mr. Brogden and them that went round, nobody else. I was never spoken to by the other side except by Mr. Cooper.

18,955. Did Mr. Cooper offer you anything?—He did.

18,956. How much?—I gave him a denial there and then that I should not vote on that side.

18,957. Who do you suppose gave the name to Mr. Jones?—I am sure I cannot tell you; they gave it to me when I went, when he asked me who I was.

18,958. And he gave you 15*l.*?—Yes.

18,959. Did you receive 20*l.*?—I never received it.

18,960. You got 15*l.*?—Yes.

18,960*a*. Did you go into the room and ask for 15*l.*?—Yes.

18,961. Why did you ask for 15*l.*? I do not know. I could mention that when I went into the room I was asked what money I wanted, and I said 15*l.*, and it was given to me, and I was told to be early at the poll.

18,962. Why did you ask for 15*l.*?—I am sure I cannot tell. I do not know the reason why I asked for that.

18,963. Did you hear that was the sum that was being given away?—No. I heard from 15*l.* to 20*l.* was to be had.

18,964. You were not exorbitant in your demands?—No. I made very good use of what I did get.

18,965. Do you know Mr. Downing?—No, I have never seen him.

18,966. Or Mr. Moore or Mr. Fill?—No, I never see the man during the election, only the party about canvassing the first part of the election.

18,967. Do you know Downing?—Yes, I know him.

18,968. Do you know Edwards?—I cannot say I do.

18,969. A tailor?—No.

18,970. Do they know you?—Not that I know of. I never saw him and never spoke to him.

18,971. (Mr. Slade.) Was this money you had wrapped up in brown paper?—No. 10*l.* in white paper and five sovereigns loose.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

C. Satterthwaite.

18,972. What is the explanation?—What is the number?

18,973. 855?—855, 20*l.*

18,974. This is rather an inexplicable case?—I cannot understand it and I can give no explanation of it.

18,975. Do you recollect him?—No, I do not. There is no doubt I paid him and no one else.

18,976. It is the difference between the 15*l.* and the 20*l.*?—Yes, that is where I cannot tell the difference.

18,977. The name must have been handed to you by some party?—Yes. I only took that amount down that I had upon my list, and I had to go back again for some more. Edwards sent a fresh lot down.

18,978. If a man like this came to you have you any doubt you paid him the sum mentioned in your list, or would you pay him what he asked?—I should not ask him what he wanted, I should ask him his name. I should know the parties, or know if any arrangement had been made with them. I ask him his name. I refer to the register. I ask him where he lives. He told me, and I had upon the list so and so put down for him, and then I should copy it off on to the register. I know all my money was put up in paper parcels, I do not know whether brown or white. Some of them would be white and some brown. I put them up according to the list I had to pay before I went down there, so that there could be no mistake in giving too much or too little.

18,979. This man says he asked you for 15*l.* and he got it?—He is mistaken; I should not have given it to him.

THOMAS MOORE MILLER recalled; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

T. M. Miller.

18,980. What do you say to that?—I say it was done up in a paper, 15 sovereigns loose, that is what I received.

18,981. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

18,982. (Mr. Slade.) You hear what he says?—There is another Miller next to that; it says 13*l.*

18,983. That is 857?—Whether I have made a mistake, and this should stand for 15*l.*, or not, I do not know. We shall know when he comes up before the Court. I may have put it opposite to the wrong Miller; this 13*l.* may mean 15*l.*

THOMAS KIRK sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

T. Kirk.

18,984. What are you?—A labourer.

18,985. What did you receive for your vote at the last election?—15*l.*

18,986. Where did you get it at?—At the "Angel."

18,987. Who sent you there?—He was a smack owner, I forget his name now. I think Mr. Parker, a smack owner.

18,990. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

18,991. Had you a ticket?—No.

DANIEL CARTER sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

18,997. Did you get anything then?—No, never before.

18,998. Where do you live?—King Street.

18,999. (Mr. Slade.) Who sent you to Cattermole's?—I went there from general report, no person sent me. It was generally reported money was being given, and I went there myself.

19,000. Whom did you go with?—No person, I went alone.

19,001. Whom did you go up to the house with?—I walked by myself, not with a companion.

19,002. I thought you had some friend with you?—No, not when I got the money.

19,003. Had you not?—No.

19,004. Did you send anybody else there?—No.

HENRY LAWRENCE sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

H. Lawrence.

19,005. What are you?—A professor of music.

19,006. What did you get at the last election for your vote?—15*l.*

19,007. Where did you get it at?—I had a ticket.

19,008. Who from?—From Mr. More, through Mr. Downing. Mr. More is a publican, I think.

19,009. Were you offered anything on the other side?—Yes.

TWENTY-THIRD DAY.

H. Lawrence.

11 Sept. 1866.

19,010. How much?—20*l.* twice over.

19,011. Did you take it?—No.

19,012. Who was the party who offered it you?—Mr. Harbord, through Mr. Cooper, I think.

19,013. (Mr. Russell.) Which Harbord?—He lives in Gaol Street.

19,014. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Who is the other person who offered you the 20*l.*?—He came twice over. No other person came. He came down to me twice.

19,015. At the election of 1859 had you a vote?—No.

19,016. (Mr. Slade.) Whom did Harbord ask you to vote for?—For Lacon and Goodson.

19,017. Harbord is on the other side, is he not?—I believe he split his vote. I believe he voted for Lacon and Brogden.

19,018. You mean the cowkeeper?—Yes.

19,019. That is Robert Harbord?—In Gaol Street.

19,020. Did Harbord tell you he was employed by Cooper?—No, he merely said he could get me 20*l.*

R. Pratt.

ROBERT PRATT sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

19,021. What are you?—A painter.

19,022. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—My wife got 10*l.*, that was all. I find I was put down 15*l.*, but I never received that.

19,023. Your wife got that?—Yes, that I never saw.

19,024. You never saw it?—No.

19,025. Do you know she got it?—Yes, I am sure she got it.

19,026. Did you know she got it before you voted?—She got it before I voted, because it was the night before the election.

19,027. Who did she get it from?—Mr. Downing; I was ill in bed at the time.

19,028. And you are sure she got 15*l.*?—I am sure of that.

19,029. You were quite satisfied she should have it?—Yes, I never received it; my hands never touched it.

19,030. Were you offered anything on the other side to vote?—No.

19,031. Have you always been a Liberal?—Yes.

19,032. In the year 1859 did you vote?—Yes, I voted then, but I never received anything, and I should not this time if he had not come up; and he said I might as well take the money as well as other people. Other people better off than I am had taken it.

19,033. Who said that?—Mr. Downing.

19,034. (Mr. Slade.) You will not swear your wife did not get 15*l.*?—Yes, that I will.

19,035. You are a very bold man?—I will do that.

W. Sillis.

WILLIAM SILLIS, senior, sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

19,036. What are you?—A master mariner.

19,037. Did you get anything for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

19,038. How much?—15*l.*

19,039. Who from?—I do not know.

19,040. Where?—From a gentleman at the "Army and Navy."

19,041. When?—On the Monday I think it was.

19,042. What time of the day?—It was at night.

19,043. Is William Sillis, junior, your son?—Yes.

19,044. He got 15*l.*, too, did he not?—I do not know.

19,045. Had you a ticket?—Yes.

19,048. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

19,049. Did you get anything then?—No.

19,050. Were you offered anything then?—No.

19,051. Did you vote for Lacon and Stracey in 1859?—Yes, and the time before I voted for Sir Edmund Lacon.

19,052. You changed your politics then?—Yes.

19,053. Was that the 15*l.*?—No, I do not know for that.

19,054. What was the reason?—Because I did not like some of the other party, and that is the truth.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

19,055. (Mr. Slade.) This name is not entered in your list at all, No. 1,126?—No, but 1,125 is.

19,056. That relates to Sillis, junior?—I must have made a mistake and put down the wrong one.

19,057. (Mr. Russell.) But William Sillis, junior, has been up, and says he had it?—Has he had it from me?

19,058. Yes, No. 1,125 has had it?—I have got 1,125 on my list.

19,059. This is one of Downing's men, and it may have been a transfer?—Yes, it may have been a transfer.

W. Harman.

WILLIAM HARMAN sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

19,063. Who gave it to you?—That I do not know. I never saw the gentleman before in my life, and I have never seen him since.

19,064. Do you mean the "Angel?"—Yes, the "Angel," I suppose.

19,065. Who sent you there?—A gentleman of the name of Utting, in Charlotte Street.

19,066. Is it Hewitt?—I suppose it is.

19,067. Is that the name of the gentleman who gave you the ticket?—I suppose so.

19,068. You said it was Mr. Utting sent you?—You see I am a bad speller, and could not read it.

19,069. Did anyone offer you money on the other side?—No.

19,070. Were you known as a Liberal?—No, I have always been very liberal, but not that way.

19,071. In 1859 had you a vote?—No, they took it away from me when I was 300 miles from here; that is the kindness they did me. I have the proof of that in my pocket. That is what they took away from me when I was 300 miles from here.

19,072. Who took it away from you?—I do not know; Sir Edmund Lacon and a good many more, and I was determined to have my revenge, so I voted for Brogden and Vanderbyl.

19,073. That was your freedom that was taken away?—Yes.

19,074. They took away your freedom, did they?—Yes, when I was 300 miles from here.

19,075. So you had your revenge by voting against them?—I had my revenge to retaliate, and I told Sir Edmund Lacon, when he came to me for my vote, that it was a long time since I had my vote taken away from me, and I would take this one to myself.

19,076. I conclude you do not get your beer from Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes, I do. I pay for it before I get it, and people come into my house and say, "You draw Sir Edmund Lacon's beer." I say, "No, "I do not, I pay for it before I have it, so that it is my "beer."

EDWARD SPRINGALL sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

19,078. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—20 sovereigns.

19,079. Where did you get it?—At the "Angel."

19,080. Who sent you there?—Who gave it to me I do not know.

19,081. But who sent you there?—Mr. Edwards.

19,090. But where; at Mr. Wright's?—Yes, on the Church Plain.

19,091. Were you offered anything on the other side?—No.

19,092. Who sent you to Mr. Wright's?—I do not know the young man's name, and yet I do know it. He lives in a public-house on the Church Plain at the corner; I think the "Saracen's Head." He told me to go there.

19,093. You had not arranged for anything beforehand, had you?—No.

19,094. Was it Clements?—Yes, that is the name.

19,095. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

19,096. Did you get anything then?—No; never had anything before. I have always voted, and never had anything before.

R. H. Hammond.

ROBERT HUNTING HAMMOND; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

19,097. What are you?—A joiner and paperhanger.

19,098. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—20*l.*

19,099. Where did you get it?—At the "Angel."

10,100. Who sent you to the "Angel?"—I went with Mr. Juler.

19,101. Were you offered anything on the other side?—Not offered anything. I was asked to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon.

19,102. Were you offered any money?—Not offered any money.

19,103. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

C. Rackham.

CHARLES RACKHAM sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

19,104. What are you?—A baker.

19,105. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—10*l.*, but I am put down 20*l.*

19,106. Are you certain it was 10*l.*?—I am confident it was 10*l.*

19,107. Whom did you get it from?—I suppose it was Mr. Jones, at the "Army and Navy."

19,108. Did you get a ticket?—Yes.

19,109. Who from?—Mr. Newman, the tailor. I did not know the man's name till afterwards.

19,110. Did you look at your ticket?—There was nothing on it particular. I did not know what was on it.

19,111. Was there any letter upon it?—There appeared to be nothing but crosses. I did not notice it. I slipped it in my pocket.

19,112. Did you observe any letters upon it?—It appeared to be more like an "M," and then crossed over. I could not say exactly what was on it. It was only a small piece of card, not worth noticing.

19,113. When you went into the "Army and Navy" did you present your ticket?—Yes.

19,114. And were you asked your name?—Yes, I believe I was asked my name.

19,115. And was the money handed to you?—Yes, the money was handed to me.

19,116. 10*l.*?—Yes.

19,117. Loose?—Yes, quite loose.

19,118. When was this?—In the evening, about half-past 9 or a quarter to 10, about two days before the election.

19,119. Monday or Tuesday?—I cannot say, because I do not recollect what day the election was on.

19,120. The election was on Wednesday?—Then I should say it was Monday night.

19121. (Mr. Slade.) Does Newman live in the Havelock Road?—I do not know where Newman lives myself. I think he lives somewhere down that way, for I have often seen him since, and told him of it since.

19,122. Had you arranged with Newman that you were to have 10*l.*?—Yes, I had arranged with Newman. He asked me whether 10*l.* would be of any use to me. I said yes; and I went and I said, "Tell the "gentleman to serve me as he serves other people, and "I leave it to him." I never mentioned any sum of money at all. He came several times, but I was not at home, and told me I should receive a ticket, and there was 10 sovereigns given me. I told him of it before the petition. He stopped me one night and asked if I could give him any information. I said the information was they put me down for 20*l.*, and I only received 10*l.* He said, "Oh, nonsense!" He said, "Who is the gentleman who told you so?" and I told him, and he said, "Tell him to come to me, and I will contradict it."

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

19,123. (Mr. Slade.) In your list it is No. 1,036?—I have 20*l.*; but perhaps the Commissioners will refer to Newman's evidence. He stated the amount he gave to each party.

19,124. He does not say what he gave to Charles Rackham?—I have it 20*l.*

19,125. Were there any 10*l.* tickets?—There were three tickets, but those gentlemen could know nothing about it. There was no one knew anything, only the parties we sent to for an explanation, and therefore they were settled between Mr. Edwards and Mr. Salmon, and no one else could know.

C. Rackham.

CHARLES RACKHAM; examination resumed by Mr. FITZGERALD.

19,126. How did you know you were down for 20*l.*?—Mr. Skinner, the miller, and Captain Gillham, and two or three others told me I was put down 20*l.* to Mr. Brogden's account, and I contradicted them; and two or three days after they were leading men of the committee. They mentioned it because they wondered I should ask such a thing. At any rate they named it to me. I never named it to a person. If I had got 50*l.* at the election I should have mentioned it.

19,127. Did you want the money when you received it?—Yes, because I told the gentlemen at the "Army and Navy" I thought I should have more, because when I went there others were receiving 20*l.*, and I was the lowest on the list.

19,128. Whom did you tell?—The gentleman who gave me the money.

19,129. Who gave you the money?—I suppose Mr. Jones.

19,130. You said you told people at the "Army and Navy?"—I mean I told the gentleman who gave me the money.

19,131. That will not do; you did not mean that when you said it; you said you told gentlemen at the "Army and Navy?"—Just as I shut the door I showed it to Mr. Motts. He was a witness that I received the money.

19,132. That you received what?—10*l.*; and Mr. Motts is a witness that I received it.

19,133. Mr. Motts was not in the room when you received the money?—He went in before me, and as he came out I went in.

19,134. He told you he had received 15*l.*?—Yes; he showed me the money.

19,135. When he came?—Yes; he told me before he went in he had a ticket for 15*l.*, and I told him I had a ticket for 10*l.*

19,136. You told me you did not know what was on the ticket?—I relied on what he told me.

19,137. I ask, what was on the ticket?—What Mr. Newman told me, that I should receive 10*l.* by the ticket, 10 sovereigns; those were the words Mr. Newman told me. I did not know what was on the ticket.

19,138. (Mr. Russell.) Did you complain of only receiving 10*l.*?—No; Mr. Newman told me I should receive 10*l.*

19,139. Did you complain to anyone afterwards?—I told the gentlemen at the time I could easily get more the other side.

19,140. Did you complain to anybody afterwards of only receiving 10*l.*?—I kept it close; of course I did not say anything about receiving money.

19,141. You told a very different story just now; that you complained to Mr. Motts?—He is a brother-in-law of mine, and I could depend upon him not to draw me into any trouble about it.

19,142. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Had you a vote in 1859?—No; I was not on the register.

C. Satterthwaite.

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

19,143. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you recollect this man?—No, I do not know that I do. They are so different now to what they were; but I think if he had not got the amount, knowing that other people were getting it, he would have made some bother.

19,144. (Mr. Slade.) He says he represented to you it was less than others. Do you recollect that?—I do not recollect anything of the sort, and I do not think he would have taken it, because there were parties who had tickets for less amounts and would not take it.

H. Housago.

HENRY HOUSAGO sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

19,158. Are you sure?—I am sure.

19,159. Could you have got it and forgotten it?—I did not get any.

19,321. And Newstead is not?—No.

19,322. You want to give in Newstead and Bambridge as substituted names?—Yes. And there were four others, but I have mislaid the paper. There was a remark made by the Commissioners that I have 20 names wrong. Does that include the parties I have given in as substitutes?

19,382. Who is this you are telling us of?—Mr. Etheridge, who was examined here the other day. Mr. Etheridge got into talking about the election, and he said he had got some lodgers coming the next day—that was the Monday—and he had got some things in pledge, and if he could not get them out he could not take the lodgers in, and could I get him 2*l.* I went to the "Angel" the Sunday afternoon, and saw Mr. Satterthwaite with Mr. Livingston, I think, if that is Mr. Satterthwaite, and I asked him for 2*l.* and begged it of him. That is all I ever asked him for. He made a representation, and said I wanted a large sum of money; but that is all I asked for, and I thought there was more cry than wool.

19,383. Have you any doubt about that gentleman?—I have my doubts. If he says it is him I will admit it, but I could not point him out.

19,384. When you went up to the "Angel," who did you go to see?—I went to see Mr. Livingston.

19,385. Mr. Livingston does not live at the "Angel?"—But he was there I daresay a good deal.

19,386. Was Mr. Livingston there?—Yes.

19,387. Did Mr. Livingston show you to Mr. Jones?—Yes.

19,388. You said you did not know whether you saw Mr. Jones?—I did not know anything about Mr. Jones then.

19,389. You said you went up with Mr. Livingston to the "Angel?"—I went with myself to the "Angel."

19,390. You went with Mr. Livingston there?—Yes.

19,391. Did Mr. Livingston then introduce you to Mr. Jones?—To a gentleman; I do not know whether it was Mr. Jones.

19,392. Did he give you his name?—No.

19,393. Did you see this gentleman alone?—No.

19,394. Mr. Livingston was with you?—Yes.

19,395. And you asked for 2*l.*?—Yes.

19,396. In the presence of Mr. Livingston?—Yes.

19,397. And he refused to give it you?—Yes.

19,401. You say you saw this gentleman in the bedroom?—So I did.

19,402. And Mr. Livingston was with you?—Yes.

19,403. Did Mr. Livingston and you go together out of the bedroom?—I do not know. I went out myself because I was rather in a tiff about it.

19,404. Was that the only time you saw this gentleman?—To the best of my recollection, unless I saw him casually at the "Angel" during the election. That I swear.

19,405. Who is this Mr. Etheridge?—He lived on the Crown Road; he was examined here on Tuesday; rather a queer old chap.

19,406. A gentleman who took money from the other side?—Yes.

19,407. He asked you to get his things out of pawn?—He asked me for 2*l.* He asked me to lend him the money first; he lives close to me.

19,408. What made you go up to the Liberal committee-room?—I thought if they could do him a turn they might induce him to vote.

19,409. It was on the Sunday you went to Mr. Jones?—Yes.

19,410. What reason had you to suppose Jones would give you the money?—I went to Mr. Livingston to hear if money could be got.

19,411. Why should you suppose Mr. Livingston knew anything about it?—I should suppose he knew everything.

19,412. He was the last person you would have gone to I should have thought?—I do not know so much about that. I do not know who else I should have gone to.

19,413. And you never saw Mr. Jones again then?—Not to the best of my recollection, not on anything of that sort, I might have seen him amongst the other people in the "Angel" casually.

19,414. What time was this on the Sunday?—I should think it would be between 5 and 6 o'clock in the evening. I do not believe that is the gentleman I saw.

19,415. You knew Mr. Edwards?—It was not him; I know him well. I think it was a man with more hair about his face than this gentleman (referring to Mr. Satterthwaite).

CORNELIUS SATTERTHWAITE recalled.

C. Satterthwaite.

19,416. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) What day do you say it was?—It must have been Tuesday, I had not any money on the Sunday. Downing and I were out all day. He drove me out in the country. What makes me very anxious about this case is, I have been told there are several parties who will swear they have not received the money. That is the reason I want it gone into before I go away, in order that I may clear it up myself. I feel very anxious to make inquiries, if I can find any information as to how it has been got, or where it has gone to.

19,417. I do not understand you to say you ever gave tickets to Mr. Fox?—No. But people in their evidence have said, they came and got tickets from him.

THOMAS FOX recalled; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

T. Fox.

19,418. Had you any tickets?—I will admit I had some tickets, but not of him.

19,419. I understood you to tell me just now, upon your oath, that you had nothing whatever to do with the bribery, either with a list or a ticket?—I took some tickets.

19,420. When?—I think it might be the night before the election.

19,421. Where?—At the "Angel."

19,422. Where at the "Angel?"—Up in a room; one of the top rooms. (The short-hand writer read a previous portion of the witness's evidence.)

19,423. Having sworn what you have heard read, are you prepared to tell us now, you had nothing to do with bribery?—I misunderstood you. I thought in money you said.

19,424. Tell us who was present when you got the tickets?—I think only the man that gave them to me.

19,425. Who was present in the room when you took the tickets?—Besides myself?

19,426. Yes.—Only the man that gave them, to the best of my recollection.

19,427. How came you to know that there were any tickets to be given away?—Everybody knew that I suppose, it was so much talked about.

19,428. I want to know how you came to know about it?—I cannot tell particularly; but being among the people backwards and forwards, I heard talk about the ticket system. It was in everybody's mouth.

19,429. You must give me a more particular answer if you please?—I cannot.

19,430. The ticket system was known to the captains, and was not to everybody. Who told you?—I cannot tell you who it was. It was common talk.

19,431. What do you mean by "common talk"?—Everybody was talking about it.

19,432. Tell us any one person that mentioned it?—I could not tell you.

19,433. How many tickets did you take?—Five, I think.

19,434. Whom did you give them to?—I gave a man of the name of Bracey one; one to a Mr. Davis, and Lacy, and the two Gooch's; and I think I gave Johnson one. It was either five or six, I do not know which.

19,435. Did you know the value of these tickets when you took them?—Yes.

19,436. How did you know them?—What I heard say.

19,437. What is Johnson's christian name?—It is either Robert or John, in King Street.

19,438. Were those the only tickets that you gave?—Yes.

19,439. Did you give them to the voters themselves?—Yes.

19,440. Is that all you know about it?—That is all I know about it.

19,441. (Mr. Slade.) Did you offer a man named Rudram any money?—No. I will tell you about that if you wish to hear it. It will save time.

19,442. Just so?—I met Rudram a day or two before the election somewhere about 12 o'clock, and got chatting about the election. I said, "Rudram, how are you going to vote?" He did not give me a particular answer. I thought he wanted some money. I said, by way of feeler, "Is 15*l.* of any use to you?" He said, he did not think it was. I said, "Is 20*l.*?" He said, "I cannot give you an answer now." I said, "When will you give an answer?" He said, "At 2 o'clock." I said, "Come to my house at 2 o'clock." He did come to my house, and I got out of the way, and that is all I had to do with it; and I have not spoken to that man from that day to this. I had no money, and no authority.

Adjourned until Wednesday, the 3rd day of October next, at 11 o'clock.

TWENTY-FOURTH DAY.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, Wednesday, 3d October 1866.

JOHN WESTBROOK sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE. J. Westbrook. 3 Oct. 1866.

19,443. What are you?—A fisherman.

19,444. Did you get anything for your vote at the last election?—10*l.*

19,445. Where did you get it?—From Mr. Downing, at my house. It was brought to my house.

19,446. Had you made any arrangement with Mr. Downing?—No, none whatever.

19,447. Are you sure it was not 15*l.*?—Only 10*l.*

19,448. Did you get any money from anybody else?—No one.

19,449. Had you a vote in the year 1859?—No.

19,450. This is the first time you voted?—This is the first.

19,451. Downing drew 15*l.* for you?—Only 10*l.* I received.

ROBERT RICHMOND sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE. R. Richmond.

19,452. What are you?—A baker.

19,453. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

19,454. How much?—20*l.*

19,455. Who from?—T. B. Edwards.

19,456. That is the brother of the tailor?—That will be the tailor.

19,457. Where did Mr. Edwards give you the 20*l.*?—In the house that I live in.

19,458. On what day was it?—I cannot say.

19,459. Was it within a day or two before the election?—Yes, something like that.

19,460. What did you receive besides that?—When?

19,461. At the election time?—Nothing.

19,462. Did you get any other money for your vote?—No.

19,463. Did you receive any other bribes besides that?—No.

19,464. That you swear?—Sure.

19,465. That you swear?—Yes.

19,466. Had you a vote in the year 1859?—That is a long way back, and my memory is short.

19,467. At the election before the last?—I never voted only once before, and I am sure I do not know what year it was in.

19,468. The time when Mr. Watkin and Mr. Young were here?—I am bothered if I know the names I voted for the last election before this, and I do not know what the names are now.

19,469. Did you vote?—Yes.

19,470. Did you receive any money for your vote?—My name is not on the register for that election, if you look.

19,471. I thought you said you did vote?—You will find my name is not on the register for that election.

19,472. (Mr. Russell.) Who is John Richmond, who lived in Howard Street?—He is dead.

19,473. Is that your father?—I do not know. He was a great deal older man than me. My name was not on the register. What date was it please?

19,474. 1859?—My name was not on the register at that time; I think not.

19,475. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you not say that you got some money once before?—I do not think you heard me say so.

CHRISTOPHER STEWARD sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE. C. Stewart.

19,476. What are you?—A pawnbroker.

19,477. Did you vote at the last election?—I did.

19,478. Who for?—The Liberal Candidates.

19,479. Brogden and Vanderbyl?—Yes.

19,480. Did you take any part in the canvassing?—No.

19,481. Did you ask any voters for their votes?—No.

19,482. Are you a strong Liberal in politics?—Yes.

19,483. And have been for some time?—Yes.

19,484. Was there any reason for your abstaining from taking any part in the last election?—I had no inclination to do so in any way.

19,485. Did you belong to any committee?—No.

19,486. Did you keep entirely aloof from the party?—I did.

19,487. Are you of your own knowledge aware of any men having received bribes at the last election?—I am not.

19,488. Though you took no part in the last election, you took a very considerable part in the election of 1859?—I did.

19,489. What part did you take in that election?—Receiving the amount of money that was to be spent, and spending it through the agents.

19,490. We do not want to go into that election at present, but will you kindly furnish the Commissioners with the names of persons to whom you gave bribes at that election?—I did it to a very small extent myself, and therefore I shall not be able to furnish many names. I will furnish the names of those that acted as agents under me as far as in my power lies. There was a small number; I think they have all been named; but if there are any others I shall bevery happy to confirm them.

19,491. Give us the names at this moment of those who acted under you?—Those are the names. They are a small number, and there may be one or two more. (The witness handed a paper to the Commissioners.) You will perceive that I have put the word "about" to the amounts, because it is quite impossible to recollect them.

19,492. As we shall soon begin on this election, perhaps you had better read them out?—Clements, whose Christian name I do not know, but I think it is George, about 400*l.*

19,493. George Clements, senior?—That is him. Mr. Reynolds, whose christian name I do not know, but it is Mr. Reynolds of Gorleston, about 220*l.*

19,494. Mr. Reynolds is the postmaster of Gorleston?—I think he is postmaster since that time; about 220*l.* I calculate from memory; that is the only thing I have to go by.

19,495. Who next?—A Mr. Greenhow. He was a publican at that time, I think, in Howard Street. I do not know his christian name.

19,496. That would be Henry, I suppose?—Is it Howard Street?

19,497. Near Garrison Walk?—I do not know.

19,498. How much?—About 150*l.* A Mr. Smith,

TWENTY-FOURTH DAY.

C. Stewart.

3 Oct. 1866.

who was a grocer in Gaol Street, 50*l.* Mr. Cattermole, the publican.

19,499. Is that William Cattermole?—He is a publican.

19,500. Is it the "Army and Navy" man?—Yes; about 30*l.* A Mr. Edwards, whose business place is in Regent Street, a tailor.

19,501. Thomas Booth Edwards?—Yes; about 60*l.* Mr. George Barker.

19,502. Is he dead?—He is dead; about 200*l.* Mr. Utting, fish merchant.

19,503. William Utting?—Yes.

19,504. How much?—60*l.* Then Eagleton about 250*l.*

19,505. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Is that all?—That is all that I remember at the present. Very likely there may be in the inquiry some little affairs, but these are the principal.

19,506. (Mr. Slade.) Where did you receive this money from, or whom did you receive it from?—I received a portion of it from Mr. Livingston—about one-fourth, and the remaining three-fourths from Mr. John Mainprice, and, to the best of my knowledge, none from any other person. I can scarcely say, but I believe that to be the fact.

19,507. That comes to 1,420*l.*?—It does.

19,508. Can you tell us the names of any other gentleman on your side who received a large sum of money like yourself?—I am not aware that there was any. I believe there was not. I have always understood that there was not, that the only money that was sent came through my hands for those purposes.

19,509. This money that you have mentioned before us has been chiefly spent in Yarmouth?—You have one amount in Gorleston, Mr. Reynolds.

19,510. And Mr. Greenhow is Gorleston?—I think not, but I am not able to say. At the time of course I knew, but now I do not know. I think Mr. Greenhow must be Yarmouth principally. However, that must be left to inquire from them. I really do not know now. I should have known at the time, but of course I do not remember.

19,511. Did you know a man of the name of William Thomas Clark?—Yes.

19,512. Did you give him any money?—Not any at all.

19,513. Are you aware whether he had any money at that election?—I should think not. If he had, I think it would have gone through me.

19,514. Did these agents give you an account at the time of how the money was spent?—They did.

19,515. Have you got the account?—I have not. I never had an account. I merely kept a list and checked it at the time, and it was destroyed within a day or two of the time.

19,516. Have you any memorandum or vouchers of any kind of that election?—Not the slightest. I never had any.

19,517. Was this list of names, and the number of pounds given to them, entirely given from memory?—That is the best that I can produce from memory. It is not the amount I received. There were some legal expenses paid out as well. I think I received about 1,600*l.*, and no doubt in the course of the inquiry, there will be some others that I have forgotten, but I am not able to supply them.

19,518. When this money was given to you by Mr. Livingston and by Mr. Mainprice, was it understood it was to be spent in bribery?—There was no direct understanding, but undoubtedly it was understood, although not so stated.

19,519. It was left entirely to your own discretion as to how it was to be spent?—Quite so.

19,520. The Mr. Mainprice is Mr. John Mainprice?—Yes, in the Market Place.

19,521. Have you any idea where the money came from beyond Mr. Livingston and Mr. Mainprice?—Not the slightest.

19,522. Were you the agent in a similar way in the election previous to that in 1857?—Yes.

19,523. How much money did you receive in 1857?—It was something less than 1,600*l.*, or about 1,600*l.*

19,524. Between 1,500*l.* and 1,600*l.*?—Yes; I think it was something rather less than 1,600*l.*

19,525. And from whom did you receive that sum?—Well, if you will allow me that until I come again, I will answer the question; but you are taking me to what I did not expect. If you will leave that question until I come again, I will tell you to the best that in my power lies; but at the present moment I could not tell at all.

19,526. Will you, when you come again, bring us, as far as you recollect, the names of the agents who distributed the money in 1857?—I will do so if it is possible, but I think a great portion of them were the same men, from my present memory. However, I will amend that, by doing the best I can in remembering.

19,527. (Mr. Russell.) Besides disbursing money to the sub-agents in 1859, did you bribe any men yourself?—Yes, but a very few. I think the names have already been named. There are four, and I do not think I could with any confidence name two others.

19,528. Can you remember those four?—Gaze.

19,529. (Mr. Slade.) That is Mr. Mark Gaze?—Yes; and Joyce, Field, and Holmes.

19,530. G. M. Holmes?—Yes. Of course, if there should be one or two more, I shall be pleased to confirm it in the course of the inquiry; but at the moment I have not confidence enough to put in any other name.

19,531. (Mr. Russell.) How is it that you took no part in this way at the last election?—I might have fancied that it was not the kind of thing that I should like to do again. Indeed, it was the case, and if I had been asked I should not have done it, but I was not asked.

19,532. I was going to ask you that?—I was not invited to do it, and if I had been, I should have declined.

19,533. And you cannot remember exactly the sum in gross that you received at the last election?—It was about 1,600*l.*

19,534. Of which you have accounted for 1,420*l.*?—There was a lot of money I myself spent in the shape of flys. There was one bill for flys and other small bills, and those men I gave money to; and you will find in the course of the inquiry there are other names by smaller agents that I do not remember. They were not of sufficient importance at the time to have it impressed on my memory, but the money was all spent.

J. Malden.

JOHN MALDEN sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

19,535. What are you?—A fish salesman.

19,536. Did you receive anything for your vote at the last election?—No.

19,537. Do you know a man named Brown?—Quite well.

19,538. Edward Brown?—Yes.

19,539. Did you give him any money?—I gave him 20*l.* I believe.

19,540. I suppose you were repaid it afterwards?—I was.

19,541. By whom?—It was sent to me, I believe, by Mr. Edwards, of Preston.

19,542. By whom did he send it to you?—I really do not remember now, but I got it I know.

19,543. When did you get it?—That I cannot say. It was soon after the election, but not very soon. I was very much engaged at the time settling with boats, and other things, and it might pass into my hands and I should not remember it. I should put it in my pocket.

19,544. Whom did you tell you had given the 20*l.* to Brown?—I believe I sent a note to the "Angel."

19,545. To whom?—To whose hands I cannot say now.

19,546. I suppose the note was directed?—It was directed to anyone who was in the committee room. I entrusted it to a person I could entrust it to.

19,547. Whom did you entrust it to?—I would not be positive whether it was my own partner. It might be him.

19,548. Who is your partner?—Mr. Collier; or one of our own men that I could depend upon. I may observe, I should not have given Mr. Brown this money, but he was in frequent communication with me in the course of business, and he told me the other party had been at him, several of them offering him money, and he told me, Mr. Charles Woolverton was anxious to get him to his house, and he represented to me to get him in the same way, and he always promised me long before that he would vote for the Liberal party; and I secured the vote, as it was a good vote.

19,549. Had anybody told you you should be repaid?—I do not think they did. I am sure I feel warm in the cause myself, and if I saw there was a vote, I should not hesitate in getting it if I knew the other party were after it.

19,550. But you knew well you would be paid?—I had not a doubt about it. Everybody knew there was money being spent, and I had sufficient confidence in the honour of the parties to repay me.

19,551. Are you sure you cannot remember who it was who brought you back the 20*l.*?—I cannot.

19,552. How did you know Mr. Edwards of Preston?—I never saw him, it was sent down.

19,553. Who sent it down?—I believe he sent it me in consequence of my note.

19,554. Who sent it?—Mr. Edwards. I was told it was sent by him. It came out of his funds.

19,555. Do you mean to tell me, when you wanted to recover the 20*l.*, you did not know whom to go to to get it back?—I felt certain that I should get it, and as long as I got it I felt no anxiety about it.

19,556. And you also felt certain from whom—who was it?—I cannot say, because if I did I should be telling a falsehood.

19,557. You can if you like?—No, I cannot, because if I did I should be telling a falsehood. I might say Mr. Livingston might get it for me; he would in a moment if he knew it, or any other person who knew me.

19,558. Did Mr. Livingston?—Certainly not; in the course of the day, sometimes I am receiving several hundreds of pounds. It might be brought to me, and I should put it in my pocket, and think nothing about it.

19,559. Did you buy any other votes?—I believe I gave him 40*l.*, 20*l.* for himself and 20*l.* for another.

19,560. Who was the other?—That I forget.

19,561. (Mr. Slade.) A man named Wade?—No, I particularly cautioned Brown not to have anything to do with him; and moreover, I sent a friend of mine to tell him not to meddle with him; and he paid him 15*l.* and afterwards came to me for the money, which I would not let him have, as I wished him not to do it.

19,562. (Mr. Russell.) Were those the only two men you bought?—Yes.

19,563. Whom did you vote for?—Liberal.

19,564. (Mr. Slade.) What was the other man's name?—That I do not remember. I was very busy at the time. Brown came in to me, and he was with me but a very short time.

19,565. If you remember the man's name, send it in to the secretary?—I will.

19,566. (Mr. Russell.) Did you take any part in the election of 1859?—No, only voted myself.

19,567. You did not buy anybody then?—No, I had nothing to do with it.

19,568. And you do not know anybody who was bribed?—Everybody knew there were plenty of votes bought, but I cannot say who they were now. Such matters as this I discharge from my memory as soon as I can.

19,569. Let the secretary have the name of the man you bribed through Mr. Brown, and also the name of the man who brought you the money back?—Yes, I will.

19,570. 40*l.* it was you paid?—Yes.

19,571. And 40*l.* you recovered?—Yes, I got all I paid away, and nothing more. I am not a professional briber. I never got a farthing for my vote in my life. I should as soon think of selling my mother.

H. J. Larke.

HENRY JOHN LARKE sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

19,572. What are you?—A boat-builder.

19,573. Did you get any money for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

19,575. Who gave it you?—I do not know.

19,576. Where did you receive it?—At the "Angel."

19,577. From a strange gentleman?—A stranger to me.

19,578. Did you have a ticket?—No.

19,579. Who sent you up to the "Angel?"—I was not sent by anyone. Some gentleman, I do not know who he was, came riding by in one of those low-backed cars, and took me to the "Angel."

19,580. He said, if you went up to the "Angel" you would get 15*l.*?—Up at the "Angel" I took 15*l.*

19,581. Did you get anything the other side?—No.

19,582. Were you offered any?—No.

19,583. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

T. Layton.

THOMAS LAYTON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

19,584. What are you?—A shipwright.

19,585. What did you receive for your vote at the last election?—15*l.*

19,586. Where did you get it?—At the "Army and Navy."

19,587. Had you a ticket given to you?—No.

19,588. Who sent you up to the "Army and Navy"?—I met another shipwright upon the quay. He said, "There is something going on at the 'Army and Navy,' let us go." That was Monday night.

19,589. Who was it?—The name of Thomas Sims. He is a shipwright as well.

19,590. Did you get any money on the other side?—No.

19,591. Were you offered any?—No.

19,592. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

W. Wilkins.

WILLIAM WILKINS sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

18,593. What are you?—A fish merchant.

19,594. What did you have for your vote at the last election?—20*l.*

19,595. Where did you get it?—At the "Barking Fishery."

19,596. Who sent you up there?—Henry King.

19,597. Were you offered any money by the other side?—Yes.

19,599. Who by?—A Mr. Rivett, who is dead.

19,600. When did Mr. Rivett offer you that?—I could not say whether the same day or the day before.

19,601. Did you take it?—No.

19,602. What made you refuse it?—They did not treat me well the election before this. The 8*l.* was to pay my detention. I was a master at sea at that time, and they promised to pay my detention, 8*l.* They promised me, and never gave it me; they promised me they would give me 20*l.* and the 8*l.* besides.

19,603. Then how much did you get in 1859?—I never got anything.

19,604. They promised you the money and you never got it?—Yes.

19,605. That is why you would not vote for them this time?—No, I was compelled to vote that time.

19,606. Why?—By my bread.

19,607. Just explain?—The owner of the ship I was the master of was a Tory, and he compelled me to do so.

19,608. What was his name?—Edward Spratt.

19,609. How did he compel you?—I do not know that he would have turned me out of my situation if I had not. I was not, I dare say, right down forced to do it, but I did do it against my own inclination; but when I voted Liberal I went my own way.

19,610. But you required 20*l.* to coax you to go your own way?—I do not know that, if there had been less given I should have taken less.

19,611. What should you have done if you got nothing?—The same as I did before; went without.

19,612. You would not have voted at all?—Yes I should, the same side.

19,613. Can you tell me of any other man whom old Mr. Rivett gave money or offered money to?—No, I was not much interested in it, for I was after my work at the time when I took the money.

S. Pigney.

SAMUEL PIGNEY sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

19,614. What are you?—A fish curer.

19,615. What did you receive for your vote at the last election?—15*l.*

19,616. Where were you paid?—At the "Army and Navy."

19,617. Who sent you up there?—It was talked over by a few of us, that money was being given away there, and we went down and found it was right.

19,618. Had you a ticket?—No.

19,619. Who was it told you to go up to the "Army and Navy?" Somebody must have sent you?—I think it was Mr. Teasdel was talking to me and a neighbour of mine, somebody went to him.

19,620. Were you offered any money by the other side?—I did not give them a chance.

19,621. Did they give you a chance?—No.

19,622. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

R. Barnes.

RICHARD BARNES sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

19,623. What are you?—An engineer.

19,624. What did you receive for your vote at the last election?—Nothing at all.

19,625. You have been handed in to us upon Mr. Jones's list as having received 20*l.*?—I do not know Mr. Jones, I have never seen any party at all.

19,626. Did anybody ever offer you money?—No.

19,627. Never?—No.

19,628. On either side?—Not on either side.

19,629. You are quite certain you did not get anything?—Yes, I am quite certain I did not get anything.

19,630. Somebody has received 20*l.* in your name?—I have never seen any of the party; none of the party ever came near me at all.

19,631. I see you voted for Lacon and Goodson?—Yes.

19,632. Do you belong to the red party?—Yes, I have always voted that way.

19,633. And did you vote that way in 1859?—I had not a vote then, not here.

19,634. Did you not get any money for your vote from the Conservatives?—No, not at all.

19,635. Are you quite certain nobody ever offered you any money at all?—Yes, I am quite certain, neither side. I never mixed myself up with them, neither of them, no further than going to vote.

19,636. Did you promise Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson to vote for them?—Mr. Goodson came the morning of the election and asked me to vote, and I told him I would.

19,637. Was that the first time he canvassed you?—Yes, I was not in the way when Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson came. I never saw him but that once. The other parties never came at all; I never saw them at all, not one of them.

19,638. Do you mean when you say you had always voted that way that you were on the register the election before that?—I did not come to Yarmouth until 1859.

19,639. You mean you voted Conservative at other places?—Yes.

M. Westoby.

MATTHEW WESTOBY sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

19,640. What are you?—A mariner.

19,641. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

19,642. How much?—15*l.*

19,643. Who gave it you?—Mr. Johnson the builder.

19,644. Mr. E. O. Johnson?—Yes.

19,645. Were you offered any money by the opposite party?—No.

19,646. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

19,647. Did you ask for this money or was it offered you?—It was brought to me.

19,648. Should you have voted that way if you had not had the money?—I always did. It was left on my parlour table.

19,649. You were not in want of 15*l.* were you?—I wanted it as bad as many people—I am only a pensioner.

W. Humphrey.

WILLIAM HUMPHREY sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

19,650. We have got you down as having received 20*l.*?—I never received it, my wife did.

19,651. You received it through your wife?—Yes, at least she received it for me. I did not know anything about it.

19,652. She told you about it?—I did not know anything of it until afterwards. I was told of it in the market place by the party who gave it her. I did not come home until last February, and I did not know anything about it, because after I voted I went away the next morning and joined my vessel down in the north.

19,653. Did your wife tell you to vote?—No, she did not tell me anything about voting.

19,654. You came here to day to say you were not paid for your vote?—I never received it, but the wife did.

19,655. Did you know she had got it?—No.

19,656. Had you not seen Mr. Parker?—I had not seen Mr. Parker at all. She told me when I came up that I had the money for the expenses from the north and to go back again, as I left the vessel to come up—not for voting; I did not know what I was coming for, no more than family affairs—that is what the telegraph said.

19,657. Did she telegraph for you?—Yes, on family affairs.

19,658. When you came up, she told you your expenses would be paid, if you voted?—Yes.

19,659. And the next morning you went up and voted ?—Yes, for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl, at about half past 9.

19,660. Did she say how much your expenses would come to ?—No, but I knew within a trifle, because I had travelled before—not on that occasion.

19,661. How much would they come to ?—5l. 7s. 6d. my expenses cost me up and down.

19,662. Did she say who was going to pay your expenses ?—No, she gave me the money to pay them after I had done it.

19,663. Did she give you 5l. 7s. 6d. ?—She gave me 5l. 10s.—a shilling or two for pocket money if I wanted it.

19,664. Did you know whom your wife had got the money from ?—From Mr. Parker—she told me afterwards. He met me in the market and told me about it, and then she said she had received the money.

19,665. How long after the election ?—Not above a fortnight after this inquiry commenced, because I was away, and did not come home until the 9th of February, after the election.

19,666. What do you call family affairs ?—There was one of the family lying very bad. I do not know whether she was dying or not. That was the reason I was sent for. I came home, and the election happened to fall the same time.

19,667. What did the telegram contain ?—That I was to go home immediately on account of family affairs.

19,668. Was that added ?—Yes, there was nothing else added, I would be upon my oath—not a word about the election.

19,669. Was there anything about family affairs put in ?—Yes, those were the words in it.

19,670. Was it put in the telegram that your expenses would be paid ?—No, not a word of it.

19,671. (Mr. Russell.) When you found your wife had taken the 20l. did you offer to return it ?—No.

19,672. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) When did you first know that your wife had the 20l. ?—About a fortnight after the inquiry had commenced.

19,673. This inquiry ?—Yes.

19,674. You did not know it before ?—No, I will be on my oath I did not. I never knew what money she had received.

19,675. (Mr. Slade.) Had you a vote in the year 1859 ?—I had not.

19,676. Did you vote for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl because you had 5l. for your expenses ?—Yes.

JOHN BITTON sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

J. Bitton

19,677. What are you ?—A carpenter just now.

19,678. What did you receive for your vote at the last election ?—I would give a straightforward answer here certainly, but if I were to do so I should say nothing at all. I got 10l. That was given me as a perfect gift, unasked for.

19,679. Who gave it you ?—I was sent to Mr. Wright's on the Church Plain.

19,680. Who sent you ?—Might I be allowed for a moment to give an explanation.

19,681. Answer the question first. Who sent you ?—Mr. J. W. Neave.

19,682. What do you want to say ?—The circumstances under which I was induced to receive it were simply these. I had recently lost my wife, and the little affairs that she was engaged in were quite in a deranged state, and I was under the necessity of giving up all my affairs, and should have left myself completely destitute. A friend came in and told me that money was being given away, and under my circumstances he thought it would do me some good, and I was induced under that idea to receive it. I always abhorred the system of bribery. I always exclaimed against it, and that is the simple remark I wish to make here. Not for my vote did I receive it, but I received it as a gift.

19,683. Had you ever voted before ?—Yes.

19,684. What did you receive at the last time in 1859 ?—Nothing ; I never received a farthing before.

19,685. (Mr. Russell.) You mean you took the 10l. because you were in great distress ?—Yes, and under that idea I think the friend of mine offered it, or rather induced me to go down there.

19,686. A great many men who were not in distress at all got double what you did ?—I esteemed it so sensibly because I was glad of it.

HENRY KING sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

H. King.

19,687. What are you ?—A mariner.

19,688. What did you get for your vote ?—20l.

19,689. Where did you receive it ?—At the "Barking Fishery."

19,690. Who sent you ?—I do not know that any particular person sent me there, I heard that they were giving money away, and I went there and got it.

19,691. How did you know money was being given away at the "Barking Fishery ?"—I heard the people saying so.

19,692. Were you offered any money by the other side ?—No.

19,693. Are you any relation of George King ?—No.

JOHN GARRATT sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

J. Garratt.

19,694. Are you the landlord of the "Angel" ?—Yes.

19,695. The Liberal committee rooms were at your house ?—Yes.

19,696. Had you any cognizance of the grounds on which Mr. Jones came down to the "Angel" ?—Not the least. I had afterwards, but not at the time.

19,697. Did you take any part yourself beyond letting the committee rooms ?—In which way do you mean.

19,698. Did you canvass any voters ?—Yes, I went round with Mr. Brogden two or three times, and Mr. Marshman, to two or three places.

19,699. Were you present when anyone was offered money ?—I never saw a farthing paid, or heard it offered.

19,700. Were you not aware, while Mr. Jones was in your house, that voters were coming to be paid there ?—I never saw anything paid until the Monday or Tuesday night. A stranger came and asked for him, or some one, but I was so busy at the time that I paid no attention to it.

19,701. Did you not surmise what they came for ?—It was a passing thought in my mind, and I thought nothing of it. I do not think he was in my house the night before the election. Mr. Edwards was there.

19,702. What were you paid for the use of your rooms ?—The bill was paid altogether.

19,703. Have you got it ?—I have got it at home. You will see what Mr. Marshman says. There is his letter to me and Mr. Vanderbyl. (The witness handed two papers to the Commissioners.)

19,704. Do you know whether the account that was paid to you for your rooms was the same account as was handed in as part of the legal expenses ?—Yes, I believe it was. I gave a paper, I do not recollect of what it was, when I was requested to apportion it, and I gave a receipt, but I do not recollect what it was now.

19,705. Did you receive no money whatever beyond

TWENTY-FOURTH DAY.

J. Garratt.

8 Oct. 1866.

the money that was returned?—I received the ordinary inn bill. The bill for living, the same as I should charge you or any other gentleman who came to the place.

19,706. Can you hand us a bill of the items?—Yes, if you will pay some one to copy it, or pay me; it is a long bill.

19,707. The bill from day to day?—It will be a very long affair. There are threepences, and there are a great many items. It is a very long affair. You can see the book if you like, but I cannot part with it, because it is in constant use.

19,708. Did you send in your bill to the agent, or to Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl?—I sent in no bill at all. They looked at the book, and were satisfied with it, and paid me on the spot.

19,709. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Who looked at the book?—Mr. Salmon, Mr. Brogden's agent, and Mr. Marshman did not look at his at all. They thought they ought to pay half. Mr. Marshman came down June the 12th, and left, I think, July the 8th, and Mr. Brogden remaining a longer time paid a larger share of it.

19,710. What we want to know is who paid you?—He says here in his letter he sends his cheque. Mr. Marshman says so; and Mr. Vanderbyl says, he sends a cheque also.

19,711. Mr. Marshman paid you himself?—Yes.

19,712. (Mr. Russell.) Did Mr. Brogden pay you?—Mr. Salmon paid me for Mr. Brogden after Mr. Brogden had gone.

19,713. And who paid you for Mr. Vanderbyl?—Mr. Vanderbyl sent me a cheque. I have given you the letter. He says, "Herewith I enclose a cheque for 35*l.*" And here is a letter from Mr. Marshman stating he sends it too.

19,714. In fact, these bills, if I understand, really give us the whole amount paid to you by Mr. Brogden, Mr. Vanderbyl, and Mr. Marshman?—Yes; except Mr. Salmon had a small bill after they left; I cannot say what that was, some five or six pounds.

19,715. What is the amount altogether?—161*l.* 10*s.* I think.

19,716. (Mr. Slade.) Give us the three divisions?—Mr. Vanderbyl, 35*l.*; 53*l.* 10*s.*, Mr. Marshman; it was 58*l.* 10*s.* in the cheque, because 5*l.* was enclosed to me to give to the regatta, and Mr. Brogden's 73*l.* You see it extended over a month and a day, from June the 12th to July the 13th.

19,717. (Mr. Russell.) That was from the first day Mr. Brogden arrived?—Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman came on June the 12th; Mr. Marshman left July the 8th, and Mr. Brogden the 13th, the morning after the election. Of course they had many friends come to see them while here, lawyers and so on, and whatever they had was added to the general bill. I had no report of a bill to anybody else.

19,718. Were you in the habit of giving refreshments to the voters who came?—Not to one. If he said let two or three have their dinners, they had it, and it was charged to them; but no one came and had anything there at his expense, not to my knowledge.

19,719. Was anything of that sort that was done included in the bill of 73*l.*?—Everything is in that bill, every item except Mr. Salmon's bill, and I cannot recollect what that was, I did not take the trouble to look over it; but under 10*l.*—6*l.* or 7*l.*

19,720. In fact Mr. Brogden's was the largest bill that was paid?—He was there the longest, and had probably the most friends, and there is a portion of his brother's bill in that as well.

19,721. (Mr. Slade.) His brother was there?—Yes, and he had a nurse and child there for about three weeks, I think. But he took very little part in the election, except when his brother was away; but he dined with them.

19,722. (Mr. Russell.) Was there a breakfast for the voters the morning of the polling at the "Angel?"—Oh dear no. I think I was the only voter who breakfasted that morning at the "Angel."

19,723. (Mr. Slade.) Besides Mr. Brogden's brother, the two Mr. Tabourdins were there?—Yes, I saw them. I did not know their names until since.

19,724. And Mr. Bentham was there?—I never heard his name. I only heard one Mr. Tabourdin's name, and I only heard that a few days ago, when they were here.

19,725. I mean the manager of the Imperial Bank?—So many gentlemen came I did not know them. Sometimes they came by the mail train, or at any time.

19,726. You did not know their names?—I knew Mr. Salmon's name and Mr. Edward's.

19,727. These men are only put down as the number of the rooms they occupied?—Yes.

19,728. No bill was given in to them?—No, I merely headed the book "Brogden and Marshman," when they came down. So it began and so it finished.

19,729. (Mr. Russell.) Were you here in 1859?—No.

S. Boulton.

SAMUEL BOULTON, sen., sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

19,730. What are you?—A fish merchant.

19,731. What did you receive for your vote at the last election?—20*l.*

19,732. Where were you paid?—At my place, at my house.

19,733. Who by?—Mr. E. R. Edwards, I think it is.

19,734. Edwards the tailor?—No, a brother of his.

19,735. Were you offered any money by the other side?—No. No, no other party; I think it was Mr. E. R. Edwards.

19,736. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

19,737. Had you any money for your vote then?—15*l.*

19,738. Who from?—Henry King Swan.

19,739. Then you voted for Sir Edmund Lacon, and Sir Henry Stracey?—Yes.

19,740. Were you offered anything by the Liberals in 1859?—No.

19,741. And do you vote whichever side you get money?—No, not at all times.

19,742. How came you to vote for Lacon and Stracey in 1859, and Brogden and Vanderbyl the last election?—I had altered my opinion during the time they were in Parliament.

19,743. But there seems to have been 20*l.* to fortify your opinion at one election, and 15*l.* to fortify your opinion at the other?—Yes, that is what I got at each election.

19,744. You cannot be in want of 20*l.*?—I might have managed to have done without it. If he had kept out of the way I should have done without it.

J. Brown.

JEFFREY BROWN sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

19,745. What are you?—A boot maker.

19,746. What did you receive for your vote?—15*l.*

19,747. Where were you paid?—At the "Army and Navy" tavern.

19,748. Who sent you up there?—I really cannot tax my memory at the moment. It was a tailor that sent me there. I forget his name.

19,749. Was Mr. Edwards the man?—No. Mr. Newman, that is the man.

19,750. Were you offered any money by the Conservatives?—No, none.

19,751. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No, I had not.

19,752 Would you have voted if you had not had any money?—Certainly I should.

19,753. The same side?—The same side.

TWENTY-FOURTH DAY.

S. Wood.

3 Oct. 1866.

SIMON WOOD sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

19,754. What are you?—A fish curer.

19,755. What did you get for your vote?—20*l.* from the "Blues."

19,756. Where did you get that?—Up at the "Angel."

19,757. Who sent you up to the "Angel"?—Sam Seago.

19,758. What did you get from the "Reds"?—14*l.*

19,759. Who gave you that?—Mr. Lane, the rate gatherer.

19,760. It was Mr. Benjamin Lane, the son, gave it you?—Mr. Lane gave me a glass of liquor his own self, and gave me 14*l.*

19,761. Did you not get 1*l.* from Mr. Kelf?—No.

19,762. Are you sure it was not 18*l.* you got from Mr. Lane?—No, only 14*l.* I asked him for 15*l.*, and he would not give me more than 14*l.* before the election. He offered me 14*l.*, and the night before the election he offered me 14*l.* then.

19,763. You voted for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—I voted Blue.

19,764. Had you made up your mind to vote for them when you were trying to get 15*l.* from the Reds?—No. If I had I should have voted Red.

19,765. Who paid you first, at the "Angel," or first from Mr. Lane?—From Mr. Lane.

19,766. When you took the money from Mr. Lane you made up your mind to vote for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl?—No, I thought of voting Red.

19,767. When you got the 20*l.* the other side, you made up your mind to vote Blue?—I was sent for and told I was wanted. And he said "There is 20*l.* for you at the 'Angel.'" I was very poor at the time. I had no bed to be upon. I was left with four bare walls, and I was glad to take what money I could get.

19,768. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

D. D. Carter.

DANIEL DRAPER CARTER sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

19,769. Are you the man living in Seymour Place? Yes.

19,770. What are you?—A Trinity pilot.

19,771. Did you receive anything for your vote at the last election?—I received 18*l.* to remain on shore for loss of time.

19,772. Who gave you that 18*l.*?—Mr. Benjamin Powell.

19,773. Of King Street?—Yes.

19,774. When did Mr. Powell give you this money?—I think about two or three days before the election.

19,775. At the time he gave it you, did he say anything about your voting?—He asked me whether I was going to vote. I said "No;" and he asked me the reason why, and I said, "Because I had not been paid for loss of time. I had remained on shore to please the parties and they would not pay." He said "If you will remain on shore I will repay you for loss of time." He said "What is it?" I said "18*l.*;" and he paid me.

19,776. For whom did you vote?—Lacon and Goodson.

19,777. Were you canvassed on the Liberal side?—No.

19,778. Did you receive any other money besides 18*l.*?—Not a farthing. I see I am set down for 10*l.*, but I never received anything.

19,779. Is Rising a shipmate of yours?—Yes.

19,780. What is his christian name?—Thomas.

19,781. Did he get anything at the last election?—Mr. Livingston was to give us 15*l.* each, and Rising was to pay me. He would not do so. He told me to go down to Mr. Downing. I told him I would not, I would have nothing to do with Mr. Downing, and Mr. Downing offered me money and I refused him.

19,782. Did Rising get anything on your side?—I think not, I should say not.

19,783. Was Rising with you when Mr. Powell gave you this 18*l.*?—No. I never was with Rising only once, that was when Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman said they could retain their seats for 15*l.*, and put us on to Mr. Livingston, and from that to Mr. Clowes; and Mr. Clowes asked Rising to pay me. Rising refused. Livingston said "Take him to Mr. Downing," and I refused to go, and refused to vote at all then.

19,784. Had you a vote in the year 1859?—No.

H. T. Humfrey.

HENRY THOMAS HUMFREY sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

19,785. What are you?—A carpenter and joiner.

19,786. Did you get 20*l.* from Mr. Shattock at the last election?—Yes.

19,787. Did you get any money from the other side?—No.

19,788. Were you offered any money by the other side?—Yes.

19,789. By whom?—Mr. Bunn.

19,791. Did you take it?—No.

19,792. Why not?—I had no particular reason why I did not. I said I would not have it.

19,793. Did Mr. Bunn offer you the money after you had got the 20*l.* from Mr. Shattock?—No.

19,794. Before?—Yes.

19,795. Whom did you vote for?—Not anyone.

19,796. How is it you did not vote?—I do not know of any reason.

19,797. You got the 20*l.* from Mr. Shattock to vote?—I do not know what I got it from him for. He did not ask me to vote for anyone.

19,798. You knew why he gave it you?—I might suppose so. He brought it into my shop and laid it on the counter, but he did not ask me to vote for anyone.

19,799. Why did you take it if you did not mean to vote?—I do not know particularly why I did take it, but I did take it.

19,800. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

19,801. Is this the first time you had a vote?—Yes.

19,802. Are you quite certain the reason you did not vote was this, that you had taken money on both sides?—I do not understand you exactly.

19,803. Did you know old Mr. Rivett?—Yes.

19,804. Did he give you any money?—No.

19,805. Did he offer you any?—No. He never came to me at all.

19,809. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Give us the reason you did not vote?—I do not know any particular reason why I did not.

19,810. Are you a master carpenter?—Yes.

19,811. Whom do you work for?—For various people, too numerous to name.

19,812. (Mr. Slade.) What day did Mr. Shattock give you this money?—On the morning of the election.

19,813. And you had not agreed with Mr. Shattock before?—No.

19,814. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) What did he say to you when he gave it you?—I believe all that passed was, he said "Here is 20*l.* for you."

TWENTY-FOURTH DAY.

H. T. Humfrey.

Oct. 1866.

19,815. Did you know him before?—Yes.

19,816. Had you any conversation with him before about the election?—Not any.

19,817. Did he know how you were going to vote? I do not suppose he did.

18,818. Did you ever tell anybody how you were going to vote?—No.

19,819. Were you never asked?—I was canvassed.

19,820. What did you say when you were canvassed?—I told them I did not know that I should vote at all.

19,821. You did not know how you would vote?—I did not know that I should vote at all.

19,822. (Mr. Russell.) Have you any political opinions at all?—No.

19,823. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you promise anybody your vote?—No.

19,824. Who canvassed you for Sir Edmund Lacon?—Sir Edmund Lacon came himself, and Mr. Goodson.

19,825. They canvassed you themselves?—Yes.

19,826. Did you promise them?—No.

19,827. Did you promise anybody on behalf of Sir Edmund Lacon?—No.

19,828. Did anybody else besides Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson canvass you upon that side?—No, I do not remember anyone.

19,829. Nobody at all asked you for your vote?—No.

19,830. Did you communicate to anybody that you intended to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon?—No.

(Mr. Fitzgerald.) You must come here again.

C. Diver.

CHARLES DIVER recalled; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

19,831. Look at the name of Henry T. Humfrey in that list?—I see it.

19,832. I see he is entered there as having promised Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—Yes.

19,833. Can you explain that at all?—He did not promise me, nor did I see him.

19,834. You heard the evidence that he gave, that he was canvassed by Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson, and did not promise them, and was canvassed by nobody else on your side, and therefore promised nobody else?—Yes, I heard him.

19,835. I see he is entered there as having promised?—It is Mr. Reynolds' book. It is not a book to which I had access.

19,836. I only want to know, as Mr. Reynolds is away, whether you can tell us upon what information Mr. Reynolds made that entry?—I think I may say that entry was made before I had anything to do with the matter at all.

19,837. It was an early promise?—I fancy so. I did not see the man. I did not go after the man at all, because he was returned to me as promised. I certainly had some reason for not going to see him, or I should have done so.

19,838. You would have gone to see him otherwise?—Certainly.

J. Sharman

JOHN SHARMAN sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

19,839. Do you live at 76, George Street?—Yes.

19,840. What are you?—A tailor.

19,841. What did you receive for your vote at the last election?—15*l.*

19,842. Who from?—I do not know.

19,843. Where were you paid?—At the committee-room.

19,844. At the "Angel?"—At the committee-room across the market, where I voted.

19,845. Thompson's?—Yes.

19,846. Who sent you up there?—Mr. Thompson came to me a night or two before, and he asked me, had I a vote; I told him that I believed I had. He asked me, Had I promised it? "Have you seen anyone?" I said, "No, I have not spoken to any of them." Then he said, "If you like to vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl, you can have 15*l.*" "Very well," I says, and I did.

19,847. Mr. Thompson said that?—Yes.

19,848. Were you offered any money on the opposite side?—No. I never spoke to any of the parties, not a soul.

19,849. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

J. Gillings

JOHN GILLINGS sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

19,850. What are you?—A carpenter.

19,851. What did you receive for your vote at the last election?—20*l.*

19,852. Where were you paid?—At Wright's on the Plain.

19,853. Who sent you to Wright's?—Mr. Edwards.

19,854. Which Edward's? The tailor?—I do not know what his other name is; only Edwards, that is all I know.

19,855. Do you know what Edwards it is?—The tailor.

19,856. Had you a ticket?—No.

19,857. Were you offered any money by the Conservatives?—No.

19,858. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

19,859. And what did you get for your vote then?—10*l.*

19,860. Who gave you that?—Mr. Stolworthy.

19,861. I see you voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson at the last election?—Yes.

19,862. Though you got 20*l.* from the Liberals?—Yes, this time I did.

19,863. At the election before, you voted for Watkin and Young, because you got 10*l.* from the Conservatives?—No. Sir Edmund Lacon I voted for.

19,864. You are right. Were you offered any money on the other side in 1859?—No.

J. H. Harrison

JAMES HARGRAVE HARRISON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

19,865. What are you?—I hardly know how to describe myself. I am a town councillor.

19,866. Did you take an active part at the last election?—I think not.

19,867. Did you canvass any voters?—Well, I think I saw some half-a-dozen persons.

19,868. Which party did you interest yourself for?—Well, I voted Conservative.

19,869. Do you know a man named Pope?—A person who gave evidence here?

19,870. Yes?—I do; I know him by sight.

19,871. George Pope?—I do not know his christian name.

18,872. Did you offer him some money?—Certainly not.

19,873. Mr. Pope was asked, "Were you offered "anything?—A. Yes. Q. Who by?—A. I cannot "say whether it was Mr. Harrison. It was someone "called in the afternoon. I refused them, because I "was going to vote the other way. Q. Is it Mr. Har-"grave Harrison?—A. It is Mr. Hargrave Harrison?" —He thinks that some one offered him the money, but he cannot tell whom. He does not say positively it was me.

19,874. He seems rather hazy about it?—I am quite certain I never offered him a penny.

19,875. Nor anybody else?—Yes; I think I may say that.

19,876. There seems to be some doubt about that?—No, it arises in this way. Some of those men, knowing that I have taken an interest in the public matters of this town, have frequently stopped me on my way home or out, and have asked me if I knew what was going on, and some of them I have known for many years. One man you had before you of the name of Carrier. My impression is that that man has never voted in his life without being paid, and that man frequently waylaid me. He was not the only one. I cannot remember precisely what took place; but this I will swear, that persons might have asked me whether I knew what money would be afloat, and what they were likely to get, and so on, but I swear I never gave them any.

19,877. When they asked you to tell them whether there was money what did you say?—I might have turned round, and put this question to them, "What do you want?" but I never gave a penny, nor was the means of anyone getting money that I am aware of.

19,878. When these men waylaid you some of them told you that they wished for money before they would vote?—I did not catch the last observation; I am rather hard of hearing.

19,879. When you met men in the streets, who stopped you, and said they wanted money for their votes, did you represent to any people at the head of your party that those men wanted money?—I think I did; I may say I did.

19,880. To whom did you mention the fact?—I have mentioned it to a Mr. Cooper for one.

19,881. Have you looked over, or have you ever heard mentioned the list that Mr. Cooper handed in to us?—Some time since?

19,882. Yes?—Well, I saw the account in the newspapers, but I did not wade through the whole of it.

19,883. Can you give us the names of any men you mentioned to Mr. Cooper whom you think we have not got already?—I have not the slightrst idea. I have never seen the poll book till this morning.

19,884. It is no use hampering our notes with names that we have already. Will you undertake to confer with Mr. Cooper in giving us as many names as you can remember, so that we may see if they are names handed in already?—I will do anything to facilitate this matter. I can remember one name, I do not know if you have it down, a person of the name of Pye. It was the son of the old man who called upon me. He was anxious to get 20*l.* The man was not a voter, but his father was. I saw him. He waited about the house for a very long while, and eventually he thought I was playing him a trick; and he went and voted on the other side, and got the money there.

19,885. Did you take an active part in the election of 1859?—I took no part in that election, nor did I take any particular part here beyond attending a meeting or two. I was asked to take the chair at the ward meeting in the Nelson Road. I knew very little of it. I may tell you Carrier, the baker, voted Liberal. I frequently saw him. He wanted 15 sacks of flour, I remember that very well.

19,886. I see you voted for Watkin and Young in 1859?—Yes; my father was alive at that time, and I was under the influence of my father up to the time of his death.

19,887. Had you arranged with Mr. Cooper that you would give him any names of men that you could get?—Most assuredly not. It was mere gossip. I am frequently in Mr. Cooper's shop. Perhaps I call in three or four times a day. I will be bound to say during the last week or ten days I have been there 20 times; I think I may say that; and I may say hardly for any purpose whatever beyond the fact that Mr. Cooper is doing some printing for me. Once would have done for that; but I have called in for mere gossip sake.

19,888. I suppose you were aware that Mr. Cooper was a very convenient person to tell these names to?—I knew it most assuredly.

19,889. Will you give me the name of any one man whom you mentioned to Mr. Cooper that wanted money?—I have not been in the room more than 10 minutes. I have been engaged all the morning in another room of this building. I came in, and I asked Mr. Livingston to lend me his list. I was going through the register for the purpose of taking the names out, thinking you would put some questions to me upon it; and I have found two after going down three or four columns of the register; but until I saw the register from the day of the election till now I have never seen one. I even question whether I have seen a register at all since the last election.

19,890. Will you give me those two names?—Samuel Balls is one.

19,891. Do you mean Balls who keeps the "Victoria?"—In Kimberley Terrace. No, I beg your pardon, I have made a mistake. I think you will find another Balls in Brandon Terrace; they are adjoining terraces.

19,892. Is it Henry Charles Balls?—I do not think that is the name.

19,893. Is it Camperdown Place?—No; it is Brandon Terrace; I am certain of that. I ought to know the name, but I have really forgotten his christian name.

19,894. Will you look at the register?—I may say this, that the person is at present living in Brandon Terrace, but what his christian name is I do not remember.

19,895. What is he by trade?—Well, he is a man that has got some property, a man of independent circumstances. He is a carpenter by trade, but he keeps a large lodging-house, one of the largest lodging-houses on the Terrace.

19,896. And who is the other?—I must tell you when first I saw him I think he asked me what I was up to. Of that I will not be sure. However, he told me he had been offered money; that he could have 20*l.*; and he afterwards told me that he had either got 15*l.* or 20*l.*, I do not remember which. That is one name.

19,897. Who is the other?—I have given you Balls and Carrier; those I have given you already. There was a person named John Baker.

19,898. Where does John Baker live?—He lives upon the Denes. He is a very respectable man. He told me he had been offered 20*l.*

19,899. (Mr. Slade.) What is his number on the register?—49.

19,900. (Mr. Russell.) Did he tell you that he had been offered money?—Yes; that he had been offered 20*l.*

19,901. And did you tell him that he could get money on your side?—Certainly not. He is a highly respectable man. He is a man who has risen by his own industry, but he would scorn the idea of a bribe; and whenever I have offered myself for any place he has always supported me.

19,902. That may be a proof of his respectability, his supporting you; but what I want is the names you may have mentioned to Mr. Cooper as men who wanted money for their votes?—I thought you wanted the names of such persons as I had seen. I understood you to ask me, "Will you see Mr. Cooper, and arrange with him, and go through the register of the names that you gave to Mr. Cooper." Then I thought that you wanted the names of persons that I had seen.

19,903. No; the names of men whom you saw who told you that they wanted money for their votes. You told us you met several?—Some half dozen.

19,904. Those are the half-dozen I want?—I have given you three. I will go over the register and see if I can find any more.

19,905. Will you kindly go through the register,

TWENTY-FOURTH DAY.

J. H. Harrison.

3 Oct. 1866.

and hand in the list to us?—Yes. So far as Mr. Baker is concerned, having brought up his name, I should mention this, that he did vote and that he had nothing.

19,906. As you have the register in your hand, perhaps you might conveniently run through it?—Yes; if you will take another case, I will go through it.

JOHN QUINTON sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

J. Quinton.

19,907. Are you down upon the register as Henry Quinton?—I am upon the register as Henry Quinton, but John Quinton is my name.

19,908. What are you?—A sail maker.

19,909. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Brogden and Vanderbyl. I tendered my vote and they objected to it when I tendered it, and I went to a magistrate and he went with me and I voted.

19,910. Did you get any money for your vote?—Yes, I had 15*l.* left at my house.

19,911. Who by?—By Downing.

19,912. Do you keep an alehouse as well?—Yes.

19,913. Did you get any other money for your vote?—No.

19,914. Were you offered any other money?—I was not offered any other money, but Mr. Cooper called me one night and asked me if I would vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson, and I said, "No, it is no use persuading me, I am inclined the other way." That was a week before the election.

19,915. In the year 1859 had you a vote?—No.

19,916. Where did you get the 15*l.*?—He left it with my wife for me.

J. Francis.

JOHN FRANCIS sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

19,917. You live at Gorleston?—No, I live in Yarmouth now?—I had a vote before for Gorleston.

19,918. Are you upon the register for Gorleston?—Yes.

19,919. What are you?—A spinner and ropemaker.

19,920. What did you get for your vote?—20*l.*

19,921. Where at?—At Wright's upon the Church Plain.

19,922. Did you get any other money?—No.

19,923. Were you offered any other money?—No.

19,924. Who took you to Wright's on the Church Plain?—Several of us went together, but a man of the name of Edwards told us.

19,925. Thomas Edwards, the tailor?—I am sure I do not know the name, but I may say he is a tailor.

19,926. Had you a vote in 1859?—No, I never had a vote before.

W. Ling.

WILLIAM LING sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

19,927. What are you?—I call myself a gentleman; I am in no trade or profession.

19,928. You are Mr. William Ling?—Yes.

19,929. There must be some mistake here. You have not been summoned?—Yes I have, but you will not find that I have been bribed, or anything of that kind, if you are looking for that.

19,930. I was looking to see if you had been summoned. Did you take any part in the last election?—Not any.

19,931. Were you upon any committee?—I am not aware that I was. It was said that I was upon the Gorleston committee. It is true that I went two or three times into the room, but I was not aware that I was on the committee.

19,932. What did you go into the room for?—Merely to hear what was going on; to know how they got on in canvassing.

19,933. Who did you find on the committee?—Mr. Teasdel was in the chair, as I suppose, and there was Mr. Rivett, Mr. Spratt, Mr. Rolfe, and a Mr. Martin was one that I saw there.

19,934. At whose house was this committee room?—It was a house that was unoccupied. Whether the house belonged to Mrs. Morison or Mr. Wightman I do not know. Mr. Wightman lived in the house, but he had left it, and it was unoccupied at that time. I do not know who it belonged to.

19,935. Did you canvass Gorleston?—No, not at all.

19,936. Was Mr. Rivett taking an active part in the election?—Not that I am aware of. I have heard his name mentioned, but I was not aware of it till I heard it here. I saw him there as an old Conservative. I saw that he was merely there as I was, to inquire how the canvass was going on, and nothing further, as I thought.

19,937. I have nothing more to ask you?—I really know nothing. I should be most happy to tell you if I knew of anything.

19,938. Did you take any part in the election of 1859?—I took rather a more active part at that time than I did at this, indeed I took none at this. I did ask two or three voters at that time if they would vote for the Conservatives, but nothing further than that.

19,939. Did you canvass?—I asked two or three people; I knew who they intended to vote for. I forget who were the candidates at that time; I think Lacon and Stracey.

19,940. And Watkin and Young?—Yes. I had heard at that time there was bribery, but I never knew anything about it, and that is why I asked people how they were going to vote and how they would vote.

19,941. Had you heard that bribery was going on before the polling day?—In 1859 you are talking of?

19,942. Yes?—No, I do not know that I did. I knew at the election previous there was bribery.

19,943. You mean 1857?—Yes, Watkin and Mr. McCullagh. That is the first of my knowing anything of bribery in Gorleston. I knew a friend of mine who did live at Gorleston about 18 years ago; he went from Gorleston to Grimsby, and he came over from Grimsby to bribe for Mr. Watkin. I did not know that at the time, in 1857—which I am talking of—I did not know that at that time, but at 1859 he was here again, and I suspected what he was here for in 1857; and I said, "You have come here again for the old fun." "No," he said, "I do not mean to have anything to do with it this time." I said, "I know you did at the last election," and he said, "I had done a little of it then." He is since dead. He was an old friend of mine, or else perhaps he would not have told me that.

19,944. What was his name?—Mr. Rundell.

19,945. Did you learn from him what money had gone through his hands in 1857?—No, that you will find from parties the names of whom I have heard mentioned.

19,946. The parties mentioned to us before?—Parties named whom you will have before you, I have no doubt. You will get at it in that way.

19,947. Are you aware that bribery had been practised in Gorleston before this last election?—Yes, I was aware of what I have told you.

19,948. And knowing that, did you anticipate that bribery would be resorted to this time?—I had heard a week before the election, or more than that, that there were sovereigns coming down here in oyster barrels.

19,949. That was in 1859?—Either it was in 1857 or 1859, I do not remember. It was said they came down in oyster barrels at that time.

19,950. In 1865, I mean, last year?—I heard a week before that that there was to be bribery, and there was money coming down here that would come down in oyster barrels. That is what I heard in 1865. Of course I did not believe it, but that was the talk.

19,951. Which side was the money to come down for?—I heard that Mr. Brogden was so rich ; that is what I heard at the time.

19,952. Did you hear anything about money being prepared to be spent upon the Conservative side?—I did not, and of my own knowledge I was not aware of a sixpence being spent till this inquiry.

19,953. I want to know if anything was talked about?—No, I never heard a sentence of anything of the kind.

19,954. In this committee room, where you met in this unoccupied house, I suppose the prospects of the election were discussed?—Not a word of bribery did I hear. Perhaps I stopped a quarter of an hour; and I said to Mr. Teasdel, "How is Sir Edmund Lacon and the canvass getting on to-day?" and he would say, "Very well," perhaps, or, "Do you know if such a person, so and so, is going to vote?" Of course as I never asked them I did not know.

19,955. Were you in the room when Christopher Steward was examined this morning?—Yes.

19,956. You heard the names of the agents he gave to us?—Yes.

19,957. Were you aware of those gentlemen having distributed money in 1859?—No, I was not; one I was, at least I thought so ; it was said so, but I did not know it of my own knowledge. I know it was said so, and I have no doubt you will get a great deal of information from them.

19,958. Which is the one you know of?—Mr. Reynolds.

19,959. Can you give us the names of any other gentlemen who were employed in distributing money at that time?—George King.

19,960. Any other?—Mr. Rundell was there, but whether he did anything of the kind I do not know.

19,961. Mr. Rundell is dead?—Yes, and a friend of mine told me he had promised Sir Edmund Lacon, that Clark, who is dead, and Mr. Nathaniel Sterry went to his house and offered him money. The money was laid down on the table and they asked him how much he wanted, and he said, "Go on, you have not come to half enough yet." Which of the two had the money I do not know. He went on as long as he chose, and the voter said, "If you will lay me down a "thousand pounds I will not break my word. I have "promised Sir Edmund Lacon and I will vote for him."

19,962. Who was the voter?—Joseph Lowne was his name. I do not know if it was in 1857 or in 1859. I am not sure whether he is a voter now or not; he is not living in the same house at any rate.

19,963. Is the Clark you mentioned a man of the name of William Thomas Clark?—Yes, he is dead.

19,964. George King, I presume, is the person we have had before us?—Yes, he was a relative of Mr. Rundell's. Mr. Rundell used to lodge at his house.

19,965. Do you know at all who Mr. Rundell got the money from?—That I do not know at all. I did not ask that question ; he would have told me if I had, I daresay, a year or two after 1857, because him and I were great friends when he lived at Gorleston, but he removed from Gorleston to Grimsby.

19,966. What connexion had Mr. Rundell with Mr. Watkin?—That I do not know, but Mr. Watkin got him into some employ there, but what I do not know, it was something to do with the docks. I fancy Mr. Watkin got him into that employ, but I do not know.

19,967. What was Mr. Rundell when he was at Yarmouth?—He was a pilot and had something to do with the fishing when he lived at Gorleston, then he removed from Gorleston and went to Lowestoft, and he was there a few years. Whether he went from Lowestoft to Grimsby I do not know or whether he came back to Gorleston first for a year or two and went to Grimsby after I am not aware. It is 20 years ago since I knew him at Gorleston.

19,968. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Rundell when you saw him here in 1859?—Yes, he took care not to let me know anything about what he was doing. I laughed at him and said, "What have you come here for?" And it was generally known or thought in Gorleston what he was there for, of course I knew nothing about it, he never told me he was here for that purpose at the time.

19,969. You laughed with him on the subject?—Yes I was friendly with him and I could do that.

19,970. Did he acknowledge it?—No, he would not acknowledge anything of the kind at the time I laughed at him about 1857. I of course knew nothing about it then, but then of course in 1859 when he was here again he said he had done a little of it in 1857, and then in 1859 I knew he was here for the same purpose, at least I told him so. I did not know it.

19,971. Did you ever hear how much money was spent at the election of 1859?—No, I never heard anything about that.

19,972. I mean at Gorleston itself?—No, I never heard it.

19,973. You never heard any common rumour?—No, I do not know that I heard that at all.

19,974. Can you give us any information as to the elections of 1857 or 1859?—No, no more than what I have now told you I cannot. I know of no money being given at any of the elections personally.

19,975. You cannot give us any names whom we can apply to?—No more names than what you have got ; you will get about 1857 and 1859 from the names you have now got.

19,976. Did you know old Mr. Rivett?—Yes very well.

19,977. Were you aware he was taking a very active part at the last election?—No, I was not aware of it at all; I saw him in the room.

19,978. You did not know that he was trusted with a large sum of money?—Certainly not, I never knew that.

CHARLES VEALE sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL. C. Veale.

19,979. What are you?—A gardener.

19,980. Did you get 20*l.* from Mr. Shattock at the last election?—Yes.

19,980*a*. Were you offered any money by the other side?—No.

19,981. Had you got a vote in 1859?—Yes.

19,982. What did you get for it then?—15*l.*

19,983. Who gave you that?—Mr. Green gave me 10*l.* and he said he would send me 5*l.* by George King and that I received.

19,984. Were you offered any money on the other side in 1859?—Not any. When Mr. Shaltock gave me that money he said he gave it to me for Mr. Jones.

ROBERT S. ARCHBOLD sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL. R. S. Archbold.

19,985. What are you?—A baker.

19,986. Did you receive 15*l.* for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

19,987. Where were you paid?—At the "Army and Navy."

19,988. Who sent you up there?—I was up there in the evening, and I saw the thing going on, and I went in and got it.

19,989. Who was it sent you?—No one.

19,990. How did you know money was going there?—I saw what was going on and I judged that was the case.

19,991. Had you got a ticket?—No.

19,992. Were you offered any money on the other side?—Not particularly ; a party promised me he would get me some; I did not intend to vote that side.

TWENTY-FOURTH DAY.

R. S. Archbold.

3 Oct. 1866.

19,993. Who offered you money on the other side?—Mr. Cooper.

19,994. How much?—He said something about 10*l.* he promised me, that was a fortnight or three weeks before the election, I should think quite a fortnight before.

19,995. And you refused that?—I did not intend to vote that way.

19,996. Would you have voted Liberal if you had not had the money?—Yes; in fact I told Mr. Livingston so.

19,997. Were you canvassed by Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl?—No, I was not. I told Mr. Livingston which way I was going to vote on the Saturday before the election. I did not ask for anything.

19,998. I suppose you had not a vote in 1859?—Yes, I had.

19,999. Who did you vote for then?—Watkin and Young.

20,000. What did you get for your vote then?—I got 10*l.* then.

20,001. Who gave you that?—I do not know, I found it put in my hat and left on the counter.

20,002. Who had offered you money in 1859?—Not anyone; I had not seen anyone about the money at all. The party next door to me, the fact is, took my hat away; whether he brought it back I do not know, he took it off my head.

20,003. Who took it off?—Humphrey.

20,004. What Humphrey?—George Humphrey.

20,005. Did Mr. Humphrey take your hat off, and when you went to put it on again you found 10 sovereigns in it?—He took it away from me. I said, "Never mind, you must buy me a new one;" and then saw it on the shop, and when I picked it up my handkerchief was in it, and when I lifted it out I found the 10*l.*

20,006. Were you offered any money by the Conservatives in 1859?—No, I do not recollect being offered any money.

A. Wightman.

ABEL WIGHTMAN sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

20,007. What is your second name?—Abel Woods Wightman.

20,008. What are you?—A publican.

20,009. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—15*l.*

20,010. Who gave it you?—Charles Bunn.

20,011. Were you offered any money by the opposite party?—Not to me; they thought I was held rather fast.

20,012. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

20,013. (Mr. Slade.) Was there a committee room at your house?—It was not at my house; it belonged to my mother-in-law.

20,014. Was there a committee room there?—Yes.

20,015. Who paid for that?—Mr. Reynolds.

20,016. What did he pay?—Well I do not exactly know altogether what it was; there were my services in attending on the committee, the room and refreshments and luncheon were included in the same bill; it was paid altogether in one bill.

20,017. Can you tell me what the amount was?—Something like 9*l.* or 10*l.*, I cannot exactly say.

20,018. What is the name of the public-house?—That I now keep?

20,019. No the other house?—It is shut up at this time there is no public-house there now, it is a private house now or a shop rather.

20,020. (Mr. Russell.) Did you see the list that Mr. Bunn gave us of the men he bribed?—No, I never saw anything of the sort; I was only attending on the room to see that the room was kept in proper order for the gentlemen to come to.

20,021. Do you know Mr. Harmer?—Yes.

20,022. Do you know if Mr. Harmer got any votes?—I am sure I do not know.

20,023. Were Mr. Bunn and Mr. Harmer much at your house?—Well, Mr. Harmer was there more than Mr. Bunn, Mr. Bunn was there sometimes, perhaps three or four times during the canvass.

20,024. Did you know Mr. Harmer was engaged in buying votes?—Well I do not know, I could not say that.

20,025. We have been told you can tell us a great deal about the doings of Mr. Bunn and Mr. Harmer?—I think the man who told you that put himself rather forward; I had no interest in it whatever. I was only put there to keep the place in order, to keep the door open and shut for those who came that were interested in it. I know nothing of the election at all.

20,026. Who employed you to watch the door?—Mr. Harmer and Mr. Diver, solicitors of Yarmouth.

20,027. Were you instructed only to let in voters?—Well I do not know what it was for I am sure.

20,028-9. What were your instructions?—That I was to be there when the parties came, and I was to show them up into the room, and afterwards I was to put the things in order for them to come again; that was all I was there for I assure you.

20,030. You never let anybody in you did not know?—No; I knew everybody who was present.

20,031. They were all voters?—That I do not know whether they were voters or not, or what they were; it was not my business to ask them.

20,032. Were Mr. Bunn and Mr. Harmer together at this time?—Well, I could not say I saw them together.

20,033. Were either Mr. Bunn or Mr. Harmer together sitting in a room at your house?—Do you mean at the committee-room?

20,034. Yes?—I do not know that I can say so.

20,035. I mean, were Mr. Bunn and Mr. Harmer, at the time you were employed to keep the door, sitting there?—I could not say I am sure.

30,036. They were in your house?—They were; but whether they had any conversation together that I cannot say.

20,037. You let those men enter your house, and they went up and saw Mr. Harmer or Mr. Bunn?—Yes, if Mr. Harmer was there they went up of course.

20,038. You can give us the names of the men?—Who formed the committee?

20,039. No; the men that you let in?—Yes, I can.

20,040. Will you sit down and make us out a list?—I will.

20,041. (Mr. Slade.) Was Mr. Hammond there?—John Hammond?

20,042. Yes?—Yes.

20,043. Was he there with Mr. Bunn?—I saw him there with Mr. Bunn.

20,044. What was it you were put at the door for?—It was merely to be there when they came, so far as I know. That was what they hired me for.

50,045. There is the register; it is not very long; just to give us the names you showed in to those two gentlemen?—John Hammond, junr., William Ling——

20,046. That cannot be right. There is only one William Ling. I do not want the names of the gentlemen who attended the committee room. I understood you to say you were employed by Mr. Harmer and Mr. Diver to keep the door, and voters were shown into the room?—No; the only voters that I know of were shown in were only those that sat on the committee, that is all; that is what I said. I said I could tell you the names of those gentlemen.

20,047. Can you give us the names of any men in Gorleston to whom old Mr. Rivett gave money?—I could not.

20,048. You never heard of anybody?—No; I never heard of anybody taking money from Mr. Rivett.

20,049. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did Mr. Rivett attend the committee room?—Yes; he attended the committee room.

JAMES HARGRAVE HARRISON recalled; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

20,050. Have you now made out a list of the names you gave to Mr. Cooper?—I beg to tell you that is a mistake. I never gave a list of names to Mr. Cooper. If you so understood me I must withdraw it. I incidentally mentioned by way of gossip what I had heard in the streets to the best of my knowledge. I have read every name, and the only names that I can remember, in addition to those which I gave you, are those of Charles Botwright and William Smith, the former 165 on the register and the latter 1,148.

20,051. Are those all the names you gave to Mr. Cooper?—They are all the persons that I can remember. I have no doubt other persons spoke to me during the election; but I have no recollection of anyone but the persons I have named coming to me, and speaking to me upon the question of bribery.

20,052. You were aware that Mr. Cooper had or would have money to distribute?—No; I beg to say certainly not. I am fully aware at all elections during the last 15 years Mr. Cooper has been engaged in that peculiar business, but I had no knowledge of his having money.

20,053. You and Mr. Cooper coming together on these occasions was a fortuitous circumstance?—Yes.

20,054. (Mr. Slade.) What were you going to say about Botwright?—I knew him to be a very bad man. He took money on a former occasion. I heard what he had to say, but I said nothing. He said what he had done before, but that he intended to be good for the future. I said, "I am very glad to hear what you say;" but I thought from that that he wanted money.

20,055. I thought you recommended him to go to Mr. Cooper?—No; I never recommended a soul to go to Mr. Cooper. What I said was this, that I told Mr. Cooper persons whom I had met and wanted money; I never sent anyone to Mr. Cooper.

20,056. (Mr. Russell.) You happened to hear casually that a certain number of men wanted money for their votes, and you fortuitously hit on Mr. Cooper?—I spoke of it in the same way I might mention anything in the evening. I might go out, and take my pipe and glass, and mention what I had heard here.

20,057. (Mr. Slade.) Then as regards William Smith?—As regards William Smith, he was a person I had known for many years. He had removed from the ward in which I resided, and had become a tenant of mine. I do not remember if he was a tenant of mine at the time of the election. I think at that time I had sold the house; I will not be positive about that. I met him on the Quay, and he gave me to understand what he wanted, and I lectured him. I told him he was exceedingly wrong to take money at all. He got nothing out of me, neither in the shape of a bribe or a promise of a bribe.

20,058. Do you know whether William Smith got any money?—Yes; I think I have heard since this inquiry took place that he had money. I think I have seen it in the newspapers; I think I heard it in this room; I do not know which. You must be aware that almost every day during the inquiry I have been in this room; and therefore whether I read it in the papers or whether I heard it here, I am sure I cannot charge my memory.

20,059. And he also got money on the Conservative side?—I think so; I think it has been proved so. I really do not know whether he did or not. All I know is, I had a conversation with the man. By-the-by, I am inclined to think this same man was up in London, and gave evidence there before the Committee of the House of Commons.

20,060. Do you know that Mr. Botwright had 15*l.*?—No. I think I heard at the time of the election that Mr. Botwright had 12*l.* for his rooms. I think they put it in that shape. I think at that time he was living in Regent Street. They hired his rooms under the pretence of wanting them for a committee room, and he got 12*l.* I think. I remember that at the time of the election; I am not positive.

20,061. I have got him down as having had 15*l.* for the use of his shop?—It may be so; I was in no way mixed up with those affairs.

DANIEL LARK sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL. D. Lark.

H. Soanes.

HENRY SOANES sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

20,096. What are you?—A fish buyer.

20,097. What did you receive from the Blue party at the last election?—20*l.*

20,098. Where were you paid it?—At Wright's shop.

20,098. Who sent you up there?—I do not know anybody particular, I heard they were paying money there and that is why I went—it was Mr. Edwards sent me there.

20,099. Which Edwards, the tailor?—Yes the tailor I believe.

20,100. You got something on the Red side as well?—Yes, 20*l.* from the Red side.

20,101. Who paid you that?—Mr. Watson.

20,102. Who paid you first?—Mr. Watson I believe.

20,103. You voted I see for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—Yes.

20,104. That is what you got the money from Mr. Watson for?—Yes.

20,105. How came you to take the 20*l.* at Wright's afterwards?—I had not made up my mind which side I was going to vote then.

20,106. Were you canvassed by Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl?—I believe I was.

20,107. Did you promise to vote for them when you were convassed?—No, I did not particularly promise them at all.

20,108. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

20,109. It is a great pity you had one in 1865?—I do not think so—I found it very useful.

T. W. Clements.

THOMAS WILLIAM CLEMENTS sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

20,110. What are you?—A publican.

20,111. What did you receive for your vote?—20*l.*

20,112. Where were you paid?—At Thompsons, I think the name is across the market-place.

20,113. Who sent you to Mr. Thompson's?—Mr. Edwards, the tailor.

20,115. Were you offered any?—Yes.

20,116. Who by?—Blyth, a painter.

20,117. What did he offer you?—15*l.*

20,118. Was that before you got the money at Thompson's or after?—I think it was the same morning or the day before. I cannot say.

20,119. You do not know whether it was before?—Yes it was before, on the Friday I think he called.

20,120. Did you refuse it?—Yes, I refused it.

20,121. Why did you refuse it?—Because I would sooner vote for the Liberals.

20,122. Would you have voted for them if you had not had any money?—No.

20,123. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

20,124. (Mr. Slade.) What relation are you to George Clements?—He is my father.

20,125. Is he in Yarmouth?—I believe so, I have not seen him this month, but I think he is in Yarmouth unless he has been out of town.

20,126. You have not seen him for a month?—No, I have not seen him for a month.

G. Burton.

GEORGE BURTON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

20,127. What are you?—A fisherman.

20,128. What did you receive for your vote at the last election?—20*l.*

20,129. Where were you paid?—Mr. Edwards brought it to my house.

20,133. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know Godbolt?—Yes.

20,134. Did you and he go together?—No.

20,135. You got his ticket?—No, I had no ticket.

T. W. Moss.

THOMAS WILLIAM MOSS sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

20,136. What are you?—A beachman, a fisherman, —sometimes one thing and sometimes another—a seafaring man.

20,137. Did you get 15*l.* from a man named Nockles?—Yes.

20,138. Did you receive any more money besides that?—No.

20,139. Were you offered any money?—Yes.

20,141. How much did he offer you?—25*l.*

20,142. Whom were you to vote for if you took the 25*l.*?—For the Blue party.

20,143. Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl?—Yes.

20,144. Did you refuse the 25*l.*?—Yes.

29,145. Why?—Because I pledged my word to one gentleman and that was sufficient.

20,146. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

20,147. If you had not promised anybody when the 25*l.* was offered to you would you have voted for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—Yes, anybody was my man.

Mr. J. Clowes.

Mr. JOHN CLOWES recalled; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

20,148. You have been examined before?—I have.

20,149. I believe we have not much to ask you now. We have heard so much of the proceedings of the illegal agents, that the proceedings of the legal agents are comparatively of small importance. When were you first appointed?—I think I was appointed the evening before the nomination.

20,150. Had you acted as agent to the candidates on the Liberal side in former elections?—Always. I had received my appointment in writing the evening before the nomination for all the former elections.

20,151. And previously to receiving a written appointment were you acting as agent to Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman?—Merely in this way—that I had it forced upon me in this way; "Mr. Clowes, you must be agent," I felt disinclined to be agent, but it came to that, that I was forced to act in that way.

20,152. You accepted it?—Yes.

20,153. The evening before the election?—The evening before the nomination.

20,154. That was the Monday night?—That was the Monday night, but previously to that I had found that the Saturday evening before, which was on the 12th of July, a meeting would be held at Mr. Savory's, the "Steam Packet Hotel," on the quay—a public meeting was going to be held there, and in order to secure the use of the balcony and the house, a contract was required to be entered into with Mr. Savory. I entered into a contract with Mr. Savory on the 8th. It was a written contract, and it was this—it was agreed between Henry Savory and the undersigned John Clowes, that he lets to the said John Clowes a room in the "Steam Packet Hotel" for this day, the 8th instant, also the sole use of the leads and the balcony of the said hotel this evening, and on the 11th instant for election purposes, for the sum of 12*l.* 12*s.*, on a sixpenny stamp signed by myself and Mr. Savory. That was to secure a committee room at his house, and the use of the rooms for a meeting on the 8th, a public meeting. That was an open air meeting, to speak from the leads, and on the 11th the sole use of the leads, it adjoining the "Crown and Anchor" leads, for the nomination, so that we had our partizans there. I think Mr. Savory has stated that I paid him 2*l.* more than he asked; for what purpose he does not know, and that I paid him the day of the election, when in point of fact I paid him the 13th of July, for which the receipt is in my hands from the returning officer, as one of the vouchers for the payment; therefore I wish to explain so much with regard to Mr. Savory.

20,155. Did you know at the time you engaged Mr. Savory's rooms that he belonged to the other party?—I do not know anything about his voting. It was a contract made purely for the purpose of getting those rooms, whether he was a partizan on our side or not.

20,156. Nothing to do with his purchase?—Nothing at all.

20,157. And you paid him the 12 guineas you agreed to?—I paid him the 12 guineas I agreed to as one of the contracts made for the necessary management of the election.

20,158. And nothing else?—And nothing else; and you see I entered into it as an individual and not as an agent then, for I had not the appointment then, and the voucher is with the returning officer.

20,159. You told us before you did not canvass much with the party?—I only canvassed one day.

20,160. And you knew that if the election was proceeded with, that you would probably be asked to be the agent?—I always had been and I felt they would wish me to be so again.

20,161. On the Monday about what time were you asked to be the agent?—I think it was quite late in the evening, because on the Monday evening we had a meeting at Gorleson, at which I was present.

20,162. On the Monday morning?—No, Monday evening, a public meeting there.

20,163. Did you know that Mr. Brogden had any idea of retiring?—I was quite privy to the meeting we had on the Wednesday, between 1 and 2 o'clock at the "Angel," when Mr. Hammond, Mr. Mainprice, Mr. Fill, and Mr. Livingston and myself were present and were informed of the result of their canvass. I went in rather late and found Mr. Hammond had reduced them to figures, and it was found that there was a certain amount of unpromised votes, and it was desirable no further steps should be taken, because it appeared impossible to gain the election without improper means.

20,164. That was the Wednesday previous?—That was the Wednesday previous.

20,165. Was it at that meeting when Mr. Marshman announced his intention of leaving the town?—I believe Mr. Marshman acted under advice, it appeared to me; but Mr. Brogden said, "Gentlemen, I should like two hours to consider." In those two hours he went off to Ormesby to consult Mr. Costerton. After that he came back with Mr. Garratt, and he said "Gentlemen, I wish another attempt to be made at a compromise with Sir Edmund Lacon, Mr. Costerton will do it to morrow." That brought on the Thursday. On Thursday Mr. Brogden went away to Peterboro; Mr. Costerton did not come into the town till 11. Sir Edmund Lacon went away by the 12 o'clock train to Lowestoft to some opening dinner there was there, and Mr. Costerton could not get at him, so the negociation appeared never to have taken place. On the Thursday evening Mr. Brogden came back, having telegraphed he had missed the train and was coming by a special engine to a public meeting at the "Bull." In the meantime I was with Mr. Marshman during the day, and he had prepared a joint address for them to retire, an address which Mr. Marshman has produced and in which such suggestions as I thought would be carried out were introduced, and I went with him to consult Mr. Shelley. After that Mr. Brogden said, "I cannot go on with the public meeting, Mr. Livingston, you must go and put it off." I left him and found he afterwards went to that public meeting, and Mr. Brogden came and was received with great enthusiasm. The next I heard was that Mr. Brogden was gone to London for a colleague, when I fully expected to have gone up in the morning and seen the address printed. That is all I know of the intention of retiring.

20,166. Did you know on the Monday morning that Mr. Brogden was going to the poll?—I knew he was going to the poll because on the Friday he announced a colleague was coming.

20,167. Were you at all cognizant of what Mr. Brogden has told us, that it was not until the middle of the day of Monday, it was determined to proceed with the election?—I was not in their confidence as to the conversations between Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl when they met; I had no communication with them.

20,168. You had no reason to believe but that it was always intended to go on with the election?—Always intended after he found a colleague, though our people about us said it appeared to be little or no use. Time was lost, and no canvassing was going on for three days.

20,169. You did not know that in Mr. Brogden's mind, proceeding with the election was the same thing as undertaking to bribe?—No, I did not understand anything of the sort, that Mr. Brogden had made up his mind to bribe or proceed with the election bonâ fide, that was in their own breasts.

20,170. At all events they did not communicate to you what had taken place.—Nothing, except out came the address of Mr. Brogden, that they were going to the poll; that gave me the assurance that they were going to act together.

20,171. After the election were the accounts sent in to you?—The accounts kept coming in day by day. As soon as the polling was over, on that evening I drew 100*l.* out of the bank in silver that I might pay the runners, all the men who required 5*s.*, and 10*s.*, and so on, and clerks, and those small amounts where no bills came in.

20,172. Were the clerks and runners appointed by you?—No; the clerks and runners were not appointed by me. There were only the persons that I knew, and who really appeared with their names on the notice papers at each polling place, because the right of entrée was to each of those clerks, and I could pay those, knowing they were there.

20,173. Who was it appointed those people?—The selection appears to have been made by Mr. Edwards or somebody who knew about them. I was not at all consulted about that.

20,174. How did you know what men to pay?—Because I had a man of the name of Page who was the principal superintendent of the card carriers, and so on, and men who knew they had been correct, and I took his statement that they had been employed.

20,175. But their employment covered the whole time of the canvass?—No, only the day's work.

20,176. Did you pay no expenses of the canvass previously?—Yes, I paid bill distributing week by week during the canvass, and those I returned.

20,177. Those you paid before you were appointed election agent?—Those I paid before I was appointed election agent, because I found the money for them myself.

20,178. You found the money?—I found the money out of my own pocket, as I have done in many other things, registration matters, and so on, out of my own private resources, and given work and time as well.

20,179. Did you pay those men yourself?—I paid the men myself, on this man, Page's account, that they had been doing the work during the week; it was about 5*l.* a week or something of that sort during the four weeks of the canvass going on. There is one other thing I suppose the Commissioners will allow me to state, which is this, that when Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman were first named to me through Mr. Watkin, I wrote to him a letter in which I said I hoped he fully explained to them the state of Yarmouth, the amount of influence and corruption which existed here, and if they came to Yarmouth they would be prepared to meet it as they found it, leaving them to judge of that.

20,180. To whom did you write that?—To Mr. Watkin. Mr. Watkin is the person who had before him the requisition to come down again. On that requisition he did not feel inclined to act, but he appears to have selected Mr. Brogden as a suitable person in his stead. I reminded him of his requisition, but if he preferred having Mr. Brogden as his substitute, of course I would submit that to our friends. Having received from him the names of Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman, I then called at Mr. Hammond's and some more of our friends at the "Angel," and it was then determined that they would so far accept them as to request them to come down to Yarmouth and canvass the borough.

20,181. (Mr. Slade.) Is that the same request that was made by Mr. Livingston?—Yes. I had gone up from Mr. Livingston previously, and reminded him of that. And I wish to say this, that having so far warned them, I was no more cognisant of the spending of money than any stranger to Great Yarmouth, for I was not at all intimate with the proceedings at the Angel." I did not go there and devote the whole of my time, or any time hardly at all. I was only out one day canvassing, and that day, although Mr. Marshman says he was younger than I am, he could not stand it longer than 6 o'clock, and I stood it up to 9. I mean to say this, that Mr. Marshman's confidence in me was fully as much in my mind as Mr. Marshman's, and as Mr. Shelley's to retire from the field, and leave the unpromised men to their deserts, for I felt confident they would be so disappointed that we should poll more votes at another election, or I thought this, that they would be so disappointed that they would put up Sir Edmund Lacon, and make him spend his money, and I have told Mr. Marshman of it; and he said, "It is no use calling sour milk now." I had no more idea of their spending money than any stranger. And I wish, so far as an agent, that I may not be made a party to Mr. Brogden's being fleeced in the town, for it appears to me Mr. Brogden's money was given to anyone who liked to ask for it. Then Henry King says I paid him some money on the day of the election. There are two receipts, one for 10*l.* 10*s.*, which is in the hands of the returning officer. And that is, "To "services rendered as canvassing and check clerk (six "days and nights) from the 8th to the 13th July inclu- "sive), 10*l.* 10*s.*" The other is Mr. G. R. King for wages for watchers, amounting to 15*l.* There is "William Harris, one night watching, 5*s.* James Rant, one day delivering papers, 5*s.* Francis Chamberling, one day ditto, 5*s.* Nineteen men two days and one night watching, and messengers, 14*l.* 5*s.* That is paid the 18th of July, "Received 15*l.*" That is all in the hands of the returning officer. I wish that may appear, because King has been under an error in stating I paid him any sum of money the day of the election. I merely paid the clerks, who were entitled to their wages, as soon as the election was over. And the runners. I believe that corrects as far as I wish to correct any evidence that has been given, though there are some observations made by Mr. Livingston and Mr. Cooper relative to Mr. Watkin, which have been already answered in Committee of the House of Commons, and therefore it is not necessary to make any observations here. He did not bring his money down in oyster barrels. And then with regard to the 1500*l.*, which it was said was furnished as Mr. Cooper says in his evidence, that Mr. Mellor and Mr. Young prepared each 1,500*l.* to fight the election. I only know that Mr. Young's friends never paid 500*l.* for him, and I never heard that Mr. Mellor or Mr. Young ever furnished the 1500*l.*, or any money whatever, save and except the legal expenses. Those they paid, and they sent them down to me in cheques.

20,182. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) That is the election of 1858?—Yes, those observations came out.

20,183. That was where there was no contest?—Yes. I also state that Mr. Young's friends never paid 500*l.* for him to Mr. McCullagh, now Mr. McCullagh Torrens, because I having heard some remarks of that description, summoned a special meeting of our friends at Mr. Owles. I invited Mr. Young down, and I had him face to face with our own friends, in order that we might have ascertained the truth, or the probability of the truth, before he stood again for Yarmouth with Mr. Brogden. And he gave the most flat denial that either he, or himself, or his friends had either given, or promised to give, or in any way were going to give, or would give to Mr. McCullagh Torrens, a penny for the introduction to the borough. Then with regard to the fact that Mr. Watkin sent the money by Mr. Ashurst, that quite contradicts what Sir Edmund Lacon said; Sir Edmund Lacon said, "Mr. Watkin brought down the money in oyster barrels himself. Now Mr. Cooper's evidence was that it came down by Mr. Ashurst. I do not think there is anything more I have to make an observation upon. I am obliged to the Commissioners for having heard my contradiction, so far as they have done. I think it is only due to certain gentlemen who are taking a high stand in this borough that it should be so.

20,184. You were not aware that Mr. Brogden brought the 6,000*l.* to spend in Yarmouth?—I was not aware of at.

20,185. Things may be done then without your knowing it?—It might be, but I wish to contradict any rumour of that description, because I have no belief in it. It is part of the evidence that certain money was spent; but, that money should be wanted for the contest of Mr. Young and Mr. Mellor I deny, because Sir Edmund Lacon had no colleague, and I had the opportunity of applying to Sir Edmund Lacon personally, just before the nomination. I asked him seriously whether he intended to withdraw, because we understood the address was in the press. Sir Edmund Lacon said, "I will let you know in two hours." We waited two hours, and in came a note from Sir Edmund Lacon to retire from the contest. That was before any expense was gone to. Rather than go to the expense of erecting hustings, I pressed Sir Edmund Lacon on the point, and there was no necessity for Mr. Mellor or Mr. Young to have sent a penny more than the expenses.

20,186. Mr. Mellor and Mr. Young can make their own statements?—Still if they do not do so, I am quite as competent as Mr. Cooper, knowing a little of the circumstances of that election.

20,187. (Mr. Slade.) The question is, had you ever heard of that rumour?—I had never heard of that 1,500*l.* This is the first time I ever heard of it. May I ask whether you have possession of the vouchers at the last election from the returning officer, because I think there you refer to everything.

20,188. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) We have everything handed in by the returning officer.—Then they will bear out what I have stated.

20,189. When you handed in a statement of accounts, how came you not include, or not to advise Mr. Brogden to include his own personal expenses?—Because I had no account of personal expenses at all.

20,190. You are not bound to have the account of the personal expenses, but the candidate is bound to hand in to the returning officer, with the legal expenses, an account of his own personal expenses?—It never had been done here before.

20,191. It never was required to be done before the passing of this Act of Parliament?—Under the old form it was never sent in.

20,192. This Act was passed in 1863?—It is a repeal of the other Act, and a re-enactment.

20,193. This is a very peculiar clause "A detailed "statement of all election expenses incurred by or on "behalf of the candidate, including such excepted "payments." And those excepted payments being in respect of the personal expenses of the candidate?

—All those Mr. Brogden and Mr. Edwards, who conducted the election, were quite as competent as I could be to give. I could only get in at the last moment these accounts, because Mr. Brogden being so far away, I could not get a final answer as to what I could do with regard to the division of those between him and Mr. Vanderbyl. Therefore I had to put those in without consulting him.

20,194. It seems to me it was your duty, as the election agent, to advise Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl as to what they ought to do in the matter of returning the expenses?—My duty is merely to act legally, not to advise. I do not see that I was to advise on this subject.

20,195. Was your attention ever called to this clause in the Act?—I only saw it incidentally at the time of the election, from Mr. Edwards.

20,196. Did Mr. Edwards call your attention to this particular clause?—No, not particularly.

20,197. You say you before heard of it from Mr. Edwards; then Mr. Edwards' attention had been called to it?—Because he first of all introduced that Act to me, and he ferretted out how it was it had repealed the auditor, and then at that time it appeared to me that I had nothing more to do under the Act than render the accounts.

20,198. You, knowing that Mr. Brogden was bound by law to return an account of his personal expenses, did not consider it was your duty to inform him that such was the case?—Because he had his own figures here.

20,199. Did you not consider it was your duty to call Mr. Brogden's attention to the Act of Parliament under which the election was carried on?—Not as to his personal expenses.

20,200. Not as to sending in an account of his personal expenses to the returning officer?—No, not as to sending in an account of his personal expenses; as to sending in an account of the election expenses in the time, it must be done.

29,201. You knew by the Act of Parliament it was your duty to pay the bills, and send the vouchers to the returning officer?—Yes.

20,202. And you knew it was Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl's duty, to send in an account of their personal expenses?—Yes.

20,203. And knowing the Act of Parliament, did you not consider it was your duty to call their attention to this clause of the Act?—No more than I had done before in the former elections.

20,204. What had been done before had nothing to do with the matter, because this is an entirely new Act of Parliament, and this election was the first under it, to which it could apply?—It did not strike me as being a new enactment.

20,205. It did not strike you as any part of your duty that he should send in his personal expenses?—Not his personal expenses.

20,206. You say Mr. Edwards called your attention to it?—He called my attention to the alteration in the appointment of auditor, and how it had arisen, and it was some time before we could find it out.

20,207. You said he called your attention to this particular clause?—Not particularly to that one clause of the Act embodied in the Act. I had not been particularly drawn to that by anyone, or even by my own reading.

20,208. I can readily conceive your not paying much attention to it, because you had nothing to conceal?—I had nothing of the sort, and more than that, the personal expenses I understood had been paid by Mr. Brogden with his own cheques through Mr. Salmon.

20,209. The Act of Parliament requires him to do so, but requires him, when he has paid it, to send in an account of how much the personal expenses have been to the returning officer, and surely it was your duty to advise him to do that?—It did not strike me. I did not think I was the agent to advise when he appointed Mr. Edwards to come and manage it for him.

20,210. Mr. Edwards was not a lawyer and you were?—I did not know he was not a lawyer. I presumed he was, and I do not know he is not now. I did not know what he was. He was here managing the election.

20,211. You must have been of opinion that the Act of Parliament was treated as a perfect farce?—No. And more than that, the returning officer asked me afterwards to send in an account of Mr. Marshman's expenses. I said, I was not his agent, and knew nothing of it, Mr. Marshman was to return it. Then he wrote to me to ask if I would do so as a matter of friendship; and then I sent in what I thought was the proportion of Mr. Marshman's expenses. I did not know what his personal expenses were.

20,212. The Act of Parliament does not require Mr. Marshman to send in any account at all, because he did not go to the poll?—However, he persisted in doing that.

20,213. But it was necessary that Mr. Brogden should send in an account of his own personal expenses?—He was away in Lancashire, and I had only correspondence with his clerk; and I presume they were as well aware of their legal liabilities as I was personally, and my attention was not drawn to their personal expenses. I only know this, that I stood in a good deal of jeopardy during the time, and I am very glad that I went straight as I did, for it was only the day after that I sent the account in to the returning officer, when he said, "Why did you not send in "your accounts in a better way? Mr. Reynolds has "sent them in four times as large as yours. You can "withdraw them, and amend your accounts;" and a nice state I should have been in. The returning officer of that election was the man I make this allegation against, Mr. Steward, who met me here, at this police court, the next morning.

20,214. It is to be understood, if Mr. Brogden had sent in an account of the expenses incurred by him, that he must have sent in an account of 6,000*l.*; and no doubt, the Act of Parliament, with that object, required him to send it; and it seems to me, you were the person that should have advised him he was bound to send it in?—A person who takes upon himself a duty merely to please another, and would be glad to shirk it, is steering in the right course to pay only what is legal, knowing nothing about these other parties, not the slightest.

20,215. That may be a reason why you should not undertake the duty?—If it was part of my duty to have advised Mr. Brogden, I am only sorry I did not advise him to send his personal expenses in.

20,216. (Mr. Slade.) Were you aware it was necessary?—It did not strike me as being so necessary now under this new Act of Parliament, having always had in my mind it was necessary for them to make, as members, a declaration, and therefore, it did not strike me there was a new enactment making it a penalty.

20,217. (Mr. Russell.) Did you know what the amounts of Mr. Brogden's and Mr. Vanderbyl's personal expenses were?—I never heard anything about them.

20,218. What do you consider would be the proper amount of legitimate expenses for a candidate at Yarmouth?—They vary very much in the length of time the contest has been going on. We have had them 800*l.*, or 900*l.*, or 600*l.*; and one election, I had them as low as 180*l.* for a contest.

20,219. I suppose a fortnight would be ample time for a canvass?—That is the best time, and quite sufficient time I think.

20,220. Taking a fortnight as the estimated period of canvass, what do you consider the legitimate expenses for each candidate?—I should think each candidate ought to pay about 300*l.*

TWENTY-FOURTH DAY.

J. T. Frosdick.

3 Oct. 1866.

JAMES THOMAS FROSDICK recalled; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

20,221. What are you?—A fish merchant.

20,222. You have been examined before?—Yes. I merely made a statement here before, to deny an allegation; that is all.

20,223. Is William Frosdick your brother?—Yes.

20,224. What is he?—A fisherman.

20,225. Do you know whether he got 15*l.* for his vote at the last election?—He got 15*l.* to pay his expenses. If you will allow me to state it in my own way, you will be able to come at it.

20,226. Do you know who paid him the 15*l.*?—A ticket was given to me to give to him at the "Angel."

20,227. Who gave you the ticket?—I could not swear positively, but I think the Mr. Edwards who was here.

20,228. Do you know that your brother got the money for the ticket?—I believe he did.

20,229. Did you hear him say he did?—Yes; I think he told me he did.

20,230. Why did you say it was for his expenses? Was he away at the time?—He was away at the election on a mackerel voyage, fishing off the coast of Holland. The parties asked me to send for him. I sent for him, and got him ashore.

20,231. That brought him away from his business?—It brought him away from his business.

20,232. Who were the people who told you to send for him?—Some of the party; I could not say who it was.

20,233. Tell me one person who did?—I will not be positive who it was. It was some of the committee who did it. Mr. Livingston knew it was the wish for me to send for him.

20,234. It was Mr. Edwards who gave you a ticket for him?—I do not know what it was. He gave me a piece of paper, and I took it down for him. They made me a messenger for him.

20,235. Do you know whether your brother had any money for his vote in 1859?—He had not a vote in 1859. He was ashore here nearly a fortnight I think. It was rather an expensive affair for me, and he only took it as his expenses.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, at half-past 10 o'clock.

TWENTY-FIFTH DAY.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 4th October 1866.

TWENTY-FIFTH DAY.

B. Powell.

4 Oct. 1866.

BENJAMIN POWELL sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

20,236. What are you?—I am a merchant.

20,237. Residing in Yarmouth?—Yes.

20,238. Did you take any part at the last election for members of Parliament?—I did; very little. I did a little.

20,239. What part did you take?—I took no part; only with one man, that is all, for I was laid up with the gout almost all the time of the election.

20,240. When you say you took part with one man you mean you gave money to one man?—I gave money to one man.

20,241. What man was that?—Dan Carter.

20,242. What did you give him?—Either 16*l.* or 18*l.*, I do not know which; I think it was only 16*l.*, but I would not say whether it was 16*l.* or 18*l.*

20,243. On what day did you give Carter the 16*l.*?—I do not know; it might be two days before the election, I cannot say. I would not swear to say; it was either one or two days before the election; I cannot say.

20,244. How came you to give Mr. Carter that money?—It was through his father-in-law; he sent him to me.

20,245. What is his father-in-law's name?—Rackham; he lived close to my house, both of them. No, Carter did not live very close then.

20,246. Did Rackham tell you that Carter wanted money?—No; he said, "There is my son, Carter, has not promised, I will send him to see you." "I said, "I do not want to see him if he has not promised;" and he said he considered it was not a bribe; he took it as lost time. I asked him what he wanted. He said he wanted 20*l.*, and it was either 16*l.* or 18*l.*, I will not be positive which, I gave him. He said he would not vote at all, he should go to sea.

20,247. Were you and Rackham talking about the men that wanted money?—No; it was a day or two before that that Rackham happened to mention it to me. I was going past his house; he lived right opposite to my house, his father-in-law did. He called me, and told me that Carter had not promised anyone, and he would not vote for anybody without he got something for loss of time. He said the other parties had been to him but he would not promise them.

20,248. What made Rackham call you?—That I do not know; that I must leave to you. I do not know why he should call me.

20,249. Where did you get the money from?—I had the money from John Lummis. He was a close neighbour of mine.

20,250. Did you go to John Lummis and say you wanted 16*l.*?—No; he told me the evening before he had some money if I knew of anybody. I did go after the 16*l.*; I went to his fish-office yard and had it there of him.

20,251. Mr. John Lummis asked you if you knew of anybody who wanted money?—He said if I wanted any for anybody he had some. I said I should not trouble myself about the election for I had got the gout so much, and I did only this one.

20,252. How long before that had Lummis told you he had money?—I do not know; it might be three or four days before the election; two or three days, or something of that sort. I think it was the night before I saw Carter, I am almost certain it was.

20,253. What made Lummis ask you that question?—I do not know; being neighbours and friends, and smoking a pipe together of an evening sometimes.

20,254. Did Lummis tell you to go and find out men that wanted money?—No, he did not tell me that; he never told me that.

20,255. How much money did you draw from John Lummis?—If I had 18*l.* I drew 18*l.*; if it was only 16*l.* I drew that.

20,256. How much more?—Nothing more.

20,257. Upon your solemn oath, did you not pay anybody else any other money for that election?—No.

20,258. Do you know a man named Thomas French?—Yes, very well.

23,259. Where did he live?—In Chapel Street; I knew him well.

20,260. In King Street, that is?—Yes.

20,261. Do you know whether he got money for his vote?—No, I do not; I do not believe he did.

20,262. Did you ever speak to him about his vote?—No; I did not want, for I knew which way he would vote.

20,263. How did you know?—Because he always did vote for the Conservatives; never voted any other way since he had a vote. I never mentioned it to him nor he to me.

20,264. Did you ever hear of his receiving a bribe for his vote?—Never.

24,265. Do you know John King?—King, the carter?

20,266. Of South Quay?—Yes.

20,267. Did you ever speak to him about his vote?—No; never asked him for his vote.

20,268. Do you know John Henry Lott?—Yes.

20,269. Did you speak to him about his vote?—No.

20,270. Do you know a man named William Burling?—No, I do not.

20,271. Of St. Peter's Road?—The tobacconist?

20,272. Yes.—Yes, I know him to see him.

20,273. Did you ever speak to him about his vote?—I never spoke 10 words to him in my life.

20,274. Do you know Joseph Powell, of King Street?—Yes.

20,275. Did you ever speak to him about his vote?—He is my son.

20,276. Which way did he vote?—The same as I did, and all my family always did; they never did vote any other way.

20,277. Benjamin Powell, of the "Newcastle Tavern," is he any relation of yours?—He is my son, too, and they never had a glass of grog for their votes in their lives.

20,278. Do you know a man named William Balls?—Yes.

20,279. Where does he live?—He never had a vote, not the William Balls that I mean.

21,280. Is this the only case, that of Daniel Carter, that you had anything to do with?—That is the only one I had to do with, the only one.

20,281. And you account for that because you say you had the gout at the election?—Yes, I had.

20,282. And could not get about?—I could not get about, and I have not been about much since Christmas.

20,283. You had been an active partizan had you not?—I used to do a little at one time. I was always for the party ever since I had a vote; I never did much though.

20,284. Did you take any part in the election of 1859?—I did a little but I do not know what now. I could not say about 1859 more than this stick.

20,285. More than that stick you can?—I do not think I could, very little.

20,286. Did you give anybody any money in 1859?—Yes, I did.

20,287. Can you give us the men's names?—James Haylett.

20,288. He is not on the register now?—No, he is dead; and Henry Brown and James Turrell. They used to do business with me very largely.

20,289. How much did you give Haylett?—I gave him 15*l.*

20,290. I do not see any Henry Brown who voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey?—Not in 1859.

20,291. No.—He had 15*l.* I forgot who he voted for; I am sure I do not know who he voted for now; I forgot all about it.

20,292. He did not vote at all it appears?—I am sure I forget. He had it. I am sure I cannot say now whether he voted or not, but he had it.

20,293. James Turrell?—He had 15*l.*

20,294. Turrell acknowledges that himself?—Does he?

20,295. Whom did you get that money from?—Mr. William Green.

20,296. How much did Henry Brown have?—15*l.*

20,297. Then they each had 15*l.*?—Yes.

20,298. And you got that money from Mr. Green?—Yes.

20,299. Is that all the money you had from Mr. Green?—That is all to the best of my knowledge. I do not recollect any more.

20,300. Do not say that, because you must know. I do not like those saving clauses—to the best of your knowledge. You are here to speak upon your oath?—I know that.

20,301. Do not give us any of those equivocations?—I took 45*l.* of him in the "Newcastle" parlour.

20,302. What more money did you get from Mr. Green?—No more.

20,303. You take your oath you only got 45*l.* from Mr. Green?—That is all I had.

20,304. You are sure? You cannot have forgotten it by this time?—I have forgotten a great deal in that time. It is seven years ago, and I have had a great deal on my mind besides.

20,305. We shall have plenty of witnesses here, and I daresay some of them will tell us they received money of you in 1859, so try and recollect it?—I have tried, and been trying, and cannot recollect.

20,306. I do not want you to tell us the names of the men, but tell me whether you received more money?—I do not recollect receiving any more.

20,307. In the year 1857, did you bribe men?—No, I do not recollect doing anything at all. I cannot remember anything of who came forward then.

20,308. Were you in Yarmouth at the election of 1857?—Oh yes. I might be away, but I was at home at the election. No, I never did anything then. I cannot remember anything of 1857; not a thing.

20,309. The candidates were Mr. McCullagh and Mr. Watkin, and Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr Vereker?—I cannot remember anything about 1857 at all; no, not a soul. I do not know, and I cannot bring anything to memory at all about 1857.

20,310. Can you say whether you spent any money or not at that election?—I cannot. I do not remember spending anything but what I spent for myself.

20,311. Do you recollect what you spent for yourself?—I mean in grog, or anything of that sort.

20,312. Do you recollect what you spent in grog?—I do not recollect how much. I do not know that there is anything I can bring to memory in 1857. I may, but I never gave it a thought.

20,313. Just give it a thought now?—I cannot.

20,314. You can recollect whether you bribed any voters?—I am sure I cannot, and I do not know more about it than if it had never been.

20,315. Did you vote at that election?—Yes, I did; I always did vote ever since I have had a vote, which is a great many years.

20,316. Did you get any money from Mr. Green at that election?—No, I do not remember getting anything.

20,317. Do you remember whether Mr. Green had any money to spend at that election?—No, I am sure I do not. I do not remember anything at all about it. I never heard it mentioned that I knew of. I do not know that I ever heard it mentioned that he had any money at that election.

20,318. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You say you were very intimate with Mr. Lummis?—Yes.

20,319. At the time of the election, were you constantly in the habit of seeing him?—I used to see him every day.

20,320. And discuss the affairs of the election with him?—I much doubt that. We used to talk of it sometimes.

20,321. Did he ever tell you what amount of money he had?—No, he never did.

20,322. Did you ever discuss with him the amount of money that was required?—No, never. He never breathed it.

20,323. Did you ever hear him say to whom he had given money?—No, I did not.

20,324. Do you know who were the people employed by him to distribute money?—No, I do not. I was about but very little, and I took very little interest in it.

TWENTY-FIFTH DAY.

B. Powell.

4 Oct. 1866.

20,325. I am asking what you heard from Mr. Lummis, and what you knew about Mr, Lummis?—I never heard anything particular from him. I knew nothing about him. I knew he was a very honest, industrious man, and making money very fast.

20,326. I am not talking about that?—We never discoursed much about the election.

20,327. You have no idea yourself whom he employed to distribute the money?—No, I have not. I never heard him mention it, and I never asked him.

ROBERT BARNARD sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

R. Barnard.

20,328. What are you?—A mariner.

20,329. Do you live in St. James' Terrace?—Yes.

20,330. Do you look after the floating light?—Yes.

20,331. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

20,332. How much?—10*l.*

20,333. Where were you paid?—At Mr. Fill's office on the quay.

20,334. Did you go up there alone?—No.

20,335. Who went up with you?—William Cotton, a master from the other light.

20,336. Anybody else?—No.

20,337. Who sent you and Cotton up to Mr. Fill's?—Mr. Clowes, Lawyer Clowes.

20,338. What did Mr. Clowes say to you when he sent you up to Mr. Fill?—We had made out our bills, and we took them to Mr. Clowes, and he told us to take them to Mr. Fill, and he would pay us.

20,339. Had you told Mr. Clowes you would not vote unless you had the money?—No; nor anyone else.

20,340. The invitation for money originated from Mr. Clowes?—No; Mr. Brogden was the first gentleman canvassed me upon it in our warehouse.

20,341. Did Mr. Brogden say anything about money?—No; nothing was mentioned about the money, only my expenses should be paid for being on shore a month.

20,342. Did you mention that to Mr. Brogden when he canvassed you?—I did. It was distinctly understood between Mr. Brogden and me, that my expenses should be paid. I told him I should not stop on shore on my own account; and he said, "That "will be all right for you."

20,343. Was Mr. Clowes present when Mr. Brogden said that?—No.

20,344. Who was with Mr. Brogden at the time?—A Mr. Edwards and a Mr. Thompson.

20,345. What Edwards?—I do not know his christian name, but I think he is a tailor.

20,346. It was Edwards the tailor?—I think so.

20,347. Where does your friend William Cotton live?—At Rose Cottage, Apsley Road.

20,348. William John Cotton?—Yes; William John Cotton.

20,349. What day was it that you came to this understanding with Mr. Brogden?—I cannot name the day but I should say it was at least a week before the election. I might say 10 days, but a week I will say.

20,350. Was Cotton with you at the time the arrangement was made?—No.

20,351. Are you aware that the same arrangement was made with Cotton?—No. I do not know what was transacted with Cotton, or who canvassed him; I do not know.

20,352. All you know about him is, that you went up with him to Mr. Fill's?—Yes.

20,353. And you both received your money there? Yes; we both received our money there; not from Mr. Fill, but in Mr. Fill's office.

20,354. Who paid it?—Mr. George Moore.

20,355. Was Mr. Fill present?—No.

20,356. Was anybody else present?—Not when the money was paid. Mr. Fill was there when we carried our bills in of the expenses, and he took them of us.

20,357. Did he direct you to go to Mr. Moore?—No. Mr. Moore happened to be in the office when we went in. It was on the Saturday before the election. He took the bills and told us to call in again, and whether it was the Monday or the Tuesday before the election I cannot say, but we met Mr. Moore on the Quay, and he said, "If you come in I will pay you your bills." We went in to Mr. Fill's office, and he gave us 10*l.* each.

20,358. That was either the Monday or the Tuesday before the election?—Yes.

20,359. What was the work you should have been doing if you had not been on shore during the election?—I should have had charge of the Lemon and Ower light.

20,360. Who took charge of the floating light while you were ashore?—The senior lamp-lighter.

20,361. What is his name?—Joseph Lugg.

20,362. Did you pay him?—Yes.

20,363. How much?—1*l.* 8*s.*

20,364. Then you made 8*l.* 12*s.* by the transaction?—No, begging your pardon, I had two more men to pay; the man that did his work; I had to pay a seaman to do the lamp lights.

20,365. How much did you pay him?—5*s.*; and there is the seaman that was put on board to do the seaman's work. I had him to pay 31 days, at 1*s.* 6*d.* a day.

20,366. It did not take you 30 days to vote?—No. But it would have cost Mr. Brogden a great deal more to have put me on board and have brought that man ashore than it would to keep me ashore the whole month.

20,367. Those men you paid out of your own pocket?—Yes, out of this 10*l.*

20,368. How much of the 10*l.* remained over when you had paid them?—6*l.* 0*s.* 6*d.* I think that will agree with the statement I have given in.

20,369. Do you know if Cotton is in Yarmouth?—He is not at present, but I expect him in every tide. The steamer is out to bring him home. We are looking out for him every tide. As soon as he comes in I am off.

20,370. I suppose you received your wages all the same, did you not?—Yes.

20,371. Do you know of any other men besides yourself and Cotton, who were paid in this way?—Yes; two more; two, if not three. I think three.

20,372. Who were they?—There was one ashore, and two were detained on shore the same as we were. One was William Miller.

20,373. Where does he live?—I do not know where he lives.

20,374. Do you know whether he keeps an alehouse?—I do not.

20,375. Do you know whether he has got a house in the Apsley Road?—No.

20,376. Who were the others?—John Robinson was one.

20,377. Do you know where he lives?—He lives on the drive. I think the next house to the "Steam-boat Tavern."

20,378. The Marine Parade?—Yes.

20,379. And who is the third man?—William Littlewood. He was at the time on shore as lightsman. It was his month to be on shore. He had no man off for him.

20,380. Are those three men in Yarmouth now?—No. One went away on Monday.

23,381. Which of them?—Miller. Robinson is in Yarmouth now. That is all.

20,382. And Littlewood?—No; he is away. He is afloat now.

20,383. Did they tell you that they were paid?—No.

20,384. How did you know it?—I knew they were detained on shore the same as we were, because the men were all sent off at one time in our place.

20,385. That is how you knew they were paid?—I do not know whether they were paid as far as that goes. They were detained the same as we were, but who paid them, or when, or where, I do not know.

20,386. Did Mr. Fill say anything to you about your getting this money?—No.

20,387. What did he say?—When he looked the bills over, he said, "There are no expenses for yourself "for being on shore." I said "No." He said "What "are you to have?" I said, "That rests entirely with "you." He said, "That is only what we will pay the "people you have." "But," he says, "how much are "you to have for your expenses for being on shore?" I said, "It rests entirely with you." He asked me if 10*l.* would pay all the expenses for myself and the people on board, and I said, "Yes, it would quite; "plenty;" and we parted, and I did not see Mr. Fill any more.

20,388. Did Mr. Fill say you should have the 10*l.*?—No. He did not say whether we should or not.

20,389. But the sum Moore paid you was the sum you had told Mr. Fill would cover all your expenses?—Yes.

20,390. Did you tell Mr. Fill you had made this arrangement with Mr. Brogden?—No; I do not recollect saying anything about Mr. Brogden to Mr. Fill at all.

20,391. Was Mr. Vanderbyl with Mr. Brogden at the time?—No.

20,392. Did you ever see Mr. Vanderbyl?—I saw him just before the election, not to speak to him. I only saw him as he moved about the town at a distance.

20,393. Did Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson canvass you?—Yes.

20,394. What did you say to them?—I told him I should not vote for him, nor neither should I be on shore. They both of them told me they would detain me on shore if I would vote for them.

20,395. They did?—They did, Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

20,396. Did they tell you that personally?—They did at my own door.

20,397. Can you recollect what they said?—I cannot say the words. When they asked for the vote I told them I should not be on shore. Sir Edmund Lacon told me I should be detained on shore if I would only vote for him, and I said I would not.

20,398. When Sir Edmund Lacon said you should be detained on shore, did he add you should be paid for being detained on shore?—No; but I suppose that is what he meant. Of course he would not detain me without he paid the expenses, for I should not stop to vote for anyone at my own expense.

20,399. He did not say you should be paid?—No.

20,400. Did Mr. Goodson say anything?—Yes; Mr. Goodson and Sir Edmund Lacon both at one time. At least one after the other; they met me at the house together.

20,401. You understood them to say that if you remained on shore you would be paid for it?—I understood them as this. If I was detained on shore all my expenses would be paid, and neither should I have stayed on shore to vote for anyone unless I was paid. I could not afford to lose a month.

20,402. But you understood that they did not actually say that?—No.

20,403. Was anything said about an application being made to the board for leave for you to remain on shore if you would vote for them?—By Sir Edmund Lacon?

20,404. Yes.—No; I do not recollect anything of the sort being said.

20,405. Who was with Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson at the time?—I think Mr. Reynolds was one gentleman who came, Lawyer Reynolds.

20,406. Anybody else?—Yes; I think Dr. Norman.

20,407. Anyone else?—There were one or two gentlemen; Mr. Hunter, I think, was one, the rate collector.

20,408. (By Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you mean us to to understand that you got 6*l.* 0*s.* 6*d.*?—Yes.

20,409. To put in your pocket?—Yes.

20,410. Do you consider that a bribe or not?—I do not know. I leave that entirely to you gentlemen.

20,411. What did you mean just now when you told us it would have cost Mr. Brogden a great deal more to put you on board than to pay the money?—It is so much per hour in a steamboat, but it would have cost more than 10*l.* to have put me on board.

20,412. To take you from Yarmouth out to the Light?—Yes; to the "Lemon and Ower."

20,413. How far is that from Yarmouth?—39 miles off the pier-head.

20,414. What could you have hired a boat for in Yarmouth to be put on board?—I do not know; and, another thing, I do not know that it is prudent to go off in a boat that distance.

20,415. Do you say there are no boats in Yarmouth that would have gone out there?—Yes; there are boats that would have gone out there, but what they would have charged I cannot say.

20,416. Do you think they would have charged as much as 10*l.*?—Yes.

20,417. Do you think that?—I think at that time they would charge 10*l.*

20,418. That election time?—Yes; or any other time to put me on board at the "Lemon and Ower." I believe it would.

20,419. (Mr. Russell.) Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

20,420. Did you take any part in the election of 1859?—No.

20,421. Do you know of any men who were bribed in 1859?—No, I do not.

HENRY JAMES BUTCHER sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

H. J. Butcher.

20,422. What are you?—An agent.

20,423. What sort of agent?—A general agent for vinegar and so on; a general agent.

20,424. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—No, I did not.

20,425. Do you know a man named Hickling?—No, I do not know him.

20,426. Do you know Mr. Fowler?—Yes.

20,427. Did not Mr. Fowler give you 10*l.*?—Yes, for the use of my rooms.

20,428. Where are your rooms?—They were in the market-place then.

20,429. What were your rooms used for?—Electioneering purposes.

20,430. In what way?—Parties were sent who called there across to the "Angel Hotel" to the committee room.

20,431. What day was it engaged?—They were engaged in June and July.

20,432. What day was your room first engaged?—I think it was about the 20th of June.

20,433. Until when?—About the 10th of July.

20,434. One room?—There were two rooms.

20,435. Do you mean to tell me that your rooms were really used at all as committee rooms?—They were.

20,436. How many sitting-rooms have you got in your house?—I let part of the house then. There were two low rooms as offices.

20,437. During the time that you let these two rooms did you not use them yourself all the time?—Sometimes.

20,438. Whenever you liked?—Whenever I liked.

20,439. And were you once during the whole time ever turned out of those rooms?—Once or twice I was.

20,440. Who by?—By the different parties.

20,441. Tell me the names?—Mr. Fowler was one.

20,442. Do you know whether your rooms were returned as part of the expenses?—No, I do not.

20,443. Do you know that it was not?—I do not know that. I only know that I received 10*l.* from Mr. Fowler.

20,444. Was it Mr. Fowler that engaged your room?—It was.

20,445. Who did you vote for?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

TWENTY-FIFTH DAY.

20,461. What rent did you receive for the part you let off ?—I think it is 20*l.*

20,462. In fact that leaves 10*l.* a year that you pay, and you let these two rooms for 10*l.* from the 20th of June to the 10th of July ?—Yes.

20,463. Were you canvassed by Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson ?—Not by Sir Edmund Lacon, by Mr. Brogden I was. Mr. Brogden canvassed me.

20,464. But not by Sir Edmund Lacon or Mr. Goodson ?—Mr. Goodson canvassed with Mr. Reynolds.

20,465. And did you refuse ?—I refused.

20,466. At once ?—Yes.

20,467. Had you got a vote in 1859 ?—Yes.

20,468. Who did you vote for then ?—Mr. Brogden and Sir Edmund Lacon.

20,474. That you swear ?—That I swear.

20,475. If you voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Watkin, as you say you did, how came you to divide your vote then ?—I cannot tell why I did so. I cannot tell you at all why.

20,476. You swear you received no inducement ?—No inducement at all.

20,477. Not a farthing ?—Not a farthing.

20,478. Did you let your rooms ?—No.

20,483. What did he say to you when he hired the rooms ?—He wanted them for electioneering purposes.

20,484. Was anything said about your vote at that time ?—Nothing at all. I promised Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl directly they came.

20,485. I am talking of the time previous to that. You just now told me that Mr. Brogden canvassed you at your house, and your rooms were let at that time to Mr. Fowler ?—Yes.

20,491. You told me nothing was said about your vote ?—He knew my principles.

20,492. Your principles are in the book as having voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Watkin ?—I only voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Watkin then.

20,493. Were you acquainted with Mr. Fowler ?—Yes.

20,494. (Mr. Slade.) Was there any written agreement made out about these rooms ?—Yes, 10*l.*

20,495. Written ?—No.

20,496. Why did you say yes ?—I did not say yes.

20,497. Was there any written agreement made about these rooms ?—No.

20,498. Merely verbal ?—Yes.

20,499. When was Mr. Fowler to pay you this ?—After the election.

20,500. Where was he to get the money ?—I do not know.

20,501. Was he to pay you out of his own pocket ? I do not know where he was to get it from. He was to pay me. I had no conversation about that, as to where he was to get it from.

20,502. Why did you not send some account of your rooms to the agent ?—I did not require to do that because Mr. Fowler paid me.

20,503. I will tell you what Mr. Fowler says about your rooms. "I saw a man by the name of Hickling, "who I knew had been engaged in buying voters. I "asked him 'What money have you left' ? He said, "about 12*l.* Then I said, 'I want 10*l.* for Butcher's "rooms, and therefore you may as well give it me.'" And the rooms were not used at all ?—Yes, they were.

20,504. Not as a committee-room ?—People called there, and I sent them across to the "Angel."

20,505. (Mr. Russell.) Were not these two rooms the only two rooms you had ?—Yes. A family living in the house occupied the other part.

20,506. Upon your oath do you mean to tell me you paid 30*l.* a year rent ?—Yes.

20,507. What is your house assessed at ?—I really forget, but it is sometime since I lived there.

20,508. Should you be surprised to hear it was assessed at 9*l.* 10*s.* ?—I think that was about it.

20,509. The whole house that is ?—The whole house.

20,510. And you paid 30*l.* a year rent ?—Yes.

20,511. If you believe that, I do not ?—That is what I paid.

20,512. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Was your vote ever questioned in the Revising Barrister's Court ?—No, I think not. I cannot remember it.

ROBERT JOHNSON sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

R. Johnson.

20,513. What are you ?—A carpet warehouseman.

20,514. Where do you live ?—South Quay my name is down for; I am not living there now.

20,515. Where was your residence at the time of the election ?—South Quay.

20,516. Did you receive anything for your vote at the last election?—No, certainly not.

20,517. Who did you vote for?—I did not vote at all.

20,518. There must have been a mistake made?—I think so; that is my object in coming here.

20,519. In Mr. Jones's list there was a query as to whether you were the person intended?—It was not me.

20,520. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

20,521. Did you receive anything then?—No.

20,522. Did you vote then?—No.

20,523. Somebody has drawn money from Mr. Brogden in your name?—Anyone who knows me would not have thought I could have taken anything in the shape of a bribe.

20,524. (Mr. Russell.) You are down in the poll-book of 1859 as having voted for Watkin and Young?—Is it Robert Johnson?

20,525. Robert Johnson, South Quay, in 1859 that is,—not the last election?—In the last election I am sure I did not vote, and my present impression is, I did not vote the previous election.

20,526. Robert Johnson, South Quay, must be you?—No question about it.

20,527. You are down as having voted for Watkin and Young?—I did not vote.

20,528. In 1859?—I know what you are referring to.

20,529. Have you any political views?—My views are Liberal.

20,530. May I ask why you did not vote?—From a feeling towards Sir Edmund Lacon.

20,531. A personal feeling?—A personal feeling towards Sir Edmund.

20,532. By personal feeling do you mean a personal feeling of regard, or that Sir Edmund has influence over you?—Not in the least. He has no influence whatever, merely from regard to Sir Edmund.

PETER ADAMSON sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

P. Adamson.

20,533. What are you?—A fish-curer.

20,534. Did you get anything for your vote at the last election?—Yes, I got 5*l.*

20,535. Who from?—I do not know. I got it from a gentleman at the "Angel Hotel." I never saw the man before.

20,536. But at the "Angel" you got it?—Yes.

20,537. How came you to go to the "Angel"?—A person, I think, that calls himself Juler told me to go.

20,538. Miles Juler?—I do not know his name; I forget. I understood it was for my day's wages. That is what I understood it was.

20,539. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

JOHN DAVIES sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

J. Davies.

20,540. What are you?—I am a lodging-house keeper.

20,541. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—20*l.*

20,542. Where did you get it?—At the "Army and Navy" tavern.

20,556. Who did you vote for?—Not at all.

20,557. Were you canvassed?—Yes.

20,558. Did you promise?—No. I promised that I would not vote the other side.

20,559. Why did you promise that?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson were the first that canvassed me, and I gave them a decided answer that I should not vote on either side.

20,560. Did you say the same to Mr. Brogden, Mr. Marshman, and Mr. Vanderbyl?—Yes, I did to Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman, but Mr. Vanderbyl I never saw in my life.

20,561. And you did not receive any money for abstaining from voting?—Not a farthing in my life. There is no man in Yarmouth who ever knew me to take a farthing in my life, and no man can come and say I stopped back for receiving a farthing.

20,562. But somebody has said so?—I should like to know the man that can come forward and say I ever took a farthing. I do not know who the man can be. I know most of the people that canvassed in Yarmouth, and if there is a man I should like to know him, that can come and say I ever held back for that purpose. I do not know who it can be.

20,563. Do you know any of the agents or sub-agents who were about canvassing?—I know a great many. They were about with Sir Edmund, and the other party too, but I do not know their names.

20,564. Do you know Mr. Downing?—Yes.

20,565. Do you know Mr. Hickling?—No, not Mr. Hickling. I do not know him personally.

20,566. Did Mr. Downing ever speak to you about your vote?—Mr. Downing never called on me unless he was with the parties when they canvassed.

20,567. Did any of the Liberals call upon you?—No, none of them, after I gave the answer that I should not vote.

20,568. Then somebody has got 15*l.* from Mr. Brogden in your name?—I can assure you on my oath I never took a penny in my life.

20,569. (Mr. Russell.) Did you say you had not a vote in 1859?—Yes. I had in 1857 and 1859.

20,570. But you say you did not vote?—I voted both times. I did in 1857 and 1859. I meant I did not vote this last election.

20,571. I see you voted for Watkin and Young in 1859?—Yes.

20,572. How is it you did not vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl this time?—I promised Sir Edmund Lacon I would not. He said to me, "Balls, you voted against me the last election." I said, "I did, Sir Edmund." But I said, "I shall not vote this election." That is the answer I gave him, and I daresay some of the parties are here that I said it before.

20,573. Does your house belong to Sir Edmund Lacon?—No; it belongs to Messrs. Stewart and Pattinson, of Norwich.

20,574. You do not have Sir Edmund Lacon's beer?—No, not at all.

TWENTY-FIFTH DAY.

T. Duffell.

4 Oct. 1866.

THOMAS DUFFELL sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

20,575. What are you?—A greengrocer.

20,576. Did you vote at the last election?—Yes.

20,577. Who for?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

20,578. Did you receive any money for your vote?—Yes.

20,579. How much?—15*l.*

20,580. Whom did you get that money from?—I got it at the "Angel;" I do not know who from.

20,581. Was it given to you by a gentleman in spectacles?—That I do not know. I did not notice whether he had spectacles on or not.

20,582. Was that all the money you received?—Yes.

20,583. Were you offered money on the other side?—No.

20,584. Were you canvassed?—Yes.

20,585. Who canvassed you?—Sir Edmund Lacon, I think, in company with Mr. Reynolds.

20,586. Had you a vote in the year 1859?—No.

J. Mainprice.

JOHN MAINPRICE sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

20,587. What are you?—A wine and spirit merchant, and also engaged in fishery.

20,588. Did you take part in the last election?—Very little indeed.

20,589. Did you canvass any voters?—To the best of my belief I never canvassed at all. I never canvassed a single voter personally, nor did I attend the canvass at all that I am aware of.

20,590. Did you attend at any of the committee-rooms?—Yes, I was backwards and forwards at the "Angel" two days before the election, but not until two days.

20,591. What did you do at the "Angel?"—I I attended different meetings—if they were called a committee—I do not know whether it was a committee or not, but I looked in at the "Angel" to see what was going on a few days before the election. I felt an interest in the election, but I took no active part.

20,592. Why did you not take an active part at the last election?—I was anxious that a contest should be avoided at the last election; that was, I believe, the principal reason. I believe my feeling was pretty well known to those who acted with me.

20,593. Had you expressed that opinion?—I had on more than one occasion.

20,594. Had you made any overtures to anyone about that?—To the opposite party, do you mean?

20,595. To the opposite party.—Certainly not.

20,596. You merely expressed your own feeling?—I merely expressed my own feeling.

20,597. You mean you wished that there should be one and one returned?—I was anxious to avoid the recurrence of what had taken place at the previous election.

20,598. Had you taken an active part at all in the previous election?—I had more so than on this occasion.

20,599. I suppose when you found there was going to be a contest you had little doubt that bribery would have to be resorted to?—Those were my own feelings. I felt that the opposite party would not lose the election without resorting to bribery if necessary, and knowing what had taken place at previous elections, I did foresee that that would be the case, certainly.

20,600. Was that question discussed at the meeting at which you were present at the "Angel?"—I do not know that any general discussion took place. I had discussed it with different members of the party, but I was not present when any decision was come to on that point.

20,601. Are you aware there was a meeting at the "Angel" at which a decision was come to that bribery would have to be resorted to?—I have heard it, and I heard after that it had occurred.

20,602. You were not at that meeting yourself?—Certainly not.

20,603. Were you one of the gentlemen who asked Messrs. Brogden and Marshman to come forward as candidates for Yarmouth?—I did; I think I signed the requisition. My impression is that I did, but there was some discussion took place before it was decided on. My views were very well known.

20,604. Mr. Brand merely says he thinks you were present at that meeting?—I was not present; I was at the "Angel" a short time afterwards, and I understood the meeting had taken place, but I never knew who was present at that meeting.

20,605. I understand you from the first set your face against having anything to do with corrupt practices at the election?—You are alluding to the last election?

20,606. Yes.—I was anxious to avoid a contest for the reason I gave, to avoid a recurrence of the corrupt practices I foresaw would occur. I have always been a strong partizan, and always been a supporter of the Liberal party. I may add it was stated in Mr. Livingston's evidence that I assisted in the distribution of tickets. I beg to say that was not the case. I knew nothing of the ticket system. I could not shut my eyes to the fact that I believed bribery was going on. I could hardly conceive that the active parties on either side could be ignorant of it, but I had nothing to do with the distribution of tickets and did not know the system adopted.

20,607. Will you tell us, if you please, what part you took in the election of 1859?—I kept the canvass book, that is one part; the only canvass book that was kept by the Liberal party. That canvass book I am prepared to hand in to the commissioners. It has never been out of my hands.

20,608. We should like to have it?—I have lost the key, but I forced the lock two or three days back. I searched for it; I thought it was in my possession, but I cannot find it. (The witness handed in the canvass book).

20,609. Besides keeping the canvass-book, what other part did you take in the election of 1859?—I took no active part beyond that some money passed through my hands, which I believe was stated in evidence yesterday by Mr. Steward. I am prepared to give it, and make every explanation I can with regard to that.

20,610. Do so, if you please?—I was sent for to the "Star" a few days before the election one evening. It was two or three days before the election—as far as my memory serves me it would be about that time—and I left my great coat in a small room, I think, called the "Victoria," and I was called into another room; and on leaving the hotel and putting on my great coat, I found something weighty in the pockets.

20,611. Was this in the "Star?"—Yes.

20,612. We understand you left your great coat in the "Victoria?"—A message was sent to me one evening that I was wanted at the "Star." I went up without any previous communication with anyone, and I was shown into a room. I was asked to leave my coat there. I went into another room where some few heads of our party were, and on returning I found the parcels in my coat pocket.

20,613. The room was called the Victoria, in the "Star Hotel?"—Yes, to the best of my belief that was the room.

23,614. You found the parcels in your pocket, parcels containing gold?—Parcels containing gold, and those parcels passed from me to Mr. Steward.

20,615. Mr. Christopher Steward?—Yes.

20,616. When you say passed from you to him, did you walk off to his house and give them to him immediately?—No; I was rather annoyed at being made use of in the way I was. No consultation had taken place, and it was some little time before I would leave the hotel. I believe I mentioned it to one or two of the party who were there, and I was induced to take them home. I was told they would be sent for, and they were sent for.

20,617. How much money was it?—I never knew the contents of those parcels; I purposely avoided knowing; I may add, that I received some other parcels that were sent to me.

20,618. Of a similar character?—Some in gold; not all in gold; some paper was with it.

20,619. Sent to your house?—Yes.

20,620. How many days before the election was this?—I think it would be three or four days before the election; I would not speak to a certainty for that length of time.

20,621. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you recollect the day of the week?—I do not.

20,622. The election was on Friday; was it in that same week?—I should think it would be in the early part of that week.

20,623. It was not on the Sunday?—Certainly not.

20,624. (Mr. Slade.) Who were the gentlemen who were at the "Star Inn," in the other room?—I cannot charge my memory; I have applied to one or two gentlemen, and they tell me they were not present; I have an impression Mr. Hammond was there, and I mentioned the matter to him, but he tells me that was not the case, and I believe he is correct; I assure you I cannot positively state the names. I have an impression Mr. Hammond was there; he says he was not, and, moreover, he says I was the last person he should have recommended to have been placed in that position.

20,625. Mr Hammond said?—Mr. Hammond said to me; I went and saw him; I was anxious to ascertain who were the parties.

20,626. Having failed in your recollection as regards Mr. Hammond, are you afraid to venture on any other guess?—There were some friends there of the candidates that I did not know; they were strangers to me.

20,627. Strangers to Yarmouth?—Strangers to Yarmouth; there would not be more than two or three, I imagine.

20,628. Would Mr. Livingston be likely to be there?—I think not; Mr. Livingston had a portion of the money from me.

20,629. It appears that Mr. Steward tells us he got a quarter of the money from Mr. Livingston, and the remaining three-fourths from you?—I do not know at all what portion each had, but Mr. Steward had the major portion of it—that I am confident.

20,630. What you had you gave to Mr. Steward or Mr. Livingston?—Every shilling that I received passed to Mr. Steward or Mr. Livingston; I never rendered any account, for I did not know; my friends knew very well; I would not know what it was; I had nothing to do with it beyond what I have stated.

20,631. Then I understand you did not open the parcels to know what was in them?—Not the two large parcels, but the other was not sent in that way; they were merely tied up in paper.

20,632. The parcels you found in your coat pocket at the "Star," did you open those?—Not the two first parcels I received.

20,633. What sized parcels were they? What should you guess to be the number of sovereigns in each?—I really do not know; they were tied up, I think, in wash leather bags, but I really cannot say; they might probably contain 400*l.* or 500*l.* each; they were very weighty.

20,634. You opened the money that came to you afterwards, that was sent to your house—the money and the notes you opened?—I really forget how they came exactly; I will not be positive how they came, but I know the other parcels were not given all at once; they were given in two or three times; I fancy I received it in as many as three or four times after the first bulk.

20,635. Can you tell us how much money you received in driblets?—I cannot tell only from guess, 400*l.* or 500*l.*

20,636. Of the entire money you received?—I could not; my impression would be, supposing the bags to contain what I estimate, and what I received afterwards, I received some cheques; but I really do not know the amount of a single cheque; I was anxious to get rid of them as soon as I could; the cheques I handed to Mr. Livingston.

20,637. Independently of the cheques, what money did you receive?—I really cannot say; I have not the least idea closer than what I have stated; I would tell you instantly if I had.

20,638. When you say you cannot give an approximation within 400*l.* or 500*l.*, it must have been a very large sum?—I do not think the sum would be in excess of what I state; certainly not.

20,639. The first two parcels together would contain about 1,000*l.*?—Yes.

20,640. What would you put down as the remaining sum?—That would be the larger portion of what I received, in the whole; of that I am convinced.

20,641. It would not amount to 1,000*l.*?—No; I should say under 2,000*l.* certainly; I want to state that I am not positive, because I never counted it, and I told our parties so; I believe Mr. Stewart was requested at the time to furnish an account; whether he did or not, I cannot say; I requested him and others too.

20,642. You requested him at the time to furnish an account of the disbursements?—Yes; he knew very well that I did not know the contents of the parcels; it was generally known I would not know what they contained.

20,643. How many cheques did you receive?—I do not know whether it was three or more, but I received three, if not more.

20,644. Whom were those cheques drawn by?—Two of them, if not the third, was by Mr. Young.

20,645. The member?—The candidate.

20,646. Can you recollect on what bank the cheques were drawn?—I do not; they were on a London bank; but I do not know, nor do I know in what names they were drawn; they were not payable to me.

20,647. Were they payable to bearer?—I never endorsed the cheques; so they would be payable to bearer.

20,648. And you cannot tell what amounts they were drawn for?—I really cannot.

20,649. You gave those three cheques to Mr. Livingston?—Two of them I gave to Mr. Livingston, and the other one I destroyed in the presence of Mr. Young. I sent for him; he said he was in my hands; and I said if that was the case, I would put it in the fire in his presence.

20,650. What was that cheque for?—I do not know; I could not tell you the amount of either of the cheques.

20,651. Could you say whether it was for a large sum of 500*l.*?—No; my impression is, it was not 200*l.*; certainly I think the cheques were all for small amounts.

20,652. When was it you destroyed this cheque?—On the morning of the election, in my own office, in the presence of Mr. Young.

20,653. Were these cheques that were sent to you at this time sent to you by the same hand that brought the parcels of money?—I do not know who brought the money at all; my impression is, that the cheques were sent to me in an envelope, and the parcels were sent to my office; I do not know by whom they were sent.

20,654. Both were sent by private hands?—Both were sent by private hands.

20,655. From conversations you had with Mr. Young, do you imagine the money came from him as well as the cheques?—I cannot say that they did. I had no conversation with him about the money. I sent for him at the time I destroyed the last cheque, because the cheques were drawn in his name, and I was aware, although I had no direct knowledge to what purposes the money was applied; of course I could guess.

20,656. You knew he would be liable for the cheque if you did not destroy it?—Certainly.

20,657. Had you spoken to Mr. Young previously to that about electioneering matters?—Oh yes; I kept the canvass book, and the only parties that had access to it were the two candidates and Mr. Hammond, they were frequently backwards and forwards.

20,658. Mr. Richard Hammond? — Mr. Richard Hammond.

20,659. You discussed the prospects of the election with Mr. Watkin and Mr. Young?—I have no doubt of it. I have no distinct recollection of it, but I have very little doubt I did.

20,660. Have you any idea where that larger sum of money that you found in your coat came from?—I have no knowledge where it came from. Of course, the natural inference is, it would be furnished by some friends of the candidate.

20,661. Is it your own idea that it was furnished by Mr. Watkin?—I have no reason to think it was furnished by him exclusively, certainly not. Of course, they would perhaps avoid letting me know where it came from.

20,662. Of course you could not apportion the sum at all, but the entire sum came from from Mr. Watkin and Mr. Young ultimately?—I have my own opinion about that, but I have no ground for saying so.

20,663. Give us your opinion if you can as to what proportion they paid?—I have not the slightest knowledge of that. I should think, probably, they would pay in equal proportions if they paid at all. I think most likely, I believe that was the understanding; I fancy it was.

20,664. Have you ever heard or have you any reason to believe that there was any other money provided by those gentlemen for the purposes of the election?—My belief is there was, but it all passed through my hands in the way that I state.

20,665. Then you put the sum at under 2,000*l.*?—I should say certainly under that. I should think probably some 300*l.* or 400*l.*

20,666. Can you give us an idea on what day the bribery commenced before the election on your side?—Are you speaking of 1859?

20,667. Yes?—No. I should imagine it would be some two or three days before the election; I should think it would be three or four days before the election when I received the first parcel, and it passed out of my hands the next day.

20,668. Can you recollect this, at the time, whether you received a parcel on Sunday?—I really cannot.

20,669. You cannot say whether the Sunday intervened?—I did not even know what day the election took place till I saw a memorandum, a summary of the poll, cast up on the morning of the election.

26,670. Can you recollect at that time whether bribery was going on upon the other side when you began to bribe?—I think there is no doubt of it. I think that is the impression.

26,671. That they were in the field before you?—No doubt of it.

20,672. It was a hard contest in 1859?—Not so close as the 1857 election if I recollect right. My impression is, that the Liberal party were too late in the field in 1859.

20,673. Had you told your party at that election that you thought you were too late in the field?—I may add that that induced me in a great measure to send for Mr. Young. I saw, the first hour of the polling, that many of the voters that were looked upon as shaky had been polled upon the other side, and I would not let the money pass out of my hands, the cheque that I had.

20,674. Did you understand from Mr. Young at the time you received this money from him that he was prepared to spend more money if necessary?— No, I did not. I do not think I had any conversation with Mr. Young personally about the matter till the time I spoke of.

20,675. When you destroyed the cheque?—When I destroyed the cheque; I think not.

20,676. Was it at all understood by you as to what sum the Liberals were prepared to spend at the election?—No. I think it was in the first instance. I imagined the amount provided was all they contemplated spending, or they probably would have been provided with more. I imagine such to be the case, I cannot speak of my own knowledge.

20,677. Did you ever after the election was over hear how that was brought down to Yarmouth?—Never.

20,678. Did you ever hear whether it was drawn out of any of the banks in Yarmouth?—No. I made no inquiries about it, and I do not remember hearing the subject mentioned as to the mode in which it was conveyed here, or from what source it came.

20,679. Was Mr. Steward at that time understood to be the gentleman who was the distributor of money for bribery?—I took no active part in the arrangement, from the fact of my keeping the canvass book. I have no doubt it would have been so or he would hardly have known of the money being in my hands.

20,680. Did he come to you personally for the money?—I think he did. My impression is that he did.

20,681. He came to you because you knew him well enough to know he was the man to give money to?—Yes.

20,682. Did you act in this way in the election of 1857?—I had nothing to do with money matters. I kept the canvass in 1857 in conjunction with the late Mr. Neale, who was a printer here and an active partisan.

20,683. No money passed through your hands then?—Never before that. Unintentionally I was drawn into it the last time.

20,684. Had you understood or had you heard that Mr. Steward had been acting in the election of 1857?—I am inclined to think he was not the agent in 1857; I think not, but I really do not know.

20,685. You are inclined to think he was not the agent?—No, I think not.

20,686. He says in 1857 he had 1,500*l.* or 1,600*l.*?—Then he would have been, but I was not aware of it; I had nothing to do with it.

20,687. Does your experience extend beyond the election of 1857 with regard to keeping the canvass-books?—That is the first time that I kept the canvass-books. I have taken an active part in the elections here for the last 20 years.

20,688. In the year 1857, you first kept the canvass-books?—I think the reason was, at the previous election there was some little jealousy as to the splitting of votes between the candidates, and Mr. Neale and myself were appointed to keep the canvass and to split the votes according to what we considered to be the interest of the party.

20,689. Can you give us any information as regards that agreement we have heard of between Mr. Mellor and Mr. Young, and Mr. McCullagh and Mr. Watkin?—I do not know of any agreement myself at all; I do not believe an agreement of the kind existed.

20,690. You know to what I allude?—Yes; it has been alluded to in the evidence during the inquiry, but I am not aware of any such agreement.

20,691. You have heard of it?—I have heard it hinted at, chiefly from the opposite party. If such an agreement was in existence, it was entirely unknown to myself.

20,692. I presume you, as an active partisan upon the Liberal side, probably would have heard of it?—I think I should have done so.

20,693. I suppose, next to Mr. Hammond, I may say you are the most active partisan upon the Liberal side?—No, I do not think that. I perhaps enjoyed the confidence of the party, or I should not have been selected for the position I was; but there were more active partisans than myself.

20,694. In your opinion was there no such agreement made?—I should say not, certainly. I did hear of it from some of our own friends, and I think it was put to some of the candidates here, to one of the supposed parties to the agreement, and he denied it, I think.

20,695. Do you mean upon the hustings?—No; at a private meeting of the party.

20,696. Without having been mixed up with spending money yourself in 1857, can you tell us of your own knowledge, whether something was spent or not at that election?—Not of my own knowledge. I have very little doubt of it, but nothing passed to my knowledge.

20,697. Who is the gentleman to whom we have to apply, in your opinion, who had the distribution of the money in 1857?—From what has been stated by you, I should think Mr. Steward.

20,698. I suppose Mr. Steward would be the conduit-pipe, as he was before. He would receive it from some gentleman like yourself?—I really do not know; I have not the least idea from what channel it came to Mr. Steward in 1857.

20,699. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) At this election in 1859, when was your canvass considered as completed?—Upon the evening prior to the election. I see there is a summary here which was made up the evening before in a book.

20,700. It had been decided three or four days before that to commence bribing?—Yes.

20,701. Was that decision come to looking at the state of the canvass at that time?—I really cannot say; I took no active part in that election beyond keeping the canvass book.

20,702. You can tell us, at the end of the previous week, the election being upon the Friday, what was the state of the canvass then?—There were a great many votes open; no doubt about that.

20,703. A great number of voters had abstained from promising on either side?—No doubt of it.

20,704. Do you consider that you had a majority of the canvass at that time?—The majority of promises.

20,705. At that time you had the majority?—We considered so.

20,706. When did you first hear that bribery upon the other side had commenced?—I really cannot say as to what day, but it was rumoured about several days before. There are a class of voters who make use of that early enough upon all occasions.

20,707. You kept the canvass book in 1857?—Yes.

20,708. Do you recollect at that election when it was decided to spend money?—No. I had an impression that a very little was spent in 1857. I really do not know when it was commenced.

20,709. In 1857, had you any idea that money was spent upon the other side?—It was generally rumoured, but I had no direct knowledge of it. It was generally rumoured that money was spent upon the other side.

20,710. You mean that it was rumoured before the election took place?—Yes.

20,711. That money was being spent by the "Red" party in 1857?—Yes. I did not know of any being spent at all.

20,712. We have been told here there was none spent by the Conservative side in 1857?—It may be so; I am not in a position to contradict it.

20,713. Was it in 1859 the conviction of your party, that is your side, that money was being spent upon the other side, which induced you to commence bribing in 1859?—I have no doubt it was so; I took no part in the discussion when the decision was come to, but I have not the slightest doubt that it was so.

20,714. (Mr. Russell.) Can you remember who it was who sent for you to come to the "Star" in 1859?—No. A message was sent that I was wanted at the "Star," immediately. It was in the evening, but I do not know who sent for me.

20,715. A verbal message, or by letter?—A verbal message.

20,716. When you got there, was it a large or a small meeting?—There were not more than three or four persons present.

20,717. When you got into the room, it was proposed to you that you should be the conduit pipe?—The proposal was not made to me in the room. I knew nothing of it till I found this parcel in my pocket.

20,718. Am I to understand that nothing occurred in that room while you were in it which induced you not to be surprised when you found the money in your coat pocket?—No; I was very much surprised, and I refused to leave the hotel for some time.

20,719. When you found the money in your pocket, you at once inferred what it was intended for?—I did.

20,720. Are you of opinion that nothing occurred in that room previously that induced you to undertake it?—Certainly.

20,721. And after you found the money in your pocket, did you return into the room from which you had come and state that you were unwilling to distribute the money?—I did so; I said I was unwilling to have anything to do with it.

20,722. Was Mr. Watkin or Mr. Young there?—My impression is that they were in the house at the time, I did not mention it personally to them; I avoided doing so for reasons.

20,723. Then I understand you to say that you very strongly objected and only gave way upon great pressure?—As much as this, that it would not do to make any talk about it, and I was only to take it home till it was sent for.

20,724. You would not have undertaken such a position unless the gentlemen had some influence with you?—I do not know that they had any particular influence with me; in the position in which I was placed I did what I thought was for the best; I did not like the position, certainly.

20,725. Cannot you call to mind who the gentlemen were with whom you remonstrated?—I think there were two gentlemen there who were staying there who were strangers; and, as I told you before, I had an impression that Mr. Hammond was there, but within the last two or three days I have inquired of him, and he said that he was not there.

20,726. Is the impression upon your mind still, however painful it may be to say so, that Mr. Hammond was the gentleman who induced you to take that position?—Certainly not, after what he has stated; I fully believe my impression is wrong. I have that confidence in Mr. Hammond, that I am sure he would not say so if it was otherwise.

20,727. And your conclusion that Mr. Hammond was the gentleman having failed, are you enabled to arrive at any other conclusion?—I do not know whom to apply to; I assure you I would not conceal it; I would state it to the best of my conviction if I could.

20,728. Were the two gentlemen, the strangers, gentlemen whom you subsequently got to know?—I really do not recollect now the names of any of the parties there. I know there were some friends of the candidates there, but I never did know from what source the first parcel came.

20,729. What was the discussion that took place when you did go into the room?—I really forget what it was, but it was mere casual discussion; I was satisfied by what parties I had been sent for that it was merely an excuse.

20,730. The message was that you were earnestly wanted at the "Star?"—That was it.

20,731. And when you got there you found the business for which you were wanted was no business at all?—I found out afterwards that there really was nothing that I was wanted for beyond being the medium of conveying this money.

20,732. How did you know to whom to deliver this money?—Mr. Steward applied to me for it, and knowing him as an active partisan of the party I had no hesitation in giving it up to him.

20,733. Did Mr. Livingston apply to him or you to him?—I really cannot tell you at this time; probably Mr. Livingstone and I may have had some discussion about it, but I cannot say whether he applied to me or I to him.

TWENTY-FIFTH DAY.

J. Mainprice.

4 Oct. 1866.

20,734. And you do not believe that either Mr. Watkin or Mr. Young personally asked you to undertake the distribution of the money?—I am certain they did not.

20,735. Do you know who the strange gentlemen were?—I do not know their names; they were friends, as I understood, of the candidates. I really do not know the names of anyone who was present.

20,736. If, on reflection, or in the course of conversation, you can ascertain the names of the gentleman or gentlemen who induced you to undertake this office, perhaps you will kindly communicate it to the Commissioners?—I will endeavour to do so; I have endeavoured to do so, and I will still endeavour to do so.

20,737. (Mr. Slade.) We will keep your canvass-book and return it to you.

(The witness.) Any explanation that I can give you I shall be most happy to give with regard to it.

T. Coleman.

THOMAS COLEMAN sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

20,738. Do you live in St. George's Road?—Yes.

20,739. What are you?—A cab proprietor.

20,740. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

20,741. How much?—20*l.*

20,742. Who from?—George Watson.

20,743. Were you canvassed upon the other side?—Yes.

20,744. Who by?—Mr. Edwards, and several of them called.

20,745. Were you offered any money?—No.

20,746. Did you receive any other money besides that 20*l.*?—No.

20,47. Had you a vote in the year 1859?—No.

T. Bee.

THOMAS BEE sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

20,748. What are you?—A bootmaker.

20,749. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—Certainly not.

20,750. Miles Juler gave us your name as having been bribed by the Conservatives?—I saw by the report he stated that he heard I was bribed.

20,751. But it is not true?—Certainly not.

20,752. Were you canvassed by Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—Yes.

20,753. And did you promise them to vote?—Yes.

20,754. At once?—At once.

20,755. Were you canvassed by the opposite party?—Yes.

20,756. Did you refuse to vote for them?—I did.

20,757. At once?—At once.

20,758. Were you offered any money by that side?—Not in a direct way.

20,759. Were you offered any in an indirect way?—This same Juler came to my shop, and I had an impresssion that he wanted to offer me money; he did not positively do so, but from his manner I had an impression, and I told him at once that I was going to vote for the other party, and that it was no use his saying it.

20,760. Had you got a vote in 1859?—Yes.

20,761. Did you vote upon the same side then?—No.

20,762. Why did you vote for Mr. Watkin and Mr. Young in 1859 and for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson in 1865?—My political views and sentiments had undergone a change.

20,763. What was the cause of the change?—I did not approve of the conduct of the Liberal party. I never was a strong partizan, and certain things which they did in Parliament I disapproved of. I thought they were very insincere, and although professedly Liberal, very illiberal.

20,764. Do you know a man named Steward?—I know two or three Stewards, which do you refer to?

20,765. Christopher Steward?—I know him by sight.

20,766. Did he give you any money in 1859?—Certainly not.

20,767. Did anybody else give you any money?—No. I never gave anyone the slightest reason to suppose that I was open to take a bribe.

20,768. You will not swear you received no money for your vote in 1859?—I will.

20,769. From neither side?—From neither side.

20,770. Your change of vote was entirely the result of your change of political principle?—Entirely so.

20,771. (Mr. Slade.) And you voted in 1857 too?—I believe I did. I think I had a vote then. If I had a vote I voted.

20,772. You voted for Mr. Watkin?—Yes.

20,773. Did you make a complaint to Mr. Watkin that you had not been paid some expenses at the election?—Do you mean in 1857?

20,774. In 1857 or 1859?—I believe not; I think I mentioned something about it to Mr. McCullagh. I think that was in 1857.

20,775. And what did you say to him?—I told him that I was engaged as a clerk at the previous election, and had never been paid for my services.

20,776. And did he pay you?—No.

20,777. Had that anything to do with your change of politics?—That was in 1857. I have voted the same way since that.

20,778. Have you made any complaint since you mentioned it to Mr. McCullagh? Have you made any subsequent complaint to anyone?—No, none whatever.

20,779. Have you ever been employed as a clerk since?—No.

20,780. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Were you canvassed by anybody at this last election besides the candidates themselves?—No, only this Juler, and Scott came with him.

20,781. Who?—James Scott came with Juler.

20,782. Upon the Liberal side?—Yes.

20,783. Were you canvassed by any of the agents or under-agents upon the Conservative side?—No. From the time I was canvassed by Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson up to the present time, I have not spoken personally with any of the leading men upon the Conservative side.

20,784. Previously to Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson calling upon you, were you canvassed by any of the under-agents?—No, certainly not.

20,785. Do you know any of them?—I know by sight many of the gentlemen who were mixed up with Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson; but none of them called upon me to ask me anything about the election.

20,786. Who canvassed you first; Sir Edmund Lacon or Mr. Brogden?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

20,787. They came first?—They came first.

20,788. And you immediately promised them?—I did.

20,789. You had not seen any of the under-agents previously to seeing Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—No.

20,790. Did you know Mr. Lummis?—I knew him by sight.

20,791. Only by sight?—Only by sight.

20,792. Had you spoken to him?—I may have just said, "How do you do?" or that like, but I never had any conversation with him.

20,793. Did you never have any conversation with him upon the subject of the election?—Not one word. I did not even know which party he belonged to.

20,794. (Mr. Slade.) When you were canvassed in 1859, by Mr. Watkin, did you repeat your complaint about not having been paid in 1857?—No, it was only just a remark at the moment, and it passed away from my mind. In fact, it is almost a wonder I remembered it at all. It has been brought to my recollection. It made no great impression upon my mind.

20,795. You are sure you did not say to Mr. Watkin you had not been paid?—I am quite sure.

20,796. You never alluded to it at all?—I never alluded to it all. You mean in 1857?

20,797. That you are sure of?—Yes, quite sure?

20,798. (Mr. Russell.) Did the opposite party ever pay you that money?—No.

20,799. You were never paid that money at all?—No.

20,800. Did you mention the fact to the Conservatives when you were canvassed by them?—No.

HENRY GOOCH sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL. H. Gooch.

20,801. What are you?—A grocer.

20,802. Did you receive any money at the last election for your vote?—Yes.

20,803. How much?—15*l.*

20,804. Who gave it you?—Some stranger at the "Angel." I do not know who it was.

20,805. Who sent you up to the "Angel"?—Mr. Fox.

20,806. Mr. Thomas Fox?—Yes.

20,807. And were you offered any money by the other side?—No.

20,808. Never?—No.

20,809. The 15*l.* is all that you got?—Yes.

20,810. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

20,811. (Mr. Slade.) Have you a brother named Thomas Gooch?—No.

20,812. Have you a brother?—I have a brother; I have two or three.

20,813. Mr. Fox sent up two Goochs; who is the other Gooch?—I cannot say.

20,814. Whom did you go up with?—I came up with Fox.

20,815. Whom do you understand to be the other Gooch?—I cannot say, there are so many Goochs.

20,816. (Mr. Russell.) Is Thomas Gooch, Nelson Road, your father?—No.

20,817. Is he any relation of yours?—Yes.

20,818. What?—Uncle.

20,819. Is Thomas Gooch, of Church Plain, a relation of yours?—No.

20,820. Is Thomas Gooch, of South Quay, a relation of yours?—No.

20,821. He is not?—No.

THOMAS EDWARD GRAY sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE. T. E. Gray.

20,822. What are you?—An ironmonger.

20,823. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—No.

20,824. For whom did you vote?—For Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

20,825. Has your name been mentioned upon this inquiry?—No, I never heard it before till I received a subpœna this morning. I was rather surprised at it. I did not know what it meant. It was about half-past 9 this morning. That was the first I heard of it. It must be some mistake.

20,826. I think it must have been a mistake. You received nothing for your vote, I suppose?—No; I have heard nothing of it before.

20,827. Did you vote in 1859?—Yes.

20,828. Whom did you vote for then?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey.

THOMAS GOOCH sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. T. Gooch.

20,829. What are you?—Well, I am a beershop keeper, a beer drawer I mean to say.

20,830. Did you get 15*l.* for your vote at the last election?—I took 15*l.*

20,831. Where did you get it at?—At the "Army and Navy" I went.

20,832. Where do you live?—I live in the Nelson Road, the "Prince of Wales' Feathers."

20,833. Who sent you to the "Army and Navy?"—I went with Mr. Fox. He took me down there.

20,834. Thomas Fox?—Yes.

20,835. At the election of 1859, did you have any money then?—No, not a farthing.

20,836. Had you a vote?—I had a vote then, but I never took anything of it.

20,837. Whom did you vote for?—Who put up then? I have no recollection, so as to say whom I voted for, not then. Who were the members?

20,838. Did you vote for the Liberals or the Conservatives?—I voted for the Liberals.

20,839. Watkin and Young?—Yes.

20,840. Were you offered any money upon the other side?—No. In fact, I was not solicited, because my principles are always I vote for the Liberals, and so I was not solicited at all.

SHEARMAN BAYFIELD sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE. S. Bayfield.

20,841. What are you?—A fish curer.

20,842. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

20,844. Who from?—At the "Angel."

20,845. Who sent you up there?—I went up of my own accord.

20,846. What induced you to go up to the "Angel?"—Because I heard there was money.

20,847. You heard that money was going?—Yes.

20,848. Was that all the money that you received at that election?—Yes. When the other parties canvassed me I told them that I always voted Liberal, and that it was no use I was sure to vote Liberal. I took this money the day before the election.

20,849. Would you have voted for the Liberals without the money?—Yes; I never voted only Liberal.

20,850. Did you vote in the year 1859?—Yes. I took 7*l.* then.

20,851. Who gave you the 7*l.*?—A man of the name of King, John King.

20,852. Are you sure it was John King?—No, Henry King.

20,853. Was that to vote for the Liberals?—Yes.

20,854. You always voted Liberal, but you always voted for a consideration, did you not?—I always was of Liberal principles. I stood in need of money very much. It was very useful to me.

20,855. Tell me which King it was that gave you the money in 1859; is he a gardener?—No; he is a carter.

20,856. That is Henry King?—Yes, Henry King.

20,857. Did you receive any money in 1859 except that 7*l.*?—Yes; 8*l.*, I think.

20,858. Who from?—Mr. Downing.

20,859. Then you received money in 1859 on both sides?—Yes.

20,860. Did you receive money on both sides at the last election?—No. I told Downing when he came in 1859 I should not vote for him if he left me a parcel from them. I told him I should vote against him.

TWENTY-FIFTH DAY.

S. Bayfield.

4 Oct. 1866.

20,861. Downing was a Conservative then?—Yes. If he had left 100*l.* I should have voted the other way.

20,862. (Mr. Russell.) Who was it really sent you up to the "Angel" to get your money?—I went up myself.

20,863. How did you know that you would get money there?—Because I heard them talking of it upon the nomination day.

20,864. Who was it you heard talking of it?—I do not know who it was. It was talked among the public.

20,865. You cannot remember anyone in particular that you heard it from?—No one in particular. I only heard them talking.

J. Benslyn.

JOHN BENSLYN sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

20,866. Where do you live?—Bath Place.

20,867. What are you?—A carpenter.

20,868. Did you get 10*l.* from E. O. Johnson?—15*l.*

20,869. For your vote?—Yes.

20,870. Were you offered any money on the other side?—No.

20,871. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

H. C. Balls.

HENRY CHARLES BALLS sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

20,872. What are you?—A carpenter.

20,873. What did you receive for your vote at the last election?—15*l.*

20,874. Who from?—At the "Army and Navy Tavern," I do not know who it was gave it to me.

20,875. Who sent you up to the "Army and Navy Tavern?"—I was going past, and I saw a quantity of persons about there, and I called in and I asked the landlord what they were doing of, and he asked me if I was a voter, and I said, "Yes." He said, "There "is a gentleman here giving away money for their "votes," and I said, "Is there a chance?" and he showed me up into the room.

20,876. That was at Cattermole's?—Yes.

20,877. Had you been canvassed by Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl?—Well, I do not know. I was not at home at the time. I daresay they did call on me, but I was across the water at work.

20,878. You had never been asked for your vote before?—No.

20,879. Were you canvassed by Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—I daresay I was, but I am never at home until 6.

20,880. Were you offered any money on that side?—No.

20,881. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

T. Barber.

THOMAS BARBER sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

20,882. What are you?—A Birmingham and Sheffield dealer.

20,883. In cutlery?—Yes.

20,884. Where do you live?—In Regent Street.

20,885. Thomas Robert Barber?—Yes.

20,886. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—20*l.*

20,887. Where were you paid?—On the Church Plain, at Wright's.

20,888. Were you offered any money by the Conservatives?—Yes.

20,889. How much?—At different times from 10*l.* to 15*l.* and 25*l.*

20,890. Who offered it you?—Mr. Aldred, the auctioneer, in my street. He used to come in perhaps two or three times in a day, I am sure eight or nine times in a week.

20,891. What Mr. Aldred is it?—Aldred, the auctioneer, Samuel.

20,892. And he lives in Regent Street?—Yes.

20,893. Was he the gentleman who offered you as much as 25*l.*?—Yes; I believe it was 25*l.* He came in several times, and I believe he offered me as much one time as 25*l.*

20,894. And kept on raising the price every time he came?—He commenced at 10*l.*

20,895. And gradually worked up to 25*l.*?—Yes.

20,896. You did not take that money?—No.

20,897. Do you belong to the Blue party?—Yes; I always voted Blue.

20,898. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes, and before that. I voted once or twice before.

20,899. What did you get for your vote in 1859?—7*l.* 10*s.*

20,900. Who gave you that?—Mr. Edwards.

20,901. Edwards the tailor?—Yes.

20,902. Is that all you had?—Yes.

20,903. Did the Conservatives offer you any money that time?—Yes, I believe they did. Mr. Reynolds said he would send Mr. Buston to me. I think it was at that time. I think it was in 1857 when Mr. Reynolds said he would see about it and would send in Mr. Buston. I would not say whether it was 1857 or 1859.

20,904. What Reynolds was that?—In Regent Street, Reynolds and Palmer.

20,905. You are sure that was either in 1859 or 1857?—Yes; I am sure it was either in 1859 or 1857; not this last election.

20,906. And did he say he would send Mr. Buston to you and that Mr. Buston would give you some money?—Yes. I refused to give Sir Edmund Lacon and the other my vote, and they said, we can make that right with you, we will send somebody in; and they sent Mr. Buston in. I think, I will not be sure, but he offered me either 15*l.* or 20*l.*, and I told him to walk out.

20,907. Did Mr. Reynolds mention any sum of money?—No.

20,908. He said he would send Mr. Buston to you and he would make it all right?—Yes.

H. Greenhow.

HENRY GREENHOW sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

20,909. What are you?—A labourer.

20,910. Is your name Henry?—Yes.

20,911. What did you receive for your vote at the last election?—Nothing at all.

20,912. Did you get no money on either side at the last election?—No, I never got any money in my life at elections.

20,913. Were you offered money?—No.

20,914. How did you vote at the last election?—I promised Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson in the South Town Road the first time.

20,915. The first time you saw them?—The first time I saw them.

20,916. You took a very active part in the election of 1859, did you not?—Yes, I did.

20,917. You say you did not get anything for your own vote in 1859?—No, I never took a penny from anyone.

20,918. You took money to give to others?—I have done that both in town council and borough elections too.

20,919. We will take the borough elections; how much money did you have in 1859?—That I cannot tell you. I can tell you the names I gave the money to. I did not get it all in one sum; if I got any names I went to Mr. Steward saying, here are such names, and he gave me the money.

20,920. All the money you received was from Mr. Steward?—No; that is wrong. I had first 50*l.* from Mr. Danby Palmer, who is now deceased; that was the first money I received.

20,921. This is the borough election?—Yes, the borough election.

20,922. What Palmer was that?—Henry Danby Palmer; he is deceased now; he got it from Mr. Steward, so it is all the same.

20,923. When did you receive that money?—Well, I dare say it was very near a fortnight before the election. We used to go out early at that time and not leave it to the eleventh hour.

20,924. Can you remember the names of the men to whom you gave that 50*l.*?—Yes, Minter was one.

20,925. Robert Minter?—Robert Minter, Southtown Road.

20,927. The next?—Hurron I think his name is; he lives in Southtown as well.

20,928. Was that George Hurron, Ferry-boat House?—Yes, Ferry-boat House.

20,929. How much did he get?—5*l.*

20,930. I see he voted for Watkin and Young?—Yes, that is quite right.

20,931. Then you were acting for the other party in 1859?—I was acting for Watkin and Young. When I say acting for Watkin and Young, they did not employ me, but Mr. Steward and Mr. Henry Danby Palmer did; they were my two men as far as money went.

20,932. Did you vote for Watkin and Young?—Yes.

20,933. How came you to vote for Watkin and Young?—I was always a very active party for that side.

20,934. How came you to work for Lacon and Goodson in 1865?—I will explain it. There was no work to be had on the other side; I was thrown on my beam ends; the money I spent I had never received; I never received one farthing not for Watkin and Young's election; then I charged 14*l.* for my trouble. That is all the money I ever received on the Liberal side.

20,935. You wanted work and wanted to get paid for your work?—Of course; if I do a day's work I expect to be paid for it.

20,936. When did you first make up your mind to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson this time?—I should say a long long time before that, for I had promised faithfully I would never vote for the other side again. I happened to be in a little trouble, and I found no one to assist me, and when I asked for work on the other side I got it directly, and I thought those that served me well I was a right to return the compliment.

20,937. Do you know a man named Owles?—I do.

20,938. You had a difference with him, had you not?—I cannot say much of a difference with that gentleman at all; he was a man that did not oppose me when I went through the court. I cannot say I had any particular difference with the man. I always treated him as a gentleman as far as I know.

20,939. Mr. Owles had lent you some money?—25*l.*

20,940. And you would not pay him back again?—I had not the opportunity. I might have paid him back if I had got my money which I had spent.

20,941. Have you ever paid him?—No; I paid him the interest upon it. I went through the court, and I suppose he got his dividend the same as the others.

20,942. Now we will go on with the names of the men you gave the money to. We have Minter and Hurron?—There was Libbis, 10*l.*

20,943. The next?—Rand, 10*l.*

20,944. William Rand?—I cannot tell you his christian name.

20,945. High Road?—Southtown.

20,946. The next?—Marjoram, 13*l.*; he lived in Blind Middle Street.

20,947. The next?—A Mr. Mason, 10*l.*; he split his vote and I drew 5*l.* from him again.

20,948. Is that William Mason, Bath Hill Terrace?—That is the one.

20,949. How much to him?—10*l.* I drew 5*l.* back again because he split his vote.

20,950. The next?—Was a Mr. Balls in Queen Street; but I did not do him over, not exactly, because Mr. Steward walked across my ground in that way. When I went to the man, he said, Mr. Steward has left me 15*l.*; that is not enough; he says the price is going up, and he said he will have to take it back; and I saw Mr. Steward and he said, "Give him the other 5*l.*," and that made up 20*l.*

20,951. You gave Balls 20*l.*?—I gave him 5*l.*, that made up 20*l.*

20,952. Robert Balls?—He kept a public-house.

20,953. Who was the next?—Really, I cannot think of any more, that is the truth, just at this present time; if there was any more I really do not remember it; I do not know if there was any more; I do not think there was; there might be.

20,954. Were all these men that you bought with the 50*l.* you got from Mr. Palmer?—Certainly not. When I got any names I saw Mr. Eagleton first, and when I saw Mr. Eagleton I went to Mr. Steward, and there of course I drew more money whatever I wanted.

20,955. How much did you get beyond 50*l.*?—I can tell you that.

20,956. Then do so?—80*l.* I had; 45*l.* I returned back to Mr. Steward.

20,957. Who gave you the 80*l.*?—I think it was 80*l.* that I got from Mr. Steward; I cannot say exactly to a 5*l.* now.

20,958. It was within 5*l.* of 80*l.*?—Yes, it might be so.

20,959. What did you do with that 80*l.*?—I kept 14*l.* for my own expenses, and 45*l.* I returned to Mr. Steward. I think 45*l.* 10*s.*, if I mistake not, but I will not be certain to 10*s.*

20,960. You say you returned 45*l.*?—Yes.

20,961. You kept 14*l.* for your own expenses, that makes 59*l.*?—Yes.

22,962. But you received 80*l.*; what did you do with the other 21*l.*?—I think I can give an account of a little more when I come to think.

20,963. I think you had better?—There is 1*l.* I paid to a Mr. England for his expenses from Norwich, and there was a sovereign to young John Storey, jun., not senior.

20,964. What was that for?—Well, for some little difference; I think there was one of the party owed him something for work he had done, and his father did not feel satisfied about it, and so I paid the sovereign in the shop to him.

20,965. Yes, the next?—I cannot recollect any more at the present time.

20,966. Do you know a man named Starling?—Yes.

20,967. Did you give him some money?—No. I did want to buy him, but I lost him.

20,968. Do you know a man named Duffield?—Yes. I did not have any dealing with him.

20,969. You did not?—No.

20,970. You received 130*l.*?—Yes.

20,971. You received 80*l.* and 50*l.*?—Well, it might have been 80*l.* and 50*l.* I think that is the sum.

20,972. You said within 5*l.*?—Yes.

20,973. And you have accounted 102*l.*; then you returned 45*l.*?—45*l.*; whether it was 10*s.* or no I cannot say, but 45*l.* I am certain I returned.

20,974. According to your account the money you spent and the money you returned amounts to 147*l.*, and you only received 130*l.*, so that you must have been out of pocket 17*l.*?—No, I was not out of pocket not at all at that election.

20,975. Accounting for everything you spent and the 45*l.* that you returned, you have accounted for

TWENTY-FIFTH DAY.

H. Greenhow.

4 Oct. 1866.

115*l.*, and you received 130*l.*; that leaves a balance of 15*l.* to account for. Can you remember any other man that you bribed?—Not at the present time. I think it is very likely there might have been another, but I cannot think at this moment of his name.

20,976. Are you quite sure you only retained 14*l.*?—14*l.* is all the money I kept, and I returned 45*l.* I told Mr. Steward at the time. I said, "I am not "going to charge this for the election, but to keep it "for the last."

20,977. Did you retain this 14*l.* for having bought these voters?—There is a deal of expense attached to it; there is plenty of treating; you cannot get them without.

20,978. The 15*l.* you have not accounted for is the expense in treating?—Yes; there might have been another man I bought, but I cannot think of his name at the present time.

20,979. Do you know John Durrant, of Fenn Street?—Yes; I did not bribe him.

20,980. He said he got 15*l.* from you?—I know. I was after the man, but I do not believe I gave him any money. I do not believe I did.

20,981. That would make your amount come just right?—I cannot believe I gave that man any money. I know I was after him till rather late on the day of the election, but whether I gave the man any money or not I do not know. I offered it to him, but I do not believe he took it.

20,982. (Mr. Slade.) He says he got 10*l.* from Greenhow in the year 1859?—Durrant?

20,983. So he says.—Which Durrant is it; there are two?

20,984. John Durrant, gardener?—If I gave him 10*l.* I forget it; I know I was after the man. It is very likely I gave the man 10*l.*, but I forget all about him.

20,985. (Mr. Russell.) He is asked, "What did you get in 1859? 10*l.* Who from? Greenhow?"—It is quite true. I really did not recollect his name.

20,986. That brings you within 5*l.* of your sum?—If there was 5*l.* I daresay it was spent, and a little more at the end of it.

20,987. I am reminded you gave 2*l.* away to England and Storey?—England was a voter, he came from Norwich; but Storey junior was not a voter, only there was some little dispute about money which he had not got at the election time, and he thought he might get it.

20,988. That leaves only 3*l.*, and that you may have spent in treating?—Yes, and a good deal more to the end of it.

20,989. Where does England live?—In the Southtown Road; he has got a wherry of his own, one of those things that takes coal or marl, or anything of that kind.

20,990. Did you take an active part in the election of 1857?—Yes; in fact ever since McCullagh and Napier. I was always up to my eyes in it, but I never did any bribery.

20,991. You did not have any money in 1857?—No, they did not trust me with any money then. In fact I do not think there was any spent at that election.

20,992. In 1857 you do not think there was any money spent?—I am speaking of McCullagh and Napier's election.

20,993. That was in 1852?—Of course we know that money must be spent if you want to get returned.

20,994. That is your belief?—I believe it is every one's belief in the town, not only mine.

20,995. Did Mr. Palmer and Mr. Steward come to you and offer you the money, or did you go to them?—No; I was in the Nelson Road. I daresay it was a fortnight before the time I was appointed for Southtown, that was my district, and they asked me whether I would do such and such a thing for them, and I said yes, I had no objection. Then Mr. Palmer brought me the 50*l.* to start with. I said, "It is no use of us "waiting here till the last day of the election; if you "want to try and win you must go on." I think it was a fortnight before the time, or something like that.

20,996. Had you changed your political feelings between 1859 and 1865, or did you change your party because of this quarrel?—The quarrel had a little to do with it; I could not get my money, and as I had robbed my family as I had done, I thought it was high time to do something.

20,997. If it had not been for this quarrel you would have remained a member of the party?—If they had acted to me as men ought to have done I should.

20,998. And you punished Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl to spite Mr. Owles?—No such thing; I did not do anything of the kind; I did not know anything of Mr. Brogden, nor yet of Mr. Vanderbyl, and I never spoke to either one of them.

20,999. You would not vote for them?—No, I did not vote for them; I had my own reasons for so doing.

21,000. Where did you get your money in 1859 from; where was it given to you?—I told you just now at the "Star Hotel," where I took the 50*l.*, and the rest I got at Mr. Steward's own house.

21,001. Who was present when you got the 50*l.*? There is no one present at these times; they are all single-handed.

21,002. Nobody but Mr. Palmer was present?—Nobody but Mr. Palmer and myself was present.

21,003. And nobody present, of course, when you got the money at Mr. Steward's?—No, no one.

21,004. (Mr. Slade.) Mr. Steward told us yesterday that he gave you 150*l.*?—I cannot help what Mr. Steward says. What I state to you is this, that I never took any lump sum without it was the 80*l.*, and that I drew, as I told you, first, the 50*l.* from Mr. Palmer. With that I bought my votes, I suppose, at least ten days before. I gave them 5*l.* and 3*l.*, and that like, to secure them. Then I went to Mr. Steward and gave him a list or showed him a list of the names and the prices, and then the money was advanced. I do not know whether I got 150*l.* from Mr. Steward or not. If he has put me down at 150*l.*, very likely he will correct me.

21,005. He said about 150*l.* Who was Henry Danby Palmer?—He was a timber merchant, of the Southtown Road?—He is dead now.

21,006. You worked principally in Gorleston did you not?—In Southtown. They said they had got such a lot of muffs in Yarmouth, they wanted me to come here; and I came here, but then I found it was too late when I came to Yarmouth.

21,007. You worked first of all in Southtown?—Yes, that was my district. I can tell you another voter now. I daresay Mr. Steward is very right in his reckoning. There is a Mr. Rushmer, of Gorleston; he lived upon the hill. I gave him 15*l.* I think of it now.

21,008. Did you give him that money?—I paid it through Mr. Page, at the "Buck." He does not live there now.

21,009. Is that Charles William Rushmer?—It was Charles William Rushmer; at least I say Charles, but it is Rushmer I am sure; I cannot exactly say the christian name.

21,010. He lived in the Pier Road?—He lived very near on the hill, I know.

21,011. Mr Page kept the "Buck Inn?"—Yes, he kept the "Buck Inn."

21,012. Do you know Mr. Reynolds, the postmaster down there?—Yes, he was one of our bribers.

21,013. He took Gorleston and you took Southtown?—Yes, he took Gorleston, but he dare not touch this man Rushmer, so I took him for him.

21,014. Did you canvass at all this time?—No, I had nothing at all to do with the canvass neither one way nor the other. If there was a shilling or two to be earned on the quay, I was there earning it. I had nothing to do with it. I recollect there was another 5*l.* I got done out of. I did not think of it before; that was Mr. Colthorpe. I gave him 5*l.*; I was to give him 20*l.* He took the 5*l.* and I never heard anything more of him. He kept a house called the "Chip and Chisel," in Gorleston.

21,015. Is he dead?—I do not know; I know nothing about him now; that is all I know of him.

21,016. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you keep an ale-house now?—No.

21,017. You are down on the list as such?—It is very likely; but I do not. I have not kept one these two years.

21,018. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know where Mr. Palmer got his money from; the 50*l.* he gave you?—It came through the same source I suppose I got mine from, Mr. Steward.

21,019. Do you know Mr. Clark?—Do you mean Mr. Clark, a solicitor, was a briber?

21,020. Yes.—I should say not. I should say Clark did not bribe. There were several at Gorleston waiting for his assistance, although Mr. Clark was a man well respected down there. He could command a good many votes himself.

21,071. Who asked you to do this?—I was standing about near the committee room, and some of the partisans gave me a slip of paper with the names on it, and asked me if I would stop at their houses, and say the day of the election was on, and they would be obliged if they would come up.

21,072. Do you recollect who it was gave you the slip of paper?—I cannot distinctly remember anyone but Mr. Nuthall.

21,082. Is Mr. Hawkins a friend of yours?—Yes.

21,083. What made you so accurate in picking him out?—I had no particular reason; he said he intended voting for Lacon and Goodson, and he said, "Will you walk up with me," and I said, "Yes, if you like."

21,084. Did Mr. Hawkins receive any money on the Conservative side do you know?—I do not know.

21,085. Do you know whether he was a man who wanted money?—I should not think he did. He is a man in a respectable way of business.

I called him by name, and I said, "What is so and so doing with you," and he says, "He has been offering me some money." I do not suppose he would have told me but for that.

21,096. That was on the morning of the election?—Yes, I believe it was. I feel sure it was.

21,097. Did you lose sight of him from that time till he polled?—Yes.

21,098. You went away?—Yes. I do not distinctly remember but I should think it was between 11 and 12 that he polled. I fancy so, that was between 9 and 10, before the poll opened. I do not remember exactly what time it was, but it was much earlier that I saw him with this party.

21,099. Did you go round to him?—I live close to him and am very frequently in his shop.

2,100. You left him and went back and fetched him?—I saw him first in the market, then I went down to his shop afterwards and he was engaged with customers. I called a second time upon him, and then he said, "If you will walk up with me I will go with you now."

21,150. Promised nobody ?—Promised nobody.

21,151. Had you got a vote in 1859 ?—No.

21,152. What are you ?—An accountant.

21,157. And now it is half past 3 ?—Yes.

21,163. Did you promise him as soon as he asked you ?—Yes.

21,164. Did you make up your mind as soon as Mr. Brogden asked you ?—Yes.

21,165. We have got Mr. Brogden's canvass book here, or rather Mr. Edwards', and you do not appear to have promised ?—He was all alone when he called at mine; it might be about 8 o'clock, he drove up in a cab.

21,166. On what day was it ?—I do not think it could be above two days before the election. It was not above a day or two before the election I know, but I cannot recollect the time now. He had not his book with him. He told me he had not had the opportunity of calling on me before.

21,167. Had you not been asked for your vote by any person on that side before ?—Not any one.

21,168. Had no one called upon you ?—No, one called at my house.

21,174. How many years ?—Ever since after the last election, I think.

21,175. How did you vote at the last election ?—I voted at the last election for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey, but I was rather under compulsion to vote for them. I had friends on that side, and I did not like to offend them.

21,180. Did you ever hear of anybody receiving money for his vote before the election ?—No. I did not know anything about any money being paid before the election; I heard of it afterwards.

21,181. Did you never hear of any single person receiving money for his vote before the election ?—I do not remember one.

21,182. Downing says about you that he gave you himself, in the market-place, the night before the election, 15*l.*, "I am quite certain I did that." He has sworn that to us here ?—That is not correct. I never received a single penny of him.

21,183. Then in that case Downing has committed perjury ?—I have not received a single penny of him, nor I do not think I have ever spoken to him.

21,184. That is not the question ?—I have not received a single penny of him.

21,185. Did you receive 15*l.* of him ?—No.

21,186. Upon your oath ?—Upon my oath I have not received one single penny of him.

21,187. Did you know that Downing had said this of you ?—Not till I read it in the papers.

21,188. Did you read it in the papers ?—Yes.

21,189. Have you spoken to Downing about it since ?—I have never spoken to Downing since the election.

21,190. Have you ever said to any person that it is not true that he gave you 15*l.*?—Yes. I have told several parties it is not true.

21,191. You have ?—Yes.

21,192. Did you not think it important to come before the Commissioners and deny it ?—I thought I should receive a summons.

21,193. And you received a summons and did not obey it ?—I intended coming. I was told my name was called, and I thought I would stop till a later part of the week.

21,194. It is weeks ago ?—I never received a summons until now.

21,195. But Downing gave his evidence more than a fortnight ago ?—I did not receive the summons.

21,196. You read this in the papers about Downing ?—Yes.

21,197. And you never thought of coming to deny it ?—I never thought I could deny it without a summons.

21,198. Have you read the papers daily since the inquiry ?—No.

21,199. You read the paper frequently ?—Not very often.

21,200. Are you aware gentlemen have come forward here to deny having received the money ?—No; not without a summons. I had spoken to Mr. Burton, the solicitor, about it, and he told me I should receive a summons to come up.

21,201. What did you state to Mr. Burton then ?—Mr. Burton spoke to me first about it. Directly Downing had mentioned my name, he said he was very sorry. I told him it was not true, and I told him I should like to go up and deny it. Of course, he said, I should have a summons, and he spoke to me about it a week after and asked if I had had a summons. I told him I had not received one at present.

21,202. Were you in the market-place the night before the election ?—I cannot remember now.

21,203. Will you swear you were not in the market-place ?—I will not swear I was not in the market-place, because I cannot recollect. I might be, but I cannot remember it, but I very often walk down the market of an evening, so that I cannot recollect.

21,204. Did you see Downing in the market-place the night before the election ?—I do not remember seeing him.

21,205. Do you know Downing ?—Oh yes, I know Downing.

TWENTY-FIFTH DAY.

W. D. Baldwin.

4 Oct. 1866.

21,206. Do you know him to speak to?—I do not think I have spoken above two or three words to him in my lifetime. I knew him quite well.

21,207. You knew him by sight you mean?—Yes. I knew him by sight.

21,208. Did he ever speak to you about your vote?—Never. He never spoke to me about my vote. I have very often seen him about the town, but he never spoke to me.

21,209. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you ever ask Downing how it was he came to say you received 15*l.* when you had not?—I have never spoken to him.

21,210. Do not you think it was a natural thing to do to go and ask him?—No. I thought I would contradict the statement up before the Commissioners, so I did not trouble myself to speak to Downing. I have never spoken to him since the election nor yet before.

21,211. (Mr. Slade.) To whom did you mention besides Mr. Burton that you had not received 15*l.* from Downing?—Parties that have spoken to me. I have just contradicted it. I do not remember their names.

21,212. Did you ever go to anybody and say it is a lie?—No.

21,213. You were not the least annoyed at it?—Yes.

21,214. You sat very tamely under the imputation?—No.

21,215. Whom did you go to then?—I spoke to Mr. Burton, the solicitor.

21,216. No; Mr. Burton asked you the question. You did not go to Mr. Burton and say "This is a lie of Downing's"?—He spoke to me the day after.

21,217. He asked you point blank whether you had taken the money?—Yes.

21,218. And you said "No"?—Yes, I told him "No."

21,219. And you come here to day to stick to it?—Yes.

21,220. You never went to anybody to say it was a lie?—No, I never talk to anyone in that manner, telling him it is a lie.

21,221. Do you mean to say you allow a man to come here and say he gave you 15*l.* for your vote and not deny it?—I intended to deny it.

21,222. It is a most serious imputation upon you, and you ought to be aware of it?—I thought I would come here.

21,223. (Mr. Russell.) Who are your employers?—Messrs. Watling, merchants, in Southtown.

21,224. Did you tell them Downing's statement was false?—No, I have not told them.

21,225. You were examined before the Committee of the House of Commons, were you not, in 1859?—Yes.

21,226. And in 1857 too?—Yes; I was employed in the committee-room.

21,227. You received money for your services from the Conservatives in 1859?—One day busy in the committee-room.

21,228. What did you receive?—I think it was either a guinea or a sovereign, I forget now; I cannot remember what it was.

21,229. Twenty-six shillings?—That is a guinea and 5*s.* for a dinner.

21,230. What did you do for that money?—I was employed as check-marker in the committee-room.

21,231. Had you told Mr. Reynolds if you were employed that day you would vote for Sir Edmund Lacon?—No; I did not vote for him on account of being employed.

21,232. What were you employed about, in 1857, when you went before the House of Commons?—I was in the committee-room that day. I was not a voter then.

21,233. Why were you examined?—I was employed in the committee-room.

21,234. Whom did you vote for in 1857?—I had not a vote in 1857; I do not think I had.

21,235. You cannot mention the name of any one man to whom you went and volunteered that Mr. Downing's statement was false?—The different clerks in the office where I was employed at, I mentioned it to them.

21,236. You are cashier and confidential clerk, are you not?—Yes.

21,237. You were aware that an imputation had been made upon you that would be likely to lose you your place?—No, I knew I could come up here and contradict it.

21,238. Why did you not contradict it before?—I never received a summons.

21,239. Did you ever see the "Yarmouth Independent"?—Yes.

21,240. Did you not see letters in the "Yarmouth Independent" from voters stating they had not received money for their votes?—Yes, I saw some letters in it.

21,241. If there was time to be lost before you came before us, why did you not write a letter?—I did not give that a thought about writing a letter.

21,242. You were contented to remain under this imputation for three weeks?—I spoke to Mr. Burton two or three times since that time, and he told me I should certainly receive a summons to attend.

21,243. You have told us it was Mr. Burton came to you?—I spoke to Mr. Burton after the first time. He spoke to me the day after Downing gave his evidence.

21,244. (Mr. Slade.) What is the name of the clerk to whom you mentioned it?—Goff is one.

21,245. What did you say to Goff?—I told him I had not received anything and I told him it was false.

21,246. When did you tell him that?—I told him that the following day after Downing's statement.

21,247. Did he ask you or did you volunteer it?—I heard of it directly I got there in the morning to the office. He mentioned it to me the first thing.

21,248. He mentioned it to you and you said "No"?—Yes.

21,249. Who else?—Matthew Brereton.

21,250. Did he ask you or did you go to him?—They all of them knew it directly, because it was reported about the town directly.

21,251. When did you first hear of it yourself?—I think it was the following morning.

21,252. Are you sure you did not hear of it that night?—No, I did not hear of it that night.

21,253. Had you heard of it before you went to the office when Mr. Goff asked you?—No, he told me about it.

21,254. Is Matthew Brereton a clerk in the office?—Yes, and two more clerks.

21,255. Were you indignant at the charge?—I knew I should have the opportunity of contradicting it, so I did not care much about it.

21,256. Were you, in your own mind, very indignant at the charge?—I do not understand what the word means.

21,257. Were you in your own mind very indignant at being charged with receiving 15*l.* for your vote?—I do not understand the word.

21,258. Were you annoyed at it?—Yes, I was very much annoyed.

21,259. Did you express yourself so to Goff?—Yes, very much.

21,260. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Who is Matthew Brereton?—He used to be a captain. He does not go to sea now.

21,261. Is he a clerk?—No, he looks after vessels.

21,262. Has he a vote himself?—Yes.

21,263. Did he tell you or did you tell him about your vote?—He told me.

21,264. He told you you were said to have received the 15*l.* Yes, because they came into the office the first thing in the morning.

21,265. Who came into the office?—He did.

21,266. And he told you that?—Yes.

21,267. And did you deny it immediately?—I denied it immediately.

21,268. Did he say anything about himself and his own vote?—No, not anything to me about his vote.

21,269. He did not say anything about his being charged himself with having done it?—No, he did not say anything to me.

21,270. Did you know whether he was or was not?—He told me he had received a summons, about two weeks after that I think, to attend here.

21,271. I am asking when he first told you that you were charged with having received 15*l.*; did he tell you anything then about his own vote, and whether he was charged or not?—No, he did not tell me anything.

21,272. Did you know whether he was or was not charged with receiving money?—I never heard anything about his being charged.

21,273. Did he receive money?—Not that I know of; I never heard that he did.

21,274. (Mr. Russell.) Have you got a wife?—Yes.

21,275. Do you know if your wife received any money for you?—No.

21,276. Are you sure she did not?—Yes; if she receives any money she always tells me about it directly.

21,277. Has she ever received money for you?—Sometimes she has received rent money.

21,278. No money for votes?—No, never.

21,279. (Mr. Slade.) That is not Matthew Brereton, the old master mariner, is he?—Yes, that is the man.

21,280. Is he a clerk in your office?—No, he looks after the vessels; he looks after the ships.

SAMUEL CRICKMER BURTON sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

S. C. Burton.

21,281. What are you?—A solicitor.

21,282. Do you know the last witness, Mr. Baldwin?—Very well, indeed.

21,283. Has he been in your employ?—No, I have had several transactions in business with him for the last six years.

21,284. Were you aware that Downing had mentioned that he paid him a sum of money for his vote?—I saw it in the paper; that is the first intimation I had of it; that was on the Wednesday evening, and on the following morning I met him in Sir Edmund Lacon's bank; I stopped until he had transacted his business, and then I went up to him and said I was sorry to see his name in the paper as having received 15*l.* He said, "I never did;" and he then asked me what he should do, and I said, "Of course you will have an opportunity of denying it;" and that is all that passed at that time.

21,285. Did he ask you your advice as to whether he had better come forward and deny it at once?—I do not remember; he asked me what he should do, that is all; and I said, "Of course you will have an opportunity of denying it;" and I met somebody on the quay soon after, and said, "A man I know has been said to have received 15*l.*; what is best to be done?" and he said, "Of course he will receive a summons;" and I saw him five minutes afterwards, and told him he would receive a summons in due course; I did not think then there would be such a time elapsed before he would get it.

21,286. Are you a voter?—Yes.

21,287. Did Baldwin seem at all distressed when you asked him the question?—Yes, I thought he did; he seemed annoyed at it.

21,288. Did he deny it with any emphasis?—Yes, he seemed annoyed at having been charged with having received 15*l.* certainly.

21,289. Did he give you the idea of a man who had had a false charge made against him?—Yes.

21,290. Did he say anything about Downing?—Not a word; he only said, "I have never received it."

21,291. That is all he said?—That was all; and I said I was very glad to hear that, because I knew he was a man in circumstances above taking a bribe, and ought not to take a bribe.

21,292. He is in good circumstances, is he?—He is in very fair circumstances indeed.

21,293. (Mr. Russell.) Apart from his circumstances being good, did you regard him as an honest man?—I had no reason to think otherwise; he is a very peculiar man, and perhaps that goes against him; but I have never thought otherwise of him than that he was honest.

21,294. I mean, supposing his circumstances had not been so good, would you have been surprised to hear he had taken a bribe?—I never thought of it at all.

21,295. You knew him very well?—Yes, I knew him very well.

21,296. Did you always find him an honest person in his transactions with you?—Yes, he likes money perhaps a little; he looks after his own interest.

WILLIAM GRIEF sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

W. Grief.

21,297. What are you?—A fish merchant.

21,298. Did you receive anything for your vote at the last election?—No.

21,299. Who did you vote for?—Lacon and Goodson.

21,300. Were you offered any money?—No.

21,301. Did you offer anybody else any money?—No. I heard there had been a fellow up here who said I did offer him 20*l.*, but I know nothing about it.

21,302. Humphreys?—Yes.

21,303. Do you know him?—I know the man, but never spoke to him 10 times in my life.

21,304. Are you sure you never offered him any money?—Not a shilling. I do not know, to the best of my knowledge, that I have spoken to him this year.

21,305. Do you know a man named Francis Jay?—Yes.

21,306. Did you see him about the election time?—Yes.

21,307. Did you offer him any money?—No.

21,308. Did he offer you any?—No.

21,309. Was anything said about money?—Not the slightest. Not a word.

21,310. What part did you take in the last election?—None at all.

21,311. Did you canvass anybody?—No.

21,312. Did you ask anybody for their votes?—No; I was too busy at the time. I never went out after them at all.

21,313. Have you seen Humphreys since?—No.

21,314. George Humphreys says this. The question is, "Were you offered any money on the other side?—"Yes. Who by?—Mr. William Grief?"—Yes; I understood so.

21,315. "How much did he offer you?—20*l.*?"—That is not correct.

21,316. It is a mistake?—Yes, it is quite a mistake.

21,317. Did you vote in the election of 1859?—Yes.

21,318. Who for?—Lacon and Stracey.

21,319. Did you take any part in that election?—No, I never took any part, nor yet got anything for my vote. I never did in my life.

21,320. Never received any money for your vote?—No, nor yet paid any away.

21,321. Have you ever asked people for their votes?—No, without it was a neighbour. I may have said, "I am going to vote so-and-so, which way are you going to vote?" Never to induce anybody. I had no motive in it.

21,322. In the year 1859, did you not ask people to vote then?—No. I went up along with two or three to vote. We all went up together as neighbours.

21,323. Did you ever hear of any money flying about at any election at Yarmouth in your life?—I have heard people say they have got money.

21,324. Did you hear of money going about at the last election?—No, not until after the election was over.

21,325. Did you hear of money going about at the election of 1859?—I do not think I did until after it was over.

21,326. You never heard of anybody being paid for their votes?—No, not during the election.

21,327. How many people did you ask for their votes in the year 1859?—I do not know that I did one. I do not think I did.

21,328. You told me you asked two or three neighbours?—I say two or three neighbours walked up together and voted the morning of the election.

21,329. Then you took no part in 1859?—No.

21,330. Had you voted in 1857?—Yes.

21,331. Do you know Mr. Cooper?—Yes.

21,332. By sight?—Yes. To the best of my knowledge I never spoke to him twice in my life.

21,333. Then, I suppose, Humphreys is under a mistake?—That he is, and a very great one, too, and that is not the first I doubt.

Adjourned till to-morrow at half-past 10 o'clock.

TWENTY-SIXTH DAY.

TWENTY-SIXTH DAY.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 5th October 1866.

JOHN COOPER recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

21,334. Can you give us the name of any other person to whom you gave money at the last election?—William Tobias Johnson.

21,335. How much?—50*l.* for three voters.

21,336. Can you give us the names of those voters?—I think all their names are Johnson, but I cannot distinguish them.

21,337. They were all three Johnsons?—Yes.

21,338. Any other name?—Not any other names. Those are all the names that have occurred to me after the adjournment of the Commission.

G. S. F. Skoulding.

GEORGE SMITH FREDERICK SKOULDING sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

21,339. What are you?—A druggist.

21,340. Did you take any part in the last election?—No.

21,341. Whom did you vote for?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

21,342. Did you ask any voters for their votes?—Well, I can hardly say that I did ask any voters for heir votes. I might ask one or two.

21,343. Did you, or did you not?—I very likely asked one or two which way they were going to vote.

21,344. Do you know a man named Hodds?—Yes.

21,345. Did you ask him?—Well, I might have asked him.

21,346. Of course you might. Did you? What is the use of your coming here and saying you might have asked him?—I cannot swear I asked him to vote.

21,347. Can you swear you did not ask him to vote?—I should be very sorry to do either. Very likely I might have asked him to have voted.

21,348. Did you offer any man any money for his vote?—No. I had no money to offer.

21,349. Did you offer any money?—No.

21,350. Did you ever talk to any voter about having money for his vote?—No.

21,351. Did you ever hear of money being given to a voter for his vote?—I have seen it in the paper.

21,352. I mean then, at the election time?—No.

21,353. Never heard of it before this Commission sat?—I heard there was bribery committed, but I did not know who the parties were that received the money. Everybody knew there was money going about.

21,354. Did you know money at the last election was being spent on the Conservative side?—Only by hear say.

21,355. Who is Hodds?—He is a greengrocer.

21,356. Do I understand that you never spoke to Hodds about his vote at the last election?—I did not say that. I said I might have asked him which way he was going to vote.

21,357. I ask you, did you?—I say I might have asked him.

21,358. Will you say one way or the other?—Well, I will say I did ask him.

21,359. What did you say to him?—Only asked him which way he was going to vote.

21,360. What did Hodds say?—He should vote for Lacon and Goodson.

21,361. Did Hodds give you to understand he wanted any money for his vote?—No.

21,362. Do you know whether Hodds received money or not?—I do not know.

21,363. Have you ever heard?—No, I have not.

21,364. Have you spoken to Hodds since the election about how he voted?—No. I have spoken to him several times. He is a customer of mine, but I never mentioned the election to him.

21,365. What made you ask Hodds which way he was going to vote?—Because he was a customer, and I knew the man.

21,366. Did you ask all of your customers?—No. Lots of them have no votes.

21,367. But those who had votes?—No.

21,368. How many?—Not more than three or four.

21,369. Whom did you ask besides Hodds?—I cannot tell.

21,370. Did you ask Mr. Pearce?—Pearce of Norwich?

21,371. Mr. J. Pearce?—He came to me. I did not ask him.

21,372. What did he come to you about?—He came to me merely to know how the election was going on, I think.

21,373. What made him come to you?—I suppose he knew me.

21,374. Did he know you were a person who would be able to tell him how the election was going on?—I cannot say that he knew that.

21,375. How long before the election was it?—That I cannot tell you.

21,376. Was it before the election?—Yes, or he would not have wanted to know how the election was going.

21,377. What do you mean by "how the election was going?"—He wanted to know which party was likely to win, I suppose.

21,378. Do you suppose that?—Yes.

21,379. Nothing else?—Nothing else.

21,380. What words did he say?—I cannot tell you.

21,381. You must try, if you please?—I cannot tell now, it is so long ago.

21,382. He came to you, and asked which way the election was going?—Yes; but I cannot tell you how he put it.

21,383. What did you understand by that?—That he merely took an interest in the election. He wanted to know which side was going to win.

21,384. That was all?—That is all.

21,385. You did not understand it to mean anything to do with money?—No.

21,386. That you swear?—Yes.

21,387. And what did you say to him?—I told him to vote for Lacon and Goodson.

21,388. He asked you which way the election was going; what did you say?—I told him the Conservative would win, no doubt; and I advised him to vote for Lacon and Goodson.

21,389. Where is Mr. Pearce now?—In Norwich, I think.

21,390. What is Mr. Pearce?—I do not know what he is now.

21,391. What was he when you knew him?—He kept a pie-shop in the Broad Row.

21,392. Had you ever had any conversation with Mr. Pearce about the election before he came to you?—No.

21,393. Do you mean to say, on your solemn oath, that when Mr. Pearce came and asked you which way the election was going, in your opinion, he only wanted to know who was going to win?—That is all, sir.

21,394. It had nothing to do with how much money was going?—No.

21,395. Did you understand that Mr. Pearce wanted money for his vote?—No, that I did not.

21,396. Did you refer Mr Pearce to anybody else?—No.

21,397. When did you first hear that money was being spent in the election?—I cannot tell you whether it was before or after the election. I think it was after the election I heard the money was spent.

21,398. At the time Mr. Pearce came to you, were you aware, or had you heard money was being spent?—No, till Mr. Pearce came, I had not.

21,399. Had you a vote in 1859?—I had not.

21,400. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you know Mr. Cooper?—What Cooper?

21,401. Mr. John Cooper?—Yes, quite well.

21,402. Do you know any of the other agents?—What agents?

21,403. Employed in the election?—No. I knew several people, but I do not know whether they are agents, or are employed.

21,404. Previous to this election, you did not know who the agents employed in bribery were?—No, that I did not.

WILLIAM JOHN COTTON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

W. J. Cotton.

21,405. What are you?—Master of the Outer Dowsing lightvessel.

21,406. Is Robert Barnard a friend of yours?—Yes.

21,407. Did you go with Barnard to Mr. Fill's office?—I did.

21,408. What day was that?—I cannot tell you exactly the first day I went there; but in the beginning of June or the latter end of June, after being canvassed, I said to Mr. Marshman and Mr. Brogden, that I should vote for the Liberal party were I ashore, but it would be my period of duty on board. They made arrangements that I should be brought on shore. After the arrangement was made that we should be brought on shore, they canvassed the matter amongst themselves whether it would cost them less to retain us on shore, or to send for us at the time of the election. There was an uncertainty attending whether they could get us on shore at the time of the election, because we cannot leave our vessels at all times, we cannot have communication with them at all times; and they came to the decision that they would employ substitutes, and keep us on shore, with the sanction of the Trinity Corporation. They made application to our superintendent about it, and he granted it, or through the Board, that we were to remain on shore. Mr. John Clowes engaged a party to find substitutes to go off in lieu of three or four that were in the light vessels, and they went off. I, as master of a light vessel, had to maintain the party that went off in lieu of me, and likewise I had to remunerate the party for doing my duty, an inferior officer, and a seaman for doing his duty. I went to Mr. John Clowes, and asked him who was to remunerate me and pay me, and he told me to make a rough sketch or estimate of what the expenses would be. I did so. I took it Mr. John Clowes with Mr. Barnard, and he sent us to Mr. Fill.

21,409. Did you, in the bill you made out, put down the items?—I did.

21,410. And did you make the amount exactly 10*l.*?—No; I did not make the amount exactly 10*l.*

21,411. How much did it amount to?—In my bill, I made out that there would be for the time the man was on board, 1*s.* 6*d.* a day to maintain him.

21,412. How many days?—It was impossible to say how many days the man would be there; it was only an estimate. Sometimes we got relieved to the day, but we have happened to have been 49 days on board for one month.

21,413. Did you hand in the bill before you relieved, for the man that took your place?—No. The man was gone on board to take my place.

21,414. Was he still on board when you gave the bill to Mr. Clowes?—He was on board of the Outer Dowsing.

21,415. Why did you not wait to deliver the bill, till after you knew exactly what it would cost?—I do not know; I went to Mr. Clowes to know where I was to be renumerated.

21,416. What did your estimate amount to?—Something like 5*l.*, I think.

21,417. And Mr. Fill paid you 10*l.*?—When this bill was sent down I was sent from Mr. Clowes to Mr. Fill, with this bill. He said, "You have made no charge for yourself?" I said, "No sir." He said, "What do you expect?" I said, "Nothing at all. "That rests entirely with yourself, if you make any "allowance." The answer that Mr. Fill made was, "Will a 10*l.* note cover the whole of your expenses?" and I said, "Amply."

21,418. And did Mr. Fill then send you to his office?—I was at Mr. Fill's office at that time.

21,419. Was it Mr. Fill who paid you, or Mr. Moore?—Mr. Moore paid me. I met Mr. Moore coming on the Quay the Tuesday before the election. Barnard was walking with me, and he said, "If you will come "with me, I will now give you your money for your "expenses."

21,420. Do you remember the names of the men you employed as substitutes?—I did not employ anybody. Mr. John Clowes' employed them.

21,421. I understood you to say that you paid the substitutes?—I had to pay the man the extra pay who did my duty on board the Outer Dowsing. He was the lamplighter of the Spurn lightvessel.

21,422. I understood Mr. Clowes arranged it?—The man that was to relieve me was sent on board from the Spurn light. A stranger was not competent to do my duty on the Outer Dowsing, and it was arranged that the senior lamplighter of the Spurn light should go on the Outer Dowsing to act for me.

21,423. Did you pay him, or did Mr. Clowes?—I paid Thomas Reeves to do my duty the difference of pay between a mate's pay and a lamplighter's pay.

21,424. What was that difference?—28*s.*

21,425. Do you know whether any of these men were employed as substitutes; Wright, Ashby, Bullock, and Dillerston?—Yes, I think they were.

21,426. Were those four men paid by Mr. Clowes?—Yes, as far as I can understand.

TWENTY-SIXTH DAY.

W. J. Cotton.

5 Oct. 1866.

21,427. Did any of those four men do your work at the lighthouse?—One of those men did the duty of Thomas Reeves on board the Spurn light vessel.

21,428. He being the man who went to take your place?—On board the Outer Dowsing.

21,429. And you paid him the difference between the wages he would receive formerly, and the wages for your work?—Yes, and also the seaman the difference for doing his duty instead of doing his ordinary duty.

21,430. Then you found the substituted seamen?—Yes, decidedly.

21,431. And you received your full wages all the time?—Yes.

21,432. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) How much altogether did you pay?—I reckon it was 31 days that I maintained the man at 1*s.* 6*d.* a day; that was 2*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.*; 28*s.* I gave to Thomas Reeves, the difference of pay; and 5*s.* I gave to William Folkes, the difference of pay too.

21,433. (Mr. Russell.) That was 3*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.*, and the balance you retained yourself?—I retained it myself.

21,434. That is exactly the same sum that Barnard told us he got?—We were exactly in the same position.

21,435. Was Mr. Clowes with Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman when this arrangement was made?—I do not know. I was not there when the arrangement was made. I had nothing to do with making any arrangement at all. Mr. Livingston I think, perhaps, can tell you how the arrangement was made.

21,436. When did you first see Mr. Clowes about it?—Not till after the men were gone on board the ship.

21,437. And then Mr. Clowes sent you to Mr. Fill?—Yes.

21,438. And Mr. Fill sent you to Mr. Moore?—No.

21,439. Mr. Fill directed Mr. Moore to pay you?—Mr. Moore and Mr. Fill were in the office together when I went down from Mr. Clowes' office.

21,440. And Mr. Fill directed Mr. Moore to pay you?—There was no direction to pay. What was said was, "Would 10*l.* cover the whole of my expenses?" I said, "Amply;" and there was no more until the Tuesday before the election; I was walking along the Quay and met Mr. Moore, and he said, "If "you will now come to Mr. Fill's office, I will pay "you your expenses."

21,441. Were you canvassed by the Conservatives?—I was not.

21,442. Had you a vote in 1859?—I had not. I was not in Yarmouth at that time.

21,443. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) When you first went to Mr. Clowes, was it for the purpose of asking him who was to pay your expenses?—It was.

21,444. What did he say to you?—He told me to draw up an estimate of what my expenses would be.

21,445. Did you draw it up?—I did.

21,446. Did you give it to him?—I took it to Mr. Clowes' office.

21,447. Took it to Mr. Clowes himself?—Took it to Mr. Clowes himself.

21,448. You say Mr. Clowes engaged the men?—The men had been engaged prior to that.

21,449. Who engaged them?—Mr. Clowes, so far as I understand. He paid them.

21,450. How could the men have been engaged by Mr. Clowes, before you told Mr. Clowes they were wanted?—I did not tell Mr. Clowes they were wanted.

21,451. You told me just now you went to Mr. Clowes to ask him who was to pay your expenses?—After the men were on board the ship; after they went away.

21,452. Who made the arrangement for the men to go away?—I do not know; it was arranged among the parties.

21,453. You mean, it was arranged between the time you had spoken to Mr. Brogden, and the time you went to Mr. Clowes. The men had been engaged?—The men had been engaged, and had proceeded on board the vessel.

21,454. How did you know Mr. Clowes engaged them?—By the party who sought the men out, and took them to Mr. Clowes's office. A party was engaged to look them up.

21,455. When Mr. Clowes sent you to Mr. Fill was it for the purpose of getting the money to pay these men?—No.

21,456. The expenses which Mr. Brogden was to pay were the expenses of the men on board the ship?—Yes.

21,457. Then why should Mr. Clowes have sent you to Mr. Fill?—To pay for the maintainance and the difference in doing duty.

21,458. Why did not Mr. Clowes pay that himself?—I do not know; that is what I should like to know. If it was legal for Mr. Clowes to send the men on the ship and pay them their wages, I think it was quite as legal for Mr. Clowes to pay me for their mainteance upon the ship, without sending me to Mr. Fill, or Mr. Moore, or anybody else.

21,459. That is why I want to know why he sent you to Mr. Fill?—That I do not know. That Mr. Clowes must speak to for himself. That I know nothing about.

H. F. Veale.

HENRY FISK VEALE sworn and examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

21,460. What are you?—An inn keeper and fish merchant.

21,461. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—I should think not; I have got enough of my own.

21,462. You did not?—No, not a farthing.

21,463. Mr. Fill mentioned you?—Yes, he did, and I stated in the paper I was surprised for him to go about bribing people; you will see it in the paper.

21,464. You took the earliest opportunity of contradicting it?—Yes.

21,465. You took the proper course?—Yes.

21,466. Were you canvassed by Mr. Brogden and by Mr. Vanderbyl?—It was no use their coming to me, because I never promised them; I always voted the other side; they just passed the seal of the day, that was all.

21,467. Were you canvassed by Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—I voted for Lacon and Goodson and they canvassed me.

21,468. Did you promise to vote for them directly they canvassed you?—I did so; I always do.

21,469. Have you always voted that side?—I always did; I never voted Liberal in my life.

21,470. Had you a vote in 1859?—I had a vote in 1859.

21,471. And whom did you vote for then?—Lacon and Stracey.

J. Robinson.

JOHN ROBINSON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

21,472. What are you?—I belong to the Trinity service.

21,473. Did you receive any money at the last election?—Yes.

21,474. How much?—Altogether I received over 18*l.*

21,475. Whom did you receive that from?—I do not know the person. I received some from Mr. Cattermole's. But I may say first, that I was on board of the Newarp light vessel, and some one sent for me to come on shore. I never saw a party after I came upon shore, or none of the party came to me to say, "I shall pay your expenses," or anything of the kind. I waited till the night before the election, and never heard how I was to be paid, so I went to Cattermole's, and there I received the 15*l.*

21,476. Who told you to go to Cattermole's ?—I do not know that anybody told me. I heard it whispered that money was at Cattermole's, and went down there. I saw no chances of getting my expenses without. Not a gentleman connected with the party ever came to me and said, I should have my expenses, not one gentleman of the party.

21,477. You must remember who it was who told you to go to Cattermole's ?—Speaking the truth, I do not. I heard in the crowd, the day before, that there would be money at Cattermole's, but who it was, or any person that mentioned it, I could not say.

21,478. Did you have a ticket given to you ?—No, I had no ticket, or anything of the kind. I went to Cattermole's, as I heard some of them say, and when I went into the room some gentleman was there. I asked for 15*l.* and I got it.

21,479. Whom did you see first when you got to Cattermole's ?—I went into the kitchen first. There were several there, but I do not know who they were; no one that I either named or said anything to respecting any money or anything of the kind.

21,480. Did you say you expected 18*l.*, and was the 18*l.* given to you without anything being said ?—When I went in I asked for 15*l.*, and they gave it to me.

21,481. Will you swear to me you do not remember who it was sent you there ?—Yes, I will swear I do not remember who it was sent me there, nor yet do I remember any person particularly saying, "Go to Cattermole's." I heard there was a committee there, and money was spending, and I went, as no person came to say they would pay my expenses, I went there.

21,482. Who paid you the other 3*l.* ?—I went up to the "Angel" and got the other 3*l.* It was 3*l.* something odd, or something like that. I would not swear to a shilling or two.

21,483. Who gave you that ?—It was in the "Angel." Mr. Livingston was in the room at the time. Perhaps he knows the gentleman better than I do.

21,484. Was it a Yarmouth man ?—I cannot say. It was a man that I do not know I ever saw in my life before. I do not know whether he was a Yarmouth man or a stranger.

21,485. What did you get the 3*l.* for ?—I went afterwards, and got that there. I thought I had not quite enough to pay me for 36 days ashore, and I went up and got the other 3*l.* odd.

21,486. Did you not receive your wages all the time you were on shore ?—Yes, but no victualling money. I came on shore at my own expense for board.

21,487. How many days were you on shore ?—36 days; that is about the time.

21,488. You could have voted in less than 36 days ?—No; I could not get back from shore under that time.

21,489. How far from the shore were you ?—About nine miles from the shore, but our superintendent will not let anyone go back after they come on shore. But had they come to me and said I should have got paid, I should have voted for them in the proper way, but there was not a gentleman of the party spoke to me after I got on shore.

21,490. You were nine miles from shore, and remained on the shore for 36 days, and took over 18*l.* ?—I could have got on shore, provided they sent me in a boat, but I suppose that was the agreement. I was on board when they made the agreement.

21,491. What are your wages ?—3*l.* 0*s.* 6*d.* a month, and the victualling money when I am on shore.

21,492. I suppose you wish it was always election time ?—A month now and then like it would not do any harm.

21,493. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) When you went into the room at Cattermole's, did you tell the gentleman there what you had come for ?—I only asked him for the 15*l.*; that is, I said 15*l.*, and he gave it me, and that is all that passed between him and me.

21,494. Did he not ask you who you were ?—Yes, he asked me the house I lived in; he said "What house?"

21,495. Did he not ask your name ?—I do not recollect his asking my name. He said "What house ?" and I said, "5, South Fields."

21,496. Did he refer to any list or register that he had ?—That is all, I think, that passed between him and me.

21,497. How did he know that you were a voter ?—I do not know; I suppose that he knew all about it.

21,498. Why do you suppose that he knew all about it ?—I reckoned that he was there for that purpose.

21,499. And knew everybody who came into the room ?—I should think so. He would not give money without knowing who it was to.

21,500. Who else was in the room ?—I did not see anybody else in the room. That is what I said at first, there was no one in the room.

21,501. He must have asked you your name ?—If he asked me my name, I am not aware of it. I do not recollect his asking me my name. What I said at first when I went in was, I asked for 15*l.* and he gave it me. I think he asked the number of the house, and I think that is all that passed between him and me, and that is all anyone said to me respecting the vote.

21,502. Did he make any note ?—I do not know; he gave me the money, and I walked off.

21,503. How did he give you the money ?—In my hand, the same as you might give it after I have done.

21,504. In sovereigns ?—Yes.

21,505. In a packet ?—No; 15 new sovereigns.

21,506. Where did he take them from ?—There was a lot laid on the table; he took them from a bulk.

21,507. Was the money lying on a table ?—Yes.

21,508. Afterwards, when you went up to the "Angel," whom did you ask to see there ?—I never asked to see anyone there.

21,509. What were you shown into the room for ?—I was shown into the room, and what I wanted I was given.

21,510. Was anybody else in the room with you when the money was given to you ?—Yes, I think Mr. Livingston, and I think two more gentlemen.

21,511. In the room where the money was given to you ?—Yes; I think Mr. Livingston knows as well as I do. He may recollect my going up as well as I do myself.

21,512. What did you say ?—I never said anything; I merely gave them the paper of what I wanted.

21,513. What was the paper ?—A paper with what I wanted on it.

21,514. What was on the paper ?—I think something over 3*l.*

21,515. Whom did you give the paper to ?—I laid it on the table, I think.

21,516. Did you tell the gentlemen in that room you had been to Cattermole's ?—No.

21,517. Was the paper that you gave an account of your month's wages ?—No.

21,518. What was on it ?—I forget exactly what was on it now. I daresay they can produce the paper, which will show itself what was on it. I would not say what was on the paper now. If they can produce the paper, that will show what was on it.

21,519. (Mr. Russell.) The 3*l.* odd you received at the "Angel" was for your expenses ?—Yes, but of course that would not cover it.

21,520. And the 15*l.* you received at Cattermole's was for your vote ?—I cannot see that exactly. 3*l.* odd would not cover my expenses for being a month on shore. I would not come on shore for 3*l.* odd a month.

21,521. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Why did you not tell the gentlemen at the "Angel" you had got money at Cattermole's ?—I do not know why I did not tell them, but I did not.

21,528. Left at your house by whom ?—By William Hutchins, who is an esteemed uncle of mine.

21,529. What day was that ?—The day before the election.

21,530. How long did you keep that money ?—I cannot tell you to a day, but it was given back to Mr. Hutchins, or rather he came and took it, just before the petition went in.

21,531. On the 19th of February ?—I do not know; I will not say; I cannot say, for I do not know. I should be most happy to say if I could. I should have been most happy to have got rid of it long before.

21,532. (Mr. Russell.) Had you been served with a summons to attend the Committee of the House of Commons before you returned the money ?—Yes, I think I had, certainly; I think so, I feel sure so. Allow me to say I have not the money. That Mr. Hutchins now holds, I believe.

21,533. (Mr. Slade.) Had you a vote in 1859 ?—None.

21,557. You will swear that ?—I will swear it.

21,558. Whom did you vote for ?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

21,559. Were you offered any money on the other side ?—No, I was not visited.

21,611. Did you ever hear of anybody getting any money at the last election?—Not that I am aware of.

21,612. Never heard of anybody receiving any money for his vote?—Not that I am aware of.

21,613. That you swear?—I have heard of people receiving.

21,614. Tell me whom you heard of before the election, receiving money for his vote?—Many people.

21,615. Tell me one?—Nobody in my employ where I work; there is not above one or two of us have got a vote.

21,616. Tell me one person you heard of receiving money for his vote?—I could mention several.

21,617. Tell me one first?—I heard that Mr. Hastings, the baker, received money, but I cannot tell you whether it is true or not.

21,618. How much did you hear he had received?—That I do not know.

21,619. When did you hear that?—I cannot tell, it is so long ago.

21,620. Was it before or after the election you heard it?—This was after the election a long time, when we were laughing and joking in a public company, in a public-house.

21,621. I want to know whether before the election you heard of anybody receiving money?—No.

21,622. You swear that?—Yes.

21,623. You never heard of anybody before the election receiving money for his vote?—No.

21,624. From Mr. Shuckford or anybody else?—No.

21,625. (Mr. Russell.) Would you have taken money for your vote if it had been offered?—That is more than I can tell. I never was offered any, or I never was asked the question. I do not know that I should not have been as bad as the others.

21,626. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) When was this conversation you had with Mr. Shuckford. How long before the election?—It was only one or two words.

21,627. How long before the election?—I suppose it might be a week before.

21,628. Were you in the habit of seeing Mr. Shuckford every day?—Yes, sometimes a score of times a day I spoke to him.

21,629. During the week before the election?—Yes, I should say it was long before.

21,630. Confine yourself to answering my questions?—Yes.

21,631. Were you in the habit of seeing Mr. Lummis?—No.

21,632. Did you see Mr. Lummis the week before the election?—No, not to the best of my knowledge. If I did I never spoke to him, nor he to me.

21,633. Not the week before the election?—No.

21,634. What business did you say you are yourself?—I am a beachman and work at the Young Company.

21,635. And did your business bring you in communication with Mr. Lummis?—We ferried the smacks for Mr. Lummis, that is all we do.

21,636. You hired the smacks from Mr. Lummis?—No, we work for the company, where we bring the fish ashore from the vessel.

21,637. You brought the fish from Mr. Lummis' vessel?—Yes. I never saw Mr. Lummis. There are hundreds of packages of fish come in at the place, and you do not see the owner, because they go on to the van and down to the station.

21,638. Mr. Lummis employed you?—No, he does not employ us. There are cutters employed to bring the fish in from these vessels at sea. I never spoke ten words to Mr. Lummis in my life.

21,639. (Mr. Slade.) You say you heard Mr. Hastings was bribed. Did you hear it from Mr. Beales?—No, I never spoke to Mr. Beales, though I used Mr. Beales's public-house. He never mentioned to me about the election, nor I to him.

J. Yaxley.

JOHN YAXLEY sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

21,640. What are you?—I am a fish dealer. Sometimes I buy a few herrings, and sometimes I gather stones on the beach, and do anything.

21,641. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—15*l.*

21,642. Who from?—Richard Balls.

TWENTY-SIXTH DAY.

J. Yaxley.

5 Oct. 1866.

21,643. Were you offered any money by the other side?—No, they never came to me at all.

21,644. Was 15*l.* all you got?—Yes.

21,645. Who did you vote for?—I voted for the Red side, I always do. I never did vote Blue.

21,646. Had you got a vote in 1859?—I had one, and I voted.

21,647. You voted for Lacon and Stracey in 1859?—I voted for Lacon and Stracey, I never did vote any other way.

21,648. What did you get for your vote when you voted for Lacon and Stracey?—Nothing at all then; I never got a halfpenny.

21,649. Was this the first time you ever got any money for your vote?—Yes, I think it is.

21,650. Will you swear it is?—Yes, I think it is. I never took any money before anywhere.

21,651. Were you not offered any money when you voted for Lacon and Stracey?—No, not that I know of; I do not think I was.

21,652. Do you remember Mr. Green, who is dead. Mr. Green, the rope maker?—I knew him very well.

21,653. Did he not give you any money for your vote?—No, he never gave me any money in his life.

21,654. Or anybody else?—No. I never received any money, only from Mr. Balls, this election. That is all.

N. Swan.

NATHANIEL SWAN sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

21,655. What are you?—A fish merchant.

21,656. What did you receive for your vote at the last election?—17*l.*

21,657. Was that given to [you by Mr. Hudson?—Yes.

21,658. How came you to get an odd sum like 17*l.*?—I got 15*l.* before the election and 2*l.* after.

21,659. Was that the arrangement you made with Mr. Hudson?—Yes.

21,660. Who did you vote for?—Sir Edmund Lacon.

21,661. And Mr. Goodson?—Yes.

21,662. Were you offered any money by the other side?—No.

21,663. Were you canvassed by them?—No.

21,664. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

S. Thetford.

SAMUEL THETFORD sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

21,665. What are you?—A hackney master—a postmaster.

21,656. Do you keep cabs?—Yes.

21,667. Did you receive any money at the last election?—Yes.

21,668. How much?—15*l.*

21,669. From Mr. Hutchins?—Yes.

21,670. Were you offered any more money besides that?—No.

21,671. None by the opposite party?—Not a farthing.

21,672. Who did you vote for?—Lacon and Goodson.

21,673. Had you got a vote in 1859?—Yes.

21,674. Did you vote the same side then?—No.

21,675. You voted for Watkin and Young?—Yes.

21,676. Did you receive any money then?—Not a penny.

21,677. If you voted without money should you vote for the Liberal party?—Yes.

21,678. Then the money induced you to change your views?—I wished to vote for the other party.

21,679. But the 15*l.* induced you to vote for the Conservatives?—Yes, I voted for the other party.

W. Smith.

WILLIAM SMITH sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

21,680. Are you on the register as of Gaol Street and Northumberland Place?—Yes.

21,681. What are you?—I am a cord wainer and publican.

21,682. Who did you vote for at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

21,683. Did you receive any money for your vote? Yes.

21,684. How much?—I received 15*l.* first and 3*l.* about three months after.

21,685. That would be 18*l.* altogether?—Yes.

21,686. Who from?—Mr. Wilshack.

21,687. What else did you receive?—I received from Wilshack 10*s.* that Clark had left.

21,688. What else did you receive?—There was something from Blyth afterwards, but that I will state presently. A pound from Blyth, but that was for not taking the money of him the second time.

21,689. Was that on the day of the poll?—No.

21,690. And did you receive any other money on other side?—No.

21,691. Were you canvassed on the other side?—Yes.

21,692. Who canvassed you?—Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl.

21,693. Mr. Marshman I suppose you mean?—Yes, Mr. Marshman. I did not see Mr. Vanderbyl at my house at all.

21,694. Were you canvassed on that side by anybody else except the candidates?—I think not.

21,695. Were you offered any money on the other side?—No. I was told they would do as much for me as the others, if I wanted, and I said I did not want anything.

21,696. Who told you that?—Mr. Skinner.

21,697. Skinner, the miller?—Yes.

21,698. Is James Smith a relation of yours?—No.

21,699. Was he with you on the morning Wilshack came to you?—Yes; I think he was.

21,700. Did you tell Wilshack that Skinner had offered you 25*l.*?—No.

21,701. Did you say that Skinner had offered you any money?—I said, as I do now, Skinner was taunting me, they would do as much as they would the other side.

21,702. Did you say how much the other side would do?—I do not remember that I did.

21,703. Did you know then how much the other side would do?—No.

21,704. What did you want for your vote?—I did not want anything. I did not run about after money for my vote.

21,705. I suppose you made up your mind how much money you would take?—No.

21,706. You did take eventually money for your vote?—Certainly I did.

21,707. You are mentioned in Mr. Jones' list as having received 20*l.*?—I never saw him, and never received a farthing.

21,708. Did you ever go to Cattermole's?—I never did.

21,709. Or the "Angel?"—No.

21,710. Or Wright's?—No.

21,711. Or Thompson's?—No, not one of them. I never went near them. That is a falsehood. I assure you I never went near any of them, for I had made up my mind before the election that I should vote for Sir Edmund Lacon at that time. Does Mr. Jones say who carried in that list with my name?

21,712. Mr. Edwards I think he says?—It is very kind of him.

21,713. This is Mr. Edward's evidence, "No. 1,148. Smith, 15*l.*" Then I say, "William Smith of Northumberland Place," and he says, "Yes"?—I never spoke to the man during the election time at all. He called at my house when I was out, I heard my wife say, but I never saw him.

21,714. Who called at your house?—Mr. Edwards did.

21,715. Did he give the money to your wife?—No, certainly not.

21,716. (Mr. Russell.) You know the Edwards we mean?—I do quite well.

21,717. Not Edwards the tailor—a strange gentleman?—No; I took it from no man. I thought you were alluding to Mr. Edwards the tailor. I knew him quite well, and he called at my house one day, but the other Mr. Edwards I do not know.

21,718. It was not Mr. Edwards, the tailor, mentioned your name, but Mr. Edwards, the strange gentleman, who came down for Mr. Brogden?—I never saw him, nor yet the money or the colour of it. I am on my oath and would not say it if it was not the truth.

21,719. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) When was it you arranged with Mr. Wilshack for the 15*l.*?—I did not arrange with him for any amount.

21,720. When was it he paid you the 15*l.*?—He brought it to my house, I think it was, if I remember right, the Monday night before the election.

21,721. When did you first speak to him about the subject?—We had some conversation, I should think, about two months before the election. I do some work for him now and then, and he called in.

21,722. Was it understood, two months before the election, that you were to vote for the Conservatives and have money?—Certainly not.

21,723. When was it understood?—The conversation was to this effect, "If there is anything going on I will think of you."

21,724. I want to know when that was?—A month, I should say, before the election.

21,725. Mr. Brogden, you say, canvassed you?—He did.

21,726. When was that?—Eight or ten days before the election I should think.

21,727. Did you promise Mr. Brogden?—I did not.

21,728. Are you quite certain?—Certain.

21,729. Did you refuse him?—I do not know what the conversation was. I think I said I had not made up my mind whether I should vote for him or not. I think that was somewhere about it.

21,730. Mr. Brogden or his friends gave you credit for having promised him?—He might take it down so perhaps, because I had voted the other side before.

21,731. You say you did not promise him?—I did not promise him.

21,732. (Mr. Slade.) Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

21,733. Who did you vote for?—Watkin and Young.

21,734. What did you receive for your vote in 1859?—10*l.*

21,735. Who gave it you?—Mr. Steward, the pawnbroker.

21,736. Mr. Christopher Steward?—Yes.

21,737. You received more money then from Mr. Steward, did you not?—I did.

21,738. How much did you receive?—I cannot tell you the amount I received. There were one or two parties friends of mine I say on that side; they wanted something for their votes, and I took their names up, and he gave it to me to give to them.

21,739. Can you give us the names of those parties?—Yes, I can. Mr. Mallett.

21,740. Is that Samuel Mallett?—Yes.

21,741. How much did he get?—I think it was 10*l.*, I am pretty well sure it was.

21,742. Who else?—Mr. Clarke.

21,743. What is Clarke's christian name?—Edward I think.

21,744. Is it Edmund Clarke of Gaol Street?—Yes.

21,745. How much did you give him?—I would not swear, from 10*l.* to 12*l.* I think it was 10*l.*, but I could not call my mind to the amount now. And Savory.

21,746. Henry Savory?—Yes.

21,747. How much?—I see in Mr. Savory's evidence 14*l.*, but I think I did not give him so much as that. I think not. If my memory serves me right it was 12*l.*, but I would rather not say positively.

21,748. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You say 12*l.*?—I would rather not say the amount, because if I cannot speak positively, I should not say.

21,749. (Mr. Slade.) Anybody else?—William Bacon.

21,750. How much?—10*l.* I gave.

21,751. Who else?—To the best of my knowledge that is all.

21,752. Have you got a list of the men you gave bribes to there?—Yes. I have put them down on that piece of paper (handing a piece of paper to the Commissioners.) Mr. Marshall I gave him money, but I think he returned it again, and I gave it back to Mr. Steward. I think I remember something about that.

21,753. What Smith is that?—That is myself.

21,754. And what Marshall is it?—He kept a greengrocers shop in Gaol Street at that time. He had some some money, but I think, if I remember, he gave it me, and I took it back to Mr. Steward. I know I did, in fact.

21,755. Had you done anything of this sort in the year 1857?—No.

21,756. (Mr. Russell.) Who did you vote for in 1857?—Was it Watkin and McCullagh? I am sure I cannot tell now.

21,757. Watkin and McCullagh were the candidates?—Then I voted that way.

21,758. How came you to vote Liberal in 1857 and 1859, and Conservative in 1865?—I do not think it is consistent to vote for any man that they bring forward as a Liberal.

21,759. Have you any political convictions?—No. It is according to the candidates. I take my standard from them.

21,760. You take a personal view of the matter?—I do. Those that will do the borough in my opinion the most good.

21,761. And you thought Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson were personally the best men?—Decidedly; they have the best chance of doing good to this borough.

21,762. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) One question about Mr. Edwards, the tailor. What time was it that he came to your house?—I think it was the day before the election.

21,763. Your wife told you he had been there?—Yes. He asked whether she knew which way I was going to vote. And I think the answer she gave him was, I was going to vote for Lacon and Goodson.

21,764. (Mr. Russell.) I advise you to ask Edwards, the tailor, whether he did not draw 15*l.* from the other side for you?—If he drew it he never drew it for me.

21,765. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) He is the person who sent in your name as entitled to 15*l.* from the other side?—I did not have it. A man that will swear to a thing of that sort has no principle.

TWENTY-SIXTH DAY.

J. Johnson.

5 Oct. 1866.

JAMES JOHNSON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

21,766. Do you live in Row No. 108?—Yes.

21,767. What are you?—A mariner.

21,768. Who did you vote for at the last election?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

21,769. Did you receive any inducement to vote for them?—Nothing.

21,770. Did you get 15*l.*?—I received 18*l.*

21,771. Who from?—Mr. Moore.

21,772. When did Mr. Moore give you this?—On the morning of the election.

21,773. Did he tell you why he gave it you?—I tendered him a bill for that amount for my expenses, 18*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*, and 18*l.* he paid.

21,774. What were your expenses?—My expenses were 18*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*

21,775. What for?—The detention of my ship and my loss of time, and my expenses coming and going.

21,776. How long were you detained by voting?—Four days.

21,777. What were your wages?—That depends on what I earn; principally speaking, 6*l.* per month.

21,778. That is full wages?—That is full wages for the master of a ship.

21,779. Do you think that three months full wages was fair for four days detention?—Bear in mind that my ship was lying there, it was not charged for myself. It was for my ship a part of this was charged, for the ship belonged to me.

21,780. Who did you first represent to that you wanted 18*l.* for your expenses?—I was telegraphed for.

21,781. Who telegraphed for you?—Both parties, on both sides.

21,782. Where were you when you were telegraphed for?—At Newcastle, or rather at Shields.

21,783. When you got to Yarmouth who did you go to?—I went home. I arrived in Yarmouth the night before the election, and saw nobody until the next day morning.

21,784. Was Mr. Moore the first person that canvassed you?—Mr. Moore called on me.

21,785. And did you say you would vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl if your expenses were paid?—I did.

21,786. Did he give you the 18*l.* at once?—I did not give the amount. I told him I would tender him the amount, which I did.

21,787. When did you tender that?—The morning of the election.

21,788. Before you voted?—Yes.

21,789. And did he pay you himself?—I believe he did.

21,790. Who was present when he paid you?—There were two or three. I think Mr. Barber was one, and Mr. Moore. I recognised those two.

21,791. Where was it?—At the "White Lion."

21,792. Was no objection made to the largeness of the amount?—Not the slightest.

21,793. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

21,794. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you come up from Shields by railroad?—Yes.

21,795. If you had not come up by railroad to Yarmouth, what would you have been doing at Shields?—Seeing about loading the cargo, and proproceeding to another port.

21,796. Was it a coal vessel?—Yes.

21,797. All the time you were here was the vessel loading?—She was loaded.

21,798. What loss was there by you coming here?—Four days lost through my coming away.

21,799. Your personal expenses?—Yes.

21,800. No loss to the ship?—Loss to the ship because the ship was lying idle without me.

21,801. You say she was loading?—She was loaded the day I left. She was loaded four hours after I left.

21,802. How soon would she have got away?—She would have got away that day, perhaps that afternoon, and perhaps the next day morning.

21,803. (Mr. Russell.) Your wages were not stopped during the four days?—I have no wages. My wages are what I gain out of my vessel, consequently if I do not earn any I get none.

21,804. Are you the owner?—Yes.

21,805. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) When you received that telegraph you knew the purpose you were sent for?—It was said what I was coming up for.

21,806. By both parties?—Yes.

21,807. To come up and vote?—Yes.

21,808. (Mr. Russell.) What did the telegraph say?—Merely to proceed to Yarmouth as soon as possible, to be there time enough for the election, nothing more.

21,809. (Mr. Slade.) Did it say your expenses would be paid?—No.

21,810. (Mr. Russell.) Did the other side canvass you at all after you got here?—No.

T. Woolsey, sen.

THOMAS WOOLSEY, sen., sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

21,811. What are you?—I am a rope maker by trade. I served my time to the rope making. I do not follow that now. I follow the straw bonnet pressing.

21,812. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

21,814. Who gave it to you?—By a ticket from Mr. Edwards to go to the "Angel."

21,815. Who gave you the ticket?—Mr. Thomas Edwards, the tailor.

21,816. You went up to the "Angel" and received the 15*l.*?—Yes.

21,817. Were you offered any money by the other side?—No, I never spoke to them.

21,818. Who did you vote for?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

21,819. Had you got a vote in 1859?—Yes, I have had a vote this 40 years.

21,820. Who did you vote for in 1859?—Mr. Watkin and Mr. Young I think it was.

21,821. What did you get for your vote then?—Nothing at all. I never have before.

21,822. Were you offered any money in 1859?—No.

21,823. By neither party?—No.

21,824. How came you to take it this time?—I do not know. I heard there was a deal of money flying about, so I thought I might as well have a little as well as other people. It was publicly told about.

21,825. You were not in want of 15*l.*?—I cannot say I was.

W. Wright.

WILLIAM WRIGHT sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

21,826. Where do you live?—On the Beach.

21,827. Marine Parade?—Marine Parade.

21,828. What are you?—A publican.

21,829. Who did you vote for at the last election?—Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl.

21,830. Did you receive any money for your vote?—I did.

21,832. Who gave it you?—Thomas Edwards, the tailor.

21,833. Money or ticket?—Money.

21,834. Were you offered any money by the other side?—No.

21,835. Were you canvassed by them?—Yes.

21,836. Did you refuse to vote for them?—Yes, I did.

21,837. Would you have voted for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl if you had not had the money?—Of course I should.

21,838. Then why did you take it?—It was offered to me; they gave it to all, and of course I took it the same as the others.

21,839. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

21,840. Had you promised to vote for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl before you got the 15*l.*?—Yes.

21,841. Before money was even mentioned?—Yes.

21,842. Had you promised them when they first canvassed you?—Yes. Mr. Edwards knew all about it that I should vote for them. No money would induce me to vote the other way at any rate.

21,843. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Was it your opinion it was for the advantage of Yarmouth to have a rich candidate?—No. I do not know. I cannot say anything about that.

21,844. (Mr. Russell.) I suppose you think Mr. Brogden's money was thrown away, do you not?—I should think it was.

FRANCIS WATSON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

F. Watson.

21,845. What are you?—A fish merchant.

21,846. Who did you vote for at the last election?—I voted for Lacon and Goodson.

21,847. Did you receive any money for your vote?—Not any money,

21,848. Were you offered any?—No, not on either side.

21,849. Did you promise to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson when they first canvassed you?—No. I never see them when they came round the first time, when I saw them I promised I should vote for them.

21,850. Do you know Mr. Buston?—Yes.

21,851. Did he offer you any money?—No.

21,852. Never?—Never.

21,853. Did he tell you he had money to give away?—No.

21,854. Do you know Mr. Blyth?—Yes.

21,855. Did he offer you any money?—No, not a farthing.

21,856. Did he tell you he had money to give away?—No, I never heard a word about it.

21,857. Had you any conversation with either Mr. Buston or Mr. Blyth about the election?—No, I see Mr. Buston pass on the Sunday night, and he said good night as I was putting the shutters up, nothing further.

21,858. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

21,859. Did you vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey then?—No, I voted the other side then.

21,860. How came you to vote differently then?—I had an uncle who voted the other side then and I used to oblige him.

21,861. Did you receive any money for your vote in 1859?—No, I never had a farthing offered me, never since I have had a vote, on either side.

21,862. Do you mean it was solely the influence of your uncle that made you vote Liberal before?—Yes, certainly. I voted for them about 20 years. When I first had a vote as a fair man I always so voted.

21,863. When you were canvassed by the Liberal party this time did you not give them to understand you wanted money for your vote?—No.

21,864. That you swear?—No, I never saw the candidates at all. All I saw was Mr. Mainprice and Mr. Livingston; they came to me and asked me which way I was going to vote, and I said I had promised Sir Edmund Lacon. I never had money on either side offered me.

21,865. You are marked in the Liberal canvass-book with a T, which means tinning?—I do not know what they have marked me with. I never got any money, not a farthing.

21,866. Do you know of any man who was bribed at the last election?—No, I never troubled myself about the elections. I go and vote in the morning, and have done with it.

21,867. If any man has sworn he gave you money or offered you money at the last election, or in 1859, it is not true?—It is not true. I never had a farthing ever since I have had a vote, and I have had one since 1821.

22,056. Did you receive any more money besides that ?—15*l.* at the " Angel."

22,057. Who sent you up to the " Angel ? "—Smith. He did not send me ; he asked me to go with him.

22,058. What Smith ?—A shoemaker, in Broad Row.

22,059. Is that Job Smith ?—Yes.

22,060. Had you got a ticket ?—No.

22,061. Did you get the money from Mr. Hutchins before you went up to the " Angel ?"—That was left at 9 the night before the election.

22,101. Did you come up from Glasgow on purpose to vote ?—Yes.

22,102. How much did it cost you to come up from Glasgow ?—I really do not know. The ship was detained some time. We could not get a man there for love nor money. In fact they will not go in small ships. They are used to large vessels. Mine is only a small ship of 50 or 60 tons, that is all.

22,110. It seems you were always paid in that way ?—That is all I received.

22,111. Did you find out afterwards who left the 7*l.* ?—No, I never knew, and never shall know. A party came in one evening and laid the money on the table.

22,112. Have you ever found money left on your table except at election times ?—No.

22,132. What did Mr. Ablitt pay you for the string band?—Half guinea a time.

22,133. How much does Mr. Ablitt pay you in the course of a year?—Something like 50*l.* or 60*l.* a year.

22,134. Is the half guinea for your own services?—Yes; that is when I have the leadership of the band for the race galas or regatta or anything of that kind, but we are playing three times a week now for him.

22,135. Do you engage the band, or are you engaged merely as the leader?—I engage the band.

22,136. Who pays the band?—Mr. Ablitt pays me, and I pay the band.

22,137. Do you keep any accounts?—No, not particularly.

22,138. Does Mr. Ablitt pay you every time?—He pays me weekly.

22,139. A weekly salary?—No, not a weekly salary. Every time I send in the bill he pays me.

22,140. You send in a bill every week?—Yes.

22,141. Did you do that the year previous to the election?—Yes, for many years.

22,142. And in that bill is included the other performers as well as yourself?—Yes.

22,143. What does it amount to weekly?—Now?

22,144. No, at that time?—It varies. Sometimes it is 3*l.*, 4*l.*, or 5*l.* It is according to the number of times I have to supply the string band.

22,145. When does Mr. Ablitt pay you?—Every Saturday morning.

22,146. Every Saturday morning he pays you the amount of your account sent in?—Yes.

22,147. Do you give him a receipt?—Yes, in general. We are not particular about that.

22,148. Did you do it, or did you not?—Sometimes I did, and sometimes I did not. Sometimes he says, "It is all right; do not bother me."

22,149. He always pays you?—Yes.

22,150. He always has paid you?—He did owe me money a little while ago, but he has paid me up now.

22,151. Had he paid you up at the time of the election?—Yes.

22,152. He owed you nothing at the time of the election?—Nothing.

22,153. Nothing whatever?—No.

22,154. Just immediately before the election was the band employed every week?—Well, I cannot say, it is so long ago.

22,155. Did Mr. Ablitt ever ask you for your vote?—No, he never mentioned a word to me.

22,156. Have you ever told anybody that he did?—No.

22,157. Are you prepared to swear that?—I do not know that ever he did.

22,158. You must know it?—Well, I am prepared to swear that Mr. Ablitt never asked me anything about it.

22,159. I ask you whether you ever told anybody else that Mr. Ablitt had asked you for your vote?—No, Sir Edmund Lacon had.

22,160. I ask you whether you are prepared now to swear that you never told anybody that Mr. Ablitt asked you for your vote previous to the election?—Yes, I will swear that.

22,161. And you never told anybody that Mr. Ablitt gave you money?—No, only for my professional engagements; I am receiving money every week from him.

22,162. Money for your vote?—No. Mr. Brogden called on me and I told him exactly that I could not——

22,163. I do not want to know that, just answer my question, that is enough. You told me just now that Mr. Ablitt paid you every week?—Yes, he pays me every week.

22,164. Of course that was the case before the election?—Yes, it has been the case ever since he has occupied the gardens; I have played there ever since it was the gardens.

22,165. Had he paid you the week before the election we will say?—Yes, every week. The week before the election?

22,166. Yes.—No, he was not there then.

22,167. The election took place on the Wednesday, had you been employed in the week before the election by Mr. Ablitt?—No, by Mr. Theobald then, the late proprietor.

22,168. A week before the election?—I think so; I am not certain that I go and take it weekly.

22,169. You just now told me you did.—From Mr. Ablitt?

22,170. Yes, from Mr. Ablitt?—The week before?

22,171. When did Mr. Ablitt first have the gardens, and first employ you?—Well, I am sure I cannot say; it is some time since.

22,172. You said four or five years?—It may have been longer.

22,173. You told me Mr. Ablitt paid you every week?—So he did.

22,174. Then he did that up to the election; that is not four or five years ago?—He was rather unfortunate, and he owed me a bill, a little money, previous to the election.

22,175. I ask you whether Mr. Ablitt had the gardens up to the time of the election?—No, I do not think he had; I cannot remember who had them exactly.

TWENTY-SIXTH DAY.

W. Hulley.

5 Oct. 1866.

22,176. Who was your master in that respect at the time of the election?—Really I forget certainly. I forget. I think it was Mr. Theobald.

22,177. When did Mr. Theobald come in?—Into the gardens?

22,178. When did he come into the gardens?—I think it was about eight or nine months previous to the election.

22,179. Mr. Ablitt gave up?—Yes. I cannot say exactly the time; I am very forgetful. I do not know; all I know is, I go and take my money from whoever is there. I go and take it weekly.

22,180. You told me just now you did?—Yes.

22,181. You say Mr. Theobald had the gardens for eight or nine months, and he employed you instead of Mr. Ablitt; I understood you to say so?—Mr. Theobald occupied the gardens; he was the lessee of the gardens, and he employed me to engage the string band.

22,182. How long had Mr. Theobald employed you in that way? You say for eight or nine months. You can recollect if you like?—No. I took my money weekly, and I did not keep an account. I really cannot say; it is no use, I cannot say how long.

22,183. Whom did you take your money weekly from?—From the proprietors of the gardens.

22,184. I want to know who the proprietors of the gardens were?—At the time of the election?

22,185. Yes?—Mr. Theobald.

22,186. How long had he been proprietor?—About eight or nine months.

22,187. And Mr. Ablitt was not the proprietor then?—No.

22,188. Then he was not your paymaster?—No.

22,189. And he had not been your paymaster for eight or nine months?—No.

22,190. When was the last time that he paid you?—That I cannot say I am sure.

22,191. Was it when he ceased to be the proprietor of the gardens?—Yes; then Mr. Ablitt took the gardens again.

22,192. I am talking of Mr. Ablitt?—You mean Mr. Theobald.

22,193. You just now told me Mr. Theobald had the gardens for eight or nine months before the election, and not Mr. Ablitt?—I really cannot say; I go and take my money from the different proprietors. It has been changing hands lately, and I do not know.

22,194. We are talking of the time before the election; you must recollect it?—No, I really do not; I will be on my oath.

22,195. You are upon your oath.—I cannot remember it at all, because I keep no accounts. I go and take my money weekly.

22,196. You have already told us that. I want to know whom you took your money from at that time?—I do not remember. At the time of the election?

22,197. No, previous to the election. Eight or nine months previous to the election, did you get it from Mr. Ablitt or Mr. Theobald?—It must have been Mr. Theobald.

22,198. And previously to that you got it from Mr. Ablitt?—Yes.

22,199. And he had paid you?—Yes.

22,200. You told me he owed you nothing at the time of the election?—He had paid me all up.

22,201. When?—I cannot say exactly when. He owed me money for string bands, and I sent in my bill. He paid me 10*l.* one time, and then a few pounds at another; 1*l.*, perhaps, as it was convenient.

22,202. When did he pay you that 10*l.*?—It was about two months before the election.

22,203. And he owed you that for about six months from the time he gave up?—Six or eight months. I cannot state the time exactly; I do not know exactly the time.

22,204. Why did he give up the gardens?—He was unfortunate.

22,205. Did he go through the court?—I am sure I do not know.

22,206. At all events he had not paid you?—Not up to the time I stated.

22,207. But he paid you previously to the election?—I have got it all now.

22,208. You just now told me that he had paid you every farthing previous to the election?—I did not put it down. This is my first vote. I do not know really, I get so confused.

22,209. I understood you to say that Mr. Ablitt had paid you up all he owed you at the election. You repeated that twice. Now allow me to read you the evidence that you gave before the House of Commons: "Did Charles Ablitt ever give you anything?—What "do you mean? Money?—Yes, lots. Do you re- "member the last occasion on which he gave you "any money?—Yes; it was about two months pre- "vious to the election. How much money did he "give you two months previous to the election?— "10*l.*, and he owes me now 5*l.* What did he give "you the 10*l.* for?—For professional engagements, "for supplying bands to the gardens." How do you reconcile that with what you swore just now, that he owed you nothing at the election, that he paid you up everything before the election?—I go and take my money weekly; I have no accounts. I do not know I am sure.

22,210. You said Mr. Ablitt paid you 10*l.* two months before the election?—About two months.

22,211. When did he pay you the rest?—I am sure I cannot say; I did not take any particular account, but he has paid me all up.

22,212. Did you not give him a receipt?—I do not remember giving him one.

22,213. Did you give him a receipt for the 10*l.*?—He has got a receipt for the 10*l.*

22,214. Then you gave him a receipt for the 10*l.*?—Yes.

22,215. Did you give him a receipt for the 5*l.* afterwards?—Yes.

22,216. When did he pay you up the balance?—Last Saturday.

22,217. What, now?—Yes, I am there constant, playing every week.

22,218. Is Mr. Ablitt the proprietor of the gardens now?—Yes.

22,219. When did he take possession of the gardens?—Soon after the election; I hardly know when.

22,220. You must know?—No, I do not; I would tell you directly.

22,221. Who actually gave you the money?—Mr. Ablitt.

22,222. Does he do that always?—No, not always.

22,223. Who does?—Sometimes a relation of his at the bar, a young lady.

22,224. How much does it amount to a single payment? Is it 2*l.* or 3*l.* a week?—No, not so much as that.

22,225. Who do you say pays you?—I very seldom go down myself; I send my little boy after the money.

22,226. Do you mean to say you ever send your little boy to get money without giving a receipt?—Sometimes he will not wait for it. I know what he engages for, and he knows, and so he does not wait for a receipt.

22,227. When did Mr. Ablitt begin to pay you again after Mr. Theobald had the gardens?—That I am sure I cannot recollect, or I would tell you directly.

22,228. Do you keep any books of account?—No, I do not keep any particular account; I am engaged by gentlemen of the town for quadrille parties, and so on. It all comes in one family, and I keep no accounts.

22,229. You do not keep any accounts whatever?—No, I really do not remember anything about it.

22,230. Have you no papers to which you could refer?—No. I know what I engage for, and I go and take my money weekly.

22,231. You take your money weekly, you say?—Yes.

22,232. During the time Mr. Theobald was there I suppose you got your money weekly ?—Yes.

22,233. How was it Mr. Ablitt came to owe you 15*l.* when he left ?—Because he was unfortunate and failed; and just about two months before the election he owed me a little money, and he paid me a little in advance.

22,234. What do you mean by "a little in advance ?"—He owed me 15*l.* for stringed bands, which I paid the men. That was out of my pocket; and he said ultimately, "I will make it up to you, as I think about taking the gardens again; I will pay you."

22,235. And he paid you 10*l.* in advance ?—Yes.

22,236. That is what you call payment in advance ?—In my style. He paid me 10*l.*

22,237. When was the rest, the other 5*l.*, paid you ?—That I cannot say; I really cannot say.

22,238. You know Mr. Hulley. You must refresh your memory on that subject. You must come here again if you do not.—When was the other 5*l.* paid ?

22,239. Yes; because it is ridiculous to tell me you do not recollect it. Did you give a receipt for the 10*l.* when that was paid you ?—Yes.

22,240. And did you give a receipt for the 5*l.* ?—No; because I have received that by instalments.

22,241. I do not ask you why at present. Did you give a receipt for it ?—For the 10*l.* ?

22,242. No. Did you give a receipt for the 5*l.* ?—No.

22,243. You say it was paid you by instalments ?—Yes.

22,244. When was it paid you by instalments ?—At different times. I cannot say. I do not keep any accounts.

22,245. How soon after the election did Mr. Ablitt come into possession of the gardens again ?—That I cannot say.

22,246. Yes, you can.—My dear sir, I cannot.

22,247. Do not address me in that way.—I beg pardon, I must apologise. I am sure I do not know.

22,248. You can ascertain that ?—Yes, I will ascertain it.

22,249. Then do ascertain it. How soon, do you think ?—Before the election ?

22,250. No, after the election ?—I do not know, I am sure.

22,251. Was it a month or two months ?—I cannot say. I do not know. I never kept any accounts. I go on weekly.

22,252. Do you think it was three months ?—I will not think at all. I cannot remember. It is no use my saying, because I do not remember at all.

22,253. How soon had Mr. Ablitt paid you by instalments the 5*l.* Was it before he came into possession of the gardens the second time ?—No.

22,254. Not till he came into possession ?—Not till he came into possession.

22,255. And he did ultimately pay it all ?—Yes.

22,256. Was it within a year afterwards ?—That I do not know.

22,257. When did he first begin to pay you by instalments ?—Soon after he had given me the 10*l.*

22,258. When ?—It was about two months before the election.

22,259. Soon after that it would be ?—Yes.

22,260. Had he paid it you all up before the election ?—I am sure I cannot say. I do not keep any books, and I cannot say.

22,261. Do you think he had ?—I think he had.

22,262. You think he had paid it all up before the election ?—Yes, I think he had.

22,263. How came you to tell the House of Commons that he had not ?—I might be wrong.

22,264. You were on your oath then, you know. How came you to tell the Committee of the House of Commons that he owed you 5*l.* at that time; that is in the year 1866 ?—I do not keep proper accounts, and it is a long job for an illiterate man, like I might call myself, to remember these things.

22,265. When did you make up your mind to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson ?—When I first saw the bills out.

22,266. Were you canvassed by Sir Edmund Lacon ?—Yes.

22,267. When ?—I did not see them myself. The servant went to the door. I think they called a month or six weeks previous to the election.

22,268. Was that the only time that they called ?—They called twice.

22,269. Had you made up your mind to vote for them then ?—Certainly I had; and I told Mr. Brogden and Mr. Fowler, they called upon me; I told them the very same thing, that I was getting my living by the Tory party, and I dare not do any other way.

22,270. Do I understand you to swear positively that Mr. Ablitt never upon any occasion said anything to you about your vote ?—No, only about my professional engagements with the stringed bands—the bands provided for the gardens.

22,271. (Mr. Russell.) Have you ever heard that Mr. Ablitt had money to give you for your vote ?—I saw it in the papers.

22.272. Had you never heard it before ?—No.

22,273. Since you gave your evidence before the House of Commons have you taken the opinion of any of your friends as to what evidence you should give before us ?—No. I did not take any interest in the election. I let it pass over, and I did not think anything about it.

22,274. You knew that you were going to be examined before us ?—I knew when I got the subpœna.

22,275. When did you get it ?—On the 24th August I think it was; I am not sure, but I have it at home. I must apologise for not coming here yesterday, but I was out on business, and I did not know it till late.

22,276. Between your getting the summons and today have you taken the opinion of other people as to what evidence you should give before us ?—No. We are in the habit, us musicians, of going about laughing and talking, but I have not spoken a word about it; it did not concern me; I did not care about it. It was the first vote I had, and I did not care about it.

22,277. Supposing that you had received no money, and you had no interests to serve, how would you have voted ?—For Sir Edmund Lacon; I dare not do otherwise, because I am playing for the Tory party in Yarmouth. The other party are of no use to me.

22,278. Have you any political convictions ?—No, not particularly.

22,279. Do you know a man named King ?—Yes, I played for him at Norwich.

22.280. William King ?—Yes.

22,281. Did you ever tell William King that what you had stated before the House of Commons was not true ?—No, I never said any such thing.

22,282. Do you know a man named Henry King ?—Yes, he is the son.

22,283. Have you ever told Henry King ?—No.

22,284. Never ?—They brought up something about it. There was something said about it; I do not know what it was.

22,285. Had you any conversation with him upon the subject ?—I was playing in the assize week for Henry King, and there was something brought up about the election; but I cannot remember anything particular. I do not know what it was.

22,286. You never told him or led him to believe that what you said before the House of Commons was not true ?—No, I did not.

22,287. Then it was true ?—It was true what I said before the House of Commons.

22,288. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Are you prepared to swear that you never told anybody in Yarmouth that what you said before the House of Commons was not true ?—Yes.

22.289. You are ?—Yes.

22,290. You may go for the present. You will be wanted again, I daresay.—Very well; I will be here.

TWENTY-SIXTH DAY.

C. Ablitt.

5 Oct. 1866.

CHARLES ABLITT sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

22,291. What are you?—I am the proprietor of the Victoria Gardens.

22,292. How long have you been there?—On this last occasion now eight months.

22,293. What month would you come in?—That would be March.

22,294. Last March?—Yes.

22,295. You had previously had the gardens?—Previously for five years.

22,296. And how long were you out of them?—17 months.

22,297. You were not proprietor at the time of the election?—No.

22,298. Then it would be about the previous September?—Yes; it was 17 months. I left them in October 1864, and I went again in March 1866.

22,299. Mr. Hulley was in your employ?—Yes.

22,300. At the time you left the gardens did you owe him anything?—I unfortunately did.

22,301. How much did you owe him?—I think it was 15*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* I think I can produce a book; I think so. I may as well tell you I was unfortunate. I did not pass the bankruptcy court. At that time I had not lived at the gardens myself, but had a manager for some two years, and the accounts had been rather loosely kept, not by him, but through neglect of mine. The Rifle band as well had a claim against me of 16*l.*

22,302. At all events Mr. Hulley had a claim?—Yes.

22,303. And did you afterwards pay that?—I have paid it.

22,304. When did you pay it?—I paid him 10*l.*, perhaps it might be seven or eight weeks before the election, and since then I have paid him at different times, as I have almost all the other people in Yarmouth, because I have been rather successful this year.

22,305. You did not owe him anything when you resumed possession of the gardens?—Yes, I did.

22,306. Then you had not paid him the whole 15*l.* before the election?—No, I had not.

22,307. Did you ever converse with him upon the subject of the election previously?—I can simplify it perhaps by telling you this: Mr. Hulley sent in a claim against me for this 15*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* all amongst others. I knew that the election was coming on. I did not say exactly to Mr. Hulley; I did not ask him for his vote, but I gave him to understand—he is particularly stupid over these sort of matters—that I should want him to do something for me, and that I would pay him his money, that I would do with him as I have done with others.

22,308. And you got 15*l.* from Mr. Cooper?—I did; but Mr. Cooper has made a slight error.

22,309. It is a pity that Mr. Hulley has not come up to tell the Commissioners in the same straightforward manner?—He is always so dreadfully confused, and I think he has been drinking for the last few days.

22,310. (Mr. Slade.) You said that you wanted Mr. Hulley to do something for you. Did he understand what that was?—I am sure I did not mention about the election. He said he wished I could pay him. I said, "I expect to be back at the gardens shortly, and if I do come back I will pay you." I came into a little money about that time through the death of a brother, and I said, "I will give you 10*l.*, and I shall want you to do something for me." I daresay you can guess what it was.

22,311. Did he understand what it meant?—I should say probably that he did understand it.

22,312. That he was to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—It was not mentioned to him.

22,313. But that was the understanding?—Yes; not exactly an understanding, I implied as much. I did not mention any names or anything of the kind. But under any circumstances Mr. Hulley would be bound to vote for them because he lives entirely by them.

22,314. Did you pay him with this money that you got from Mr. Cooper?—No, I did not.

22,315. What did you do with Mr. Cooper's money?—Well, I put it in my purse. I considered in my own mind it was for Hulley, although there was nothing mentioned by Mr. Cooper. He gave me 15*l.* for general purposes. I asked him for it, in fact; I believe Mr. Cooper understood that I could command Hulley's vote, that I could do it if I was so disposed.

22,316. But nothing was mentioned?—Nothing was mentioned.

22,317. You musicians seem to do everything by signs. You say nothing was said?—I simply said, "Something is coming on," I believe I used those words, "Of course you will oblige me;" I think those were the very words.

22,318. You took care not to mention exactly what it was?—Yes, of course, I should not like to do that exactly; when we like to give our support to a candidate, we like to do it in that way.

22,319. (Mr. Russell.) I do not understand what you did with the money that you had from Mr. Cooper?—Well, I put in my purse. I spent a good deal of money just about that time.

22,320. Do you know a man named Ayres?—The only Ayres I know is a photographic artist, of Regent Road; I know him.

22,321. Did you offer him any money?—No.

22,322. Never?—Never.

22,323. Did you owe him any money at the time of the election?—I did not.

22,324. Do you know a man named Farmer?—Yes; he used to play in my band.

22,325. What is his christian name?—That I will not be certain about, I think it is William.

22,326. Where does he live?—He lives in Howard Street.

22,327. Did you canvass him?—I did not.

22,328. Did you give him any money?—I did not.

22,329. Or offer him any money?—I did not.

22,330. Was Hulley the only man that you had to do with?—He was, upon my oath.

22,331. You are on your oath?—Of course I am on my oath. Most solemnly I declare he is the only man.

22,332. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

22,333. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You say you were unfortunate when you gave up the gardens. Were you actually a bankrupt?—I was a bankrupt, but afterwards it was annulled, and they accepted a composition.

22,334. Mr. Hulley had no claim against you then?—There were a great many claimants at that time that I did not know of.

22,335. Mr. Hulley at this time had no legal claim against you?—No, he had not; but all the small accounts I have voluntarily paid since this year.

22,336. (Mr. Russell.) I should like this to be clearly understood. You took 15*l.* from Mr. Cooper?—Yes.

22,337. And that money was either for your vote, or for Mr. Hulley's. For whose vote do you consider it would be for?—Well, I have certainly paid Mr. Hulley 15*l.* since; and I consider myself that the 15*l.* I received reimbursed myself for paying Hulley.

22,338. Still you owed him the money?—Not directly, indirectly. I had been a bankrupt at that time, so that I had no occasion; but the same as the other accounts in Yarmouth, I have paid them nearly all, which I need not have done.

23,339. If you had not received the 15*l.* from Mr. Cooper you would not have paid Mr. Hulley at all?—I should, upon my honour as a man, as I have paid every other person almost in Yarmouth.

22,340. Do you consider yourself or Mr. Hulley to have benefited by the 15*l.* ; that is the question?—Well, Mr. Hulley is the man of course.

22,341. How would Mr. Hulley be benefited if you would have paid him in any event?—You understand Mr. Hulley had no legal claim against me ; it was voluntary on my part to pay him ; but I should have paid him whether I received the 15*l.* from Mr. Cooper or not, so that really I am the better by 15*l.*

22,342. Mr. Hulley is only the better in having received the 15*l.* earlier than he otherwise would?—That is exactly it.

William Hulley recalled ; examined by Mr. Slade.

22,343. Mr. Ablitt has said that when he paid you the money which he owed you he said he wanted you to do something for him?—I did not hear him make use of that expression.

22,344. He never made use of that expression?—I do not remember it.

22,345. What did he say?—He only paid me.

22,346. You never understood that he wanted you to vote?—He never mentioned anything about it that I can remember,

22,347. (Mr. Russell.) Upon your oath, when Mr. Ablitt paid you the money, did you in any way connect it with your vote?—Not a bit.

22,348. That you swear?—That I will swear.

22,349. And had you promised Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson when they first canvassed you?—Yes.

22,350. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Have you ever had any conversation with Mr. Ablitt, since this Commission was opened upon what you should say to-day?—No.

22,351. You have never had any conversation with him?—No.

22,352. Nor with anybody else?—No.

22,353. Has anybody told you what to say?—No.

22,354. Has anybody told you that you would lose your situation if you did not say so and so?—No.

22,355. Have you been under the apprehension yourself in your own mind that you would lose your place if you gave certain evidence?—No.

22,356. Have you never felt any sort of apprehension as to your being examined here?—No.

22,357. And you have never expressed that to anybody at all?—No, I do not remember saying anything about it.

22,358. You never said that you were afraid if you acknowledged you were bribed you would be turned out of your employment?—I do not remember.

22,359. Did you, or did you not?—Well, I will say I did not.

William Tobias Johnson sworn ; examined by Mr. Slade.

22,360. What are you?—An innkeeper.

22,361. Did you take any part in the last election?—Well, a small part ; very small.

22,362. Whom did you vote for?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

22,363. What part did you take?—Well, I paid three different persons a sum of money each.

22,364. Will you give us their names?—Robert Johnson, builder, Hall Plain, 20*l.*

22,367. 50*l.* altogether?—Yes, 50*l.*

22,368. Did you give any other voters money?—No.

22,369. Where did you get that 50*l.* from?—Mr. Cooper.

22,370. How long before the election did Mr. Cooper give you this money?—On the morning of the election I think. I will not be positive whether it was that morning, or a morning or two before ; I am not exactly positive.

22,371. However, very shortly before the election?—Yes.

22,372. How do you know that those men were open to bribes?—I had known them at elections before as voters, to have money as voters, and money was acceptable to them.

22,373. Are those Johnsons relations of yours?—Two of them are.

22,374. Had you canvassed them before you gave them the money?—No.

22,375. Were they men who required money to vote?—Yes ; there is no doubt about it, or they would not have taken it.

22,376. Would they have voted without money?—No ; they liked to be treated the same as others ; that was the talk before the election.

22,377. Did you receive any money for your own vote?—No.

22,378. What is the name of your inn?—The "New Royal Standard."

22,379. Was any room at your inn engaged as a committee room?—They had meetings there the night before the election ; one meeting, that was all.

22,380. What did you receive as payment for your room?—Nothing.

22,381. Was this meeting at your house attended by the candidates?—Never ; they did not assemble till somewhere before 8 o'clock in the evening.

22,382. Have you always been a partisan on the Conservative side?—No, formerly on the Liberal side.

22,383. In the election of 1859 how did you vote?—I was off the register that election. I have had a vote 20 years, but not that year ; I was off the register.

22,384. Did you pay any money away at the election of 1859?—Yes.

22,385. Did you pay money at that election for the Red or the Blue party?—Blue. Mr. Watkin and Mr. Young's party.

22,386. Will you give us the names?—Benjamin Watts.

22,388. Who else?—Daniel Beales 12*l.* ; John Horn 15*l.*

22,389. He is not on the register?—Not this year ; he is dead since then. He lived a few days after the election, just long enough to enjoy his money.

22,390. How much to Horn?—15*l.* ; and George Johnson 12*l.*

22,391. Is that the same man?—The same man.

22,392. Who else?—Joseph Plummer.

22,393. He is off the register?—I have not seen him for years ; I do not know much about him.

22,394. Do you know if he is dead?—I do not.

22,395. How much did you give him?—10*l.* ; he was at work for Mr. Cole at the time. That is the whole 59*l.*, and that is five persons.

22,396. Who did you get that money from?—Mr. Chamberlin, the solicitor.

22,397. How long before the election did Mr. Chamberlin give you this money?—A few days. I cannot say how many days.

22,398. Do you recollect whether he gave it you in sovereigns?—I cannot say. It is my impression he gave me a cheque for 50*l.* first, and the remainder afterwards.

22,399. How much did he give you altogether?—59*l.* I received nothing for my services although he said I ought to be paid. He named a sum, but he never gave it me. I never asked for it once, neither did I request it.

22,400. Can you recollect now who the cheque was drawn upon?—Himself, if it was a cheque at all. It is my impression it was a cheque for 50*l.* I had to go to him a second time.

22,401. For the other 9*l.*?—For the odd 9*l.*

22,402. Did you get the cheque cashed?—It is my impression I did.

22,403. Where did you go to?—To one of the banks. I have since named it to him, and he says he never gave me a cheque.

22,404. Where did he give it you, on what bank?—I cannot say, but my impression is it was Lacon's, but I cannot say. I received the money for it, and he afterwards promised to pay me a sum of money for my services, but I had neither wished it nor asked for it.

22,405. Did you keep an hotel in those days?—Yes, the same house; it is my own property.

22,406. Had you acted in a similar way in the election of 1857?—That is so far back I cannot charge my memory; I think I did still, but it is no use my saying.

22,407. I want to know what made Mr. Chamberlin go to you?—I suppose he was a man that knew I knew parties of this sort that were in the habit of taking money.

22,408. If you were acting so in 1857 it is natural he should come to you?—I cannot charge my memory.

22,409. We do not want to know any of the parties you gave money to?—I have forgotten it. I did take part for many years, a small part.

22,410. Were you aware that in 1857 Mr. Clements was spending money on your side?—No. I knew nothing of him; I did not come in contact with him.

22,411. Mr. Steward has given us the names of several sub-agents?—Mr. Steward and I had no dealings together.

22,412. You had no dealings with Mr. Steward?—No.

22,413. Do you know the names Mr. Steward has given in to us?—No. I do not know further than Mr. Mainprice and Mr. Utting, and that class of people, and Mr. Livingston; I knew him, but that is all I can say. I knew nothing of him, nor yet of the electioneering business.

22,414. Can you tell us of any other person to whom Mr. Chamberlin gave money?—No.

22,415. You never heard?—I never heard. I should think he did not give any person besides myself. I never heard it hinted, or came in contact with anybody.

22,416. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you know who Mr. Chamberlin was acting for at that election?—Watkin and Young.

22,417. (Mr. Slade.) He was acting especially for Mr. Young, was he not?—I should think so.

22,418. And you cannot tell us of any other persons who acted in a similar way to yourself, to whom Mr. Chamberlin gave money?—I do not believe he gave it to any person besides myself.

22,419. That is in 1859 all the money you disbursed at that election?—Yes. That is all I received, and that is all I paid away.

22,420. I may take it generally that you acted in a similar way in 1857?—Yes.

22,421. We do not want to go more into that?—I could not charge my memory as to persons nor yet to the amount.

22,422. Will you tell us, if you please, how it was that you came to change your politics?—I altered my mind. I was an independent man, and I altered my opinion for this reason, I thought it was much better to vote for a townsman than it was for a stranger who came from no one knew where. I thought if anything occurred during the session of Parliament we should see him, and if I voted for a stranger I should never see him again until a fortnight before the election. That is how they use the borough; they come and attend here for a fortnight or three weeks before they want our services, and I thought it better to vote for a townsman who is always here.

22,423. Is the "New Royal Standard" a house supplied by Sir Edmund Lacon with beer?—Yes; and I pay him for what I get. It is a free house.

W. Livingston.

WILLIAM LIVINGSTON recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

22,424. Do you wish to say anything?—Before going into the evidence as to 1859 I should wish to be permitted to make a few observations with respect to the 1865 election.

22,425. What sort of observations?—With regard to the different evidence that has been given before the court, which perhaps I can throw a little light upon.

22,426. If you have anything to say you must confine yourself to the statement of facts. We cannot have a dissertation upon the evidence. Anything in the way of facts we will hear, but we cannot hear any observation on the evidence. That we have to form our own opinion upon. Have you any facts to tell us?—I have a few facts.

22,427. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you mean you wish to make some observations upon evidence that has been given affecting yourself?—Yes.

22,428. (Mr. Slade.) Do you mean to say things have been said affecting your own character?—No, not particularly affecting my character; but I wish to clear myself up before my fellow-townsmen from the impression that has gone abroad, as far as I am concerned.

22,429. Then we cannot hear that, I am sorry to say.—They affect me.

22,430. (Mr. Russell.) You see in an inquiry of this sort there must be a certain amount of annoyance caused, and if those gentlemen who are annoyed come to clear themselves, then there is retaliation the other side, and the inquiry would be endless. The Commissioners will make up their own minds upon credibility before they make their report.—I bow to your decision.

22,431. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Can you correct any facts?—There is one fact respecting the evidence that I do wish to correct, and that is in the evidence of Dr. Stafford.

22,432. Are you going to correct it from your own knowledge?—Yes. From my own knowledge. Dr. Stafford, in the first place, has sworn to you before this court, that he had only one case that he had to do with. Now it has clearly come before the court that three cases have come out.

22,433. Do you know that?—I know it from the evidence.

22,434. We know it in that way?—I will go to what I do know. He said that Mr. Solomons had told him that the Liberal party had offered him 20*l.* I am in a position to bring before the court the widow of Mr. Solomons, who will tell you that Dr. Stafford swore to that which was false.

22,435. You are telling us what another person has said; you can put that on a piece of paper and bring it here?—Very well. I will tell you what I can say myself. He further swore he never sent in for my son. Now, on the Saturday, I am prepared to swear before God and man he did send for him. A young man, his assistant, came in about 3 o'clock on the Saturday afternoon, and asked where my son was. I told him he was getting his dinner. Said he, "The governor wants to see him very particularly." The consequence is my son did not see him until the Saturday evening, and hence the whole of the conversation. That is a fact I will swear to.

22,436. (Mr. Slade.) Were you aware of the letter that Mr. Clowes told us he wrote to Mr. Watkin before the last election, stating he hoped he would explain to Mr. Brogden and Marshman the state of Yarmouth, and the amount of corruption here?—I was aware he wrote to him.

22,437. You are aware he stated that in his letter?—I would not go that length to say what the words were, but I am perfectly aware he did write.

22,438. And if they came to Yarmouth they must be prepared to take it as they found it?—Yes. But I would not go that length to state what he did say, but I am certain he did write, because after I put the affair in the hands of Mr. Clowes I left the whole of the correspondence with him.

22,439. Were you aware that Mr. Clowes had asked Mr. Watkin to explain to the new candidates what the state of Yarmouth was?—No. I would not go that length to say so. I have heard Mr. Clowes state so, but I would not go the length to say I was aware of it. I would not go that length. It might have been, but I would not go the length of stating that I really knew of it.

22,440. You were aware of the corruption in Yarmouth?—Oh yes, of course I was. I do not want to blink that question at all.

22,441. And you gained that knowledge from the two previous elections?—Yes.

22,442. The elections of 1857 and 1859?—Yes, 1857 and 1859.

22,443. And in both those elections Mr. Watkin had been a candidate?—Yes.

22,444. But, as far as the Liberal side goes, you say there was no bribery in the previous election of 1852?—Not a penny; that I am prepared to swear, because I put it as strong as any man could do to Sir Charles Napier, and he would not allow it to be done on any consideration.

22,445. The election of 1857 you told us before cost Mr. Watkin 800*l.*?—That has only recently come to my knowledge, on account of my writing to Mr. Clowes, and I do not know whether he was alluding to the election of 1857 or 1859.

22,446. This is what you said before, talking of the election of 1857: "I heard the whole expenditure he was at was 800*l.*?"—Yes, I did so. I heard that from John Clowes, who had a letter a day or two before I heard it.

22,447. Did you intend by that the whole expenditure on Mr. Watkin's side, or Mr. Watkin's portion of the expenses?—I should take it the portion of the expenses; but I do not know whether he is alluding to 1857 or the 1859 election.

22,448. When you said so it was 1857?—I must beg to correct that, because I cannot say whether it was 1857 or 1859 he was alluding to. My impression is that Mr. Watkin nor Mr. McCullagh at that election were cognizant of a single farthing being spent, and I will give you a very good reason for my opinion.

22,449. There was only one election when the story of the oyster barrels were rife?—That is the one he is alluding to.

22,450. That is the 1857 one?—Yes, that is the 1857 one. I believe that is all a fallacy.

22,451. That is the election at which you say only 800*l.* was spent, the oyster barrel election?—Yes.

22,452. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) It could not have been the election of 1859, because you could not have heard Mr. Watkin at that election only spent 800*l.*, when we have it in evidence from one of his agents that he spent 1,400*l.*?—That is from one of his agents.

22,453. It is shown it came directly from Mr. Watkin?—In 1859.

22,454. It could not have been that election?—It may be perhaps mixed up in this way, the election he was alluding to in the letter he sent to Mr. Clowes might be the 1859 election.

22,455. How could he have only spent 800*l.* at that election?—I am only telling you what he wrote to John Clowes, and whether he was alluding to the 1859 or 1857 I am not aware of.

22,456. It is plain he could not have alluded to the 1859 election?—It must have been the 1857 then.

22,457. (Mr. Slade.) It is 1857 if 1857 is the one at which they brought down the oyster barrels?—Then it must be that he was alluding to.

22,458. Then you say the whole expenditure Mr. Watkin was at was 800*l.*?—Yes.

22,459. By that you mean his share of the expenses?—Yes, I should gather that.

22,460. Do you consider that his colleague spent another 800*l.*?—No, I do not; certainly not.

22,461. I understood it, when you said it before, 800*l.* was the whole expense of the two, and I think you wished us to understand it too?—At the same time.

22,462. You do not say that now?—I cannot go to say whether it included the whole, or whether it included a portion of it. If he says so I do not believe it did include the whole of the 1859 election.

22,463. Mr. Steward has told us in 1857 he himself received 1,600*l.* to spend?—I never heard him give his evidence, but I think Mr. Steward must be confounding the two elections. You must make the allowance for this. We have no tutoring. We have only our own tales to go by.

22,464. I will tell you why he has not. I took him very carefully over the items of the election of 1859, and for that he received 1,600*l.*, and accounts were supplied to 1,420*l.* There can be no mistake, because having gone through that election I took him back to the election of 1857, and at that election he says he got between 1,500*l.* and 1,600*l.*?—Yes, I heard him say so.

22,465. How is that confounding the two?—I think it is possible he is.

22,466. You think so?—Yes. I believe it, and I will tell you why. Mr. McCullagh at that time, I know well, did not spend illegally a single penny, and Mr. Watkin, I am prepared to state, had nothing of the sort, or knew nothing of the sort.

22,467. Where did Mr. Steward get the money from?—That I cannot tell. I was not aware of a single penny being spent during the whole of the election of 1857.

22,468. That is only mere hearsay, because you cannot tell what Mr. Watkin spent?—Certainly not; but I believe Mr. Watkin did not spend a single penny.

22,469. We know he did?—You know it was spent, but whether he spent it I have my doubts.

22,470. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You will be present, no doubt, when Mr. Watkin is examined, and you will then know the truth?—I say, so far as Mr. McCullagh is concerned, the thing that makes me so confident is this: I know that Jimmy Chapman, a strong partisan at that election, advanced money out of his own pocket, and I believe that he has been unfortunate since, and I do not believe he ever got a penny from that time to this.

22,471. Who is that?—James Chapman.

22,472. Who is he?—A draper in this town.

22,473. Is he alive now?—He lives in London.

22,474. Where?—I do not know where he lives. He was here last Sunday, but I did not see him. That is the reason that I came to this conclusion, that there was neither of the candidates aware of a single penny being spent, because it is not longer ago than two or three years that James Chapman told me himself, and complained bitterly of the conduct of Mr. McCullagh in treating him since he has been unfortunate, on account of what he did for him at that election. He told me about two or three years ago.

22,475. (Mr. Slade.) How much money did Mr. Mainprice give to you previous to the election of 1859?—There again we must clash. I do not believe I got any money from Mainprice at all. It will come to the same thing in the long run. I got it, but it is my impression I got it from Mr. Young himself and not from Mainprice. However, it amounts to the same thing, if Mr. Mainprice got it from Mr. Young, Mr. Mainprice is under the impression he gave it to me.

22,476. How many cheques did you get?—I got

TWENTY-SIXTH DAY.

two. There can be no mistake about it, because the thing is as clear as sunshine. On the 10th of April I got a cheque for 200*l.*, and on the 29th of April I got a cheque for 120*l.* That was all that I had.

22,477. 320*l.*?—320*l.*, which I got.

22,478. Where did you get those cheques cashed?—At the National Provincial Bank.

22,479. In Yarmouth?—Yes, the bank where I do business.

22,480. Payable to bearer?—I cannot say, but I suppose it was.

22,481. At all events you got them cashed?—Yes, immediately.

22,482. What did you do with that 320*l.*?—I took it to Mr. Steward as soon as ever I got it, direct from the bank to Mr. Steward.

22,483. In gold?—No, I think I took it in notes. I rather think I did. I am almost certain I did, because I recollect going early in the morning of the election, on the 29th, rather before the bank was open, and there was a little difficulty in getting the safe open.

22,484. How long before the election would this have been?—The day before the election, or this was the election morning.

22,485. What did you say to Mr. Steward when you gave him this money?—I told him exactly what there was, and left it.

22,486. Did you tell him he was to spend it?—I did not tell him anything. He knew what to do with it without my telling him. There was no secret between him and me on that head.

22,487. It was well understood what the money was for?—Oh yes, of course; and Mr. Mainprice is quite right about the other cheques. He had other cheques that he destroyed afterwards, but I should say about an hour after that, about 10 o'clock, when he found the election was gone. I think I was present when he burnt them.

22,488. He has told us of that?—Yes, he has.

22,489. Had you asked Mr. Young for this money?—No, I do not think I did. I think word came from Mr. Steward that he wanted more money.

22,490. To you?—I think it was.

22,491. Were you aware that Mr. Steward had had money previous to that?—Oh yes.

22,492. Had you taken him money before that?—No.

22,493. Who had, do you know?—I do not know. I was not aware of it. I never knew anything at all of it until Mr. Mainprice spoke of it the other day.

22,494. You must have been aware of it, because he said he wanted more money?—How the money came—how he got any money? It might have been all paid for aught I know in the same sort of way that I gave it to him, by cheque.

22,495. You knew that Mr. Steward had money for election purposes?—Yes, but how he got it, that is what I allude to. How he got it I could not tell. It might have been in the same way as I gave it him, by cheques.

22,496. Who do you suppose would have given him a cheque?—He might have got it from Mr. Young, the same as I did.

22,497. Oh no?—When I say that, I was not aware that Mr. Mainprice or Mr. Anybody else had carried him the money, or how he came by it, but I knew he had it.

22,498. You do not suppose Mr. Steward would have gone direct to Mr. Young for the money?—Oh no.

22,499. There must have been a go-between?—There must have been a go-between, but I was not aware who the go-between was, with the exception of myself and Mr. Mainprice.

22,500. Then I suppose your idea was this—Mr. Steward had had money, and you had not given it to him; he had it from Mr. Mainprice?—I thought so afterwards.

22,501. I mean at the time?—No, just at that time; but I found afterwards that Mr. Mainprice had cheques from Mr. Young, and I thought in all probability it came from the same source; but I was not aware of the gold being put in his pocket. That is what I allude to at the "Star," and him carrying it home for the purpose. I never knew anything about that.

22,502. That does not so much matter how it was done. At all events you knew Mr. Steward had the money?—Yes, from some source.

22,503. And you had a very shrewd suspicion that it had come from Mr. Mainprice?—Yes, I had.

22,504. How much money was spent in 1859 on your side?—I never could come at the sum, but that is pretty well what I judge to be it, what Mr. Mainprice told you, from 1,600*l.* to 1,800*l.* I never knew till Mr. Mainprice and Mr. Steward gave their evidence here.

22,505. Mr. Mainprice says the sum was under 2,000*l.*?—Yes.

22,506. It all passed through his hands?—It all passed through his hands.

22,507. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) When you got these cheques from Mr. Young who was in the room?—There was nobody in the room. It was at Mr. Mainprice's that I got them.

22,508. What day was this before the election?—Just the day before; the 27th, and the election was the 29th. One cheque was on the 28th and the other was on the 29th.

22,509. (Mr. Slade.) Were you aware of Mr. Chamberlin having spent any money at that election?—Yes, I was; and since Mr. Johnson here has refreshed my memory it has come quite fresh to it. There was some peculiar case I knew about Mr. Chamberlin having to do with it, because I think he was poaching on one of the three B's I recollect.

22,510. I will not ask you that, but will you tell us how much money Mr. Chamberlin had?—I am not aware how much he had, but I have no doubt he was mixed up with it; at least I am satisfied he was now after the evidence; but I had a confused idea whether it was 1857 or 1859, but I believe it was 1859.

22,511. Mr. Johnson says 1859?—I believe it was.

22,512. Was Mr. Chamberlin Mr. Young's solicitor at that time?—He was.

22,513. And his agent?—And his agent; at least I will not be positive about that, but I know he was appointed agent at the election when there was no contest, and I think he was then as well.

22,514. Were there any other gentlemen you heard of who were spending money at that time?—I have got them all down here.

22,515. I mean on the Liberal side?—I will give you the Liberal side, and I will give you the Tory side afterwards.

22,516. Do so?—Christopher Steward. I knew he was the principal, but before I go any further I think Mr. Steward is confounding still, because Mr. Spillings had something to do with 1857.

22,517. Take 1859?—John Eagleton.

22,518. John Eagleton has been given by Mr. Steward?—I will give them again—George Clements, Henry Greenhow, and I think Robert Scott had something to do with that election, but I will not be positive.

22,519. Who is Robert Scott?—He lived on the Jetty Road. I think he had something to do with it. I think he was mixed up with Mr. Clements. They were very much together I know, and I think it is very likely they were; and Thomas Booth Edwards, him you have got; and William King, the gardener, you have had him to-day; and William Newman, you have got him, and Benjamin Bayes. I think Mr. Steward gave him.

22,520. He has not been given?—I think he had something to do with it. George King and Mr. Reynolds of Gorleston; and James Ling, you have got him, and John Barker I think you have got, and Mr. Steward gave him. He was a man that generally looked after all that we considered the legal work.

22,521. The legal work?—Yes, paying all the lightmen that came ashore, and looking after them; the same as you had here this morning.

22,522. The naval men?—The men that came from the floating lights; he had to look after them. That is the only work Mr. Barker had to do with. That is all that I recollect as having anything to do with the 1859 election on our side.

22,523. (Mr. Russell.) Who did the main of the work in Gorleston?—I believe Mr. Reynolds, Mr. King, and Mr. Greenhow did.

22,524. Was there not a man named William Thomas Clark?—I do not think he did anything of the sort. He was alive then, and had a deal of influence among the Gorleston people, but I do not think he was mixed up with paying money.

22,525. Have you never heard that he was?—No.

22,526. (Mr. Slade.) Was Mr. Ling a Gorleston man?—Yes; that is all that I know of.

22,527. (Mr. Russell.) Should you be surprised to hear that Henry Thomas Clark had taken a very active part in buying votes at Gorleston?—Yes, that I should. I know very well he took a very active part, but I should say he would not be a man that would do anything of the sort. He would get other people to do it.

22,528. Activity is of very little use in Gorleston without money?—Very little. What I mean by that is, I do not think he would do it himself. He might get other parties to do it.

22,529. Might he have received money and given it to others?—I have never heard of it. Mr. Steward will be more likely to tell you, but I am not aware of it. I never heard of it myself.

22,530. (Mr. Slade): You have some more names to give us?—Only on the other side.

22,531. You gave, I understand, all the money you got for those cheques to Mr. Steward?—I did.

22,532. Did you make any illegal payments yourself at that election?—Not one. I steered clear, for I kept a little way off the breakers, for I did not touch one of them.

22,533. Now give us the names?—The first I give you is Sir E. T. Lacon.

22,534. That is a very good name.—He is a very good man, and, however incredulous it may appear, from information I got from the man he bribed, that was Fayerman, both before the election and after the election, and what I got from other sources about the transaction, I am as satisfied in my own mind that that man was bribed by Sir Edmund Lacon as I am of standing in this box.

22,535. Were the jury satisfied?—They were. The jury did believe Fayerman, and did not believe Sir Edmund Lacon; but not so in the House of Commons, because I think we were regularly let down by our counsel, Mr. Phinn.

22,536. You say he bribed Fayerman?—I do.

22,537. Is that the only case?—That is the only case that came prominently before me. That is my impression. If he was to come here, and swear until he was black in the face, it would not alter me.

22,538. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) That is your opinion?—That is my opinion.

22,539. (Mr. Slade.) The next one?—Isaac Shuckford; that is acknowledged. William Beales, Thomas Downing, John Cooper, J. T. Buston, junior, Benjamin Powell, Benjamin Lane, Harris Wilshack, and William Spilling. They were strongly impressed with the idea that Sir Edmund Lacon went and made it right along with him, and I think he had something to do with the election on the other side in 1859.

22,540. Is Spilling alive?—Yes.

22,541. Is he a voter?—Yes; he is on both the Yarmouth and Gorleston list too. J. T. Savage, Edward Leggett, James Bunn, J. G. Rivett, and William Green. They are both dead; and Dumbleton and Harmer, but Harmer has come up and denied having anything to do with it, and if that is correct I will say he is a very useless man to have anything to do with, because I will be bound to say he wore off a couple of pair of shoes at that election down at Gorleston; and I have got another one here, William Collett Reynolds, that is the legal agent. There is a man that Sir Edmund Lacon himself called upon, a Liberal voter, and after not making an impression upon his mind, he told him to his face he would send his landlord. He was Mr. Reynolds. Mr. Reynolds called upon him, and he could make no impression upon him, and then he told him he would send Mr. Buston to him, which he did. He sent Mr. Buston to him to try and bribe him.

22,542. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) What is the name of the voter?—Thomas Robert Barber, who lives in Church Plain.

22,543. (Mr. Slade.) Are you talking of the election of 1859 or 1865?—1859 that is. Mr. Reynolds, if he likes, can give you a good deal of information how the money came. I believe he was supplied with about 4,000*l.* from Sir Henry Stracey, and he can tell you how that money came, and if he does not, very likely I may supply you with that information.

22,544. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you say Mr. Reynolds bribed Barber?—No; attempted.

22,545. By sending Mr. Buston to him?—Attempted only.

22,546. You mean to say he sent Mr. Buston to try?—Yes.

22,547. Do you know how Mr. Barber voted at that election?—Yes; he voted for the Liberals.

22,548. (Mr. Slade.) Did you get any money from Mr. Watkin?—In 1859?

22,549. At the same time you got this money from Mr. Young?—No, not a penny; not a sixpence. That was all the money that passed through my hands, those two sums that I have named, either directly or indirectly.

22,550. To whom did Mr. Watkin send his money?—I do not know; I cannot tell.

22,551. Mr. Young only sent money to you and Mr. Mainprice?—That is all that I am aware of. I should think no one else, unless Mr. Chamberlain; that I cannot say.

22,552. Do you know whether Mr. Watkin sent any money to Mr. Mainprice?—I do not know.

22,553. Mr. Watkin was a man of great wealth, was he not, or supposed to be?—Yes, I should think he is, and as nice a fellow as ever stepped in shoe-leather.

22,554. Do you mean nice in giving money away?—No, I do not; I mean in every respect.

22,555. He did pay pretty handsomely, did he not, for his seat here?—So far as has come out, it is not so very expensive. This last election has doubled the whole of it. This was the most foolish thing that ever was done by any man or body of men. I will be bound to say that eight out of ten of every voters that come up here would have voted without being paid a single penny. The money was completely fooled away.

22,556. When did you hear that story of Mr. Mainprice having those parcels of money put into his pocket?—Never, until this Commission had been opened.

22,557. When he stated it in that box?—Yes. I never knew a word about it before.

22,558. You never heard any rumour of that sort?—Never, not one; and about his being sent for up to the "Star," I daresay I was there at the same time, but I know nothing about it. When he was sent for, and got this money, I have no doubt I was in the house at the time, but I have no recollection of it.

22,559. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you occupy the same position here in 1857 that you did in 1859 and 1865 with reference to the registration?—Yes.

22,560. Was there any great change, in your opinion, between the state of the register in 1859 from what it had been in 1857?—Yes. I think I was very much surprised.

22,561. Although Mr. Watkin and Mr. McCullagh were successful in 1857, you are of opinion the register was still more favourable to them in 1859?—There would not be a great deal of difference. I thought you were alluding to the 1865 one.

TWENTY-SIXTH DAY.

W. Livingston.

5 Oct. 1866.

22,562. No.—There could not be a great deal of difference.

22,563. You told us before there was an enormous change between 1859 and 1865?—Yes. I thought you were alluding to that.

22,564. Between 1857 and 1859?—There could not be a great deal of alteration.

22,565. When did Mr. Watkin first come down to canvass in 1859; how long before the election?—I should say a month or six weeks before the election. I think we had a pretty long canvass, if I recollect right.

22,566. Did Mr. Watkin and Mr. Young both come down together?—Yes.

22,567. Did you attend them on the canvass?—I did.

22,568. During the whole time?—I did.

22,569. At the end of your canvass which party was, in your opinion, in the majority on the canvass?—I did not keep such a strict account then as I did the last election, because we had Mr. Mainprice, and I think it was Mr. Cobb jointly.

22,570. Mr. Mainprice has told us he kept the book?—Yes. I did not keep one then.

22,571. I suppose you, as a leading member of the party, were made acquainted with the result of the canvass?—We were all led to believe that it was very satisfactory; but I had not of my own knowledge so much acquaintance with the state of the register then as on the last occasion, as I did not keep the register myself.

22,572. When before the election did you first hear of any idea, or was anything mentioned on the subject of the necessity of resorting to bribery?—I should say it was very shortly before the election; I should say not a week.

22,573. Do you recollect how it first arose?—No, I do not recollect how it first arose.

22,574. Do you recollect why it arose?—No doubt in the same way as it did the last election. There were so many men that would not promise, that they would either have to be bought or else to allow them to go to the other side.

22,575. When did you first hear the other party were resorting to it?—Well, they were at it before us. We were too late in the field.

22,576. Too late in the field on that occasion as you were on this last?—Yes.

22,577. What reason had you to suppose that the other party were going to spend money in 1859 when they had spent none in 1857?—I knew they had spent money in 1857.

22,578. You cannot know that?—I do. When I say I do, I believe they did, from the information I got from various parties.

22,579. Although they were defeated? — Yes, although they were defeated. They had got a very unpopular man with them in the shape of Mr. Vereker. He and Sir Edmund Lacon were two complete noodles together, and they did not expect to have a chance.

22,580. We have it in evidence, and I believe the Commissioners believe at present, that no money was spent?—I believe there was, but not so much of it.

22,581. What reason had you to suppose the Conservatives were going to spend money in 1859?—Because it was reported that Sir Henry Stracey was determined to spend money, that he would get in. That was a well known fact among the whole of us, that he was prepared to expend a large outlay, and I believe he did spend 4,000*l.*, and I believe Sir Edmund Lacon, at least from what I have heard, spent an equal amount, only he made a sort of set-off with the three B's; arranged all of them at about 15*l.* or 20*l.* apiece.

22,582. When was it first resolved upon by your side to spend money in bribery?—In 1859?

22,583. In 1859?—I should say about a week before the election; not more than that.

22,584. The election took place on the Friday?—I should say somewhere about the Monday.

22,585. Were you present at any meeting?—Where it was resolved upon?

22,586. Where it was discussed?—No, I was not.

22,587. Were you surprised when the money was given to you?—No. I had heard of it before then, that other people were doing so. I knew it, not only heard it, but I knew it. I knew Mr. Eagleton; he and I were very intimate at the time, and I knew he was doing it, so it did not surprise me at all.

22,588. That is in the week you knew he was doing it?—Yes.

22,589. (Mr. Russell.) Do you remember how your canvass book stood when you got the 320*l.* from Mr. Young?—No, I do not, but you have a full account of it there. Mr. Mainprice has given an account of how it stood.

22,590. Did you tell Mr. Young that he was too late?—No, I did not. Do you mean when I got the money, or before then?

22,591. When you got the money?—No; I was not aware of that myself at the time, or I certainly should not have taken the money to Mr. Steward if I had known it.

22,592. How is it that your party has always contrived to be too late?—I did not think so much about that affair in 1859 as I did about the last. We completely lost the last one; 1859 I did not care so much about, because I knew the other party were prepared to spend a lot of money.

22,593. There is no doubt bribery began first on the other side at the last election?—Yes.

22,594. Are you of opinion that bribery began first on the other side at the election in 1859?—Yes.

22,595. Do you know that?—Only from hearsay.

22,596. You were not aware of any party being bribed by the other party before you took the 320*l.*?—No; I would not go that length, only from hearsay.

22,597. Do you know what was the amount of the cheques that Mr. Mainprice destroyed?—I will not say.

22,598. When were they destroyed?—I should say between 10 and 11 o'clock.

22,599. The morning of the election?—The morning of the election; this last election. What makes me think more about it than I did about the 1859 was, that if we had not tinkered away and lost our time so much, if we had only started about the Thursday or Friday, I will be bound to say, if I had had Jones at my elbow then we should have succeeded. After Mr. Marshman made up his mind to withdraw we were of course at a standstill, and it got rumoured about the town that there was something amiss. I told Tom Edwards, "For appearance sake, let us take a walk "round the town, and see what the 'won't' promises "do want;" and I went from north to south and east to west, and took them indiscriminately, and put the question. Then on the Thursday or the Friday, when Mr. Brogden was out of the way, the thing was all open then, and if Mr. Jones had been ready then we might have got in and won the election easy for a couple of thousand.

22,600. Mr. Jones came prepared with 6,000*l.*, and all that amounts to is that 6,000*l.* was beaten by 4,000*l.*?—If we had spent 20,000*l.* it would have been just the same in fact. As soon as it came to my knowledge, which I heard the Tuesday afternoon, I mentioned it to Mr. Brogden. There was a party who called upon me at the "Angel," of the name of Teasdel. You have his name down, and he wanted 15*l.* I looked round and said, "You have promised us already to support us," and he said, "I know I have, and I mean to stick to my promise;" but he called my attention to somebody else who had got money, who was in the same predicament as he was, and he said, "It will benefit "me as much as him, and if you can give me a turn, "too, I shall be obliged to you;" and he went away with that impression. After that I called Mr. Brogden's attention to it in as delicate a way as I could, and if that was the case I said they might as well open the register, and pay every man as he came.

22,601. Do I understand you tried to stop the payment of the illegal money?—No. It was pretty well up then, on Tuesday, when it came to my knowledge they had been paying the good men.

22,602. When did you arrive at the conclusion that you were too late in the market?—Not till the Tuesday night, not individually.

22,603. You mentioned it to Mr. Brogden?—No; I did not say anything more to Mr. Brogden after that. I would not interfere with it as long as they made up their minds to go on. I would not take it on myself.

22,604. What did Mr. Brogden say when you delicately hinted it to him?—I do not think he made any remark at the time.

22,605. That was on the Tuesday?—Yes.

22,606. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you recollect the case of the light-ship man examined this morning, Cotton?—Yes, I recollect that.

22,607. Do you recollect his coming and asking for 3*l.*?—That is Robinson you mean?

22,608. That is the man I mean. I mean the man who got the 15*l.* from Cattermoles, and afterwards came to the "Angel," where you were?—I do not recollect him, but I have no doubt he came and got the 3*l.* for his expenses; and not knowing he got the 15*l.* at the "Army and Navy," I have no doubt Mr. Edwards paid him.

TWENTY-SIXTH DAY.

W. Livingston.

5 Oct. 1866.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning at half-past 10 o'clock.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 6th October 1866.

S. Aldred.

6 Oct. 1866.

SAMUEL ALDRED sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

22,609. What are you?—I am an auctioneer.

22,610. I suppose you have come here concerning a statement made by a man named Thomas Barber, who says you offered him, at different times, sums beginning at 10*l.* and going up to 25*l.*?—That is not true.

22,611. Did you ever canvass Thomas Barber?—The fact is this, I am the agent for the house in which he lives, and I went in and asked him about his vote. I found he wanted money, and money was the subject of conversation, but I never offered him any money at all. I had no authority at all to do so.

22,612. When you say money was the subject of conversation, do you mean he intimated he wanted money?—Yes.

22,613. But did you in any way lead him to believe he would have it?—Not at all.

G. Reynolds.

GEORGE REYNOLDS sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

22,614. Are you the postmaster at Gorleston?—Yes.

22,615. Therefore, you are not on the register of persons entitled to vote?—No.

22,616. Did you take any part in the election of 1865?—No, not in any way.

22,617. Were you on the register of voters at the election of 1859?—Yes.

22,618. Whom did you vote for at that election?—Young and Watkin.

22,619. We understand from Mr. Steward that he gave you a sum of money to disburse at that election?—Yes; here is my account. He gave me 210*l.*

22,620. What list is that which you have in your hand?—This is a paper that I drew out at the time of the only amount that I had of the disbursements.

22,621. A paper that you drew up at the time?—Yes.

22,622. And you have kept it ever since?—I have kept it ever since. But this is only the account of expenses. I did not bribe myself. There was a man brought from Grimsby, of the name of Rundle—Henry Rundle.

22,623. I do not understand what that paper is. Is that a list of the men who received money?—No. It is the expenses, the amount of money that I spent.

22,624. Did this man, Henry Rundle, come to you from Grimsby?—A letter was sent by express mail for him.

22,625. Who sent for him?—It was done through Mr. Watkin at my request.

22,626. Had Henry Rundle been engaged in similar practices in the election of 1857?—Yes.

22,627. Where is Rundle now?—He is dead.

22,628. You know that?—Oh yes. I got a ticket sent me, at least a funeral card, some time ago. I could have brought it with me if I had thought it necessary.

22,629. You know he is dead?—Yes.

22,630. Is this the account of the 210*l.* which you gave in to Mr. Steward?—It is.

22,631. Be good enough to read it out?—"For direct purposes, received 194*l.*" "Paid Bullen to Rykoofe, 5*s.*" That is a man that lives in Gorleston, and he went and voted Tory. Then "Paid Curson to Wheeler, 10*s.*" He voted Tory afterwards. "Clay, junior, to keep his father." He received 15*l.* or 16*l.*, which I have a list of in the money given, but I did not give it. I gave this man 10*s.* to watch his father, because he was in the habit of getting drunk. Then Rundle had 2*l.*, for his expenses living here. Then "Blyth's expenses 10*s.*" That is a man to run about for us; and George King had 1*l.* 15*s.* 0*d.* He is one of the men that did give bribes, with his uncle. Then "Refreshments to men on the nomination day," about a pound. I spent that while the men were about here; and my personal expenses travelling about. The lowest I could put it down was 3*l.* In the election of 1857 I spent my own money, and I did not feel disposed to do it this time. I reluctantly took it in hand, being asked by a gentleman of the name of Mainprice. He pressed me about it, but I was never paid one farthing. I paid to Blyth afterwards, for services rendered, running about, 2*l.*, and 12 days grog, at 5*s.* a day. And then a young man of the name of Morse 10*s.*; and the amount actually spent in the act of bribery was 194*l.* out of the 210*l.* Then I had 1*l.* left in hand, and Rundle returned to me 4*l.* of some money which he had, who from I now forget. It was for a man of the name of Kitton, who, I believe, was obliged to vote for the Tories on account of the power placed upon him by Mr. Bell. Rundle had the 4*l.* I had the 4*l.* in my house for some months. Rundle was taken ill at Grimsby, and it was suggested by Mr. Clarke that that should be sent to Rundle, and that 5*l.* was sent to him by Mr. Clarke, not by me; that 4*l.* that he returned, and the 1*l.* I held in hand, that was sent to Rundle during his illness, at the suggestion of Mr. Clarke.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

G. Reynolds.

6 Oct. 1866.

22,632. Did you ever get from Mr. Rundle, an account of how the 194*l.* was spent?—No; only I have my idea of it. I have drawn out a list as far as in me lies to recollect.

22,633. Did you have any conversation with Rundle as to how he spent this money?—At various times.

22,634. What have you in your hand now?—A list of the names that I suppose had the money. I cannot recollect more, but I have done all I can to recollect them.

22,635. Read out those names?—Richard Annison, 12*l.*

22,636. Are these chiefly Gorleston men?—They are all Gorleston men; I am wrong in the name. I think it is Robert Annison. He keeps the "Rising Sun." He has been here.

22,637. How much?—12*l.*; Joseph Ballard, 5*l.*; Thomas Clay, 15*l.*

22,638. (Mr. Russell.) As you go along will you mention any man that may be dead?—That man is dead.

22,639. (Mr. Slade.) How much did you say he had?—15*l.* I only judge of this.

22,641. He is not on the register now?—No.

22,642. John Durrant?—15*l.* I beg to call attention to this, if I am not out of place; that 10*l.* out of this 15*l.* was given by Mr. Greenhow. This was the 10*l.* which was disputed here, which you wished him to remember whether he gave the money or not. These three men, George Nelson, John Durrant, and Charles Veale, followed me, and when I got the money from Mr. Steward they each received 10*l.* from me as part of what they had. I did not make the bargain, and Mr. Greenhow did here in Yarmouth; but part of it was not mine.

22,643. What did Durrant have?—He had 1*l.* altogether; but 10*l.* was given him by Mr. Greenhow.

22,644. Then the other is Veale?—Charles Veale is 20*l.* He had 10*l.* in Yarmouth. He had 5*l.* given him by Rundle or George King; and on the morning of the election he would not go up and vote without receiving 6*l.* further; and I have every reason to believe he took 25*l.* from the Tories, for I found when he went up to vote they looked very glum at him at the time, and he rapped his hand on the board, and said, "That is my principle."

22,645. How much did you give him?—I gave him 5*l.* myself.

22,646. Veale told us that in 1859 he got 15*l.* from Greenhow and George King?—Yes; but I gave the money to John Durrant, if you ask John Durrant. I have seen him this morning, and he is prepared to swear he gave him the 5*l.* I gave it to John Durrant. He brought the man to me.

22,647. The next?—Charles Woods, junior, 12*l.*; but I am not sure of it; I believe so.

22,648. He is not on the register now?—No. Then there is a Bensley. He lives in Southtown I think.

22,649. Joseph Bensley?—Yes. He received some money from some man here in Yarmouth; I forget his name now, a baker he had been; Eagleton it was. He paid him 8*l.* or 5*l.*, I do not know what it was; but afterwards he came to me and said he was not satisfied, and I gave him 2*l.* more,

22,650. Joseph Bensley says, in 1859 he got 5*l.* from Eagleton, and 2*l.* from you?—That is right; I do not know what he got from Eagleton myself.

22,651. Have you omitted any name?—Yes, Charles Todd; he is dead.

22,652. How much?—13*l.* That is only as my judgment leads me at the time.

22,653. Are there any other names?—No. There are about 25*l.* I cannot give an account of.

22,654. What does that amount to?—That is, with the 25*l.*, putting that to it, you make that come to the 194*l.*; but the other I cannot tax my memory at all with at this time. I would be very glad to do so if I could. I have used every exertion to find out.

22,655. How many names have you given us?—Fourteen. I wish it to be be understood I was not postmaster at the time.

22,656. Who got you you post as postmaster?—That was done through the instrumentality of Mr. Henry Danby Palmer. He is dead now.

22,657. (Mr. Russell.) When were you appointed postmaster?—I commenced in October 1859.

22,658. Very shortly after the election?—I hardly remember the time the election took place; I know it was some time the same summer.

22,659. Did Mr. Watkin interest himself to obtain the place?—He did; and Mr. Young too.

22,660. (Mr. Slade.) As regards Charles Veale, did the 20*l.* all come from you?—Yes. As soon as I left Mr. Steward with part of the money I came on to the Quay, and there I found these men. Not being desirous of placing myself in their hands, I had a friend, George King, with me, and he took me to Mr. Greenhow, and he gave them 10*l.* each. They afterwards received 5*l.* each from George King, which I believe is right; and on the morning of the election Durrant brought Veale to me, and he said he would not vote without 5*l.* further, and I gave it him.

22,661. Then the 20*l.* he got all came out of Mr. Steward's money?—Yes.

22,662. Can you give us any information about the election of 1859?—No; I had to do with it in 1857.

22,663. We will come to that afterwards. Then the only sub-agent that you gave money to was Henry Rundle?—No, Henry Rundle and George King; but George King received it through his uncle, so that George King and Rundle together I gave the money to. I cannot say how much at this time, but they each of them had money. I gave one man, independent of them, of the name of Blyth; he carried the 12*l.* to Denton, but he has no vote.

22,664. What is his christian name?—Benjamin Blyth.

22,665. You gave Benjamin Blyth 12*l.* for what Denton?—The Denton you have in the list.

22,666. Samuel Denton?—Yes.

22,667. Samuel Denton says in 1859 he got 12*l.* from a stranger; Benjamin Blyth would not be a stranger to him?—No; that is the man.

22,668. Did you employ anybody else to take money to voters?—No. There is a remark on Annison's evidence before the Commissioners that James Ling gave him the money. He was with me, and I handed the money to Ling, and Ling gave it to Annison. Robert Annison, in his evidence before the Commissioners, said Ling gave him the money. That was in my presence.

22,669. He said, in 1859, he got 15*l.* from Ling and Reynolds?—That is right.

22,670. What are the real facts?—That is the fact, that is true.

22,671. You were present?—I was present.

22,672. (Mr. Russell.) I want to understand your account. You received 210*l.*?—Yes.

22,673. Then you expended, you say, for direct purposes, 194*l.*?—Yes.

22,674. You spent indirectly 15*l.*, and you had a balance in hand of 1*l.*?—Yes.

22,675. That makes the 210*l.*?—No; I had only 210*l.* from the commencement.

22,676. That is quite right. You spent 194*l.* in direct bribery?—Yes.

22,677. And 15*l.* indirectly?—My expenses in various ways.

22,678. And 1*l.* balance you retained?—Yes.

22,679. Those three sums added together make up the 210*l.*?—Yes.

22,680. I find, instead of spending 194*l.* in direct expenses, you have accounted for 177*l.*?—Because there is some I cannot remember. I told you so when I first said something like 25*l.*

22,681. The balance unaccounted for is not 25*l.*, but 17*l.*?—This is taken from my memory now, and that is what I entered at that time.

22,682. The exact sum unaccounted for is 17*l.* In fact it is a smaller sum than you imagine?—Is it?

22,683. (Mr. Slade.) You have accounted for all except 17*l.*?—But Mr. Rundle had the money. I do not know how it was put out.

22,684. It is all in your favour?—Yes.

22,685. You have accounted for 8*l.* more than you thought you had?—I was not aware of that. I did it to the best of my judgment.

22,686. What did you spend in the election of 1857?—I received, I do not know whether it was 60*l.* or 70*l.*, it may be 80*l.*, but I am not certain; but I received that from Mr. Spilling. Mr. Spilling and Mr. Steward met me at the "Anson's Arms," with Mr. Rundle, and after going through the list with these two gentlemen—which took the lead I cannot say, I fancy Mr. Spilling—he took me into a back room, and put a certain amount of money upon a chair, and sat me down upon it, and I took it up; and as soon as they were gone I took 5*l.*, and gave it to Mr. Newman, senior, a butcher, and the rest Rundle had.

22,687. We do not wish to hear the names of persons to whom you gave money in the year 1857, but if you can give us generally what sum of money you received, that is all we want to know. You received 60*l.* or 70*l.*?—70*l.* or 80*l.* I never kept any account of it. Mr. Spilling gave me the money.

22,688. Do you know a man named William Thomas Clarke?—Yes.

22,689. Was he engaged in the election of 1859?—He was the gentleman that sent the 5*l.* to Mr. Rundle after he was ill.

22,690. Had he anything to do with bribing voters at that election?—No; he only worked my accounts from day to day, and gave a guarantee to someone in Yarmouth that the money given me should be actually spent for the purpose it was intended.

22,691. To whom did he give the guarantee?—I do not know; to some of the committee in Yarmouth.

22,692. What guarantee do you mean, his word of honour or a written guarantee?—I suppose that was it. I was more of a stranger than some of the men, and there was some one to look up to. He recommended me, but he had nothing to do with the money.

22,693. To whom did he recommend you?—I know nothing about to whom he recommended me. The first election, why I was placed in that situation was, Mr. Clarke was ill, and I had certain Liberal parties come to me to know if I would do what was required of me. I could not say who they were, because it was in 1857. Mr. Mainprice came to me the second time.

22,694. In 1859?—Yes.

22,695. Was a guarantee required?—I do not know. I only heard so. I could not authenticate that much more than I understood he had told some of the gentlemen in Yarmouth, if anything was given into my hands he would guarantee it was carried out. In fact I used to go to him of a night to give him the account of what was done.

22,696. Did Mr. Clarke tell you that himself?—No; I used to go and tell him what I had done.

22,697. But about giving him the guarantee?—No; I only heard that by hearsay.

22,698. Mr. Clarke was a gentleman of some private fortune?—Mr. Clarke was a notary public, with great practice in this place and in Yarmouth.

22,699. Then, in fact, Mr. Clarke audited your accounts?—No, he did not. We merely told him what we had done from time to time. Me and Rundle met there every night after we had done what we could.

22,700. Was Mr. Clarke a magistrate?—Yes.

22,701. And a gentleman of property?—Of great standing. He was son-in-law to Mr. James Rivett, who is dead, that was accused of having so much money on the Conservative side.

22,702. Are you aware of any other person to whom Mr. Spilling gave money in 1857 besides yourself?—No; Mr. Spilling was comparatively a stranger to me at that time. I met him by appointment on the road. Understand that that list that I have given I am not certain of. It is to the best of my knowledge.

22,703. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You said just now that at this election of 1859 Mr. Mainprice came to you?—Yes.

22,704. How long before the election did Mr. Mainprice come?—Some few days.

22,705. Some few days before the election?—Yes.

22,706. What did he say to you?—Merely drove down to know if I would take the part I had hitherto done, and I made great hesitation.

22,707. He asked you if you would take the part you had done before?—Yes.

22,708. Was that in the same week that the election took place?—I cannot say.

22,709. The election was the Friday?—I could not say. It might be a fortnight before, or it might be a week before, but I could not say how long. It must have been some time before, because I sent for Mr. Rundle.

22,710. Did you know what he meant when he asked you to take the same part?—Yes.

22,711. Who came with Mr. Mainprice, anybody?—I do not think anyone.

22,712. He came alone?—I think so.

22,713. (Mr. Russell.) Did Mr. Clarke in 1859 direct you not to interfere with any particular voters?—No; he had nothing to do with it whatever. I am certain of that.

WILLIAM UTTING recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

W. Utting.

22,714. What are you?—A fish merchant.

22,715. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—I voted for the Liberals.

22,716. Brogden and Vanderbyl?—Yes.

22,717. Did you canvass any persons for their votes at the last election?—I am sure I am not able to say now. I told you that before.

22,718. We call you now for the election of 1859. Mr. Steward, I hear, gave you a sum of money?—Yes.

22,719. How much was it?—60*l.*

22,720. What did you do with that money?—I gave it to four voters.

22,721. What were their names?—Robin Brown was one.

22,722. He is not on the register now?—No; he was drowned in the May gale.

22,723. Was he a Gorleston voter?—No, Yarmouth.

22,724. How much did you give him?—I do not know whether it was 10*l.* or 15*l.*; I think it was 10*l.*

22,725. (Mr. Russell.) Do you know where he lived in 1859?—Yes.

22,726. Where?—Down by Lancaster Road.

22,727. There is no such name as Robin Brown in the poll-book of 1859?—I think you will find him.

22,728. There are two Robert Browns, one living in Bath Hill?—That is the one.

22,729. (Mr. Slade.) Who else?—Samuel Goodwin.

22,730. Samuel Goodwin, of the St. George's Road?—Yes.

22,732. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Is he dead?—Yes.

22,733. (Mr. Slade.) Who else?—Robert Green.

22,734. Of Fuller's Hill?—Yes, I think so.

22,735. (Mr. Russell.) Was it Robert Green, of Fuller's Hill, or Robert Green, of Victoria Place?—Robert Green, of Victoria Place.

22,736. (Mr. Slade.) He is not on the register now?—No.

22,737. Who is the other?—A man by the name of Pike, of North Quay. I think he is dead, but I will not be certain.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

W. Utting.

6 Oct. 1866.

22,739. They are all dead?—Yes.

22,740. That makes up the 60*l.*?—Yes.

22,741. Was that all you received?—Yes, to the best of my knowledge. I did not recollect that. If I had not been here, and heard Mr. Steward say it, I should have contradicted it, because it is a long time ago.

22,742. Are you sure you gave all these four dead men this money?—Yes; and I can bring a little proof of it if you like.

22,743. As long as you are sure?—To satisfy you I could bring Mrs. Brown as one.

22,744. Did you do anything of the sort in 1857?—Not to the best of my knowledge.

22,744*a*. Did you receive any money?—No; I do not recollect any. I would not say whether I did or not, for I know I got off for a jolly spree in 1857; so I did this other election; so I would not say whether I did or not.

R. Johnson.

ROBERT JOHNSON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

22,745. Where do you live?—Hall Plain.

22,746. What are you?—A bricklayer.

22,747. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

22,748. How much?—20*l.*

22,749. Who gave it you?—William Johnson.

22,750. William Tobias Johnson?—Yes.

22,751. Is he a relation of yours?—Not that I am aware of.

22,752. For whom did you vote?—Lacon and Goodson.

22,753. Were you offered any money by the other party?—No, I cannot say that I was; I do not recollect.

22,754. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

C. Colwell.

CHARLES COLWELL sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

22,755. What are you?—I never was in trade.

22,756. Do you do nothing?—No, I live on my own resources.

22,757. And have always lived on your own resources?—Not always; I have been in the Government service; I am retired from the Government service.

22,758. What service?—The civil service.

22,759. Who did you vote for at the last election?—The Liberals, I believe; I am not certain whether I voted singly for Mr. Brogden, or whether I voted for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl. I never saw Mr. Vanderbyl, and it is possible I may have voted for Mr. Brogden only.

22,760. You voted for the two, Brogden and Vanderbyl?—I was not certain.

22,761. May I ask you if you received any money at the last election?—Not at the time of the election, nor for my vote, and I had probably better explain to you in as few words as possible the cause of my being brought here. I was in London with reference to a law suit at the time of the election, and some days previous, and while there I received a letter from Mr. Brand, urgently pressing me to come down and give my vote in favour of those for whom I should have voted if I had not been from home, and stating my expenses should be paid. I believe I received a second letter, and also expressing a wish that I should come down the day preceding the election, so as to be at the poll early. I had business matters at the judge's chambers on the day of the election which I should have attended personally, and as it was I had to instruct a solicitor to appear for me. And I came down the day preceding the election, having subsequently to return to London in reference to that matter, but subsequently to the election I was asked what were my expenses. I said, "I do not know to a few shillings, but I think about 3*l.*" And that 3*l.* I was paid, and that is all I know of the election.

22,762. And was that 3*l.* all that you received?—That is all that I have ever received from anybody, directly or indirectly.

22,763. Who paid you that 3*l.*?—I think Mr. Brand. It was either Mr. Brand or Mr. Whiting, I am not quite sure which.

22,764. That was subsequent to the election?—Yes; and of course I considered that it was among the legitimate expenses of the election. I had no notion of its being looked on in any light by which I should have to appear here, certainly not.

22,765. You were not aware whether it was returned as part of the legal expenses of Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl?—I do not know.

22,766. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Were you not aware it was against the law for the parties to pay you, or for you to receive the money?—No, I did not know that; I could not suppose that it was; I thought that the travelling expenses were legitimate, bringing me down against my own will, and my own inconvenience, and at extra cost.

22,767. You might have had your ticket but not your money?—I was not aware of that.

22,768. (Mr. Russell.) Did Mr. Brand, in the letter he wrote, say your expenses would be paid?—Yes.

22,769. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You are not a lawyer?—I am not.

22,770. Did you ever hear of the case of Cooper v. Slade?—No.

22,771. The House of Lords in that case held that it was illegal?—I was not aware of it. I know this, that the money I received did not cover my travelling and incidental expenses; that is all.

22,772. (Mr. Russell.) I have no doubt you acted in ignorance of the law, but the law considers it an illegal payment?—Thank you, I did not know it.

G. Clements.

GEORGE CLEMENTS sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

22,773. Have you any documents?—No; you must take my evidence from memory. I have no documents, and you must take also into consideration my age. I am 74, and my memory is not so good as it was many years ago.

22,774. What are you?—I am nothing at the present time. I have been a tailor. I was a coal agent, and now I am nothing at all.

22,775. Did you vote at the last election?—I have never had a vote.

22,776. Did you take any part at the last election?—No.

22,777. We have been told that you received some money from Mr. Steward at the election of 1859?—I did.

22,778. How much was it?—Approaching to 400*l.*

22,779. What did you receive that money for?—To give to voters.

22,780. How much of that money did you expend in giving to voters?—The whole of it. I gave Mr. Steward a list after I had spent the money, and I had not sufficient; he gave me 10*l.* more afterwards.

22,781. When you say approaching to 400*l.*, can you give us any more definite idea of the sum?—No, I cannot. Perhaps altogether, I think, I received at three different instalments 100*l.* each. This is only from memory; and I think towards the close of it he drew me 50*l.* more, and then I took in my list with that account upon it, and he gave me 10*l.* afterwards for another voter.

22,782. Then you think you received altogether 360*l.*?—That is what my impression is, but I cannot say.

22,783. Can you give us the names of the voters to whom you gave money at that election?—I know some of them, but I cannot recollect the whole. I went through the poll book as well as I could, and I have attended the Commission all the way through the piece, just to ascertain, because I expected to be called upon the 1859 election.

22,784. Give us the names and the sums, as many as you can recollect?—I can recollect some of the sums, because they were exorbitant, but to take the whole I could not say. I know it was from 10*l.* to 25*l.*; but there are some that were exorbitant, which I can recollect perfectly well.

22,785. Tell us those you recollect?—There was Alfred Alexander.

22,786. As you go along tell us, if you please, those voters who are dead since?—I will endeavour to do so.

22,787. As many as you can?—I will.

22,788. How much did Alexander have?—I know that he received 20*l.*; I am perfectly satisfied that he had 20*l.*

22,789. The next?—Benjamin Ashby.

22,790. How much?—I cannot say exactly to that; perhaps it might be 10*l.*, 15*l.*, or 20*l.*, or something like that, but I could not say.

22,791. The next?—William King; he did not vote; I looked at the poll book; but he took the money.

22,792. Is that William King, of Apollo Walk?—Yes.

22,793. How much?—I will tell you, because he was connected with Jeremiah Fransham. William King took 40*l.*

22,794. Do you mean that Fransham and he had 40*l.* between them?—Yes, King took the money.

22,795. Who next?—Henry King, that is the brother of William.

22,796. There are three Henry Kings on the list?—This is in Row, I think, No. 92.

22,797. How much did he get?—I cannot say exactly, my memory is not sufficient as to that. Then Samuel Farman.

22,798. Is he dead?—Yes; I will make a small comment upon that. He received 25*l.* for himself, and 5*l.* he gave afterwards to Charles Dye. Mr. John Child, at Lacon's brewery, gave him 20*l.*, and he came to me and said if I would give him 25*l.* he would return the money and vote for the Liberals.

22,799. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Who is Mr. Child?—He is a clerk in the brewery and the stores.

22,800. Is he alive now?—Yes.

22,801. (Mr. Slade.) Who is the next?—Charles Dye.

22,802. Is he the one in the Caister Road,or Union Place?—In the Caister Road.

22,803. He got 5*l.* from Farman?—He took the 5*l.* from Farman because he was a friend of Farman's, and got the money. So Farman and Dye received 40*l.* altogether.

22,804. Charles Dye says in 1859 he got 10*l.* from Clements?—Yes; and he received 5*l.* for making the arrangement along with Farman extra.

22,805. The next?—James Bland.

22,806. Is he dead?—No, I believe not. He voted on the other side of the question; he received a very small sum, I believe, but what the sum was I cannot say.

22,807. James Bland is on the register now, is he not?—Yes.

22,808. House and stable, Cemetery Road?—

22,809. He has been examined before us, and says he was offered 20*l.* by Neave at the last election, and received nothing?—I had nothing to do with the last election.

22,810. He denied having received anything in the election of 1859?—Then he is wrong in that.

22,811. How much did he get?—I should imagine from what I recollect of it, I know it was a small sum, I think it was about 5*l.*

22,812. (Mr. Russell.) He voted for Lacon and Stracey?—He did afterwards; I think I informed you he voted the other side.

22,813. Did he get 5*l.* from you?—Yes.

22,814. (Mr. Slade.) The next?—John Everson Chestney.

22,815. How much did he get?—I cannot say.

22,816. He acknowledges to 10*l.* from you?—I could not charge my memory with that, one of them. There were a body of them, and I could not do it.

22,817. Go on?—George Gillings.

22,818. How much did he get?—I cannot say.

22,819. He acknowledges to 13*l.*?—Very likely that might be right; I cannot say. Then Noah Laws.

22,820. How much?—That I cannot say.

22,821. He acknowledges to 10*l.* from you?—It might be more; I think it was, but still I cannot recollect it.

22,822. The next?—Joseph Laws, and he voted for Lacon at the time; he took, I think it was, 10*l.* of me.

22,823. He denies anything?—Does he?

22,824. Did he get anything from you?—Yes, he did.

22,825. How much?—I think it was 10*l.*; I am not positive. Then Robert Durrant.

22,826. How much?—I cannot say.

22,827. He says he got 5*l.* from you?—He got more than that; from 5*l.* to 10*l.*, I daresay it was, but he got more than that.

22,828. Who else?—William Porter, carrier.

22,829. How much?—That I cannot say.

22,830. He says he got 10*l.*?—He got more than that.

22,831. Who next?—Robert George, of Southtown.

22,832. How much?—I think, if I be not mistaken, it is 25*l.*

22,833. The next?—Robert Scott. I think that was from 15*l.* to 16*l.*; I am not able to say.

22,834. He is not a Southtown man?—No; he lives in the Rodney Road.

22,835. How much?—Say 15*l.* or 16*l.*; I am sure I am not able to say. Then James Claxton, of George Street.

22,836. James Claxton, junior?—Yes.

22,837. How much?—I will not be positive.

22,838. He acknowledges to 10*l.*?—He might have received 10*l.*, but my impression is that they all received more than 10*l.*

22,839. The next?—William Remlance.

22,840. Is he alive?—That I am not able to say; I think he is dead. Many of them were strangers to me, but still I was employed in that business, and I did it.

22,841. How much?—That I cannot say. William B. Layton; he is dead.

22,843. Who next?—Shearman Bayfield.

22,844. How much?—I cannot say.

22,845. Bayfield says in 1859 he got 7*l.* from Henry King and 8*l.* from Downing?—He received some money from me. Henry King, I believe, did pay him the money, but then he was a friend. This was in 1859 I am speaking of, but I cannot say.

22,846. The next?—Thomas Moyse, of Norfolk Terrace, I think.

22,847. Is he dead?—No.

22,848. He is not on the register?—In 1859 he was.

22,849. But he is not on the register?—Then that must be in 1857.

22,850. I am talking of the register of the present year, the last election. He is not on the register, so I thought he might be dead?—He is not dead.

22,851. How much did you give him?—That I cannot say.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

G. Clements.

6 Oct. 1866.

22,852. Can you tell us where he lives?—He lived upon the Nelson Road.

22,853. (Mr. Russell.) Does he live in Crown Road?—No, in the Nelson Road.

22,854. (Mr. Slade.) The next?—Robert Archbold.

22,855. How much?—That I cannot say.

22,856. He said he had 10*l.* put into his hat?—He had more than that.

22,857. Did you put it into his hat?—I cannot say whether I put it into his hat or into his hand. I cannot say that.

22,858. Do you know how much he got?—No. Samuel Cable, of Gaol Street; he is dead.

22,859. How much?—20*l.* He is dead now; he was an old man.

22,860. What is the next?—George Howlett.

22,861. Is he dead?—Yes, I believe so; I was informed this morning he was dead. I did not know it; he was drowned at sea. He lived in George Street I think.

22,862. How much?—I think it was 15*l.*

22,863. The next?—William Kent, of Gaol Street, baker.

22,864. Is William Kent dead?—Yes.

22,865. How much?—I think his was 16*l.* I think it was. I am not positive as to that. Then George Royall.

22,866. That is the tailor, is it?—Yes.

22,867. Is he dead?—No; he has left the town some time. I do not know where he has gone to.

22,868. How much did he have?—I cannot say; the sums varied so that I could not say.

22,869. How much?—I do not know whether it was 10*l.* or 15*l.* I cannot say.

22,870. He says in 1859 he got 12*l.* from Mr. Cooper, and 10*l.* from Mr. Clements?—That might be so, but I am not positive of it.

22,871. The next?—George Humphrey.

22,872. How much?—I cannot say.

22,873. He says in 1859 he got 10*l.* from a stranger?—He had more than 10*l.* He put me down as a stranger. Stephen Peachment; I believe he is dead.

22,874. How much?—I cannot say. And that is all the list that I can recollect, but I am inclined to think there were three or four more which I cannot recollect to give you.

22,875. Was that all the money you received in 1859?—Yes, every penny; and I believe I was money out of pocket at that time.

22,876. Had you received money in the election of 1857?—I did.

22,877. Can you tell me how much?—I cannot. I can tell you I received money from Mr. Spillings to see voters, and he gave me the sums that I required; not at one time.

22,878. Can you say at all how much you received?—Perhaps it might be 50*l.*

22,879. About 50*l.*?—It might be. And he gave me 5*l.* for my services.

22,880. (Mr. Russell.) Judging from your evidence it does not seem that the price of votes has risen between 1859 and the last election?—That I cannot say; I had nothing to do with the last election.

22,881. You seem to know the men who received 20*l.* or 25*l.*?—Yes, I recollect that very well, because I said they were exorbitant.

22,882. Had you ever a vote yourself?—No.

22,883. May I ask you how it is that, taking such an active interest in politics, you have never been placed on the register?—I am a Liberal in principle; I was born at Holkam, and it runs in the blood of old Thomas Coke there, and I think I should never swerve from it.

22,884. That is all the more reason for your being placed on the register?—My house did not give me a vote. I had not bricks and mortar enough for that.

22,885. That is it, that you have not a qualification?—No.

22,886. May I ask what rent you do pay?—I pay now 9*l.* with rates.

22,887. A very little stretch of rent would give you a vote?—Yes.

22,888. But your political principles are not strong enough to induce you to take that step?—No; I do not wish to pay for it. I consider that every man is eligible for it if he has the right mind and capacity.

22,889. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Had you been acquainted with Mr. Steward long before this election?—Yes; he was apprentice in the shop when I worked in it.

22,890. Besides Mr. Steward, did you know any others of the leaders of the Liberal party at that time?—No; I did not know any of the others, not of the leaders of the party. I received the money from Mr. Steward. Mr. Steward brought me the money down himself.

22,891. Did you see at the election any others of the leaders of the Liberal party?—Yes; Mr. Charles Miller I saw there at the time, but he is dead.

22,892. Was he aware how you were employed?—Yes, I have not the least doubt of that; because he was an intimate friend of Mr. Steward, and was there at the time I gave Mr. Steward the list.

22,893. But you had no communication with the leaders of the party at the time?—No.

22,894. Mr. Livingston?—No, not at all.

J. D. West.

JOHN DAVEY WEST sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

22,895. What are you?—A coach-maker.

22,896. For whom did you vote at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

22,897. Did you receive any money?—Yes.

22,898. How much?—15*l.*

22,899. From Mr. John Barber?—Yes.

22,900. Were you offered anything on the other side?—No; I was not.

22,901. Had you got a vote in 1859?—I believe I had.

22,902. How did you vote then?—I cannot say. I have nothing to impress on my mind about it. I do not know whether I voted at all. On one or two occasions I did not vote at an election, when I have been busy at my work.

22,903. You voted for Lacon and Stracey?—If I voted at all I voted for that party.

22,904. Did you receive any money for your vote then?—No; never a halfpenny in my life.

22,905. Were you offered any in 1859?—No.

22,906. Yours is a very thriving business, is it not?—I have to work very hard to get a living out of it. We have no coach building now scarcely; it is all wheelwright's work.

22,907. Do you consider you were in want of 15*l.*?—That I was, I assure you, at that time. In fact I did not ask for it, nor did not know that there was any money afloat at that time. I was not aware of it. I promised Sir Edmund Lacon as soon as he asked me, and I voted. I was not aware there was any money afloat. I did not go about electioneering business.

22,908. As soon as you knew it you took it?—I did not know it at the time. I had no idea there was any money going.

J. Fox.

JOHN FOX sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

22,909. What are you?—A cowkeeper.

22,910. Who did you vote for at the last election?—Sir Edmund and Mr. Brogden.

22,911. Had you received money on both sides, that you divided your favours?—I never received a penny in my life. I have had a vote now 45 years and never received the shine of a sixpence for my vote. What I am here for I know not.

22,912. Are you any relation of William Fox, carpenter and joiner?—I have no brothers of the name. My father died when I was very young. I have brothers, but not of the same name.

22,913. Then William Fox is no relation of yours?—None at all.

29,914. Your name was given to us by Mr. Edwards, the stranger, as having received 15*l.*?—I never received a penny in my life; not a farthing.

22,915. How came you to vote half Conservative and half Liberal?—Because I felt disposed. I felt in my impression that this town ought to be quiet; for I had had the impression that the town had been full of corruption for many years, and I thought I would try and disperse it as far as I could.

22,916. You thought if a Conservative and Liberal was elected the town would remain quiet and stop quiet?—I did.

22,917. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

22,918. How did you vote then?—I voted both Liberal, then, I think.

22,919. After what you have told me of 1865 I will not ask you if you had any money then?—I have never taken any money at all. I came here to swear I have not taken any, and I have not taken any.

22,920. (Mr. Slade.) Are your principles Liberal, but are you afraid to vote against Sir Edmund Lacon because you get your grains from him?—There is something of that sort, there is a little leaning that way. That is about the sum and substance of it.

22,921. You get your grains from Sir Edmund, that is all?—I have nothing further. I go there and pay the same for my grains as another man.

CHARLES HENRY CHAMBERLIN recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

C. H. Chamberlin.

22,922. You acted professionally for Mr. Young at the election of 1859?—I really can hardly say whether I did or not.

22,923. This is what I mean. What you said before was, "Mr. Young did not give me a retaining fee, "but he gave me a fee for my professional services at "that election?"—That was so; it was some little time after the election. I never made any entry or charges in the matter, but I had a deal to do professionally in the matter, and some time after the election Mr. Young sent me a fee, I think I told you before, 25*l.* it was.

22,924. Had you known Mr. Young before he came down to Yarmouth? Had you acted for him in the election of 1857?—He was not a candidate, I think.

22,925. Was he returned at the unopposed election?—Yes; I knew him then well.

22,926. August 1857?—Yes; I thought you meant the 1858 election.

22,927. The first election was in March 1857, and the second in August 1857?—Yes.

22,928. You acted for him then?—I think not.

22,929. When did you first act?—I took an active part, I think I may say I did act for him, but I do not recollect whether I had any fee.

22,930. You had not much to do?—Yes, a good deal to do for a few days. I took an active part for those three days, and I think it was through me an announcement that the other side intended not to go on with the election was made, and I think so; I was one of the first who knew it.

22,931. We have been told, at the election of 1859, Mr. Watkin and Mr. Young came down to canvass about a month or six weeks before the election?—I should think that would be some time before certainly.

22,932. Do you know what the expenses were that were sent in to the election auditor of that election?—I have not the remotest idea, not the least. I had nothing to do with that part, I was not the legal agent, Mr. Clowes was.

22,933. I want to know generally if you can give us an idea?—I have not the least idea, not the remotest.

22,934. Do you know who the election auditor was?—Mr. Reynolds Aldred, I think.

22,935. Do you know what sum of money Mr. Young spent beyond the expenses that were sent in to the election auditor?—I do not.

22,936. What sum of money went through your hands?—I will tell you exactly. Not any, with the exception of some sum of money which I received from Mr. Steward; and, if you will allow me, I will tell you exactly how it was. This Mr. Johnson who was examined yesterday, I will not say he was under any obligation to me, because I do not consider he was. There was some trivial matter that had taken place long before the election, the result of which satisfied him very much, and he used to profess a great sense of obligation about it before this election. He was in my office one day, and the election matters were mentioned, and I asked him whether he intended to give us what support he could; and he said he should, and he expressed himself, I remember, in the most bitter terms with reference to Sir Edmund Lacon at that time. Some time after that, a day or two perhaps, he came to me one morning and said he had some names of persons who would vote for the Liberal candidates, but they would want some money for it, and I, of course very foolishly and wrong, I cannot justify it at all, and I should not wish to attempt to do so, I took this list, and after he had left I spoke to Mr. Steward, whose house is very nearly opposite to my office, and he said it would be very desirable; on which I saw Mr. Johnson again, and authorized him to secure those votes, and I took the list to Mr. Steward, who ticked off on the register those names in order that they might not be interfered with by anybody else; and I received the money from Mr. Steward and handed it to Mr. Johnson. I might say with perfect truth it had passed from my mind; but on the very morning that your inquiry was opened I stood in that part of this room, and this man, Mr. Johnson, came up to me and said he wished to speak to me for a moment. I said, "Certainly," and on withdrawing towards the window, he said, "Could you give me a "copy of that list of voters that I bought for you in "1859?" I was astounded for the moment, but I recollected directly afterwards there was some truth in it; and he said, "The voters that you gave me a cheque on Gurney's bank for." I said, "That I can certainly say is untrue." I never gave a cheque at all; but as to Gurney's, that is impossible, for I never kept an account at Gurney's in my own name at all, and that is the fact of the matter. Of course I do not come here to justify the act. I can assure you, with that single exception, I never gave a man a shilling in my life to vote at any one election in Yarmouth, at that or any other; but I was, unfortunately, guilty of that act.

22,937. Mr. Johnson is very positive that he got a cheque for 50*l.* from you, and that he went and got the balance of the nine sovereigns in gold?—I am equally certain he is wrong about that, and I cannot even now divine what could be his possible motive in asking me to furnish him with a list, when it would seem he had a list and I had not. It appears he had it, and I tell you his first statement to me was, that the cheque had been drawn on Gurney's bank. I looked through my bank book carefully last night, and I cannot find a trace of it. I am satisfied I did not give him a cheque; however indiscreet I might have acted, I should not be so foolish as that.

22,938. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) I think we understood it was a cheque of Mr. Young's?—Certainly not; if Mr. Johnson says that, it is a base fabrication. I never had a cheque of Mr. Young's in my life, or ever had a word with Mr. Young about it. I do not think Mr. Johnson could have said that.

22,939. (Mr. Slade.) I understood it was your cheque. Were you ever recouped that 59*l.*?—I had the money from Mr. Steward.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

C. H. Chamberlin.

6 Oct. 1866.

22,940. Mr. Steward has not mentioned your name as having been given 59*l.*?—I do not say it was 59*l.* My own impression is it was something less. I will not swear it was not.

22,941. Mr. Steward has given us the names of all the people he gave money to, and your name is not among them?—I am quite sure of this. I know Mr. Christopher Steward very well, and for many years, and I am certain if the matter is brought to him he cannot fail to remember it, because I saw him more than once about it. I think I saw him three times about it.

22,942. You recollect the whole transaction?—Most vividly. It had passed from my mind, but the moment Mr. Johnson mentioned it to me I remembered it instantly, and I am sure of it; and I should be surprised if Mr. Steward, when my name is mentioned, would not remember it too.

22,943. Were you aware at the time that Mr. Young had given money to Mr. Mainprice for election purposes?—No, certainly not; I never did know it till this inquiry took place at all.

22,944. However, you knew votes were being bought?—I had no doubt about that.

22,945. And you knew they were being bought for Mr. Young and Mr. Watkin?—I did not actually know of the fact. I heard of it, and in consequence of what Mr. Johnson said I went to Mr. Steward, and that was the first time I knew it, because Mr. Steward did not deny it; in fact he admitted he was doing it. I heard so before, or I should not have gone to Mr. Steward. Of course that cheque I mentioned with reference to that 25*l.*, I think there was 2*l.* odd that Mr. Young owed to me for some disbursement I had made for chaise hire into the country at the previous election, making altogether 27*l.* odd, and that was the only cheque I ever received from Mr. Young to the best of my knowledge, unless he gave me a fee at the first election, which I do not recollect.

22,946. That was for your professional services?—Yes, I have been through my cash-book and found the entry of it.

22,947. When did you first become aware that Mr. Young had spent money illegally at Yarmouth?—Only by what I have seen in the papers and heard in this room.

22,948. That was the first knowledge you had of it?—I believed at the time, of course I cannot say now, that Mr. Young had given cheques when called upon without giving due regard to the Act of Parliament with reference to legal payments; but I have a strong personal conviction at this moment that Mr. Young never paid a shilling with reference to bribery. I do not say he has any doubt about it now, but at the time; that he knew it was for bribery I do not believe at this moment.

22,949. Were you aware to whom Mr. Young had given cheques at the election of 1859?—Only from what I have heard here and seen in the public prints.

22,950. Did you ever ask Mr. Christopher Steward where he got the money from that he gave you?—Certainly not.

22,951. What made you go to Mr. Steward?—Because I had heard, as a matter of rumour amongst various partisans, that there was something going on, and Mr. Steward was the man who had the management of it. That is the reason why I went to him, when the rumour was confirmed by his statement to me and admission that it was so.

22,952. Do you mean the rumour that Mr. Steward was the man who was spending money on the Liberal side?—Was spending, or about to spend, or would spend—a sort of general rumour. I never mentioned it to him until I had this communication from Mr. Johnson, when I went over to Mr. Steward's house, shortly after, probably within an hour.

22,953. Had you ever heard that Mr. Steward had been engaged in the same way in the election of 1857?—No, I never was in the election of 1857. I voted, but I took no part in that election at all. I think I explained to you the reason why.

22,954. I only ask whether you had heard before the election of 1859, or were then aware that Mr. Steward had acted in a similar way in 1857?—No, I think not. I would not say positively at this distance of time, but my impression is, not.

22,955. Was a rumour current that everybody must have heard that Mr. Steward was the man spending money on the Liberal side?—I should say certainly not. It was a rumour I heard only from partisans. I should think it was current among partisans on our side, but I should think the other side would not know it anything like as soon as we heard it. I should think not, they might.

22,956. Can you tell the Commissioners whom you heard that rumour from?—I cannot at all.

22,957. Did you ever mention to Mr. Young that you heard Mr. Steward was spending money on his side?—Do you mean at or about the time of the election?

22,958. Yes?—No, certainly not; most certainly not.

22,959. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) What were your professional services that you rendered to Mr. Young?—I saw him occasionally. I went about canvassing, and took the supervision of the employment of clerks and messengers, and spent a great deal of time at the rooms. If I had made out a bill for my services my fee would have amounted to four times the money I am certain, but I did not wish it, and my strong impression is that I made no charge, and that it was a mere fee sent as a honorarium in the sense of what was right. I am almost sure I made no charge in the matter, and I think Mr. Costerton had a similar fee from Mr. Watkin. I considered myself—(how that was I do not know, for there was no direct employment)—I considered myself as more particularly representing Mr. Young, Mr. Costerton representing Mr. Watkin about that time.

22,960. And Mr. Clowes was the general legal agent?—I think so, and I do not think Mr. Clowes charged a farthing.

22,961. (Mr. Slade.) Did you see Mr. Mainprice about the election of 1859?—Not on election matters. I must have seen him frequently in the streets and possibly in the hotel, but not to have any conversation upon election matters.

22,962. Did you know that he was taking an active part in the election?—I have no doubt I did know that, because I knew he was an active partisan.

22,963. Did you know he kept the canvass book?—I think I did, but I am not sure in that particular department. I had nothing to do, because there were a good many acting on the Liberal side that I was not on personal terms with, and it was distasteful for me to associate with them, and I did not.

22,964. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Mr. Young did not consult you on the expenses of the election?—Certainly not.

22,965. (Mr. Slade.) Mr. Humphreys, the coroner for Middlesex, introduced Mr. Young to you?—I believe he did. He came down here at the election after Messrs. McCullagh and Watkin were unseated. I think Mr. Humphreys came down then. I am sure it was so.

22,966. Was Mr. Young at any time aware that a large sum of money had been spent at the previous election of 1857?—Not to my knowledge. I never heard he was.

22,967. He never talked on the subject to you?—To the best of my belief never. I always had a strong impression there was not a large sum spent in 1857. It occurred to me that the election was won by a sudden onset, and the thing was over so quickly that a comparatively small outlay produced the result. That was my opinion.

22,968. Mr. Steward, whom you went to in 1859, had received nearly 1,600*l.* at the election of 1857?—If he had I must have formed a wrong opinion about it. Of course I was not aware of that. I should not have thought anything like the money was spent myself, but I have no knowledge of it.

22,969. When Mr. Johnson came to you for this 59*l.*

was that the first you heard of bribery at that election?—He did not come to me for 59*l.*

22,970. With a list of names?—That was about the second interview that he brought the list of names. I told you the conversation that took place before that, and then he brought the list of names. I should not have thought there were more than six or eight together.

22,971. The names were Benjamin Motts, Daniel Beales, John Horn, George Johnson, and John Plummer; making together five names?—I thought there were six or seven or eight, and there are one or two of those names I remember. That man, George Johnson, I distinctly remember. Johnson had been in the police force, and Horn had too—that name was one. I have no doubt those are the names you have mentioned. If you had asked me to tell you one of the names I could not have done it.

22,972. Was that the first time you had heard bribery was going on?—I would not like to say that I think it was the first time. I was sure of it on seeing Mr. Steward, but I must have heard something of it before, or I should not have gone to Mr. Steward. I may perhaps be allowed to add that Mr. Johnson had 5*l.* out of the money I had from Mr. Steward. I understand he says he has not. I do not feel certain about it, but it was my strong impression, since I heard of it here, that he had a small sum for his own trouble. I heard so, but I will not say it positively.

22,973. Have you seen Mr. Steward in Yarmouth since he gave his evidence before us?—Yes, I have.

22,974. Have you asked him if he can recollect whether he gave you money or not?—I saw him this very morning, and I think I might say I did not use those words, but I made him understand that he certainly had given me money, and I think—I will not say that he directly admitted it, but I think it was tantamount to that. I cannot possibly fail to remember it.

22,975. (Mr. Russell.) Can you remember in what shape he gave the money?—Partially in notes and partially in gold.

22,976. Can you remember the identical money you received from Mr. Johnson?—No, I cannot. I had advanced a portion of the money, before I received it, to Mr. Johnson on two occasions.

22,977. Out of your own pocket?—Yes.

22,978. And then reimbursed yourself, and handed over the balance to Mr. Johnson?—Yes.

22,979. Do you remember if it was in gold?—No, I think I gave him notes and gold; the first was two or three 5*l.* notes, and then there was another payment. I am not certain; he certainly was paid in three times.

22,980. If you had paid him in less sums on the first two occasions out of your own pocket it rather fortifies your impression that you could not have given him the cheque?—I was certain of that, because, independently of my recollection, I have searched my bank book carefully, and there is no trace of any cheque.

22,981. The cheque would not necessarily have been a cheque of your own?—That I most solemnly pledge my oath to. I am certain I did not give him a cheque; and if by any possibility I did it could not have been anybody else's cheque but my own. I am sure not a word passed at that time about that matter between me and Mr. Young, that I am as certain of as my own existence. I had no knowledge of it. I was perfectly astounded to hear what Mr. Steward said about giving out cheques. Mr. Young will have the honour of appearing before you, and I feel sure will tell you that is a mistake of Mr. Steward's, because I believe Mr. Young, without asking questions, gave cheques. We know in Yarmouth there are expenses for messengers, out-voters, and watchers, and extra clerks, that are paid without being strictly legal, and that is what I believe Mr. Young did, and probably the money was used; but that Mr. Young gave the money, recognizing it deliberately, as it were, admitting it was for bribery, I do not believe for a moment.

22,982. Mr. Young would be the best judge of that?—Of course.

22,983. (Mr. Slade.) Those expenses would not come to nearly 2,000*l.*?—I am as sure that Mr. Young never spent 2,000*l.* at that election as I can be.

22,984. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You say you were perfectly convinced there was bribery going on?—Yes.

22,985. Whom do you suppose the money came from?—No doubt the money came directly from the candidates, but neither of those gentlemen knew what it was. They must now have heard what it was, as every other candidate. I am only speaking of the time.

22,986. That Mr. Young might not have known it is to a certain extent probable from his giving the cheques at all?—Yes.

22,987. But that either Mr. Young or Mr. Watkin provided the money that went to Mainprice's pocket, and from his pocket to Mr. Steward's, is certain?—As one of the Commissioners has stated, the candidates are the best judges of that, but I do not believe for a moment—knowing what a clever talented man Mr. Watkin is—I do not believe he would send the cash in that way. That some friend of his might have done it is very probable, but that he personally did it I do not believe.

22,988. (Mr. Russell.) You are well acquainted with Mr. Steward?—Very well. I have done many matters of business for him. He has been a client of mine on many occasions.

22,989. Had he ever alluded to the fact of having given you this money in 1859 before he was examined here?—Certainly not. Why I mentioned it to him this morning was this. I was going to my office. I saw him standing in the street. I told him, "I had the money from you;" and I considered then from his manner, or what he said, it was tantamount to an admission; he cannot be in doubt about it. I am sure if you call him again he will state that is the fact.

22,990. Have you any reason to think that Mr. Johnson is not so well inclined towards you as he was?—I am obliged to you for making the observation. Mr. Johnson, as I said before, at that time, expressed himself under an obligation to me, but after that there came an election for the vestry clerk. I was a candidate and was defeated. Mr. Johnson had expressed an intention of supporting my opponent; but he came to me and volunteered his support to me. I said I felt, after all that had passed and what he had formerly said, he could not do otherwise than support me, and spoke in the most friendly terms; and I never saw a person more eager than he was, and when we came to the hall he was one of the most bitter opponents I had—not only was he howling me down, but he was shouting and showing temper. From that time I scarcely took any notice of him, but for the last few months I have recognized him, but he was certainly a bitter opponent of mine there.

22,991. The impression on your mind is that Mr. Johnson, in stating that he received a cheque from you, may have made something more than a mistake?—I should not believe that Mr. Johnson would willingly state what was untrue; but for his coming up in the hall, and asking me for a list of voters, when he had a list in his possession, and then telling me I gave him a cheque on Gurney's bank, that has excited my suspicion. I should not like to say he spoke willingly untrue, but it has caused a suspicion in my mind.

22,992. Who was the person upon the Liberal side, among the active people, who would have had the payment of the messengers and runners?—I should think the election agent would have those returned to him.

22,993. Who was that?—Mr. Clowes. I am not at all sure; I did not pay them myself. I am not by any means certain that I did not. I know I have done it at several elections, particularly for the county. I have had a good deal to do with that, and I might have paid them myself.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

C. H. Chamberlin.

6 Oct. 1866.

22,994. Can you swear you paid them yourself in 1859?—I will not say I did. I think it is exceedingly likely that I did.

22,995. It would be you or Mr. Clowes?—Or Mr. Costerton; or we might have handed the money over to a subordinate. I know I have on more than one occasion done so. I will not say for the borough elections, but the county certainly, and I might have done it then.

22,996. Will you tell me, in your opinion, how it was Mr. Young gave Mr. Livingston a cheque on the 28th April for 200*l.*, and another on the 29th April for 120*l.*?—I do not believe that he did.

22,997. You think it is untrue?—As a matter of belief, I believe he is mistaken about it.

22,998. He has sworn to us that he got two cheques from Mr. Young, one on the 28th April for 200*l.* and one on the 29th for 120*l.*, which he cashed at the National Provincial Bank?—I do not doubt his receiving the cheques. The question is, whether he received them from Mr. Mainprice or Mr. Young. You observe that Mr. Livingston said his impression was that he had them from Mr. Young. I do not understand him to say that he had. My own conviction is that he had not.

22,999. I will take Mr. Mainprice. How did Mr. Young give cheques to that amount to Mr. Mainprice?—Do you wish to have my opinion upon it?

23,000. Yes?—My belief is this, that Mr. Young, as I said before, knowing only of this expenditure, such as these runners and for the out-voters and watchers, gave these cheques without any inquiry.

23,001. That is the reason I asked you, "Who is "the person upon your side who would have the pay-"ment of those people?" Then you say you do not know. The next question is, "Who got it?" And you fixed yourself, or Mr. Clowes, or Mr. Costerton?—No; I fixed them as for legal purposes, and those things. That is what I understood it to apply to; not to those which are not strictly legal.

23,002. I will ask you, having heard that those cheques were given directly by Mr. Young either to Mr. Mainprice or to Mr. Livingston, whether, in your opinion Mr. Young did not give those cheques for the purpose of bribery?—I do not think he did.

23,003. That is your opinion?—That is my opinion. But he showed a degree of want of caution in giving cheques as he did; there is no doubt about that, but I do not think he gave them for bribery.

23,004. It is very immaterial, if Mr. Young drew the cheques himself, to whom he may have given them, whether he gave them directly or indirectly to Mr. Livingston?—That is a matter of inference. It is for you to form your own conclusions.

23,005. If Mr. Young was perfectly innocent in his mind at the time he gave the cheques it appears rather in his favour that he gave the cheques directly to Mr. Livingston?—I hope you will not understand me as stating it as my opinion, when Mr. Young gave these cheques, he thought they were strictly for legal purposes. I cannot conceive Mr. Young could think that.

23,006. (Mr. Slade.) You gave us to understand they were for illegal purposes, but not direct bribery?—I do not think at the time he knew that they would be applied for direct bribery.

23,007. (Mr. Russell.) What I meant was this, I do not think it is at all material to whom he gave the cheques?—It is not for me to say that it is material, if I thought so. I think Mr. Young is a man of business, and having the greatest possible confidence in Mr. Mainprice, I can understand his doing it with Mr. Mainprice, when I cannot understand his giving cheques to two or three people.

23,008. You can hardly understand his giving the 59*l.* to yourself?—I can only tell you this, I very much regret it. It is hardly credible. I quite admit, being in a sort of semi-legal position, I cannot understand how I should be such an abominable idiot as to do such a thing; but the result has shown for seven years and a half it was perfectly safe. At that time I was quite as sure of Mr. Johnson as I could have been of my own brother.

23,009. Mr. Young may have been influenced by the same reason?—Yes. We are all liable to slips at all times. There are very few of us who have not committed them I am afraid.

T. W. Downing

THOMAS WILLIAM DOWNING recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

23,010. We have had Mr. Diboll Baldwin before us, to whom you say you gave 15*l.* Mr. Baldwin has denied to us that you gave him 15*l.* in the Market Place the night before the election?—I will tell you, as nearly as I can, how it happened.

23,011. Yes, as circumstantially as you can, because he has denied it?—I was in the "Angel" between 11 and 12 o'clock on the night before the election. A man of the name of Botwright came into the "Angel" to me, and called me out. He says, "There is my brother-in-law outside, and he wants 15*l.*"

23,012. Charles Botwright?—I think his name is Charles Botwright. I said, "Where is he?" He said, "He is outside." I goes outside with him. I did not know his brother-in-law then; I knew the man, but I did not know he was his brother-in-law. When I went out I said, "Where is the man?" He said, "Across the road." I goes across the road into the Market Place to this man, and I found it was Baldwin, because I knew Baldwin, he living quite opposite to me, nearly opposite; our front doors are opposite. I had known the man for years, but I did not know he was Botwright's brother-in-law. I was astonished at the man, because I should as soon have thought of touching any man as him. I am going too fast. I said to Botwright, "He does not want any money." He says, "If you do not give him 15*l.* you will lose him." Baldwin called me on one side, and I went on one side. I said, "What do you want?" He said, "I want what other people are getting." I said, "What is that?" He said, "I will be quite satisfied with 15*l.*" I said, "Come across to the 'Feathers.'" We were getting to the "Feathers," and then I stopped, and I said, "Come here." I went to a lamp-post opposite the market gates, and I gave him 15*l.* He held his hand down so, as I do now, and I gave it to him. I will swear that I put it into his hand.

23,013. Fifteen sovereigns?—15 sovereigns.

23,014. Did Botwright see you give it him?—Well, I saw Botwright last night, and I taxed him with it, and he said, "I did not see you give him the money." I said, "You are a damned scamp; you were near enough." He said, "I am living in the same house "as he is, but still, if I am subpœnaed I shall have to "speak the truth, though he is living with me." I should not have come up here and stated that I gave him 15*l.* if I had not. If I had not a minute to live, I gave it to him in his own hands. That I will swear in any court in England. I come to set myself right as far as I can, because these matters are only between two peoples words. After I had made my statement, do you not think he would have met me, and said, "Downing, you have made a wrong statement about me?" But he has passed me 20 times, and has never taken any notice about it. If the man had been an innocent man he would have said, "I will not have "you traduce my character. I will not have a man "state a wrong thing about me." I should soon have been at him very quick myself.

23,015. We should like to see Botwright?—And I should like to be here when they are brought here. I only wish I had been here when he said so. I know I gave it to him, or I should not have stated it. It was no interest to me.

23,016. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Who was in the "Angel" at the time that Botwright came in?—

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

T. W. Downing.

6 Oct. 1866.

There were a lot of people. The "Angel" was full at the time. Botwright does not deny calling me out, and urging me to give it to him. He told me last night, in the presence of Mr. Livingston, "I heard "that you gave it to him, but I do not believe you "gave it the more for that." I said, "I put it into "his hand; I do not know if you call that giving it to "him or not."

23,017. (Mr. Slade.) Was Botwright with you in the Market Place that evening when you gave him that money?—Yes, he was pretty close to me, a few yards off.

23,018. Was he in the Market Place?—Yes.

23,019. Baldwin swears this:—I say to him, "Did "you see Downing in the Market Place the night "before the election?—I do not remember seeing "him."—Botwright cannot deny seeing me, because he admitted, in the presence of Mr. Livingston last night, that him and me were in the Market Place. I happened to go into Mr. Livingston's shop, and taxed him with it, and he says, "I admit he did not call you out, but he saw you at the door." That is very immaterial.

23,020. Was Mr. Botwright with you at the time when you first spoke to Mr. Baldwin about his vote?—Yes.

23,021. Now this is what Mr. Baldwin says: "Did "Downing ever speak to you about your vote?—"Never. He never spoke to me about my vote."—I never spoke to him before that evening. I do not know that ever I spoke to the man in my life, only that time, although so near as he lived to me. I should not have spoken to him then had not his brother-in-law introduced him to me. He said he wanted the 15*l.*, and he said we shall lose him if I did not give him the 15*l.*, and I do not think I ever passed five words with Baldwin before. Botwright wanted the money to give to him himself, but I said, "It will not suit me," and I gave it into his hands.

23,022. (Mr. Russell.) Are you on speaking terms with Baldwin?—Though we are so close neighbours I do not think that ever I spoke to this man but that once in my life, when I gave him the money.

23,023. You are sure, he being close to you, that he had the opportunity of denying it many times?—Closer than you or I are; we live only across the street.

23,024. He has never alluded to it?—I have met him every day; I meet him two or three times a day. Every time he comes home I am sure to see him, living so close. The street is not the width of this room, and our doors are directly opposite. In fact I saw him three or four times last week.

RICHARD HAMMOND sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

R. Hammond.

23,025. What are you?—A gardener.

23,026. Did you receive anything for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

23,027. How much?—15*l.*

23,028. Who from?—I think it was Mr. Jones; he was a stranger to me.

23,029. Where did you get it?—At the "New Bridge" tavern, just by Southtown.

23,030. Who gave it to you?—Mr. Jones, I expect it was.

23,031. (Mr. Slade.) Who keeps that tavern?—A man of the name of Bowles kept it then.

23,032. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Were you offered any money on the other side?—No.

23,033. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

23,034. You had not?—No, I had not.

23,035. You are of Southtown?—Yes.

23,036. (Mr. Slade.) Just tell me this, was anybody else at the "New Bridge" tavern besides you?—No, I did not see anyone; he was in the room all alone.

23,037. In a private room?—Yes.

23,038. How came you to go there?—Well, it was arranged the day before with Downing and me.

23,039. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—Yes, I did.

GEORGE JOHNSON sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

G. Johnson.

23,040. What are you?—A publican and stock dealer—a bullock dealer.

23,041. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—15*l.*

23,042. Who gave it you?—William Tobias Johnson.

23,043. Is that all you got?—That is all.

23,044. Were you offered any money on the other side?—Not the slightest farthing.

23,045. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

23,046. Did you get anything then?—12*l.*

23,047. Who from?—William Tobias Johnson.

23,048. The same person?—Yes.

23,049. (Mr. Slade.) You live at the market gates?—At the market gates.

23,050. Whom did you vote for?—I do not bear these matters in my mind; I do not know whom I did vote for; I see Lacon and Goodson at the last election; 15*l.* I received from William Tobias Johnson; and Watkin and Young the election before, and I received 12*l.*

23,051. (Mr. Russell.) You voted as you were paid?—Yes, I voted as I was paid.

WILLIAM SPILLING sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

W. Spilling.

23,052. What are you?—I am a builder.

23,053. Have you a vote for the borough?—Yes, in the Southtown Ward; Gorleston and Southtown.

23,054. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—I did not vote at all.

23,055. Were you in Yarmouth?—Yes.

23,056. Did you take any part in the last election?—No.

23,057. Did you canvass anybody?—Nobody.

23,058. Why did you abstain from voting at the last election?—I did not care about it in any way whatever; I had had enough of Yarmouth politics.

23,059. What are you in politics?—I have hitherto been a Whig, not a Radical.

23,060. A Liberal?—I had a very great respect for the old members, Anson and Rumbold, and I always voted for them and did everything I could for them; but since they have been gone I have never interfered in any way whatever.

23,061. What election was that?—That would be 1857, the last time I had to do with politics. I voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Rumbold the election before that.

23,062. That was in 1852?—That was in 1852; I never voted since 1857; then I voted for Watkin and McCullagh.

23,063. Did you take any part in the election of 1859?—Not any. I could not take any part; I was laid up at home with a broken leg.

23,064. We do not want to go very particularly into the election of 1857. Did you disburse any money at that election?—I have no doubt I did.

23,065. Yourself?—Yes; if I did not disburse the money myself it was done under my directions. I do not think I personally gave any men any money, but I made arrangements with them so that they had the money in 1857. That would be for Mr. Watkin and Mr. McCullagh, when Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Vereker lost the election.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

W. Spilling.

6 Oct. 1866.

23,066. Can you give us an idea of what sum of money you had the disposal of at that election?—No, I really do not think I can; I am afraid not. I did not come prepared for that. I understood there had been something said here yesterday about my having the management of some bribery in 1859 by a man of the name of Livingston.

23,067. When you say, "a man of the name of Livingston," you know him perfectly well?—I do know him.

23,068. That is so?—That is what I was afraid that I was drawn here for, and I thought I would come and hear what he had to say, but I do not see him here.

23,069. Can you refresh your memory as to what you did in 1857?—I do not think I should like to undertake that now. If you are going to stop here, and I had a little time to myself, I might refresh my memory and bring some things to my mind.

23,070. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) We do not want to enter into any particulars, that is to say, we do not want to make a schedule of the names of those bribed in 1857. We wish generally to inquire into the amount of money spent, and the manner in which it was spent?—I have no idea. I think if I were to refer back to my papers perhaps I could find something better for you than my assertion. I do not think I can undertake to do that to-day.

23,071. (Mr. Slade.) What day will it suit you to come?—Any day after Monday, if you please; or Monday I will say, if I can find anything. Perhaps I may find an old register, or something of that sort. I got disgusted with politics. I am afraid I cannot trust to my memory, but if I can find anything I will bring it; if not, I will give you all the information I can think of.

23,072. Then we will fix on Monday, 12 o'clock?—And if I find any papers I had better bring them with me. I will bring you all the information I can.

23,073. We do not want any names of the persons bribed; we want to inquire into the amount of money spent, the manner in which it was spent, and the agents by whom it was spent?—Very good.

J. Wisker.

JOHN WISKER sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

23,074. What are you?—I am a dealer.

23,075. In what?—In all sorts; a marine store dealer.

23,076. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—For the Blues.

23,077. For Brogden and Vanderbyl?—Yes.

23,078. How much money did you receive?—20*l.*

23,079. Where were you paid?—In my own house.

23,080. Who paid you?—Samuel Scago.

23,081. Were you offered any money by the Red side?—No.

23,082. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

23,083. Whom did you vote for then?—Blue then.

23,084. Whom did you vote for in 1859?—For Mr. Watkin, I think it was; Mr. Watkin and his partner; I do not know what his name was.

23,085. Young?—Not Young.

23,086. You were not upon the register in 1859?—Yes, I was; so I was the time before; I voted twice before. I did not vote from Gorleston side, I voted from Yarmouth side then. You will find me "George Street, Yarmouth;" I think you will find that.

23,087. You are not in the poll book of 1859?—I think, if you will look at George Street, you will find my name there.

23,088. You mean you voted for Mr. Watkin and Mr. McCullagh?—Yes, I did so.

23,089. That was in 1857?—Well, I voted for both of them; I polled in 1857 and 1859 too.

23,090. Not in 1859; you did not vote for Watkin and Young then?—It was Watkin and McCullagh.

23,091. Were you paid for your vote in 1857?—No. I never received a halfpenny in my life, barring this last time.

23,092. Were you offered any money by the Conservatives?—No.

J. Johnson.

JOHN JOHNSON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

23,093. Do you live in St. Peter's Road?—Yes.

23,094. What are you?—A wheelwright by trade.

23,095. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

23,096. How much money did you receive?—15*l.*

23,097. Who gave it you?—William Tobias Johnson, of the New Road, "Standard" tavern; in the same road, St. Peter's Road.

23,098. Is he a relation of yours?—Not a bit.

23,099. Were you canvassed by Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl?—No.

23,100. Were you offered any money on that side?—No.

23,100*a.* Had you got a vote in 1859?—I had.

23,101. Whom did you vote for then?—For the Blue party.

23,102. What did you get for your vote then?—Nothing at all.

23,103. If you get no money for your vote do you vote for the Blue party?—Formerly I had voted for the Blue party, till the last election.

23,104. It was the money that induced you to vote against your political principles?—It might be so; it is a great temptation.

28,105. Did you vote in 1857 for the Blue party?—I do not think I did; I was not in posession of the property then; I think not.

S. Goldsmith.

SAMUEL GOLDSMITH sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

23,106. What are you?—A merchant's clerk—Mr. Watling's.

23,107. You voted for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—I had not a vote. It is my father who had a vote.

23,108. You are the son of Samuel Goldsmith upon the register?—Yes.

23,109. Is your father in Yarmouth?—He is living in London now. He was living in London at the time of the election.

23,110. Do you know if he got any money?—He asked for his expenses, and I believe they paid him 3*l.*

23,111. What were his expenses?—I suppose his travelling expenses. He came upon the Saturday.

23,112. Where was he?—He was in London at the time.

23,113. You do not know whether your father received 15*l.*?—I think if he had he would have told me so. He told me he asked 50*s.* He said he thought that was about fair for his expenses, and they gave him 3*l.*

23,114. Who paid him his expenses?—Some one at the "Angel," I do not know who it was.

23,115. Was that before the polling day?—I think it was the election day morning.

23,116. Before he had voted?—Yes.

23,117. Your father told you this?—He told me that.

23,118. Had your father got a vote in 1859?—No, I think not.

23,119. Will you write to your father, and tell him that unless he admits having received this money we shall be obliged to summons him here as a witness?—The 3*l.*?

23,120. 15*l.*, or any money for his vote ?—Has anyone said that he has taken 15*l.* ?

23,121. He has been given into us by Mr. Edwards, the stranger, as having received 15*l.* ?—I do not think he did. He told me that he had received 3*l.* He asked 50*s.*, and they gave him 3*l.* for his expenses.

23,122. You are quite right. The amount is 3*l.* ?—That is what he told me.

Then I do not think you need trouble your father about it.

HENRY PRATT CRANE sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL. H. P. Crane.

23,123. Do you live in Howard Street ?—No.

23,124. Where do you live ?—Southtown. I lived in Howard Street in 1859.

23,125. When did you move to Gorleston ?—Last March twelvemonth ; not Gorleston, Southtown.

23,130. By neither party ?—No. I have had nothing to do with the election at all.

23,131. Why did you not vote ?—I did not intend to vote, from the system of bribery going on it was of no use giving it, and therefore I would not vote.

23,132. Had your experience of 1859 disgusted you ?—I voted Watkin and Young then in 1859, that was my first.

23,133. What were you in 1859 ?—A cabinet-maker and upholsterer.

23,134. Did you receive any money in 1859 ?—No. I never received any money in my life at election times.

23,140. Did he offer you any money ?—Yes, he did.

23,141. How much ?—I do not know how much it was ; he threw some gold on the table, I refused it, and walked out myself.

23,142. And did you promise Watkin and Young when they first canvassed you ?—Yes, I did so, and I voted for them.

23,143. And you never received any money on any occasion ?—I never received any money at all ; when Mr. Spilling sent to me I did not know at all what he wanted with me.

23,144. Do you know anything about the election of 1859 ?—No, not anything. I never busied myself with an election ; I always kept to my occupation ; I never lost any time about an election.

THOMAS NEWSTEAD sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL. T. Newstead.

23,145. What are you ?—A ship rigger.

23,146. Whom did you vote for at the last election ?—I voted for the Liberals ; I always did on that side.

23,147. Brogden and Vanderbyl ?—Yes, I always voted on that side.

23,148. Did you always vote that side without getting any money ?—Yes, up to this time.

23,149. You got no money ?—Yes. There is a man sitting there knows it as well as I do myself, I never had a penny in my life before.

23,150. Do you know Mr. Fill ?—Yes.

23,151. Did he not give you 10*l.* ?—No, he did not give it me ; he told me to go down to Mr. Cattermole's, and I did, and there I got 15*l.*

23,152. That was not for your vote of course ?—No.

23,153. Do you ever go down to Cattermole's out of election times ?—Yes, many times ; I go there and get half a pint of beer.

23,154. Do you get 15*l.* on those occasions ?—No.

23,155. That is only at election times ?—That is only at election times.

23,156. Had you got a vote in 1859 ?—Yes.

23,159. This was the first time ?—This was the first time.

23,161. You divided your vote ?—Yes, I did, at that time.

23,162. Why was that ?—Because I was working for a gentleman, Mr. Bracey, and he said if I did not vote one on one side and one on the other he would not let me finish my work.

23,163. What is Mr. Bracey's christian name ?—John Bracey.

23,169. What Mr. Lacon ?—Sir Edmund Lacon.

23,170. At the last election ?—At the last election I had a bad leg, and he wanted to know if I wanted the doctor. I was at work aboard of that gentleman's vessel when I hurt my leg ; he came two days afterwards and wanted to know if I would vote for them, and he offered me 20*l.* ; he said, I will give you 20*l.*, and he wanted to know if I wanted a doctor. I told him no, my old woman was my doctor, and the physisian was up aloft ; and he was that stupid he did not know what it was.

23,171. Do you mean to say Sir Edmund Lacon called on you, and said he would give you 20*l.* if you would vote for him ?—Yes.

23,172. What did you say to him ?—I said, no, I did not want any of his money ; he offered me the same money in Mr. Howes's when I was getting half a pint of beer there.

23,173. Was it the first time Sir Edmund Lacon canvassed you ?—Yes.

23,174. On what day ?—I cannot say.

23,175. About how long before the election ?—About a fortnight before the election.

23,176. Did Sir Edmund Lacon call on you again after that ?—No, he catched me in Mr. Howes's getting half a pint of beer, and the rate gatherer touched me on the shoulder and said, "There is Sir Edmund Lacon here."

23,177. Did he say anything to you on the second occasion ?—No.

23,178. Did he ever again offer you any money ?—When I was on the jetty one evening he sent a man after me, and he said, "Mr. Lacon wants to speak to you," and I said, "I do not want to speak to Mr. Lacon.'

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

T. Newstead.

6 Oct. 1866.

23,179. Who was the man?—I do not know; the man was unknown to me.

23,180. Did Sir Edmund Lacon canvass you in 1859?—No, he did not come to my house, he stopped me in the "White Lion" opening.

23,181. (Mr. Slade.) Who is Mr. Howes?—He keeps the "White Lion."

23,182. What is his christian name?—William Howes.

23,183. You mean at the last election of 1865?—Yes.

23,184. Is that a man who lives in Apollo Walk?—No.

23,185. King Street?—Yes, King Street. I was in there, getting half a pint of beer.

23,186. Who was there?—I know one man who was there.

23,187. Tell me his name?—A man by the name of John Hook.

23,188. Who is John Hook?—He is a man who dredges about the river in a boat for mussels and one thing and another.

23,189. Did he see Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes; he was there at the time, and he heard the words. He often jokes with me about it now. I said, "I would sooner vote for a foreigner than for you."

23,190. Did he hear Sir Edmund Lacon offer you 20*l.*?—No, he did not hear. He asked me for my vote, and I said, "I would sooner vote for a foreigner."

23,191. John Hook heard him ask you for your vote?—I said I would sooner vote for a foreigner than vote for him.

23,192. (Mr. Russell.) Who was with Sir Edmund Lacon when he offered you the 20*l.*?—Mr. Hunter, the rate-gatherer.

23,193. Is Mr. Hunter alive?—Yes; I saw him the other day.

23,194. Where does he live?—He lives in King Street.

23,195. Do you know whether he has got a vote?—Mr. Hunter?

23,196. Yes?—I do not know; I cannot say.

23,197. Do you know what his christian name is? Do you know whether it is Cornelius Hunter?—I do not know, I am sure. I know his name is Hunter; that is all I know.

23,198. What sort of looking man?—He is not a bad sort of looking man.

23,199. Old or young?—A young man; he is not an old man.

23,200. Was he canvassing with Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes.

23,201. Was anybody with you when you were offered the 20*l.*?—No, only my wife. I could not put a foot on the ground for five weeks.

23,202. Have you some particular dislike to Sir Edmund Lacon?—No; I always liked the other party best; I always did. I always took to this party.

23,203. I see in 1859, when you gave one vote to the red party, you gave it to Sir Henry Stracey, and not to Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes.

23,204. Do you owe Sir Edmund Lacon any grudge?—No, not at all. I should be very sorry to owe anybody any grudge.

23,205. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You say your wife was there when Sir Edmund Lacon made you this offer?—Yes.

23,206. Did she hear the offer made?—Yes.

23,207. (Mr. Slade.) How far do you live from here?—I live against the "White Lion" opening.

23,208. How many minutes would it take to go and fetch your wife?—A quarter of an hour.

23,209. (Mr. Russell.) Was there anybody else besides Mr. Hunter with Sir Edmund Lacon?—No.

23,210. Only you four?—Only we four.

23,211. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You said just now John Hook was there?—That was in the "White Lion."

23,212. Where was the offer made?—The offer was made in my house.

23,213. Did you ever communicate this to anybody else, what you have said to-day about Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes.

23,214. When?—Many a time.

23,215. Tell us when?—Many a time; a few days ago.

23,216. At the time?—Yes, just after.

21,217. Did you ever tell it to anybody before the election?—No, I do not know that I did or did not; I cannot say about that.

23,218. Did you ever tell it to anyone immediately after the election?—Yes.

23,219. When?—I cannot say.

23,220. To whom?—I cannot tell who, I have mentioned it to so many different people.

23,221. To whom?—I cannot tell you.

23,222. You say you mentioned it to many people, you must recollect somebody?—I mentioned it to John Hook.

23,223. Immediately after the election?—Yes.

23,224. Do you know Mr. Downing?—Yes, I work for him.

23,225. Did you mention it to him?—No; I do not know that I ever did.

23,226. Are you not a supporter of the Liberal party?—Not as I know of; I did not support them in anything of the kind.

23,227. Did you ever hear there was a petition presented against the return of Sir Edmund Lacon?—No.

23,228. Do you mean to say you never heard there was a petition?—No.

23,229. (Mr. Slade.) Did you say you were laid up in bed?—I had got a bad leg. I knocked it aboard of Mr. Downing's vessel; and I was lying on the sofa at the time he came in. I had not been out for five weeks; and my wife was doing my leg herself without a doctor, and she brought it round. He asked me if I wanted a doctor, and I told him no.

23;230. Did Sir Edmund Lacon come in with Mr. Hunter?—Yes; he came in, and asked me if I wanted a doctor, and I told him no. I told him, "There is the doctor, and the Physician is up aloft;" and I looked at the sky. He did not know the meaning of that. He asked Mr. Hunter what that was for; and Mr. Hunter told him that was the heavens.

23,231. What did he say about the 20*l.*?—He said, "I will give you 20*l.*" I said, "No." He said, "Shall I put your name down; I will give you 20*l.*?" I said "No." I told him I always went that side, and I always should except that time of Sir Henry Stracey.

23,232. Did he ask you for your vote?—Yes, that he did.

C. Hunter.

CORNELIUS HUNTER sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

23,233. What are you?—I am a rate collector and accountant.

23,234. Did you canvass with Sir Edmund Lacon at the last election?—Yes, the whole election.

23,235. Can you remember canvassing the man Thomas Newstead, who has just sat down?—Yes; I remember canvassing him.

23,236. With Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes.

23,237. Was there anybody else with you at the time?—I am sure I cannot call to mind whether Mr. Goodson was with us at the time or whether he was not.

23,238. Thomas Newstead has just sworn that Sir Edmund Lacon offered him, in your presence and in the presence of his wife 20*l.* if he would vote for him?—I say it is a falsehood.

23,239. Was any allusion whatever made by Sir Edmund Lacon to money?—None whatever.

23,240. Can you remember what passed when the man was canvassed?—No; I cannot call to mind, because I was with them through the whole canvass.

23,241. It may refresh your memory if I remind you that the man was on a sofa, suffering from a bad leg?—I am positively certain that I never heard on any occasion whatever Sir Edmund Lacon offer any inducement to any man for his vote through the whole canvass.

23,242. Do you know Newstead by sight?—Yes, I know him. I see him four or five times every year, when I call on him for the rates.

23,243. Have you any remembrance of the canvass as regards the man Newstead?—No; only a general knowledge about the canvass; no more than anybody else.

23,244. Did you keep a canvass book?—Part of the time.

23,245. Have you got it now?—No.

23,246. Can you remember what entry you made in it as regards Newstead?—I think I was not keeping the canvass at that time.

23,247. Can you remember if the man expressed himself adversely to Sir Edmund Lacon?—I am sure I forget. I always looked on Newstead as a man on the opposite side of the question, and a man that would not vote for us at all.

23,248. He split his vote in 1859?—That I was not aware of. I had nothing to do with previous elections. I have had frequent conversations with Mr. Newstead.

23,249. Have you any reason to believe that he owes any grudge to Sir Edmund Lacon?—I think not; I have no knowledge of it.

23,250. Have you any reason to believe that he is a man who would wilfully state that which is not true?—I should be sorry to say that; but I am positive Sir Edmund Lacon never made such a statement.

23,251. Do you know anything against his character?—I have known him the last seven or eight years; but I have never known anything whatever against his character.

23,252. Are you prepared most unhesitatingly to swear that Sir Edmund Lacon did not offer this man any money for his vote?—Yes.

23,253. Or offer him any money at all for any other purpose?—Not for any purpose. I am quite willing to swear that I never heard Sir Edmund Lacon on any occasion offer any money to any person.

23,254. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You say you do not recollect the particular circumstances of canvassing this man?—No.

23,255. Do you think it could have been offered without your hearing it?—I think it could not have been offered without my hearing it.

23,256. (Mr. Russell.) Did you introduce the voters to Sir Edmund Lacon?—Where he did not personally know them; but, having been a candidate before, he knew them himself generally.

23,257. Did you always stand by while Sir Edmund Lacon canvassed?—Generally; I generally stood as close as I am to this gentleman.

23,258. As you are here I will ask you, of course you voted for Lacon and Goodson?—Yes.

23,259. Beyond canvassing with Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson, did you take any part in the election?—None whatever.

23,260. And you always belonged to the Conservative party?—Yes.

23,261. Can you give us any information which we ought to have?—No; I can give you no information of anything.

William Littlewood sworn; examined by Mr. Russell.

W. Littlewood.

23,262. What are you?—A seaman.

23,263. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—The Liberals.

23,264. Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl?—Yes.

23,265. Did you receive anything for your vote?—15*l.*

23,266. Where were you paid?—At Cattermole's, at the "Army and Navy."

23,267. Who sent you up to Cattermole's?—I went up myself.

23,268. Who told you to go?—Well, I cannot exactly say; many parties told me there was money being got there, and I went up myself and took the money.

23,269. Who went up with you?—Nobody.

23,270. Cannot you remember who told you to go?—No, I cannot do that.

23,271. Were you offered any money by the other side?—I did not come home till a day or two before the election. There were parties came to my house to canvass me, but I never saw anybody.

23,272. Who canvassed you?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson came to my house two or three times. I was not in the way. The Liberal party never came to me at all to the best of my knowledge; if they came I never saw them, and nobody was in the house.

23,273. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

Mrs. Mary Newstead sworn; examined by Mr. Russell.

Mrs. Mary Newstead.

23,274. Are you the wife of Thomas Newstead?—Yes.

23,275. Do you remember your husband being canvassed by Sir Edmund Lacon at the last election?—Yes.

23,276. Can you remember what Sir Edmund Lacon said?—Yes.

23,277. Will you tell me?—When he came in he asked my husband if he wanted a doctor. He said, "No, my old lady is my best doctor," alluding to me; that was what passed. He says, "If you do not go for me you will not go against me;" and he said, "That I do not know anything about;" that was what passed.

23,278. Did Sir Edmund Lacon then go away?—Yes.

23,279. Did Sir Edmund Lacon say that if your husband would vote for him he would do anything for him?—I did not hear that.

23,280. You have told us, Mrs. Newstead, all that Sir Edmund Lacon said?—I have told you, sir, all that I heard, every word.

23,281. And you were standing close by, and must have heard everything?—I was close by, but I was walking about the room because there were several gentlemen with him standing there.

23,282. Who was with Sir Edmund Lacon?—That I cannot tell.

23,283. Was Mr. Hunter with him?—I do not recollect at all. Mr. Hunter came with him one time, I know, but my husband was not at home.

23,284. Did your husband tell you he had received some money for his vote at the last election?—No, he never said anything about it.

23,285. You are sure of that?—Yes.

William Diboll Baldwin recalled; examined by Mr. Slade.

W. D Baldwin.

28,286. Is Botwright your brother-in-law?—Yes, he is.

23,287. What is Botwright?—A cabinet-maker.

23,288. Did you ever have any conversation with Botwright about your vote?—Never.

23,289. Do you still adhere to your statement that

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

W. D. Baldwin.

6 Oct. 1866.

you received no money from Mr. Downing for your vote?—I never received a single penny.

23,290. You see Mr. Downing here?—Yes.

23,291. You know the man?—Yes, I know him well.

23,292. Do you remember the night before the election?—Yes.

23,293. Were you in the Market Place that night?—I called at Botwright's shop because I understood a party was removing some furniture from off my premises. The house had been shut up about nine months. I asked him to go round with me after he had shut up the shop, and he said he wanted to go into the "Angel," and he said, "Wait till I come out," and I suppose I waited five minutes; there were several people in the market; there were about three or four people came out of the "Angel" across the market, and he sang out to me, I could go, that he would soon follow. He was going along with me down to a cottage of mine. He sang out, "You can be going, I will soon follow."

23,294. Did Botwright go into the "Angel?"—Botwright did go into the "Angel," and told me to wait a few minutes till he came out.

23,295. Did you wait?—I waited about five minutes.

23,296. Did Botwright come out?—He came out with three or four people.

23,297. Was Downing one of them?—I do not know.

23,298. What time of night was this?—I should think it might be about 10 or half-past 10; I cannot remember the exact time; he had been with me two or three nights before that down to this cottage of mine on the Denes.

23,299. Did Botwright come out in the company of the people, or was he by himself?—There were two or three more along with him.

23,300. Did you know any of them?—No.

23,301. Were they all strangers?—I did not notice any of them.

23,302. Do you know Downing by sight?—Yes, I do know Downing.

23,303. Was he one of them?—I do not remember seeing him.

23,304. Can you say whether he was or not?—I do not think he was; it was night time; I will not be positive of it on account of being night time.

23,305. Did you speak to any of those men who came out with Botwright?—I never spoke to anyone. Botwright just sang out to me, "You can be going, I will soon follow," and I went down by the market gates.

23,306. When did he sing out to you?—After he came out of the "Angel," after he was coming across the market.

23,307. Where did he go to himself?—He was along with those two or three people; he said he would follow me.

23,308. Did he follow you?—No; I waited about there some time, he did not come, and I went home; I never saw any more of him.

23,309. Did he join you again that night?—No, I never saw anything more of him that night; I got home, it might be about a quarter past 11.

23,310. Did you walk home by yourself?—Yes, all alone by myself.

23,311. Whereabouts in the Market Place were you standing?—I think it was somewhere directly opposite the roadway leading to the market gates by the fish market.

23,312. Was there a lamp-post about there?—I think there was; I forget whether the lights were alight that night; I think it was moonlight; I do not remember their being alight.

23,313. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Have you been speaking to Botwright about this since you were examined the other day?—About my coming up here?

23,314. Yes?—He first mentioned it directly I went in; he understood I had been up.

23,315. Botwright mentioned it to you first?—Yes; he is living at my house till he gets something to do.

23,316. Is he there at the present moment?—No, he is out at work somewhere.

23,317. Where is he?—When he goes out of a morning we do not often see him till he comes home at night.

23,318. Did you leave this court with the intention of going to find Botwright?—When I left the last time; when I was up the other day, do you mean?

23,319. No, this morning?—I have not left the court; I have been here the whole time.

23,320. Did you not leave this court with the intention of going to find Botwright this morning?—No, I have been sitting here all the time; I have not left the court to-day.

23,321. You are sure you have not left the court to-day?—Not since the gentleman came up to me; he drew up for me directly I got in to dinner; he got into a cab and asked me to come up. That is the first word I heard about it.

23,322. When did you first recollect that you had been to Botwright's on this day before the election?—The day before the election.

23,323. You told us to-day that the night before the election you went to Botwright's?—I had been to Botwright's several times.

23,324. You told us to-day, you recollect, the night before the election you went to Botwright's; afterwards you went down with Botwright to the Market Place?—Yes.

23,325. When did that first come to your recollection?—I sat at home to consider about it, whether I could bring anything to my recollection.

23,326. When?—The other day, since I was up.

23,327. Did you talk to Botwright on the subject?—No, I never said anything to him on the subject.

23,328. You have never said a word to him on the subject of your being examined the other day?—Yes, I just now said he mentioned that to me directly I got in.

23,329. What did he say?—Well, he said he understood I had been up.

23,330. What else?—Nothing else.

23,331. What did you say to him?—I did not say anything but yes, I had been up.

23,332. Is that all you said to him?—I do not think I said anything else to him; I do not remember anything more; he knew I was summoned to come up.

23,333. Did he know why you were summoned?—Yes, he knew I was summoned by the report in the papers about the 15*l.*; he knew what I was summoned up for.

23,334. Did he say nothing to you about it?—Nothing.

23,335. Did you ask him whether he recollected your being with him on that evening?—No.

23,336. Not a word passed between you on the subject?—No; I have not seen him; he has been out all this morning.

23,337. I am not talking of this morning particularly. Did not Botwright remind you since you were examined here the other day that you came to him the night before the election?—No.

23,338. You told us the other day you had no recollection of being in the Market Place that night?—I could not recollect being in the Market Place that night. Since then I have tried to draw things to my recollection whether I had been in the Market Place or not.

23,339. Where is Botwright now, you must know?—No, I do not.

23,340. Where does he work?—He works at all parts of the town.

23,341. Where was he going to work to-day when he left home?—He did not leave word; yesterday he was out paper hanging in different parts.

23,342. What is he?—A paper-hanger and cabinet-maker.

23,343. Does he work for anybody in particular?—No, for different people; jobbing about; anything he can find to do; he is all over the town.

23,344. He cannot be all over the town at the same time; where is he now?—I cannot say.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

W. D. Baldwin.

6 Oct. 1866.

23,345. Who do you suppose he is working for now?—I have no idea at all, because we do not often speak to one another though he is in the house.

23,346. Does he not live with you?—Yes, because he has nothing to do.

23,347. (Mr. Slade.) Have you ever told Botwright you received any money for your vote at the last election?—No, I never received any money.

23,348. I ask you whether you ever told Botwright you received any money for your vote at the last election?—No.

23,349. That you swear?—That I swear.

23,350. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Have you ever told him you did not?—I told him I did not.

23,351. When was that?—When we see the report in the paper three weeks or a month ago.

23,352. You told us you never said a word to him on the subject, nor he to you?—This is a month ago, when Downing's report came out, that is when I denied it.

23,353. (Mr. Russell.) Downing lives very near you?—Yes.

23,354. How many times have you seen Downing since Mr. Burton told you you had taken a bribe?—I do not remember seeing him once.

23,355. How far off do you live?—Across the road.

23,356. Have you ever taken the trouble to walk across the road to tell Downing he had brought a false charge?—No.

23,357. Why did you not?—I do not like to speak to these sort of men because they abuse you a good deal, so I did not like to go and speak to him.

23,358. Do you think it is a natural thing for a man to remain under a fale imputation, and not go to the man who made it to deny it?—Mr. Burton advised me to come up here and contradict it.

23,359. Do you mean to tell me you have not seen Downing 20 times since?—I am confident of it, nor yet 20 times during the year. I very seldom see Downing.

23,360. Downing says he has seen you two or three times a day?—If he has seen me I have not seen him; he must have been in his house and seen me.

23,361. Perhaps you were afraid to see Downing, and Downing was not afraid to see you?—No, I am not afraid to see anyone. I go backwards and forwards.

G. Crosswell.

George Crosswell sworn; examined by Mr. Slade.

23,362. What are you?—A bootcloser.

23,363. Do you know a man named Botwright?—I do.

23,364. Have you ever had any conversation with Botwright about the vote of Baldwin?—On Thursday evening he came into my house and called me from my work; he asked me "Have you been to hear the commission to-day." I said "No." He says, "I understand my brother-in-law, Baldwin, has been up." I said, "What Baldwin?" He says, "Do you not know him?" Then I recollected him and said, "Yes, I went "to school with him, and I have known him ever since "I have been a boy." He says, "I understand he has denied taking the money." He says, "I should like to have known what he did say." I said, "As I was not "up I cannot say anything about it, you will see some "one by chance who has been up." He said he had the money, and I helped him to it. He said he should speak the truth when he came up, and I said, "Speak the truth like a man." My wife was present when the conversation took place.

23,365. Did Botwright say it was Downing who had given him the money?—He never said who; he said he had the money, and he helped him to it.

23,366. He never mentioned Downing's name?—Never.

23,367. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you know where Botwright is now?—No, I do not know. I only happened to mention it to Downing, I did not wish to come here.

23,368. (Mr. Slade.) Have you a vote?—No.

23,369. (Mr Russell.) Have you ever told anyone besides Downing that Botwright had told you this?—I never told Downing at all. Mr. Eagleton and two or three gentlemen were standing against the rails, and they said Baldwin had the money they believed; and I said, "So do I," and I believe Mr. Eagleton told Mr. Downing.

23,370. You told it to Mr. Eagleton?—Mr. Eagleton and another gentleman were discussing the matter about Mr. Baldwin, and Mr. Eagleton said, "I believe the truth is that Baldwin had the money."

23,371. When was this?—At 2 o'clock.

23,372. To-day?—To-day; and I said, "So do I, by what Botwright said to me."

23,373. Do you know Mr. Downing?—Yes, I know him; he used to live next door but one or two to me. I do not know I ever spoke to the man before, not till to-day.

J. Eagleton.

John Eagleton recalled; examined by Mr. Slade.

23,374. Did you get any money from Mr. Steward at the election in 1859?—I did.

23,375. How much?—If my memory serves me right, about 225*l.*; I think so, I would not be positive of it.

23,376. Was that to give to voters?—It was.

23,377. Did you pay it away to voters?—I did not the whole of it. I took Mr. Steward back the balance at the last. I cannot recollect them all, but I will as well as I can. Isaac Carr Banks.

23,378. As you go on tell us if any of them are dead?—Banks is dead.

23,379. How much?—Either 7*l.* or 10*l.* I cannot say, it is so long back; it is only from memory; it is from no memorandum. Arthur Bland.

23,380. Is he dead?—No.

23,381. He is not on the register?—No. He went off at the registration court.

23,382. How much?—That was 12*l.* That I got back about two months after the election.

23,383. (Mr. Russell.) I see Mr. Bland voted for Lacon and Stracey?—He did.

23,384. (Mr. Slade.) He gave back the money?—I got back the money about two months after the election.

23,385. Did you hear he was bribed the other side?—We got the whole evidence out about it, something about some repairs he did to some boat, but I forget the circumstance now. William Ellis, Buckenham Place.

23,386. Is that Victoria Road?—No. It was Buckenham Place on the 1859 poll book, but it would be Victoria Road. That is the same Ellis.

23,387. How much?—I fancy it was 10*l.* Mr. Livingston went down and saw him. Then I gave a man by the name of Whittaker, but I do not know what, to go over to Ingham Hall to fetch Robert Frarey.

23,388. Was Frarey a voter?—Yes. He was then living at Ingham Hall. He was a voter on the 1859 election. Robert Frarey; he was then living at a place called Ingham Hall.

23,389. How much money did you send to Frarey?—It was merely to pay the coach hire, and cabs, and a pair of horses to bring him to Yarmouth, given to this Whittaker. I do not know how much it was.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

J. Eagleton.

6 Oct. 1866.

23,390. Who was the next?—Alfred Goffin.

23,391. Of Fuller's Hill?—Yes, that is the man.

23,392. How much did you give him?—I thought it was 10*l.*, but he said the other day in his examination it was only 9*l.*, so I suppose it was only 9*l.* Then I gave a man of the name of Louttid some money, how much it was I do not know. It was for a man of the name of Goulder.

23,393. And who else?—And Abraham Hall. There might be one or two more, but I cannot say. I daresay I shall be able to recollect.

23,394. You gave him a large sum of money?—I do not say a large sum; whether it was for two or three I cannot say.

23,395. For his own vote?—No. He was a clerk in the room. Then William Hunt, of Gaol Street, it was then.

23,396. Is this William Hunt dead?—No. He lives close by.

23,397. He is not on the register?—He is not on the register now.

23,398. What did you give him?—I think it was 7*l.* Then Elijah Hunt.

23,399. He is not on the register?—Not on the last register.

23,400. How much?—That was 10*l.* Then there was a man on the register of the name of William Lavender. He was some long distance off. I paid him his expenses. I do not know what it amounted to; I think something like 4*l.* or 5*l.*, something like that. Then Charles Lubbock.

23,401. Charles Lubbock, of King Street?—No, it was Regent Street.

23,402. But the same man?—Not the same man.

23,403. How much?—That was 12*l.* Then there was a Robert Myhill, of Gaol Street; that was either 7*l.* or 10*l.*, but I cannot recollect. Then there was a Richard Neave, he had removed to Cambridge, and I wrote to him, and paid his expenses and loss of time. What it was I am not able to say, merely a few pounds. Then I gave William Newman some money; that was not for himself, but for other voters. Some he spent and some he kept.

23,404. Do you know how much you gave him?—I cannot say. I think one of the names was a man of the name of James Palmer, and what he had the other money for I forget entirely. Then John Sumner.

23,405. John Sumner, of St. Peter's Road?—Yes.

23,406. How much?—10*l.* John Watts.

23,407. John Watts, of North Market Road?—No.

23,408. John Watts, of Symonds Square?—Yes.

23,409. How much?—That was 10*l.* Joseph Bensley; that is on the Southtown list.

23,410. How much?—I did not know that I gave him anything, but he said in his evidence I had given him 5*l.* I had forgotten it entirely.

23,411. If he said you gave it him, no doubt you did?—No doubt I did. Then I can give you another list of parties whom I canvassed, but who I cannot say I gave money to or no, it is so long ago. I say a Daniel Beales; I recollect perfectly well going to him two or three times.

23,412. Daniel Beales, of the Victoria Road?—Yes. John Brooks I also went to, and a man of the name of Chaston.

23,413. John Brooks is not on the list?—He was then, he is since dead. I went up to George Chaston; I went there with Mr. Livingston.

23,414. Is he dead?—No. He is in Yarmouth.

23,415. Do you know he is off the register?—He has been out of a 10*l.* occupation for a long time. I also went with Mr. Livingston to that Mr. Ellis you have got down. I went with Mr. Livingston there. I do not know whether he can recollect the money he had.

23,416. Was that William Ellis?—Yes. I also went to Samuel Goodwin. I went to see him two or three times, but I do not know whether I gave him any money.

23,417. Any others?—Yes. I went with Mr. Livingston to Alfred Harpley.

23,418. He is not on the list now?—No, he is not, I think he is dead. And I and Mr. Livingston also went to Stephen Holdsworth.

23,419. Is he dead?—No.

23,420. He is not on the list?—He is in a cottage. He has been off the register for some time. I went to a James Johnson and Samuel Johnson. I fancy I gave James Johnson some money; whether I did Samuel I do not know.

23,421. Is that James Johnson, of the Queen's Road?—Yes; I saw them both two or three times.

23,422. Do you know a man of the name of Scarles?—Yes; perfectly well.

23,423. Johnson took 9*l.* of Scarles?—Which Johnson are you speaking of?

23,424. James Johnson, of the Queen's Road?—Then I might have given Scarles the money; he was acting with me at the time. I forget the circumstance, it is so long ago; and I also went with Mr. Livingston to a man of the name of John Cubitt Nichols, but I do not think we did anything with him.

23,425. When you say Mr. Scarles was acting with you, had you given Mr. Scarles money?—I would not be positive, but he was up, I think, in the room with me, the same as Louttid and others. He was very active.

23,426. Is Mr. Scarles living?—No. He went up to the petition; he got a bad cold there, and came back and died. He was a very active man.

23,427. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Where did he get his money from?—Who?

23,428. This Scarles?—I cannot say whether I gave it him, or whether he had it from Mr. Steward.

23,429. Mr. Steward has not given us his name?—It is most probable he had it from me, as we were in and out together.

23,430. His name is not given by Mr. Steward?—It is most probable from me. I cannot account for the amount I had, except the balance I took back; therefore I think it is probable Scarles had the money from me, the same as Newman and Louttid, in the same way I gave James Sharman some money. In fact I feel certain I did, but I do not know anything about the amount. He is not on the present register. That is as many as I have been able to recollect.

23,431. Did you give back the balance to Mr. Steward?—I did.

23,432. How much?—I have had an impression it was between 40*l.* and 50*l.*, but I could not be positive as to the amount. I recollect this perfectly well. When I took it back he was rather pleased at the work that was done with so little money, that he offered me any money I thought proper out of the balance. I refused a single penny. I said I would have my bill out of the regular money, but would not take a farthing out of the bribery money.

23,433. What did you get for your services?—Nothing out of that. I was six weeks throughout the whole election.

23,434. What did you get in the regular way?—I think my bill was 20*l.* for the six weeks.

23,435. Was that all the money you received in 1859?—That is all. I received none of anyone else.

23,436. That is all you received?—Yes, that is all I received.

23,437. Had you spent any money in the year 1857?—I had done a great deal in 1857 to my sorrow, but not in the bribery way, not a farthing; I would not do it.

23,438. Did you give in any papers to Mr. Steward at the time?—Yes; I returned every penny of it to Mr. Steward.

23,439. Mr. Steward says he gave you 250*l.*?—I do not think he did; I have an impression it was about 225*l.* I recollect his saying this, that I had bought ten men more than another man who had 100*l.* more than I had.

23,449. (Mr. Russell.) Did you receive it all at one time?—I think not, but I could not be positive; I do not think I did all at one time. As I took the names I took the money.

23,441. Have you made any calculation of how much you have been able to account for of the 225*l.*?—I have made a calculation somewhere on a piece of paper, about 147*l.*, something like that; but what I paid to Louttid, Newman, Lavender, and Neave, I do not know.

23,442. Those being of course large sums?—Two of the men would have larger sums.

23,443. When was it that you received this money, do you remember?—I had refused, the same as I had in 1857, to have anything to do with the bribery at all. But they sent for me, I think it was the day, or the day before the election, and begged of me to take these lists because they were fearful they had not another man. I said, "Here I am; I have been "round with the canvassing parties, and upon the score "of agency, if anything comes out, what is to become "of the seats?" However they had nobody else to do it, and I took it.

23,444. Do you know when the bribery began on that side in 1859?—I know it began two or three days before I knew anything about it, because I knew Mr. Clements and others had received money for that purpose.

23445. Do you know when bribery began by the Conservatives at that election?—I could not tell at this distance of time.

23,446. With which side did the bribery first begin?—That I would not undertake to say at this distance of time.

23,447. But the bribery had began some few days on your side before you received the money?—It had, because for this reason. I had seen Mr. Clements's list, and I had seen another list besides.

23,448. Can you remember what day of the week the polling day was in 1859?—I can by reference to the poll-book, but I cannot from recollection.

23,449. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) On the Friday?—Yes, the Friday.

23,450. (Mr. Russell.) Was that within a week that you received the money from Mr. Steward?—I think the night I spent the money, if I recollect, was the night of the day before, the night previous to the election.

23,451. I asked the time you received it?—I spent it the same day.

23,452. The moment you received it you spent it?—I received it in the evening, and I finished at the "Star." I went to Mr. Steward's and received it.

23,453. You did not receive it earlier than the Wednesday before the polling day?—It was only a day or two, I am positive of that.

23,454. (Mr. Slade.) Was Mr. Neave acting under you?—Which Mr. Neave?

23,455. Either of them?—No, not at that election.

23,456. What were the names you gave at this election, Scarles, Newman, Louttid, and who?—I had forgotten Scarles until you brought it to my memory.

23,457. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) I took down the name of Richard Neave?—Yes. That was the man who removed from Yarmouth to Cambridge, and I wrote to him to come, and I would pay his expenses.

23,458. (Mr. Slade.) I want to know the names you gave us as acting with you. I mean the men you gave money to to give to the other people?—Louttid was one.

23,459. Scarles another?—Yes.

23,460. And Newman?—Yes.

23,461. And the fourth?—I had an impression until I heard the evidence of Greenhow, that he had. He was one that was in my room, but I cannot say whether he had or no.

23,462. (Mr. Russell.) Do you know a man named William Spillings?—Yes, perfectly well.

23,463. Do you know whether he took any part in bribing in 1859?—I should rather say no. My impression would lead me to say no.

23,464. His name was given to us by Mr. Livingston as being one of the bribers in that election?—In 1857?

23,465. He was examined before us to-day, and says he did take a part in bribing in 1857, but felt he did not in 1859?—I do not think he did in 1859. That was my impression.

23,466. Do you know a man named Thomas William Clarke?—Perfectly well.

23,467. Did he take an active part in 1859?—I never knew an election but what he did not take an active part.

23,468. He was a Gorleston man?—Yes.

23,469. Do you know whether he had any money entrusted to him in 1859?—I have heard him complain of being a good deal of money out of pocket, but I cannot say he had money. He was a man in Gorleston that I looked to, as you would to Mr. Rivett on the other side.

23,470. Did you regard him as the Mr. Rivett on the other side?—Yes.

23,471. Then, in fact, you had no doubt that he spent money in bribery?—If he did not spend it he had parties who did it.

23,472. In fact, to such an extent that you have heard him complain he was out of pocket?—Yes. He told me so, and so have the family since.

23,473. That he paid more than he received?—He was considerably out of pocket by the party.

23,474. Can you give us the names of men who were concerned in bribing in 1859, that we have not got at present?—George King would be a likely man; and I have no doubt Mr. Chapman too. I should fancy what money he spent might not come through Mr. Steward; I should fancy so. George King, I should fancy, would act under some one from Gorleston, and perhaps not direct from Mr. Steward.

23,475. Who would George King get his money from?—I can scarcely say; I should rather fancy it would come from such as Mr. Reynolds. I should think so. I do not think George King was known enough among us at the time to have money of Mr. Steward.

23,476. Do you believe any money was received in 1859 by the sub-agents except Mr. Christopher Steward?—I can scarcely say that. My impression has been ever since 1859, as it is now at this moment, that the amount of money spent at that election, which I have heard in this court, would not tally with my opinion ever since the election.

23,477. What is your opinion?—My opinion was that the sum was a good deal larger. I have a very strong impression.

23,478. Much more was spent than we have before us?—I think so.

23,479. Then, in fact, if Mr. Christopher Steward has accounted for all he disbursed, somebody else must have been entrusted with money?—That is my opinion.

23,480. Have you any opinion in your own mind sufficiently strong to justify you in venturing who that person may have been?—No. I will not attempt to say that I have, for two or three reasons, though my opinion is there was more money spent than I have seen shown here.

23,481. I should like to hear your reasons?—I recollect talking the subject over privately different times with Mr. Livingston.

23,482. Was Mr. Livingston's opinion, then, more money had been spent than has been accounted for?—I think so.

23,483. Has Mr. Livingston ever mentioned any sum as he estimated as probably spent?—We have talked the thing over many times. In fact there was a disagreement with several parties then as to the money Mr. Steward had received.

23,484. What do you in your own mind estimate as the amount of the illegal expenditure on that side?—My impression was a little over 3,000*l.* That always was my impression, and that is so at this moment.

23,485. Do you know whether Mr. Livingston was

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

J. Eagleton.

of the same opinion when you discussed it with him ?—I think he was.

23,486. Was he ?—I should say he was. I perfectly recollect this, a meeting being called at the "Star" by Mr. Livingston, and I would not say a particular person, but him and me, and two or three more, asking Mr. Steward to render up an account of the money he received.

23,487. Which side do you think spent most money illegally in the election of 1859 ?—I can say little about the 1859 election, further than what I have now said to you. I can hardly form an opinion. Of course there was a deal of talking at every other election, the same as at this.

23,488. You have no accurate information of the expenditure of the Conservative side at the election of 1859 ?—I do not think I have.

23,489. Have you never since you have changed your political party heard what the expenditure was estimated at on the Conservative side in 1859 ?—I do not think I have; if I have I forget it now.

23,490. Do you consider the price of votes has risen since 1859 ?—Yes. I do not recollect a single case in 1859 that I spent, except in one case, the amount of 12*l.*, and there I got the money back. The next highest was 10*l.* I had none higher than that. I had 5*l.*, 6*l.*, and 7*l.*

23,491. A man named George Clements, who has been examined before us this morning, said that sums were paid up to 25*l.* ?—There was a reason in that. That man had taken some large amount of money from the other parties, and he offered Mr. Clements if he would make it higher, he would take the money back. There was a particular reason in that case.

23,492. What should you put as the average price of a vote in 1859 ?—I think Mr. Clements was not particularly up to it, so much as two or three of them. I think his votes cost a little more.

23,493. My question is this, what should you put as the average price of a vote in 1859 ?—In asking a man what he wanted, which we used frequently to do, it was rarely we were asked 10*l.*

23,494. I suppose 10*l.* was considered a good deal in 1859, and it was considered very little in 1865 ?—Yes, certainly.

C. Botwright.

CHARLES BOTWRIGHT sworn ; examined by Mr. SLADE.

23,495. What are you ?—A cabinet-maker.

23,496. Whom did you vote for at the last election ?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

23,497. What did you receive for your vote ?—Not a farthing.

23,498. Were your rooms taken at the time of the election ?—Yes.

23,499. Who by ?—By the Liberal party.

23,500. Who by ?—Mr. Livingston. It is my show-shop, it was a case of emergency. They had hired Savory's on the Quay. They had found he was doing all he could against them, and was not going to vote, and Mr. Livingston asked me to clear my show-shop ; stand the things on one side, and they would be obliged to me. They did not know where else to go, and they should not keep there.

23,501. What did you get paid for your rooms ?—I took the bill in to Mr. Clowes. They ordered refreshments there. I supplied them with refreshments, tea and coffee, and whatever they wanted. I put it down, and took the bill to Mr. Clowes. He said, "I "cannot pay you for this, it is not legal." I said, "I "am a poor man and cannot afford to feed the 'bus "drivers, and fly drivers, and people coming in. I "cannot afford to feed them."

23,502. What was the amount of your bill ?—I cannot say exactly what it was, 7*l.* or 8*l.* Not for refreshments, but including the room. I was to have 1*l.* a-day for the room. They hired the room from the Friday up to the Wednesday.

23.503. And your bill was 7*l.* or 8*l.* ?—Yes.

23,504. Did you get paid ?—I got paid for the room.

23,505. What did you get paid for that ?—4*l.*

23,506. Who paid you the 4*l.* ?—Mr. Clowes.

23,507. What was done with the remainder of the bill ?—He told me to take the bill home, and make a new one out for the room by itself, not the refreshments.

23,508. Which was the 4*l.* bill ?—Yes.

23,509. And that was paid ?—Yes.

23,510. The remaining 5*l.* or 4*l.*, or the remaining 3*l.* ?—I felt a little uneasy about that.

23,511. You got 4*l.* paid ?—Yes.

23,512. What became of the remaining 3*l.* or 4*l.* ?—I did not get it from Mr. Clowes, he would not pay me.

23,513. Did you get paid at all ?—Yes.

23,514. Who by ?—Mr. Livingston, about a month or five weeks after that; he paid me more than that.

23,515. What did Mr. Livingston pay you ?—I think it was 10*l.* or 11*l.* I cannot say. I had an account with him, and we squared it off.

23,516. What did he pay you the 11*l.* for ?—For the refreshments, and they damaged some of the furniture in the shop; they took the French polish off the tables with their feet, and I told him I was stopped in my business. It was an injury to me, they damaged the glasses. I told Mr. Livingston about it, and he said I should not lose by it, and his son told me one day when I was passing to call in, and so I went in, and we squared off.

23,517. Did not Mr. Livingston pay you as much as 15*l.* ?—No ; he will not say he did that.

23,518. I think he has said so ?—I think not ; he said wrong if he did. It made up about 14*l.* or 15*l.*, including the letting of the room ; I cannot say to a pound. He had a bill against me, and we squared it off, somewhere about 14*l.* or 15*l.* I owed him 3*l.* or 4*l.*, and we squared it off.

23,519. What was your room used for ?—A sort of committee room. The committee from the other place, from Savory's, came there, the same men. They did not stop there after they found out Savory being a sort of a turn-coat. There is one gentleman sitting there, Mr. Lawn; he was one of them.

23,520. Had you made any arrangement with Mr. Livingston as to how much was to be paid for your rooms ?—He said he would satisfy me for it. I said it would stop the trade, being a show-shop, stowing the things on one side.

23,521. No sum was mentioned ?—He said afterwards, "I shall give you a pound a-day for your rooms."

23,522. Did he ask you for your vote at that time ?—No.

23,523. How had you voted in 1859 ?—I always voted Liberal, three times.

23,524. Did you ever receive money for your vote ?—Never voluntarily.

23,525. Did you involuntarily ?—Yes.

23,526. Who was that from ?—Mr. Cooper.

23,527. What year was that ?—In 1859.

23,528. How did Mr. Cooper force money upon you ?—He came round to me. I was under an obligation to Dr. Norman. He was a great friend of mine, who lent me money to go into business. He was a strong Conservative. Mr. Cooper came and asked me to vote Conservative on Dr. Norman's side. I said, "No." He said, "You must not go against him, he is a good friend of yours." I said, "Yes, a kind friend." He said, "What is the price of that glass there ?" that was hanging in the shop. I had a card hanging in the shop, "Terms, cash ;" that is my business there. "What is the price of that glass ?" he said. I said, "About 2*l.* 10*s.* or 2*l.* 15*s.*, I cannot say exactly." He said, "I shall give a higher figure than that for it." I said, "If you like to buy the glass you "can ; but if you buy the glass I shall not vote your "side."

23,529. Did he buy the glass ?—No, he left. Then I saw him after that down by the packet.

23,530. You said that Mr. Cooper forced money upon you ?—Yes.

23,531. Now go on and tell us how?—I saw him after that at the packet. I saw a friend off the packet on the Wednesday. He came across and said, "Botwright, I shall give you 20*l.* if you vote our side ;" and Mr. Page stood by and said, "What is Mr. Cooper up to ?" I said, "He offers me some cash." Then he went away up the Star Row, where he lived, and I saw nothing more of him. Then the nomination day I took half a dozen chairs home to the Market Place to a cook-shop. My man was with me coming along. I saw Mr. Cooper at the bottom of the Row, and someone else. He said, "I want to see you." We went up. A young man was standing at the desk. He told him to go away. He took and barred the door and bolted it, and put his back against it, and said, "You are not going against Dr. Norman, your best friend." I said, "Yes." He said, "You cannot contradict it." I said, "Yes, I shall go against my best friend." I said, "I want to go ; I am not a prisoner." I undid the door, and as I was coming out, I had a short coat on like this, and he said, "Take that. I shall trust to you. Do not go against the Doctor ;" and he put it in my pocket.

23,532. How much was in your pocket ?—I did not know how much was there at the time ; but I went down and told my brother. He said, "You are a poor man ; it is tempting you." I said, "I shall not vote for them after all this."

23,533. How much was there ?—There was 15*l.*

23,534. What did you do with the 15*l.* ?—I went to Mr. Watkin the election morning about half-past 7, to the "Star," and I told him exactly how Mr. Cooper had been treating me ; and I said, "What shall I do with the money ?" and he said, "Go to Mr. Costerton." I went to Mr. Costerton's office, and he was not at home. That was the time they were speaking out of the balcony window ; so I kept the money in my pocket that day until I got home at night.

23,535. Did you return it to Mr. Cooper ?—No ; it would have been put down to me all the same for that if I had returned it. No doubt about that.

23,536. Did you receive any money on the other side ?—Never a penny in my life. I challenge everybody in Yarmouth. Never a penny. If I did, you can condemn me. I always voted for the Liberals, and never took a penny ; and never a man in Yarmouth can say that I did.

23,537. Had you voted in 1857 ?—Yes.

23,538. For the Liberals ?—Yes.

23,539. I do not understand how you came to keep this money that was forced upon you ?—I should have carried it back, only my brother said, "Do not carry "it back ; he will put it down to you just the same ; you "will be branded just the same. He will collar it him-"self," he said.

23,540. You thought the mischief was done, and you might as well keep it ?—I did not care much about keeping the money. It is very tempting ; but I did not like the system. He is a manœuvrer, a regular schemer.

23,541. Did you say that your rooms were taken instead of Savory's ?—Yes ; they did not leave Savory's at once, but they found out how he was going. I think they stopped there a day or two after that, after Mr. Livingston spoke to me ; but he paid me just the same.

23,542. Savory got paid for his rooms ?—Yes, Savory got paid for his rooms, but they found out how he was going. They were suspicious about him two or three days before they came to mine. They did not come on the Friday, though they engaged them ; and I stowed the goods on one side. I do not think they came in before the Monday or Tuesday. I cannot recollect, but I do not think they did.

23,543. What were your rooms used for ?—For the messengers, to see the state of the poll, and so on ; to see where the voters were, and who had voted.

23,544. What gentlemen came there ?—Mr. Brogden came in.

23,545. Did he sit there ?—No.

23,546. Who sat there ?—There was Mr. Lawn and the two Normans, plumbers and glaziers.

23,547. They sat there and took refreshments ?—They had their refreshments.

23,548. They were not doing the business of the election ?—They were looking over the papers to see who had voted, and who had not, so that they might see who wanted looking up.

23,549. Did Mr. Livingston say anything to you about your vote when he took your rooms ?—Never in his life, and I did not want asking.

23,550. He seems to have asked Mr. Savory about his vote ?—Yes.

23,551. How is it he did not ask you ?—I do not know.

23,552. He thought Savory was going to vote the other side ?—He did afterwards.

23,553. When he found Savory was going to vote the other side he came and engaged your rooms ?—Yes.

23,554. In order to spite Savory ?—I do not know about spite.

23,555. To withdraw his custom from Savory and bring it to you ?—Yes.

23,556. Was nothing said to you about your vote ?—Never a word. I was not asked by a man this last election.

23,557. Did not Mr. Savory ask you which way you were going to vote ?—No, not a man in Yarmouth, only Mr. Brogden. Sir Edmund Lacon called at mine.

23,558. You were examined in the House of Commons after the election of 1859 ?—Yes, that is in reference to Mr. Cooper's offer.

23,559. And this offer of Mr. Cooper's was pretty well known in Yarmouth ?—Yes ; and I saw him in London just after I gave my evidence. I think his name was called in the House of Commons, and he did not appear. I have seen him since, when he used a deal of sarcasm about me, and when I came out I saw Cooper and Mr. Bunn here, in a public-house, and they tapped at the window. I went in with Mr. Greenhow. He attacked me about the money, and I said, "Why do not you go and contradict it ? you are close by."

23,560. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) What did you do with the 15*l.* ?—I went to Mr. Owles, a magistrate of the town, and told him about it.

23,561. I do not want you to go through the whole story. The 15 sovereigns were produced before the Committee of the House of Commons ?—Yes.

23,562. And what became of the 15*l.* ?—Mr. Owles gave them to me back again.

23,563. You put the money in your pocket ?—Yes. I stopped in London a few days.

23,564. You kept it ?—Yes.

23,565. And you spent it ?—Yes ; Mr. Owles told me I had as much right to it as Mr. Cooper.

23,566. You knew the money was not yours ; why did you not return it to the owner ?—I did not know who the right owner was. I knew Mr. Cooper had not the money.

23,567. You knew where it came from ?—I knew it came from Mr. Cooper, but he was as bad off as I was.

23,568. Why did you not return it to him ?—I had no inclination to return it to him.

23,569. You knew it was not yours ?—I knew it was not mine, and I did not think it was his.

23,570. But you knew it came from him ?—I imagined it was Sir Edmund Lacon's.

23,571. Why did you not return it to Sir Edmund Lacon ?—Because he had more money than I have.

23,572. (Mr. Slade.) Do you remember going to fetch Downing at the "Angel" before the last election ?—I saw him at the "Angel."

23,573. Was that the night before the election ?—Yes, I think it was.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

C. Botwright.

6 Oct. 1866.

23,574. What time in the night was it?—I do not know, about 9 or 10, something like that.

23,575. Did you go up to the room where Downing was?—No, I saw him at the bottom of the stairs. I went to speak to Mr. Livingston.

23,576. What did you say to Downing when you saw him there?—I asked him whether Mr. Livingston was there. I think first I told him there was Baldwin, a neighbour of his. He had not said anything to me about money. I heard him say he was going to vote for Mr. Brogden; I was down there when Mr. Brogden called, and I thought he was going one and one; I was rather suspicious about it. I said, "He is now going "out of the market gates; let us see if we can see "him."

23,577. Did Downing go out with you?—Downing went out with me.

23,578. Into the Market Place?—Yes.

23,579. Did you see Baldwin?—Baldwin stood leaning against the fish market-place; he was waiting for me to go down to Somerset Place to watch his house. There was a tenant there going to take the furniture away, and we watched two or three nights, and he was to meet me at the opening just opposite, to go down there.

23,580. And did you point Baldwin out to Downing?—Baldwin did not speak to him. I said, "William, you go on, I will soon overtake you." I said that to Baldwin; his name is William. I said to Downing, "He has not said anything to me about money;" but I said, "Cannot you give me some money for him?" I imagined he would go the other side, one and one.

23,581. You asked Downing to give you money for Baldwin?—Yes.

28,582. What did Downing say to that?—"We will go to the "Feathers,"—that was the house he mostly used. He put his hand in his pocket, and there were some coins there. He said, "I will not pay you now, I will leave him some to-morrow morning." I said, "That will not do." I said, "I would get some to-night if I could," and he said, "Go up to the 'Angel,' and I will get a ticket." He went up to the "Angel," and he met Mr. Mainprice, and that is all I saw of him.

23,583. Did you go down into the Market Place with Downing?—Yes.

23,584. How long did you stay in the Market Place with him?—We went right across; there were five or six people together at the time we went over to this opening.

23,585. Where Baldwin was?—Yes.

23,586. Where Baldwin was waiting?—Yes. He did not know I was going to ask for money for him. He never asked me. I do not know if he would have taken it if I had offered it. I did it at my own responsibility.

23,587. What made you do that?—I imagined he wanted it. He voted for the Conservatives the other time, and I imagined from the manner of him he would go for Sir Edmund Lacon, and I thought if we gave him the money it would tempt him to go for both.

23,588. Did he tell you he was going to vote for the Conservatives?—No, he did not tell me that. He said he should vote for Mr. Brogden, only his employer is a Conservative, and I thought he felt inclined to go the other way. He did not tell me he should vote for Sir Edmund Lacon, but I thought so from the manner of him.

23,589. Then Baldwin had not given you any authority to ask for the money?—No, he never asked it or breathed it. He told me he could have money the other side.

23,590. When did he tell you that?—I think the same night; it is one night I mostly go down to him or he comes to mine. He said he went to the barber's shop to a man of the name of Fry, and he said he would give him money if he voted for the Conservatives, and he said he would not have anything to do with money.

23,591. He said he would not take money?—Not of the Conservatives.

23,592. Did he say he would not of the Liberals?—No. I thought he would.

23,593. And that is the reason you went to Downing?—I did not go on purpose for that. I went to speak to Mr. Livingston about a voter of the name of Parsons. I went with Mr. Livingston and Mr. Brogden down to Parsons. He said, "I think the Blue "party are hanging fire. I think I shall go the "other side," so I went and told Mr. Livingston.

23,594. What do you mean by "hanging fire?"—Hanging fire for money. He was a poor man.

23,595. Would not pay money?—They were not bribing.

23,596. They were hanging fire—that is, were not giving money?—That is what he told me, and I went with Mr. Brogden and Mr. Livingston to this man.

23,597. As soon as you saw Downing, you say you spoke to him about Baldwin?—Not at once. I spoke to one or two persons before then.

23,598. What did you say to Downing before you spoke to him about Baldwin?—I think I asked him whether Mr. Livingston was there, and I said, "There "is a party outside, I think if you were to give him "a little money, I fancy he is shaky, he will go one "and one; if you give him a little he may not go "against the party, but go for both."

23,599. That was Baldwin?—Yes. It was only imagination of him, I thought from the manner of him. He said, "I will vote for Brogden," and he being at the office he was I thought he was a strong Conservative.

23,600. Downing went out with you?—Yes.

23,601. And you heard him chink some money in his pocket?—He put his hand in his pocket.

23,602. And you heard the chink of money?—Yes; but he did not take any out.

23,603. He went into the Market Place?—Yes.

23,604. And Baldwin was there?—Yes; he was there waiting for me to go to Somerset Place; but Baldwin did not speak to Downing, or Downing to him.

23,605. Did you walk off with Downing?—No. I said to Baldwin, "I will overtake you at Somerset Place," and I saw no more of him that night.

23,606. (Mr. Russell.) How do you know Downing did not speak to Baldwin if you went away directly?—I was close by Downing, walking along with him. There were several persons walking backwards and forwards, and Downing seemed rather afraid. He said, "Let us go into the 'Feathers.'" That is the house Downing used. But I said, "I will go back;" and as we came back from the "Feathers," I said to Baldwin, "I shall overtake you," and I went back with Downing to the "Angel," and did not follow Baldwin. I did not go that night to watch.

23,607. (Mr. Slade.) Did Downing and Baldwin go away together?—I did not see them speak to each other.

23,608. Did they go away with each other?—No; they went away in an opposite direction.

23,609. What did Downing go down to the Market Place for?—I do not know.

23,610. He came down with you?—He said, "I shall go down with you."

23,611. You fetched him out?—I did not fetch him out.

23,612. You said, "Here is a man wants money?"—I said, my brother-in-law was outside—Baldwin; see if we can find him.

23,613. And you took Downing out, saying to him, "There is my brother-in-law wants money?"—Yes. I said, "If you pay me it will do."

23,614. He was not so green as to pay you?—No.

23,615. He went out with you?—Yes.

23,616. And there you saw Baldwin?—Yes. I only said one word to him.

23,617. You saw him with your own eyes?—Yes.

23,618. Downing was with you?—Yes.

23,619. What did Downing go out for?—I do not know.

23,620. What did he go out with you for? He went back to the "Angel?"—I went back with him.

23,621. What did he walk out into the Market Place for?—To see Baldwin, I suppose.

23,622. Did he give Baldwin any money?—No.

23,623. Do you know a man named George Crosswell?—Yes.

23,624. A boot-closer?—Yes.

23,625. Did you ever tell him that Baldwin had the money, and you helped him to get it?—No, never in my life.

23,626. That you swear?—Yes.

23,627. Never told him anything of the sort?—He never got it.

23,628. Did you ever tell Crosswell that to your knowledge Baldwin had the money, and you helped him to it?—No.

23,629. That you swear?—Yes.

23,630. And if Crosswell has come here and said that he has perjured himself?—I never recollect saying so.

23,631. That will not do. Crosswell has come here and sworn that. Do you mean to come and take your oath you never said it?—I never did.

23,632. You take your oath to that?—I never did.

23,633. Or anything like it?—I do not recollect it.

23,634. Did you ever speak to Crosswell about this man Baldwin?—I do not know that I ever did.

23,635. Never in your life?—I used to live neighbours with him.

23,636. Baldwin was examined here the other day, do you know that?—I think I was in London at the time.

23,637. Do you know Baldwin was examined here two or three days ago?—Yes.

23,638. Have you ever spoken to Crosswell since then about it?—I think I asked him what was going on at the commision.

23,639. Have you ever spoken to George Crosswell about the examination of Baldwin before us?—Yes, I think I have.

23,640. What did you say to him?—I asked him who had been up to-day. He told me Baldwin had been up. He said he was very nervous. I do not recollect anything else.

23,641. What did he say besides that? Did he say Baldwin had denied taking the money before us?—Yes, I think he did.

23,642. When he said that what did you say to him? Did you say you knew he had got it?—No, I did not say that.

23,643. What did you say?—I did not know he got anything.

23,644. Did you say he had got it, or had not?—I said he had not got it.

23,645. You did not say you had helped him to it?—No, I did not, because I did not know he had got it.

23,646. If he got it you helped him to it, because you fetched Downing to give it him?—I do not think he gave him any that night, because I should have seen it.

23,647. It does not matter if he got money that night, you helped him to it?—Yes, if he got any.

23,648. You did not boast of getting him some?—I did not boast of getting him some.

23,649. You took Downing to him?—He did not go to speak to Mr. Baldwin.

23,650. You took Downing into the square where he was?—I took him past where he was standing.

23,651. How far was he off?—In the middle of the road, and he was leaning against the fish market.

23,652. I suppose about four yards?—Five or six yards.

23,653. About four yards off?—Yes, five or six yards off. We were rather more than that, we were rather past him.

23,654. You saw no money pass?—That I did not.

23,655. Downing has sworn to us that he paid him that night 15 sovereigns under the lamp-post?—I did not see it.

23,656. Whether he did or not you cannot say?—It is impossible for him to pay him without my seeing.

23,657. Why?—Because he was talking to me all the time.

23,658. Who was?—Downing. He said, "There "are so many people passing backwards and forwards, "let us go back to the 'Angel.'" He laid his hand on the door of the "Feathers," and he said, "Let us "go back to the 'Angel,' and I will take Baldwin's "to-morrow morning."

23,659. Have you ever spoken to Baldwin since that day about this money?—I live at his house; I lodge there.

23,660. Have you ever talked the matter over?—Yes. He has been very nettled about it. I said, "It was reported he took the money."

23,661. Do you remember when Downing mentioned to us he had given Baldwin the money? Did you see it in the paper?—I was up here at the time.

23,652. You were in the court?—Yes.

23,663. Did you ask Baldwin about it?—I told him his name was mentioned there, and he felt very wild about it. He said, "I do not like to go across to tell "Downing of it; he is a hot sort of man, and he may attack me for it."

23,664. You say he appeared very much nettled?——Yes. He told me he should speak to his solicitor about it.

23,665. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did he tell you he would go to his solicitor?—He said he would speak to his solicitor about it.

23,666. Who is his solicitor?—A gentleman of the name of Burton.

23,667. (Mr. Slade.) Did he say he would go of his own accord and speak about it?—He said he would go.

23,668. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did he go?—He said two or three times he had seen Mr. Burton, but I do not know where it was.

23,669. (Mr. Russell.) Do you believe Baldwin is a man who would take money for his vote?—I do not hardly know; I was going to try him.

23,670. Had he given you any authority to go and get the money?—No.

23,671. If Downing had given it to you, and he would not have taken it, what should you have done with it?—I should have taken it back to Mr. Downing, being a neighbour.

23,672. As you took it back to Mr. Cooper in 1859?—That is another thing.

THOMAS DOWNING recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

T. Downing.

23,673. Did this man talk to you the whole time you were in the road?—No; he came to me first, and asked for the money for Baldwin. I said, "I will give you a ticket." He said, "That will not do." I said, "I will leave it at his house." He said, "That will not do; you must give it him now." I went across, and gave it to Baldwin in his hand; and this man standing here is telling a palpable lie. I do not think I was three yards off when I gave it him. He went away with Baldwin as far as Dr. Stafford's, the corner of the Market Place, and he was gone 10 minutes or a quarter of an hour, and then he came in again.

23,674. (Mr. Russell.) What o'clock was it?—Between 11 and 12, as near as possible. I went into the "Angel," and said to Richard Steel, "Here is a case." I said, "Here is a man that I did not think would take a penny." He said, "Who is that?" I said "Baldwin." "Damn him," said he, "he is down as a poll clerk; I will strike him out."

23,675. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Whom did you say that to?—Mr. Steel.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY.

C. Botwright.

6 Oct. 1866.

CHARLES BOTWRIGHT recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

23,676. Do you hear that?—I take my oath I never saw a farthing pass.

23,677. Nobody ever says you did; but could that man have given Baldwin the money?—He could not without my seeing him.

23,678. Was he ever near enough to put anything in his hand?—No, he was not near enough by five or six yards. I did not see him speak to him.

23,679. Nobody said you did; but was he near enough to put the money in his hands?—He was not.

23,680. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) When was it that you and Crosswell had the conversation?—I had been up to London, I think. When I came back from London.

23,681. Was it yesterday morning?—I think it was Wednesday.

23,682. Was it not yesterday morning you had the conversation?—No. I think it was Wednesday night or Thursday; I do not know which. I came up from London last Wednesday. I think it was Wednesday night or Thursday; I do not know which it was.

23,683. Baldwin was examined on Thursday, and therefore, this conversation could not have taken place before then?—Then it was the night; it was Thursday night.

23,684. Who was present when this conversation took place between you and Crosswell?—There was an old woman sat there.

23,685. Was that Crosswell's wife?—I think it is. I thought it was his mother, but I think it is his wife. She is an older woman much than he is a man.

23,686. (Mr. Slade.) Did she hear the conversation?—I do not think she did. It was a large house, and she sat almost the further part of the house.

Mrs. S. Crosswell.

Mrs. SARAH CROSSWELL sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

23,687. Are you the wife of George Crosswell?—Yes.

23,688. Do you know Charles Botwright?—Yes.

23,689. Do you remember his coming to your house last Thursday night?—Yes, quite well.

23,690. What did he come about?—He was talking about the election affairs.

23,691. About the election—about Mr. Baldwin?—Yes.

23,692. What did he say about him?—He said he took some money, and it was through him; he helped him to it he knew; he certainly took the money, because he helped him to it. Those were the words as far as I can say.

23,693. He knew he took the money, because he had helped him to it?—Yes, those were the words I heard him say.

23,694. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you know what you were coming here for?—No, not exactly, I did not.

23,695. Did you know that your husband was here this morning?—I did not know he was here this morning. I thought he was here this afternoon, but I did not know exactly he was here.

23,696. Mr. Ellis fetched you?—Yes, Mr. Ellis fetched me now. I was at home when the gentleman came.

23,697. Did Mr. Ellis tell you that you were wanted here?—Yes, he told me I was wanted here.

23,698. He did not tell you what you were wanted for?—No.

23,699. Did you know what you were wanted for?—I had an idea of it.

23,700. Why?—Because my husband told me.

23,701. When?—To-day, at dinner time. He thought I should have to come, he said.

23,702. Did your husband tell you what to say?—No, he did not tell me what to say.

23,703. He told you what he had said here?—Yes, he told me what it was upon.

23,704. And you are quite certain that that conversation occurred?—I am quite sure of it.

23,705. (Mr. Russell.) Do you know if Botwright said how much money it was?—No, I do not recollect the sum. I do not remember the sum at all.

23,706. Did your husband tell you to be sure and tell the truth?—He said but very little about it. He said, he thought I should have to go about the conversation which Botwright had at mine on Thursday night.

23,707. And did he then remind you what that conversation was?—Yes. He said, "Do you recollect what it was?" and I said "Quite well."

23,708. Did he tell you, or did you tell him?—I told him. He said, "Do you recollect what it was?" And I repeated it to him.

23,709. He did not in the first instance remind you of what Botwright had said?—This afternoon he did, before he came out.

23,710. He reminded you?—Yes. He asked me if I could recollect what it was, and I said, "Yes, I recollected what it was," and I repeated it to him.

23,711. You repeated it to your husband before your husband repeated it to you?—Yes.

23,712. And did he say, "That is right?"—Yes, "That is quite right;" and he said to me, "I do not know that you will not have to go up." I said, "Oh, nonsense;" I did not think anything of it.

Adjourned to Monday morning, at half-past 10 o'clock.

TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 8th October 1866.

R. Steele.

RICHARD STEELE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

23,713. Did you see Downing the night before the election at the "Angel?"—Yes, several times.

23,714. Do you remember seeing him at the "Angel?"—Yes.

23,715. Do you remember his coming in and saying anything to you about a man named Baldwin?—No; he did not say anything to me. He was talking about him, and I was present at the time, and he made a remark as to a Mr. Baldwin having been paid some money. What it was I do not know, but I turned round and said, "What Baldwin do you mean?" He said, "Baldwin, clerk to Mr. Watling." "What!" I said, "a man like that holding a good situation. I "have him on my list as a check clerk; if that is the "case I will cross him off." He said, "I have paid him," and I did cross him off.

23,716. What time of the evening was that?—Rather late in the evening, because I did not get back to the "Angel" until between 10 and 11 o'clock, I think.

BENJAMIN MOTTS recalled; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

23,717. What are you?—A baker.

23,718. Have you been examined before?—Yes.

23,719. When you were examined before you told us you received no money in 1859?—I said I could not recollect. I was put down as such.

23,720. Have you remembered anything since?—I remember since that I did do so.

23,721. Who from?—Mr. William Tobias Johnson.

23,723. Can you remember if you were offered any money on the other side in 1859?—No, not at all.

23,724. You voted for Watkin and Young?—I did so.

N. Swann

NATHANIEL SWANN sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

23,725. Do you live at High Hill, Gorleston?—Yes.

23,726. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

23,727. What are you?—A fisherman.

23,728. Did you receive any money for your vote?—15*l.*

23,729. Who paid it to you?—Mr. John Hammond gave it me at night; in the evening anyhow.

23,730. Did you know old Mr. Rivett?—Yes, quite well.

23,731. Did he offer you any money?—No; he stopped the gig the morning before the election against my gate as he was passing to Yarmouth, and he asked me if I was going to vote. I told him, "Yes." He said, "Who for?" "Sir Edmund Lacon," said I, "as I have promised, and Mr. Goodson." "All right," said he, and he drove off. That is all he said to me.

23,732. Do you know any man he gave money to?—No, I cannot say.

23,733. Were you offered any money by the Liberal party at the last election?—Yes.

23,734. Who by?—I was offered money by Mr. King, of Gorleston.

23,735. Henry King?—No, George King.

23,736. How much did he offer you?—He did not offer me any sum.

23,737. Did you refuse it?—Yes.

23,738. Was that after you had the 15*l.* from John Hammond?—No, before that. I promised Sir Edmund Lacon I would vote for him when he was canvassing.

23,739. Should you have voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson if you had not had the money?—Yes.

23,740. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

J S. Skipper.

JAMES STARK SKIPPER sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

23,741. Are you on the register?—I think not; I have not looked. I was, I believe, but I do not think I was at the last election.

23,742. What are you?—I am a solicitor, in Norwich.

23,743. Were you in Yarmouth at the last election?—No, I was not; I was the legal agent in Norwich for the Conservative interest, and, therefore, of course I could not be here.

23,744. You were on the register for Yarmouth?—I do not know whether I was or not. I was put off before, I think.

23,745. Do you live in Britannia Terrace?—I did so.

23,746. Did you vote at the last election?—I did not.

23,747. Were you canvassed for your vote?—I was not.

23,748. By neither party?—By neither party.

23,749. The reason you were summoned was, that your name was given in a list by Mr. Jones, the "stranger," as having received 15*l.* We have had a great many cases before us where money was evidently drawn for voters and never paid to them. No doubt this is one of those cases?—I certainly knew nothing of Mr. Jones, or Mr. Jones' money.

23,750. There is very little doubt that the 15*l.* went into somebody else's pocket?—Very probably.

23,751. Were you in Yarmouth in the year 1859?—In the course of the year I might have been. I did not reside here, merely in the summer for a few weeks.

23,752. Did you vote?—No; I never voted at a Yarmouth election.

23,753. In fact, you have taken no part?—No part whatever.

23,754. We are sorry that you have been put to the inconvenience of coming?—I am very glad to attend. I wish to state, as I was the legal agent of the Conservative party in Norwich, on principle, I entirely abjure all bribery in elections. I have had something to do with elections, but I never offered a bribe to a man in my life, and never wish to.

W. C. Rushmer.

WILLIAM CHARLES RUSHMER sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

23,755. You are on the register as "Charles William Rushmer?"—I know I am; I have tried several times to have it altered.

23,756. What are you?—A lodging-house keeper now.

23,757. For whom did you vote at the last election?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

23,758. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—No.

23,759. Do you know a man of the name of Page?—I do not know that I do personally.

23,760. It was mentioned to us that you received 15*l.* from Page, which had been given to Page by Mr. Greenhow for you?—I do not know either of the names.

23,761. I believe there was a namesake of yours on the register in 1859?—I was on the register in 1859.

23,762. There was also a namesake of yours on the register at that time?—Yes. I knew him at that time; poor fellow, he was killed.

23,763. I will merely go through the form of asking if you received any money in 1859?—I received travelling expenses.

23,764. Who from?—I cannot tell you; because I asked for it, and they said it was not allowed. It was left at my house, and my own servant gave it to me.

23,765. What was the amount?—The amount was 6*l.*; I had 350 miles to travel, besides cab hire.

23,766. Where had you come from?—I came from Trafford Hall, about six or seven miles from Chester. I had to get a cab to go there, and then there were all my travelling expenses up here and back again.

23,767. Who was it to whom you applied for your travelling expenses?—Poor man, he is dead. To John William Green; he was an old friend of mine. He said, "I cannot tell you anything about it." He said, "Leave it as it is." I said, "Very well; I do not ask for a bribe or anything else."

23,768. And shortly after that the money was left at your house?—It was.

23,769. Whom did you vote for in 1859?—For Sir Henry Stracey and Sir Edmund Lacon.

23,770. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you know at that time who the agents of the candidates were?—No; I did not interest myself enough for that. I came down, and I went back again as quick as I could, because my time was so engaged that I did not feel it worth while inquiring or interesting myself in it.

TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY.

E. D. Louttid.

8 Oct. 1866.

EDWIN DUNCAN LOUTTID sworn ; examined by Mr. SLADE.

23,771. What are you ?—A general agent and inspector of weights and measures for the port of Great Yarmouth.

23,772. Did you vote at the last election ?—I did.

23,773. Who for ?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

23,774. Did you take any part in the election besides voting ?—No.

23,775. Did you canvass any people for their votes ?—No.

23,776. In the election of 1859 we have heard you received money from Mr. Eagleton ?—I did.

23,777. How much ?—25*l.*

23,778. What did you do with that money ?—I gave 10*l.* to Abraham Hall, a pork butcher, living then on the White Horse Plain.

23,779. Is he dead or alive ?—He is alive ; and 15*l.* to John Goulder, on the register as John, but his christian name is Robert ; still he is on the register as John Goulder, of Victoria Cottages, or Victoria Place, in this borough.

23,780. Do you mean on the register now ?—He is dead now ; he died a year or two ago. He was on the register then for Victoria Place, I think by the name of John Goulder, but his christian name was Robert.

23,781. (Mr. Russell.) There are two John Goulders ?—The one I bribed, his christian name ought to have been on the register as Robert ; he lived then in Victoria Place.

23,782. There are two men down on the register of 1859, both as John Goulder, one living in Alfred Terrace and the other in Queen's Road ?—It must have been the Alfred Terrace one ; I think he removed from Alfred Terrace to the Victoria Road.

23,783. (Mr. Slade.) I understood you to say that you received no sum at the last election to give to anybody ?—Not to anybody.

23,784. Nor to yourself either ?—Nor to myself.

23,785. In the election of 1859, did you receive money for yourself ?—No.

23,786. Were you paid for your services ?—I was paid for my services as a clerk in the general committee room.

23,787. You voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey, I presume, in 1859 ?—No ; I voted then for Mr. Watkin and Mr. Young ; I think they were the candidates.

23,788. What were you paid as clerk ?—I think it was 8*l.* ; I was there for about 14 days.

23,789. When were you appointed inspector of weights and measures ?—30 years ago.

23,790. How came you to change your politics ?—That is a subject I would rather not enter into.

23,791. Was it for any pecuniary motive ?—No.

23,792. Or for any personal advantage to yourself ?—It was a personal advantage, I considered. That is the reason I did change.

23,793. We must have it, if you please ?—That was, I was fearful if I did not that I might lose the situation I hold ; therefore, I considered it would be better for me to vote on the Conservative side.

23,794. What made you fear you would lose the situation you hold ?—Well, something similar to what was done in the municipal investigation, when all the officers were turned out when the new councillors came in. That was in 1832.

23,795. Are you appointed to your place from year to year ?—Yes.

23,796. Was any threat held out to you ?—No.

23,797. You judged from what had happened to other persons ?—I did.

23,798. You were appointed clerk to the committee room, of course, by the Liberals in 1859 ?—Yes.

23,799. How had you voted in 1857 ?—Liberal.

23,800. (Mr. Russell.) Were you personally canvassed by Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson ?—For which election ?

23,801. The last election ?—I was.

23,802. Did you promise them when they first canvassed you ?—I did.

23,803. Did you represent to either of them that your political feelings were not in accordance with theirs ?—No, not one word was spoken on either side.

23,804. Were you canvassed by Mr. Brogden or Mr. Vanderbyl ?—No.

23,805. Were you canvassed by anybody on their behalf ?—No.

23,806. If you had had no personal interest whatever at the last election should you have continued to vote for the Liberal party ?—No, I think not.

23,807. On what ground ?—Opinions vary you know.

23,808. If you found yourself in another place, and supposing it was not Great Yarmouth, and you had no personal interest one way or the other, should you now vote as a Conservative, or as a Liberal ?—As a Conservative.

23,809. How do you mean you might have voted differently ?—It is my impression that the Conservatives are the most liberal of the two parties. That is my firm opinion.

23,810. I do not understand why you did not give that as your reason for voting differently at the last election, instead of stating you had reasons that you would rather not state ?—I had that reason, but I have since found that the Conservative party are much more liberal in their dealings than the others.

23,811. Then your pure feelings are since the election of 1865 ?—Yes.

23,812. (Mr. Slade.) Did you take any part in the election of 1857 ?—No, not any, except being a clerk ; I was a poll clerk then.

23,813. You had no money given you to disburse ?—No, not a farthing.

23,814. And was 25*l.* all the money you received in 1859 ?—Yes, and I spent the whole ; 15*l.* to one man and 10*l.* to the other.

23,815. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Is your appointment made by the mayor, or by the corporation in general ?—It is made by the town council now.

23,816. You told my friend just now you thought you would be removed, from what had happened to others ?—I said, "Very probably I might."

23,817. I want to know what had happened to others ?—When the municipal investigation took place, and the new style of things came in, all the old officers were removed from their offices.

23,818. When did that take place ?—In 1836.

23,819. That was the reason you changed ?—That was one part.

23,820. How could what took place in 1832, have anything to do with what took place in 1865 or 1859 ?—That is when the Reform Bill passed.

23,821. You were a long time coming to that judgment, if you judged in 1865 from what happened in 1832. You did not mean that when you said just now you judged by what happened to others. Tell me who had been turned out by the corporation, whose fate was a warning to you ?—Not recently, they have not ; but under the old system there were certain officers.

23,822. Do not go back to the old system ?—I do not know of any case.

23,823. You voted Liberal in 1859 ?—Yes.

23,824. And Tory in 1865 ?—Yes.

23,825. And you told us you had changed your party because you were afraid that would happen to you which had happened to others ?—I meant at the time, what had happened to others a long while ago.

23,826. Why did you not change before ?—There was no reason.

23,827. That is not it. You knew of some cases of parties who were turned out by the corporation, which acted as a warning to you. Give them ?—I am not aware of them. I would give them in a moment if I were.

23,828. (Mr. Russell.) 1836 was the year you were appointed ?—Yes, in 1836.

23,829. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) To your knowledge, there was no one turned out of the corporation?—Not recently; only at the first.

23,830. And that was in 1832?—In 1835, I think it was; because I was appointed in 1836.

23,831. Had anybody reminded you of that?—No, nobody.

23,832. Why should you have expected to be turned out more in 1865 than in 1859?—I do not know that I anticipated it.

23,833. Why did you give that answer just now?—Because that was my impression at the time—if I did not probably vote Conservative I might lose the situation.

23834. Was it your impression in 1859?—No.

23,835. Why not?—Because I did not anticipate anything of the sort then.

23,836. Do you know a man of the name of Beales, who was in the employ of the corporation?—Yes.

23,837. Do you know he was turned out?—Yes, as a sergeant-at-mace. That was in 1835.

23,838. After the election of 1835?—It was after that time, but I cannot tell you the year he was turned out.

23,839. That was not your reason?—It was not.

23,840. Did no one speak to you on the subject at all?—No.

23,841. Not a creature?—Not a creature.

23,842. I am told that Mr. Beales was turned out in 1852?—He might be; that I cannot say.

23,843. Did that operate as a warning to you?—I do not think it did.

23,844. Did it not; you must recollect it?—I might have thought something of it—that I might share the same fate, perhaps; but I cannot tell you now.

23,845. Was there any other case?—No.

23,846. (Mr. Slade.) I see that the names of Abraham Hall and John Goulder were given in to us on Saturday as having been bribed by you?—Yes.

23,847. Are you sure those are the only ones?—Quite certain. I never went after another creature.

23,848. You cannot have forgotten any others?—Not a creature. I had no more money than that, and that was given to me by Mr. Eagleton to give them.

JAMES OLLEY sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

J. Olley.

23,849. What are you?—I keep an eating-house on the Jetty Road.

23,850. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

23,851. Did you receive any money?—No.

23,852. Did you give any money to anyone else?—No.

23,853. Was there much entertainment going on at your house during the election?—No.

23,854. Are you aware of any men that frequented your house and received bribes at the last election?—No, no one.

23,855. Did you take an active part yourself?—No.

23,856. Did you canvass any men?—No.

23,857. In 1859 you had a vote also?—Yes.

23,858. Where did you live then?—In the Market Place.

23,859. In the same house?—No; I live on the Jetty Road now.

23,860. Did you live then in the house that Mr. Thompson has got now?—Yes.

23,861. You took an active part in that election?—No, not at all.

23,862. Did you receive any money at that election?—No.

23,863. Whom did you vote for?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey.

23,864. Was your house made use of in that election?—They had it for a day, on the day of the election.

23,865. The polling day?—Yes.

23,866. Who hired it?—Some of the committee came after it, and asked if they could have it for a day, and they had it for a day only.

23,867. What use was made of it?—For a committee room.

23,868. Did the committee meet there?—Some part of them were there, and had a lunch there some of them.

23,869. What were you paid for the use of that room?—I think altogether what I had for the use of the room and the lunch was under 2*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.*

23,870. Who paid you?—Mr. Charles Preston.

23,871. He was the legal agent for the election?—I think he was. I am not able to say.

23,872. Did you take your bill to him after the election?—He sent for it, and he paid it.

23,873. Did you receipt it?—I did when he paid the money, but I am unable to say what the amount was. It was something over 2*l.* What the exact amount was I cannot say. That is all I received.

23,874. Do you know whether the amount of the rent of your room was returned as part of the election expenses?—No.

23,875. Was that all the money you received?—That was all the money I received.

23,876. Have you always voted on the Conservative side?—No.

23,877. Had you previously voted Liberal?—I once voted Liberal.

23,878. What year?—That was when Watkin and McCullagh were here.

23,879. And previously to that had you voted Conservative?—Since then I have.

23,880. And previously?—I never voted except three times at general elections.

23,881. How came you to change?—On one municipal election I voted one and one. I got Mr. Edwards, who is sitting there to fill up a paper, and Mr. Howes was one and Mr. Francis Worship was the other; and I do not know whether Mr. Edwards did it, or some of the parties, but they crossed Mr. Worship's name off. I was offended with that, and afterwards I always voted against them.

23,882. Is Mr. Worship a friend of yours?—I wait on Mr. Worship occasionally; no more than that.

23,883. But for that personal pique should you still continue to vote for the Liberals?—Not after that. I never voted after that for the Liberals.

23,884. Can you tell us anything of your own knowledge either of this election or the last?—No, nothing. When they came I told them I should vote for them, and that was an end of it.

JOHN SUMNER recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

J. Sumner.

23,885. In 1859 did you get 10*l.* from Mr. Eagleton?—Yes.

23,886. Did you get 10*l.* from Mr. Clements?—No.

23,887. That was all you got?—That was all.

23,888. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Are you sure it was not 12*l.*?—No, 10*l.*

23,889. (Mr. Russell.) Were you offered any money by Clements in 1859?—No.

23,890. Do you know him?—No, I do not.

ROBERT SCOTT sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

R. Scott.

23,819. What are you?—I live on the Rodney Road.

23,892. But what are you?—I keep a public-house.

TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY.

R. Scott.

8 Oct. 1866.

23,893. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

23,894. Did you receive any money?—No.

23,895. Were you offered any?—Not by that party.

23,896. Not at all?—No.

23,897. Were you canvassed by Lacon and Goodson?—I was.

23,898. Did you promise them as soon as they canvassed you?—I believe I did, and voted for them.

23,899. You cannot remember whether you promised them first?—I think it is very likely I might.

23,900. You cannot say that you did?—I really cannot say now; at any rate I voted for them.

23,901. Were you canvassed by the Liberal party?—Yes.

23,902. Were you offered any money on that side?—I believe Mr. Livingston would have given me anything the night before the election.

23,903. Have you any reason for that belief?—He walked me on one side from Captain Emerson, whom I was with, and spoke to me.

23,904. What did Mr. Livingston say?—He asked me what I wanted. I said I should vote for Lacon and Goodson, and I walked away and left him.

23,905. Was that all that passed?—Yes, that was in the Market Place the night before the election.

23,906. Was that sufficient to make you believe you could have anything you liked from Mr. Livingston?—I believe he called me aside for that purpose.

23,907. Did Mr. Livingston mention any particular sum?—He asked me what I wanted, and I told him I was going to vote for Lacon and Goodson, and I walked away.

23,908. He did not say, "Do you want any money for your vote?"—No, he did not.

23,909. Had you got a vote in 1859?—Yes.

23,910. Whom did you vote for then?—I voted the other side then.

23,911. You received some money in 1859 did you not?—Yes.

23,912. How much?—From Mr. Livingston?

23,913. How much?—I think it was 13*l.*

23,914. Who gave it you?—George Clements.

23,915. Are you sure it was not 15*l.* or 16*l.*?—I think not.

23,916. It may have been?—I think not.

23,917. But it may have been?—I should not like to swear to that now.

23,918. Mr. Clements has said he gave you 15*l.* or 16*l.*?—I do not think Mr. Clements is right there. Mr. Clements has not been known to speak the truth at all times more than Mr. Livingston.

23,919. You see if you express an opinion so very hostile to Mr. Livingston, it begins to make one suspect why you accuse Mr. Livingston of having offered you money?—I do. He called me on one side from Captain Emerson, in the Market Place, and I suppose for that.

23,920. Were you offered any money by the Conservative party in 1859?—No.

23,921. How came you to vote Liberal in 1859, and Conservative in 1865?—I will tell you. I had a party met me on the drive one morning. He said, "I will ask through a side-wind for you to vote for "Lacon and Goodson." "Very well, Mr. Side-wind," I said to him, and that is Mr. J. A. Foreman. He said, "You have a son holding a situation on the line." I said, "I have; what have you to do with that?" After I left him, my son came down, and I said, "What wind blew you here?" He said, "This election," or some answer of that sort; and he asked me not to stand in his way. As a matter of course I said I would not; and that is how I came to vote Conservative.

23,922. That is how you came to vote Conservative?—Yes.

23,923. Because your son held a situation on Mr. Goodson's line?—Yes.

23,924. Did your son tell you that before you had been canvassed by Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—I cannot say. He asked me not to stand in his way, of course.

23,925. If there had been no inducement you would have continued to vote Liberal?—Very likely I should. I could not stand in his way.

23,926. Do you know what Mr. Foreman's christian name is, or where he lives?—I think it is J. A. Foreman, but where he lives I cannot say.

23,927. Is it John A. Foreman, near Marine Parade?—I cannot say where he lives.

23,928. Warehouse and stable?—It is very likely.

23,929. What is he?—He is a fish agent.

23,930. Did Mr. Foreman give you to understand if you voted the other way your son would lose his place on the line?—No.

23,931. Do you know whether Mr. Foreman had been to your son?—I cannot say. I never heard him name it.

23,932. Is your son in Yarmouth now?—I believe he is.

23,933. What is your son's christian name?—Robert.

23,934. Where does your son live?—He is down here on sick leave. He is at present stopping with me. He leaves to-morrow morning, so I understood him this morning.

23,935. I suppose you voted Liberal in 1857?—I am sure I cannot say; I cannot recollect.

23,936. For Watkin and McCullagh?—In 1859 I voted for Mr. Watkin.

23,937. That was Watkin and Young?—I cannot recollect, I am sure.

23,938. Can you remember what Mr. Foreman said to you when he came?—He met me on the drive.

23,939. Tell us, as nearly as you can remember, exactly the words he made use of.—I cannot, only as I repeated before.

23,940. Tell me as nearly as you can.—He brought it up. He passed the seal of the morning, and about the election, and so forth, and said, "I must ask you, "through a side-wind, for your vote for Lacon and "Goodson." "Very well, Mr. Side-wind," I said to him, or something was named about not standing in the way of my son, or he holding a situation on the line.

23,941. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did he say anything about your son?—He did. Of course I should not have thought of such a thing.

23,942. (Mr. Russell.) When Mr. Goodson canvassed you did he make any allusion whatever to your son having an appointment?—Never. I believe, if my memory is right, the candidates called at my house six or seven times before they saw me. I am not always at home. I am no house bird.

23,943. Has Mr. Foreman any employment upon the railway?—I should say his appointment is from the railway. He conveys all the fish to the line.

23,944. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you understand from what Mr. Foreman said that your son was likely to be turned out of his employment if he voted the other way?—He never breathed such a thing.

23,945. Did you understand that was what he meant?—I thought that was the meaning of it. It was natural I should, as his father.

23,946. Did you promise the Liberal party to vote for them?—At the same election?

23,947. Yes, this last election?—Certainly not.

23,948. When did you see Mr. Brogden?—I saw Mr. Brogden as I passed John Thomas's, and Mr. Edwards was with him, and I told him there and then I would not vote for him.

23,949. And that is the first time?—Yes.

23,950. They give you credit for having promised Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman?—Who is the man that can come before me now and say so?

23,951. The book says so?—That is wrong.

23,952. (Mr. Russell.) When you told Mr. Brogden you should certainly not vote for him, was that after you had had this conversation with Mr. Foreman?—I think I had seen Mr. Foreman previous to that.

23,953. If you had not seen Mr. Foreman previously should you have promised to vote for Mr. Brogden ?—I cannot say.

23,954. Do you believe you should?—I really cannot say.

23,955. Have you no political convictions ? Are you a Conservative or a Liberal ?—I was a Liberal until my son had an appointment, and of course I had a right to consider my son's appointment; it is natural I should.

ROBERT GEORGE sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

R. George.

23,956. What are you ?—A beerhouse keeper.

23,957. Living in Bridge Road, Southtown ?—Yes.

23,958. For whom did you vote at the last election ?—Lacon and Brogden.

23,959. How came you to split your vote ?—To please both parties.

23,960. Does your house belong to Sir Edmund Lacon ?—No.

23,961. Do you get your beer from him ?—Yes.

23,962. Was the beer the reason that you voted for Sir Edmund Lacon ?—No.

23,963. What was your reason for voting for Mr. Brogden ?—I do not know that I had any particular reason. I voted one and one.

23,964. Were you given any inducement to vote that way ?—Not the slightest.

23,965. Were you offered any ?—No.

23,966. Were you offered any money by either party ?—Not by either.

23,967. Were you canvassed personally by Sir Edmund Lacon ?—No.

23,968. Were you canvassed personally by Mr. Brogden ?—No ; I did not see either of them. They called at my house, but I did not see them.

23,969. Did you see either of the candidates ?—I do not remember speaking to either of them.

23,970. Mr. Vanderbyl ?—No.

23,971. Do you consider yourself a Conservative or a Liberal ?—A Liberal.

23,972. You are put down on the Liberal canvass-book as having promised Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman?—I never promised anyone.

23,973. Were you canvassed by Mr. Marshman ?—No ; they called at my house, but did not speak to me. I did not see them.

23,974. Had you got a vote in 1859 ?—Yes.

23,975. Whom did you vote for then ?—The Liberals.

23,976. Did you keep a public-house in 1859 ?—I did.

23,977. Did you get your beer from Sir Edmund Lacon then ?—He was nothing to do with me. I always paid him for what I had.

23,978. If you voted for the two Liberals in 1859, why did you not vote for the two Liberals in 1865 ?—I should have split my vote then if I had not been induced by a little money. Mr. Clements offered me a little money for it.

23,979. That was the reason ?—Yes.

23,980. Was it 20*l.* Mr. Clements gave you ?—Yes.

23,981. Were you offered any money by the Conservative party in 1859 ?—No.

23,982. Did you know old Mr. Rivett ?—The Mr. Rivett who is dead ?

23,983. Yes.—Yes, I did know him.

23,984. Did he offer you any money at any time ?—No ; I never spoke to Mr. Rivett in my life.

23,985. Was it 20*l.* or 25*l.* that Mr. Clements gave you ?—20*l.* I believe it was.

23,986. May it have been 25*l.* ?—I do not think it was. He gave me 9*l.* for another man.

23,987. Who was that ?—A man by the name of Symonds, of George Street.

23,992. (Mr. Slade.) He is on the register now ?—I do not know.

23,993. (Mr. Russell.) Did you receive any money in 1859 for any other man except Symonds ?—No.

24,015. You received that 20*l.* before you got the 12*l.* from Hickling ?—Yes. We went after the 12*l.* at the same time, and I got the other. I did not know he had it until late at night.

24,017. None at all ?—No.

24,035. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did he ever allow you anything in the rent ?—Not a farthing, not one farthing ; and I never paid for it. It was tendered to me, but I refused it.

24,036. (Mr. Slade.) What was tendered to you ?—The rent.

24,040. And you swear you did not take it ?—I swear I did not accept of it.

24,044. Nothing ?—Not a fraction.

24,045. Were you offered any money ?—Yes.

24,046. Who by ?—Mr. Downing, and the party that came with him.

24,047. How much were you offered by Mr. Downing ?—20*l.* or 25*l.* I told them it was no use their coming to ask me, as I did not intend to vote for them.

24,048. You refused it at once ?—Yes.

24,049. Were you canvassed by Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl ?—I could not say ; I was very busy when they came into the yard, and I could not say whether Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl, or who it was.

24,057. Did he offer you any money ?—No.

24,058. Do you know it was old Mr. Rivett who sent Mr. Dumbleton to you with the receipt for the rent ?—No ; he never sent Mr. Dumbleton to me, to my knowledge ; however, at that time I was not living in the house, and Mr. Dumbleton had a lease one side of the yard, and I had a lease of the other.

24,059. Have you ever paid Mr. Dumbleton the rent you owed him ?—I do not owe him a penny, not until the quarter comes due.

24,060. When he brought you the receipt for the 10*l.* rent you did owe him some money ?—I did not owe him any.

24,061. That was a receipt for rent in advance ?—Of course.

24,062. And when the rent became due you paid it ?—Of course I did ; and I have a receipt for it at home.

H. King.

HENRY KING sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

24,064. Where were you residing at the time of the last election ?—In the Market Place.

24,070. Had Mr. Woolsey a vote ?—He is dead. It was carried on by a deputy landlord.

24,071. Did your landlord interfere with the way you voted ?—No ; he does not reside at all in the town.

24,072. Did you receive any money at the last election ?—Yes.

24,073. How much ?—I think it was 13*l.*

24,074. Who gave it to you ?—I do not know ; a stranger.

24,075. Where were you paid ?—At the "Angel."

24,076. Are you sure it was not 15*l.* ?—I am certain of it.

24,077. Quite certain ?—Certain.

24,078. Were you asked your name when you went into the "Angel ?"—No.

24,079. Did you mention the sum you were to receive ?—No. I did not know what I was to receive.

24,080. Did a strange gentleman give you 13*l.* ?—Yes.

24,081. Wrapped up, or loose ?—Wrapped up.

24,082. You are certain it was 13*l.* ?—I am certain it was 13*l.*

24,083. Who sent you up to the "Angel ?"—Mr. Newman.

24,084. Did you say you thought 13*l.* too little ?—No.

24,085. How much did you receive on the other side ?—Not anything.

24,086. Were you offered any money by the Conservative party ?—Yes.

24,087. Who by ?—Robert Bullimore.

24,088. How much did Mr. Bullimore offer you ?—He asked me to go with him to Mr. Bunn's, and he thought he could get 20*l.*, and I did not go. I refused to go.

24,089. To Mr. Bunn, or Mr. Buston, did Mr. Bullimore offer to take you?—I think it was Bunn.

24,090. Were you canvassed by Brogden and Vanderbyl?—No.

24,091. Would you have voted for them without money?—Yes.

24,092. Had you got a vote in 1859?—Yes.

24,093. How did you vote then?—For the Liberals.

24,094. Did you receive any money at that election?—No, not for my vote.

24,095. Did you receive any money that was not for your vote?—Yes.

24,097. Who paid you that?—I am not certain whether it was Mr. Newman or Mr. Eagleton. I am not certain who it was, but I rather think it was Mr. Newman.

24,098. What was that 8*l.* for?—For the use of the front room, and the leads in case they should want it to speak off.

24,099. Were your rooms used at all?—They came two or three times, several of them, but it was there for the purpose. I had to move the things out, and it was for their convenience for about a fortnight.

24,100. Where did you live in 1859?—In the Market Place, in the same house.

24,101. Do you know if you were on the register for Queen's Road in 1859?—I think I was. I removed from Queen's Road to the Market Place.

24,102. Were you paid the 8*l.* after the election?—I think it was about three days after the election.

24,103. Did you ever take the bill to Mr. Clowes?—No. I think I gave a receipt to Mr. Newman for it.

24,104. Why did you not take it to Mr. Clowes?—Because Mr. Newman was the man that engaged the room. I am nearly certain it was him, and I looked to him for payment.

24,105. Were you offered any money by the other side in 1859?—I was.

24,106. How much?—I was not certain the sum. A man came and asked me how much I wanted.

24,107. Who was that?—Harris Wilshack.

24,108. Was that after your rooms had been engaged by the Liberals?—No; both before and after, up to the night previous to the election.

24,109. Did you refuse it?—Yes. He came several times.

24,110. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you understand when Mr. Newman hired this room of you that he was hiring it for the candidates?—Yes; for the purpose of the election, for them to use it as they wanted it. I had blue lights, and they burnt them off the leads several nights.

24,111. You looked to the candidates for payment?—I expected Mr. Newman would pay me.

24,112. Did you not look to them as the persons?—I thought he was a person sent by them.

24,113. In point of fact, you were letting it to them through him?—Yes.

24,115. They never used the rooms you let?—No.

24,116. Was there ever a committee meeting there?—I had one public meeting there of working men, and so on, a sort of political meeting.

24,119. Was there no treating at your house?—Not any.

24,120. Had you promised to vote for Watkin and Young before your room was engaged?—I think I had.

24,121. You will not be sure that you had?—I am nearly certain I had.

24,122. Had you got a vote in 1857?—I do not think I had. There was some omission. I was off; I think so, but I am not certain.

24,123. Have you always voted on the Liberal side?—Always.

RICHARD HASTINGS sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE. R. Hastings.

24,124. What are you?—A baker.

24,125. Who did you vote for at the last election?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

24,126. What did you get for your vote?—20*l.*

24,127. Where at?—The "Angel."

24,128. Who sent you to the "Angel?"—Nobody. I went up myself.

24,129. Did you hear that money was going?—I heard that they had got the tools, and they meant to use them; so I went to see what sort of tools they were.

24,130. Do you know of other people going to the "Angel" to be paid money?—No.

24,131. What took you to the "Angel"?—I heard they had got these sort of things flying about, and some gentleman spoke out of the "Angel" window, that they had got the tools and were going to use them.

24,132. That was long before?—That was a night or two before; I could not say to the time.

24,133. Who gave you the 20*l.*?—I do not know; it was a stranger to me.

24,134. Was anybody else in the room?—Not where I was. There were lots of people close by.

24,135. But not in the room?—No; only this gentleman.

24,136. Did you receive anything else besides that 20*l.*?—No.

24,137. Were you offered money by the other side?—I might have had, but was not offered.

24,138. Who from?—I do not know the gentleman's name; three or four I was troubled with.

24,139. Who offered you?—I do not know the parties.

24,140. Do you know a man named William Beales?—Yes.

24,141. Did he give you anything?—No.

24,142. Be careful?—No, he did not.

24,143. Try and recollect?—I know he did not.

24,144. Do you know him?—Yes.

24,145. Do you know his writing?—No. I never saw his writing. I do not think he is a scholar; but I did not get any money from him.

24,146. Did you vote in the year 1859?—Yes.

24,147. What did you get for your vote?—15*l.*

24,148. Who from?—Mr. Beales.

24,149. From William Beales?—Yes, I think his name is William.

24,150. Did you get any other money besides that 15*l.* from Mr. Beales?—No.

WILLIAM CATTERMOLE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE. W. Cattermole.

24,151. We have heard you received some money in 1859?—That is correct.

24,152. How much?—I could not say positively; about 30*l.* from Steward, or thereabouts.

24,153. What did you do with that 30*l.*?—I made use of a portion of it, and the other I gave to Mr. Steward back again.

24,154. Did you give any of it to voters?—Yes.

24,155. Can you tell us who you gave it to?—I gave 12*l.* to Thomas Cattermole.

TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY.

W. Cattermole.

8 Oct. 1866.

24,156. Is he dead ?—Yes ; and I gave 6*l.* to a Mr. Robert Rushmer.

24,157. Why did you give Rushmer 6*l.* ?—Because he voted.

24,158. For his vote ?—For his vote ; and I am not sure whether I gave a man by the name of Fleet 5*l.* I am almost positive I did ; but Mr. Steward ought to know, because I returned him a list. I am not positive whether I gave him 5*l.* I gave the names to Mr. Steward, and what I did not use I gave back again.

24,159. Did you give Mr. Rushmer the money yourself, or did you give it to his son for him ?—Well, the son had 1*l.* and the father had 5*l.* ; that is how it was, I believe.

24,160. Did you mention a man named Fleet ?—Yes, Simon Fleet.

24,161. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Is he alive ?—I believe he is ; I saw him some time ago.

24,162. (Mr. Slade.) He is not on the register ?—He was then ; he is not now.

24,163. Then there was 7*l.* left ?—Yes. I really could not say exactly what I did give to Mr. Steward ; when we settled he said, "What for yourself ?" I said, "The thing has gone as it has after the election, I did not care about anything." He said, "You had better have your expenses;" and I took 2*l.* for my expenses.

24,164. You are certain you returned the balance to Mr. Steward ?—I am certain I returned him some ; about 1*l.* or 2*l.* ; I could not say what it was.

24,165. But you are quite certain you returned him some ?—Yes ; it was the Robert Rushmer who has been here.

24,166. In 1859 Rushmer says he got 4*l.* from his late son ; the son is dead ?—I think that is wrong ; he got 5*l.*

24,167. But his son is dead ?—Yes.

24,168. That is what he says you gave his son—6*l.* ?—Yes, with the understanding that he was to have 1*l.* and his father 5*l.*

24,169. Did you receive any other money besides that 30*l.* from Mr. Steward ?—No, not a penny from anyone ; and I would not be positive that that was exactly 30*l.*, but it was somewhere thereabouts ; it was not much out ; it was nothing over. I am certain it was under, if anything ; but it is several years ago.

24,170. Did you keep the "Army and Navy" at that time ?—At that time I did.

24,171. Was there any payment of voters going on at the "Army and Navy" in 1859 ?—No, nothing of the kind at that election ; no meeting, and nothing of the sort there.

24,172. Was there a committee room at your house in 1859 ?—No, nothing of the sort.

24,173. (Mr. Russell.) Did you, at the last election, write to men who were at sea, to say if they came ashore they would be paid ?—Yes. I did not write the letter myself ; it was written at my instigation at the committee room, and sent off to sea to the man, that if he came to the shore, and voted, his legal expenses would be paid.

24,174. Have those men been examined ?—That man has never been examined ; he did not vote, for he did not get ashore.

24,175. What is his name ?—Mr. Jones. It was too late on the Saturday morning. I met Mr. Woolverton at Gorleston with a letter to the same man.

24,176. You directed letters to be written to men who were at sea, saying they would be paid their expenses if they would come and vote ?—Only this one ; that was all I knew.

24,177. What was his christian name ?—I really forget.

24,178. Where does he live ?—He lived at that time somewhere about St. Peter's Road, if I mistake not ; I do not know exactly where he did live.

24,179. Do you know whether it is John Jones, of the Havelock Road ; what is he described as ?—This man is a fisherman—a fish merchant he would be described, I suppose. I said all his legal expenses (that is how it was worded) would be paid if he would come on shore and vote.

24,180. Did you believe it was legal to pay the man his expenses ?—I was under the impression it was ; I asked Mr. Edwards up at the committee rooms, and Mr. Satterthwaite, first, and it was them gave me their authority to get the letter written ; I should not have done so of my own accord.

24,181. Mr. Satterthwaite told us he mentioned to somebody, who contemplated making a payment of that sort, it would not be legal to do it ?—He did not mention it to me.

24,182. You were under the impression it was legal ?—I was under the impression it was legal.

24,183. But this man, Jones, did not come in time ?—No ; I went to Gorleston ; he was fishing with Mr. Hewitt's smacks.

24,184. Did he arrive too late ?—I do not think he came ; it was worded to this effect, if he thought he could not get home in time it would be folly for him to come.

24,185. Who did you tell to write the letters ?—One of the clerks in the office ; I could not say who it was now.

24,186. The letter was signed by you ?—Yes, I believe my signature was to it ; and I met Mr. Woolverton there the same morning, and he sent a letter off by the same boat to the same man ; Mr. Woolverton, the painter, on the Conservative side.

T. Leggett.

THOMAS LEGGETT sworn ; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

24,187. What are you ?—A Trinity pilot.

24,188. Who did you vote for at the last election ?—Lacon and Goodson.

24,190. How much ?—15*l.*

24,191. Who by ?—Mr. John Grimes Rivett.

24,192. Had you been canvassed by Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson ?—No, I was not at home at the time of their canvassing, or a day or two before the election.

24,193. Did you consider that 15*l.* was for your vote ?—For my detention and time stopping on shore I thought it was for.

24,194. Were you paid before or after the election ?—The night previous or the day previous.

24,195. Did the Liberal side offer to pay your expences if you would vote for them ?—No.

24,196. Did you think it was legal to take the money ?—Yes, I did at that time.

24,197. Have you got a mate of the name of Stanford ?—Yes.

24,198. Is he in Yarmouth now ?—No, he is at sea.

24,199. Do you know whether he was paid for his expenses ?—I am not positive, but I have heard as much.

24,200. Who told you he had been ?—I do not know in particular. I have heard it commonly spoken of among ourselves, but I cannot say anyone in particular.

24,201. Was he at sea at the time of the election ?—No, he was at home, detained at home. He was at home three or four days previous to the election, and stopped for that purpose.

24,202. Have you ever heard it mentioned in his presence that he was paid at the last election ?—I think I have.

24,203. Have you ever heard him deny that he was ?—I have never heard him deny it.

24,204. Had you got a vote in 1859 ?—Yes.

24,205. Who did you vote for then ?—Lacon and Stracey.

24,206. Did you receive any money then ?—10*l.*

24,207. Who gave you that?—Mr. Rivett.

24,208. Was that for your expenses?—Yes.

24,209. Were you at sea then?—Yes.

24,210. How came your expenses to be 10*l.* in 1859, and 15*l.* in 1865?—It was tendered. It was offered, and was not asked for. I should have voted that way without a farthing, if I had been in the way to have voted, without being detained.

24,211. Do you know of other men besides yourself to whom Mr. Rivett gave money?—No, I do not.

24,212. Neither in 1865 or 1859?—Not in either of them.

24,213. Do you know whether Stanford, your mate, had money in 1859?—No. We did not sail together at that time. I do not know.

24,214. Do you know of any mate of yours that had money in 1859?—No, I do not. The other two have been here.

24,215. Did the Liberal party offer to pay you in 1859?—No.

24,216. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Is William Leggett your brother?—No.

24,217. (Mr. Russell.) I see that Stanford voted the other way in 1859?—I do not know. I was not shipmate with him at that time.

WILLIAM SPILLING recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

24,218. In the year 1859 your leg was broken, we hear?—I was laid up.

24,219. Did that prevent you taking any part in the election?—I could not get out.

24,220. Did any of the voters come to your house?—Not that I am aware of.

24,221. How do you mean "not that you are aware of?"—It has been said a man came. I did not see him. I had nothing whatever to do with the election of 1859.

24,222. Did you give any man any money at your house?—Not a penny piece.

24,223. Had you the disposal of any money in 1859?—None.

24,224. Henry Pratt Crane is the man?—A man of the name of Henry B. Crane, the man who made the assertion before the Committee of the House of Commons, stated I did.

24,225. There is no truth in it?—Not a bit of it. There might have been in 1857. Perhaps the man has made a mistake.

24,226. Have you been able to refresh your memory, and tell the Commissioners how much money you disposed of in 1857?—I have made a little rough calculation. I could give you some information about it.

24,227. We only want to know the rough estimate?—I can tell you. I have got it here. You said I was to come on Monday at 12 o'clock. I have taken what little time, I had to spare about it and run it together. I had 630*l.* in 1857.

24,228. Who from?—From Mr. Steward and Mr. Costerton. Mr. Costerton came to my house, and brought Mr. Steward with him. He introduced Mr. Christopher Steward to me, saying he had the management of the money, and said that I ought to oblige him, Mr. Costerton, he not living far from me, and endeavour to assist him in winning the election. This 630*l.* came to me at different times in various small sums. The first was 60*l.* to commence with. The largest sum that I had was 150*l.* out of this sum. Mr. Steward came to me one evening and said, "We must give Mr. Reynolds, of Gorleston, 60*l.*, and Mr. Tom Lettis 50*l.*," leaving the amount to be spent, to my knowledge, as far as I can recollect, to win this election of, 520*l.*

24,229. Thomas Lettis?—Yes, Tom Lettis. Mr. Reynolds had 60*l.*, and Lettis had 50*l.*, which Mr. Steward was aware of.

24,230. Was there a balance returned to Mr. Steward?—There was no balance due to him.

24,231. You had 520*l.*?—That is all I could give an account of. I deducted the 50*l.* and the 60*l.* off of it. Mr. Steward came for it, and I went with Mr. Steward and gave it to this man, Reynolds. That was on the night before the election.

24,232. Did you understand from Mr. Steward where he got the money from?—No, I did not; I never asked him. Mr. Costerton was the principal man I had to deal with in the matter, and I believe he was the legal adviser of Mr. Watkin and Mr. McCullagh. Mr. Costerton, a friend of mine, came to me, and I acted uniformly under his advice; and he then introduced Mr. Steward to me, and said Mr. Steward was to be the man to bring the money to my house, which he did, to that amount.

24,233. Then the money, except what you gave to Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Lettis, I presume you gave to voters?—I have no doubt that was so.

24,234. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you know Henry Pratt Crane?—I have seen him.

24,235. Do you know a man of the name of Davey?—That is a man that is in my employ, that worked for me.

24,236. At that time?—I think he was then. He is working for me now.

24,237. Do you know at the time of the petition, when the Committee of the House of Commons sat, Henry Pratt Crane was examined?—I do, and I was sent for to London.

24,238. But you were not called?—Mr. Costerton telegraphed for me.

24,239. You were not called?—I went in and volunteered my services. They said the evidence the man had given was of no importance, and they should not call me.

24,240. He told a circumstantial story?—Yes. I have seen it in print.

24,241. And the whole of it is untrue?—I think there is a gentleman here, Mr. Cooper, who could speak to his capability as to what he could say on former occasions. It is a very singular thing; he makes an assertion that he came to my house, and he says I offered him the money to vote for Sir Henry Stracey and Sir Edmund Lacon; and then you find another man swearing at the same election I offered him 10*l.* to vote for Mr. McCullagh and Mr. Watkin.

24,242. Who is that?—He was a very active partisan.

24,243. Did he act in the election of 1859?—I have no doubt about it.

24,244. He is dead?—No, he is not dead; he has been very unfortunate.

24,245. Where is he now?—I think he is in London. I do not know.

24,246. (Mr. Russell.) Do you happen to know how much was spent altogether in bribery upon the Liberal side in 1857?—I have no idea. If they spent any money they could not have spent it about bribing. There was quite enough to win the election then.

24,247. By you?—Through my management, not by me. I never bribed a man in my lifetime.

24,248. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know of any other except yourself, Reynolds, and Lettis, who acted as operators?—No. I do not even know what Lettis did with the money. Mr. Steward and Mr. Costerton came to me and ordered me to give them the money. I went with Mr. Steward and gave Mr. Reynolds 60*l.*, in a little public-house called the "Anson Arms," and Mr. Lettis had the 50*l.* There were some other little sums of money I advanced during the election, but what they were for I do not know.

24,249. Do you believe the 630*l.* you received was all the money spent in bribery upon your side?—If there was any more spent it was thrown away. There was plenty spent to win that election.

24,250. What was your belief as to the operations upon the Conservative side?—I think they were taken aback at the time; we had laid the foundation for the election, that the men who were to be bribed were secured by us before the other man came. I think there was an idea afloat that the thing was to be compromised, one and one, and if it had been it would have been a good job for Yarmouth.

TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY.

W. Spilling.

24,251. Am I to understand that the Conservatives became aware that all the men you had bribed had been bribed?—I think the leading parties knew the election was made sure. I do not think they spent any money on behalf of Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Vereker. They might have done, but I do not know it.

24,252. Do you believe the men who had been bought by your side in 1857 could not have been bought away for a larger sum by the Conservatives?—I believe they could if they had been properly arranged with. There are always a certain number of people that are in the market, and have been for years, to win an election if they are bought; but I think these men were secured by the principals, with the assistance of Mr. Costerton. We began a month beforehand, and the election took place on the Saturday. On the Saturday week before that, there was an arrangement with me and Mr. Costerton to go to Mr. Neales, the printer, at 8 o'clock at night, as the candidates were not certain about the canvass; and I went to him on the Saturday night, and stopped till half-past 10 on the Sunday morning, and went through the whole of the register, and added to the list those people who could be secured, that I fancied I had an opinion would not deceive me in election matters. That list was got up on purpose for Mr. Richard Hammond, to meet the candidates, upon the Sunday afternoon at the "Star." Whether he did or did not I do not know. He has always been looked upon as a very powerful man in the Liberal interest, and his opinion has been taken in preference to anybody else's, whether it is right for a man to go and stand the contest after he has seen the canvass, or not. I and Meall stopped till half-past 10 upon the Sunday morning making up the list. On the Monday night Mr. Costerton came in as usual, and said, "The thing is looking very safe, and Mr. Ham-"mond tells me if we can manage these men we can "win the election by a hundred." Whether he saw the list, or whether he saw Mr. McCullagh or anybody else about it, I cannot tell you. That is the only thing that took place in my recollection about the time the election took place, upon the Saturday night, when I sat up with Mr. Meall. Poor Meall is dead now, but Mr. Costerton is still in existence.

24,253. I understand you began to bribe a month before the election?—We began to bribe a month before the election.

24,254. Can you tell me when it was concluded?—I should think upon the election morning.

24,255. And you continued bribing the whole time?—Not bribing, but making arrangements for their being bribed.

24,256. Is it your belief that the party who bribes first in Yarmouth is sure to win the election?—With a little management. The party I used to profess to belong to are no party whatever now; they are all sixes and sevens.

24,257. Do you account at the last election, for the loss by the Liberals, because they did begin too late?—I think the Bank of England would not have saved it. I think there were a lot of men who wanted to put the money into their pockets.

24,258. At that time you speak of, was Richard Hammond informed of the mode in which the election had been made secure?—I do not know anything about what passed with Richard Hammond. The only thing is, that Mr. Meall and Mr. Costerton came to me on the Saturday night and begged of me to go through the canvass, as Mr. McCullagh and Mr. Watkin wished to go through it, and they looked upon Mr. Hammond as the best man to say if there was to be a contested election, and if his opinion was in their favour they made up their minds to stand.

24,259. They acted upon Richard Hammond's opinion?—I suppose the candidates did.

24,260. I want to know if Richard Hammond's opinion was formed from a knowledge of the canvass book?—That I cannot say; I never spoke to Mr. Hammond upon the subject in my life. This is what Meall and Costerton told me, that they pinned their fate upon Mr. Hammond and placed a great deal of confidence in Mr. Richard Hammond giving his opinion, and if they had a chance they would stand. That was upon the Saturday, eight days before the election, but whether Mr. Hammond met them, or whether he did not, I did not know.

24,261. Tell me this: are you of opinion that Mr. McCullagh had any chance of winning that election without the expenditure of money?—I am afraid he had not.

24,262. That is your opinion?—Yes, that he had not; but the expenditure of money for Mr. McCullagh alone was not very large. I think Mr. McCullagh was the fancy man, and I think Mr. McCullagh was very badly used at the election before, when he came with Sir Charles Napier. Perhaps I am going too far back with you.

24,263. No; we will hear that.—Mr. McCullagh and Sir Charles Napier came down here and there was a split then among the party who call themselves "Whigs." We had, originally, a very strong party for Mr. Anson and Mr. Rumbold. They were gentlemen, and we took a very active part for them, and would have done anything to have secured Mr. Rumbold's election. For many years I could not bear the idea of a man like Mr. McCullagh mixing himself up with whoever he thought fit, and getting a man like Sir Charles Napier, a man who would vote for pulling down Church and State, to join him. The Radical party turned their backs upon him. There was an idea of shunting and casting him over, after they had fleeced him to the tune of 26,000*l.* or 30,000*l.* I was one of the parties that stuck to Mr. Rumbold, and I coalesced with Sir Edmund Lacon to return him in preference to the other party. I believe Mr. McCullagh's party was a very strong party. A lot of men I see here, who call themselves Dissenters, as a cloak for their religion, voted for Sir Charles Napier and Mr. McCullagh, and tried everything to turn Mr. Rumbold out. They did not do it. I managed to put him in, and I had not much time either.

24,264. By an expenditure of money?—By a very little.

24,265. But there was an expenditure of money?—And there would not have been any then if the Conservatives had kept their promise and voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Rumbold, as they ought to have done; I should have had no trouble. After they had carried their own man, Sir Edmund Lacon, they got a little proud of their position, and they put my man behind, and I then had to resort to the same means.

24,266. (Mr. Russell.) The compromise you agreed to was not honourably carried out by the other side?—Not by the Conservatives.

24,267. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) It is your opinion that Mr. McCullagh would not have won the election of 1857 if no bribery had been resorted to?—I do not think he could. I do not know what were the means of the other party. The object was to carry the two, I think, and Mr. McCullagh stood a greater and better chance than Mr. Watkin did.

24,268. That is all I want to come at?—That is my opinion.

24,269. (Mr. Slade.) Mr. McCullagh was at the head of the poll?—I have been giving you an account that I had from Mr. Steward for people to vote for Mr. McCullagh and Mr. Watkin. There was an object. They would have voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. McCullagh, a lot of them.

24,270. (Mr. Russell.) At what period of the election did you resort to bribery for Mr. Rumbold?—I think it must have been about 1 o'clock in the day.

24,271. Upon the day of the election?—Yes; there was nothing before, because we thought we had so arranged the thing that, had the Conservatives been honest, it would have been Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Rumbold without a shilling of expenditure.

24,272. Have you any idea of what was spent on that day for Mr. Rumbold?—A very trumpery expense, —400*l.* or 500*l.* from Mr. Rumbold. We then had

TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY.

W. Spilling.

a lot of fellows that had been lately disfranchised, who were Mr. Rumbold's friends. There were a lot of them 10*l.* householders. They had an idea that they had lost their birthright as freemen. A lot of them who had been originally freemen got their two guineas for the election for their loss of time, and they used to have a half-guinea ticket. The two guineas used to be paid six months after the election. I have had it frequently to pay; and that I think was the most of the money spent to secure Mr. Rumbold. There was not much spent otherwise, because he beat Mr. McCullagh by 24 or 25.

24,273. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you think any money was spent by Sir Edmund Lacon at that election?—I do not think Sir Edmund Lacon spent a shilling. He did not want to spend any. He was at the head of the poll. When I commenced, McCullagh was at the head, and I began to operate, because it was too close to be pleasant.

24,274. (Mr. Russell.) When you say Mr. McCullagh was the fancy man, he was very popular?—He was very popular here. A great many people felt for him, that Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Rumbold should be returned in preference to him that had all the ear of the mob.

24,275. You believe but for the bribery Mr. McCullagh would have been returned?—I believe he would; and he would have been glad to have been returned with Mr. Rumbold.

24,276. If you are sufficiently imaginative, what do you believe at the present time would be the result of a pure election?—I have been out of the political market a great time. The amount is so large that I do not like to look at it.

24,277. The question I mean is this, supposing an election at the present time, at which no money was spent on either side, what do you believe would be the result of such an election?—I could not say; but, as far as my own opinion goes, Sir Edmund Lacon, with the position he ought to hold, ought to have the borough in his pocket till his hair traped the ground. He is a very large employer in the town. I have been taxed by a great many people why I did not vote for Sir Edmund Lacon, because they said I was under an obligation to him. I did not think fit to vote. I believe I am under no more obligation to him than to anyone of you three.

24,278. Supposing two Conservatives and two Liberals, in no way connected with the town, were to come down and contest it, which side do you believe would win?—I could only go back and tell you that Sir Edmund Lacon's influence ought to have the borough in his pocket.

24,279. I put him out of the case?—Then I could not say anything about it.

24,280. You have no idea on which side the balance of political opinion is?—I have been out of the political world since 1857. I have never paid any attention to any register since, and I do not know how it would turn out. I could not give you an opinion.

24,281. Is it disgust with bribery that has induced you, who took a very great interest formerly in political matters, to set yourself against all parties?—Certainly not.

24,282. Then, may I ask you, what has induced you to retire?—There was some little difficulty at the time when the petition was presented, by the friends of Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Vereker, against Mr. Watkin's and Mr. McCullagh's return. I have not taken an active part in it, but I was instructed by Mr. Costerton that I had better leave the town. Well, I did not know, I thought I was under legal advice, and I left the town, and I went away. After the thing had been going on in the House of Commons, some very unpleasant things came out about me, and Mr. Costerton, knowing where I was, telegraphed for me. I came up to London. I went to the House of Commons. I requested to be heard; they would not hear me. Some five or six there, I do not know who they were, I believe they were some friends of Mr. Livingston's, got up some extraordinary tale about me. The evidence has painted me blacker than the Old One; all of which I was innocent of, and from that time I have made up my mind, whenever there was a solicitor as an election agent again, I would never have anything to do with an election, if it was for my own brother.

24,283. I suppose the truth was, your suggestion of the compromise with the Conservatives and Whigs made you unpopular?—I did not trouble about that. If I had carried it out I should have been satisfied in my own mind that I had been doing such justice to Yarmouth, that if it had been carried out it would have been a great thing for the town; and I would make one to-morrow to return Sir Edmund Lacon, and also another man, if he was a respectable man.

THOMAS BOOTH EDWARDS recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

T. B. Edwards.

24,284. Did you receive any money from Mr. Steward in 1859?—Yes.

24,285. How much?—I can hardly tell you; I think somewhere about 50*l.*

24,286. What did you do with that money?—I disposed of it among different people. Daniel Gravener is the first.

24,287. How much Gravener?—I could not tell you; the amount was divided between them. The highest I should think was about 10*l.*; in fact they might be all 10*l.* for all I could tell. William Riches, Samuel Aldridge, Thomas William Barber, John Jackson, and I am not sure, but I think Benjamin Ashby.

24,288. Daniel Gravener was not on the register at that time?—Not in 1859.

24,289. No. You gave Gravener 15*l.* at the last election?—No, 20*l.*

24,290. 15*l.* he acknowledges?—15*l.* he first of all arranged for, and when I had been to him, he said he had been offered 20*l.* on the other side, and he would not take less than 20*l.* from me.

24,291. And you gave it him?—I gave it him.

24,292. In 1859 Riches says he got 9*l.* from you?—It must have been more than that. If my memory serves me right, I think it was 10*l.* that Riches got, but I will not be sure, it is so far back; I think it was 10*l.*

24,293. Samuel Aldridge says he got 10*l.* from you, and Thomas William Barber has admitted 10*l.*?—Yes.

24,294. Is that what you gave him?—I think it must have been 10*l.*

24,295. It is Thomas Robert Barber?—Yes. Is it Thomas Robert Barber? It is Wrestler's Plain.

24,296. Yes. He says 7*l.* 10*s.* he had from you?—He acknowledges 7*l.* 10*s.*, but I think he must have had 10*l.* in fact, if Gravener was not on the list, which I am very much mistaken about. Are you quite sure he was not on the list?

24,297. Yes.—Then I must have taken the wrong poll book. Living in the North Ward, and being mixed up with that for so many years, perhaps I have blended the one with the other.

24,298. John Jackson, is he a baker?—Yes.

24,299. (Mr. Russell.) He is not on the register?—Indeed! Then I must have taken the wrong poll book.

24,300. Probably you have taken the poll book of 1857?—Very likely.

24,301. I see you have taken the poll book of 1865?—Well, if I have, I was not aware of it.

24,302. And that is all the men you bribed in 1859 in the North Ward?—Yes.

24,303. All of them?—These would be in the North Ward.

24,304. You had better look through the 1858

register of the North Ward?—Where am I to get one?

24,305. Here is the register of the men who voted in 1859. I think if you will stand down, perhaps you will find out who they are. Take the register, and look through it, and just see?—I will.

24,306. (Mr. Slade.) I see Benjamin Ashby has been paid by Clements?—So he may be.

24,307. Does that alter your belief at all?—No, it does not; it does not alter my belief at all.

J. Bracey.

JOHN BRACEY sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

24,308. You live in the Queen's Road?—Yes.

24,309. What are you?—A shipowner, and partner in a ropery.

24,310. Did you vote at the last election?—I did, at the last election.

24,311. Who for?—For Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

24,312. Did you take any part at the last election?—No; only gave my vote, nothing else.

24,313. Did you vote at the election of 1859?—I had no vote at all.

24,314. Do you know a man named Thomas Newstead?—Yes, a rigger.

24,315. Did you speak to him about his vote in the year 1859?—Yes, I asked him who he was going to vote for.

24,316. What did he say?—He said he did not know. It is a good many years ago. I have been to sea since then. I talked the matter over with him. I said, "Are you going to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon, or who for?" And he says, "I have employment on both sides;" and I believe he eventually voted one and one.

24,317. Did he say that his politics were Liberal?—He did not say.

24,318. Did he say he was going to vote one and one?—I do not remember whether he did or not; he certainly did not promise to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon.

24,319. He did not vote for Sir Edmund Lacon; he voted for Stracey and Young?—He did not make me any particular promise. I remember asking him. I was a captain, and he was rigging for me, and I asked him the question who he was going to vote for.

24,320. Do you think you made him change his mind?—No; I do not think I had any influence at all. I argued the point, as I was a Conservative myself, but I used no influence whatever on earth. I was not his employer, only the captain of a ship.

24,321. Did you say to him this, that if he did not vote one on one side and one on the other, you would not let him finish his job?—Certainly not.

24,322. That is what he said?—Yes.

24,323. That is not true?—No, it is not true.

J. Child.

JOHN CHILD sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

24,324. You are employed in Sir Edmund Lacon's brewery?—Yes, a storekeeper.

24,325. Did you vote at the last election?—I had no vote at the last election; I was not on the register.

24,326. Do you know a man of the name of Samuel Farman?—I did know a man of that name; he is dead.

24,327. Did you ever make him an offer for his vote?—Well, I believe once upon a time he came to me and asked me for money for voting; he asked me on two or three occasions, but I did not take much notice of him.

24,328. What answer did you give to him when he asked you for money?—I told him I had no authority for giving any, two or three times over. I did not know anything about it.

24,329. Did you give him to understand that he would have money if he voted the way you wished?—No, certainly not; he was an applicant to me; I did not go after the man at all.

24,330. Did you always tell him you could not get him any money?—Well, I do not know that I did; perhaps not.

24,331. May I ask you what happened as regards Samuel Farman, because we understood you offered him some money?—He came to me on two or three occasions; he happened to be a beerhouse keeper, and as a customer he used to come to our place. He asked me on two or three occasions if money was going. I told him I had no authority to give any money at all. I mentioned the circumstance to Mr. Nightingale, and Mr. Nightingale told me he did not want to be seen with the fellow, or anything of the kind; but if I thought fit to do anything with the fellow I could; but mind you, Mr. Nightingale was not aware I was going to do anything of the kind. That is all he said to me, "If you think fit you may; I will have nothing to do with it."

24,332. From what Mr. Nightingale said, did you give Farman any money?—I did; I gave him 15*l.*, and, moreover, I may tell you, about two days afterwards, he brought it back again.

24,333. Why did he bring it back again?—Because he was afraid of voting against his father's principles; his father threatened to cut him out of what little property there was, and he brought the money back to me.

24,334. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Mr. Farman did?—Yes.

24,335. This was the election, of 1859 or the election of 1865?—This was the election of 1859 I am speaking of.

24,336. Is that the only person that you gave money to at that election?—I believe there was one other, a companion of his; a man of the name of Richmond.

24,337. Is that Robert Richmond?—I do not know his christian name.

24,338. Did he live in Howard Street?—In either Howard Street or Charlotte Street.

24,339. That will be William Richmond, in Charlotte Street, that voted for Lacon and Stracey?—I cannot say; I do not know.

24,340. (Mr. Russell.) Do you remember how the man voted?—He voted for Lacon and Stracey.

24,341. (Mr. Slade.) How much did you give Richmond?—15*l.*

24,342. Are those the only two men?—Those are the only two.

24,343. Did you get back that 30*l.* from Mr. Nightingale?—I did.

24,344. Do you recollect how soon after the election Mr. Nightingale paid you the 30*l.*?—A day or two, I suppose.

24,345. Had you disbursed money at the election of 1857?—Not any, not a penny.

24,346. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) The 15*l.* which Farman returned to you I suppose you gave back to Mr. Nightingale?—I gave it back to Mr. Nightingale.

C. Woods, jun.

CHARLES WOODS, jun., sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

24,347. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—I received 20*l.* for my father from a gentleman, I do not know who it was, at Gorleston.

24,348. Are you a voter?—No; I was a voter before, but not at this last election.

24,349. You are not upon the register?—No. I have told you about my father. At the election before I had a vote, and I got either 10*l.* or 12*l.* from Mr. Reynolds, I do not know which it was—from Reynolds, the baker, of Gorleston.

24,350. Is your father ill in bed?—Yes, he is confined to his bed.

24,351. What is your father?—A fish merchant.

JOHN ELY RIVETT sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

24,352. What are you?—A little bit of a farmer I have been.

24,353. Did you get any money for your vote at the last election?—I never voted at the last election.

24,354. Yes, you did?—No, once, but not the last election; I did not vote then.

24,355. (Mr. Russell.) Have you got a son of the same name?—No.

24,356. You did vote at the last election; you voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—Yes.

24,357. What did you get for your vote?—15*l.*

24,358. Who gave it you?—Mr. Bunn said he gave it to me.

24,359. Had you a vote at the election before; did you vote for Lacon and Stracey?—I have not voted for Sir Edmund Lacon, only once, some years ago; but I have not voted for any other one since.

24,360. In 1859 it was Lacon and Stracey?—Well, I do not know.

24,361. (Mr. Slade.) Did you ever get any money for your vote?—No.

24,362. Why did you not vote in 1859?—Well, both of them asked me to vote; they bothered me so I would not vote for either of them, and I took 5*s.*, and I went and spent it.

24,363. Who gave you the 5*s.*?—I took it out of my own pocket.

GEORGE NELSON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

24,364. What are you?—A master carpenter.

24,365. Do you live in Pier Road, Gorleston?—No, I live in Fenn Street, Gorleston.

24,366. Do you know that you are down upon the register, Pier Road, Gorleston, farm buildings and land?—No, that is my brother.

24,367. His name is John Nelson?—Yes; my name is George.

24,368. You are not on the register; you have not a vote?—No, not at the last two elections.

24,369. Did you take any part in the election of 1865?—No.

24,370. Do you know whether your brother had any money?—No, I do not know anything about it.

24,371. In 1859 had you a vote?—No.

24,372. Did you in 1859 live on the Common Road, Southtown?—No, it was 1857, to the best of my knowledge.

24,373. I will tell you it was in 1859?—If I answered you wrongly it was a mistake of mine; I had one when I was on the Common Road.

24,374. That was in 1859?—I do not know it.

23,375. What did you receive then?—15*l.*

24,376. From Reynolds?—From Mr. Greenhow.

24,377. Did you receive anything from Mr. Reynolds?—No.

24,378. Do you know him?—Yes.

24,379. You are sure you did not receive anything?—I am quite sure I never received any money from anyone except Greenhow.

24,380. Is that the only money that you ever received?—That is the only that I ever received; I never had a vote, only that year.

24,381. Did you vote for Mr. Watkin and Mr. Young?—I believe they were the names; I can hardly recollect the names now, it is so long ago; it was for the Blue party.

24,382. How came you to be off the register now?—Because the place was sold away from me. I have not been able to get another one since to rate me for.

JAMES BLAND recalled; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

24,383. What are you?—A fish owner.

24,384. You have been examined before?—Yes.

24,385. When you were up here before you told us that you did not vote in 1859?—Yes; I made a mistake in the election.

24,386. You did vote for Lacon and Stracey?—Yes, that is right.

24,387. How much did you receive?—15*l.*

24,388. Who gave it you?—Robert Symonds.

24,389. Do you know who Robert Symonds had the money from?—No.

24,390. Where does Robert Symonds live?—Just over the water; he is a boat builder.

24,391. Waterside, Southtown?—Yes.

24,392. Did you not receive 5*l.* from Mr. Clements?—Yes.

24,393. Clements belonged to the opposite party to Mr. Symonds?—Yes.

24,394. And you voted for Symonds' party?—Yes.

24,395. How came you to take the 5*l.* from Clements and vote against his party?—I told him when he offered it me. I said, "I am going to vote for Lacon and Stracey," and he gave me that to go out of town with, and not to vote; and I told him I should not do so.

24,396. He gave you the money, and you took it?—Yes.

24,397. Was that all you had?—Yes.

24,398. How did you vote at the last election?—Lacon and Brogden.

24,399. Or Lacon and Goodson?—Well, Goodson; I forget the names.

24,400. Since you were here before you have remembered you had some money in 1859. Do you remember whether you had some money in 1865, at the last election when you voted for Lacon and Goodson?—No, I had no money then, not a sixpence.

24,401. How is it you did not get any money at the last election?—I refused it. Mr. Neave offered me money, and I refused it. I never was offered money by the other party.

24,402. Why did you take money in 1859, and refuse it in 1865?—I stood in need of it then.

24,403. You are better off now?—Yes, thank God, a great deal better off.

WILLIAM NEWMAN recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

24,404. You gave us a list of men you gave money to at the election of 1865, when you were here before?—Tickets, not money.

24,405. Can you tell us anything about the election of 1859?—Well, only a very little I had to do with that; what I had to do with the affair was under Mr. Eagleton. I think I had some 28*l.* from Mr. Eagleton in 1859.

24,406. And what did you do with that 28*l.*?—I gave 10*l.* to James Palmer that was on the register for the back of the Walls, a publican; and 10*l.* to Edward Smith, a blacksmith, living in St. Peter's Place. Edward Smith is now off the register, and I believe he resides on St. Peter's Plain; I know the house very well.

24,407. Is he off the register at this time?—Yes.

24,408. Is James Palmer on the register?—Yes.

24,409. That is 20*l.*?—And the other 8*l.*, I think it was something like that, I went and engaged a room from Henry King, living in the Market Place, the "Half Moon." Mr. Eagleton ordered me to engage it, and I did receive the 8*l.* for Mr. King, and I paid him; that is all I know about the election of 1859. It was Henry King who kept the "Half Moon" in the market.

TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY.

W. Newman.

8 Oct. 1866.

24,410. Is that all the money you received in 1859?—That is all the money I received in 1859.

24,411. From anyone?—From anyone.

24,412. Did you receive any money in 1857?—No, not a farthing.

THOMAS B. EDWARDS recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

T. B. Edwards.

24,413. Are you able to recollect any more names?—No. I have not added any more, unless I add a dead man or two, which I do not feel disposed to do.

24,414. Do not mind adding them if you gave them the money?—I have no recollection of it, and I will not add them; therefore I feel confident I could not even have taken 50*l.* from Mr. Steward, because what I did take I spent every penny of. I took him the the names and amounts to be paid to each man.

24,415. Mr. Steward gave in your name as having received 60*l.*?—About, he says; it must be evidently wrong.

24,416. He is wrong then?—Decidedly; because it was very little I had to do with it in 1859, I was more writing; so I was in 1857.

24,417. What did you give Ashby?—I am not quite sure about Ashby. I will not swear anything about Ashby. I think I told you so before I went away; I would not be sure about Ashby.

24,418. You only account for 22*l.* 10*s.*?—If you ask me if I will give you my opinion, I think they were 10*l.* each.

24,419. Mr. Riches?—Yes; and Aldridge and Barber.

24,420. You make it 30*l.*?—Something like that.

54,421. The worst of it is, Riches says he only got 5*l.*, and Barber says 7*l.* 10*s.*?—I feel confident it was more than 5*l.*

24,422. (Mr. Russell.) You admit you cannot remember what you received from Mr. Steward?—Yes.

24,423. Therefore it is very probable you do not remember what you paid?—Very good.

24,424. Barber has sworn he only received 7*l.* 10*s.* from you, and Riches swears he only received 5*l.*?—I give you my ideas. I would not swear to it through thick and thin, or anything like that.

24,425. A man who receives money is more likely to remember it than the man who gives away another man's money?—Very probable.

24,426. Now we have Mr. Steward swearing he gave you 60*l.* in 1859, and you have only accounted for 22*l.* 10*s.*?—I had no such sum as that certainly, but what I have accounted for. I have accounted for all I had from him, because I gave each man's name in for the amount.

24,427. Did you return any money to Mr. Steward? I drew only what I wanted.

24,428. Whatever you did receive was not in one sum?—Yes. I believe I took their names to him in one sum.

24,429. He did say about 60*l.*?—Yes.

24,430. It will be more than 22*l.* 10*s.*, will it not be?—Of course; that is, decidedly so.

24,431. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know anything of the election of 1857?—1857, I have John Jackson——

24,432. I do not want the names. Did you receive any money to give away then?—I received it to give to these parties, of course.

24,433. Who from?—I think Mr. Steward.

24,434. You did receive money from Mr. Steward?—Yes.

24,435. You cannot say how much?—No, I am sure I cannot. I would not attempt it.

24,436. Can you say whether you received money from anybody else, except Mr. Steward, at either of the elections?—No.

24,437. Are you certain of that?—Quite certain.

24,438. (Mr. Russell.) If you can remember any other man to whom you did give money in 1859 you will tell us?—You shall have them; or if Mr. Cooper or anybody else present can put me in possession of any names I shall be very much obliged to them.

DANIEL MARJORAM sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

D. Marjoram.

24,439. What are you?—A labourer. I work on the Quay.

24,440. You had no vote at the last election?—No.

24,441. But you had in 1859?—Yes.

24,442. Who did you vote for then?—For the Liberals.

24,443. Watkin and Young?—Yes.

24,444. Did you receive any money in 1859?—Yes.

24,446. Who from?—A man of the name of Roberts gave it to me. I have understood Mr. Greenhow said he gave me 13*l.* Two 5*l.* notes is all I had from a man of the name of Roberts.

24,447. What is Roberts' christian name?—James, I think.

24,448. Do you know where he lives?—I know where he works. He works for Mr. Gooda, a blacksmith, over the bridge.

24,449. He is a wheelwright?—Yes.

24,450. Is James Roberts a voter?—I do not know, I am sure.

24,451. Did James Roberts tell you he had the money from Greenhow?—No, he never told me, and I never did know until the last day or two where he did get it from.

24,452. You knew it was not his own money?—I did not know anything about it till the last day or two. I understood Mr. Greenhow to say he gave me 13*l.* He did not give it to me at all.

24,453. Were you offered any money besides the 10*l.* in 1859?—No; I do not recollect that I was.

THOMAS MOYSE sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

T. Moyse.

24,454. What are you?—A carter.

24,455. You had not a vote at the last election, had you?—No.

24,456. But you had a vote in 1859?—The election before then I had.

24,457. And you voted for Watkin and Young?—Yes.

24,458. Did you receive any money?—None at all.

24,459. Did not a man named Clements give you some money?—No.

24,460. Will you swear he did not?—No, I never had a halfpenny.

24,461. Do you know whether Clements gave any money to anybody for you?—Not anyone that I know of.

24,462. Have you got a wife?—Yes.

24,463. Do you know if your wife had any money?—No, she had not a halfpenny.

24,464. Are you sure she had not?—She told me she had not.

24,465. Clements has given us your name as having received money in 1859?—I did not receive a halfpenny from him.

24,466. Or from anybody else?—Not anyone.

24,467. How came you to vote for Watkin and Young in 1859?—They were my way inclined. The time before I voted the other way.

24,468. Did you vote the same side in 1857?—No.

24,469. Which side then?—The other side. I voted for Mr. Coates. I worked for Mr. Coates then, and he made me vote his way when I worked for him.

24,470. Did you promise to vote for Watkin and Young when they canvassed you?—I did not promise anybody till the day. I did not make up my mind.

24,471. What made you hang back?—I did not think about voting at all.

24,472. You are sure you did not get something that stimulated you a little?—No, not a halfpenny at all.

24,473. Have you ever taken any money at municipal elections in this town?—No.

24,474. Never?—Never.

24,475. You never took any money for any sort of vote?—No.

24,476. Has Mr. Cooper ever given you money for your vote at municipal elections?—Not a halfpenny.

24,477. Never?—Not to my recollection. I have no learning.

24,478. Upon your recollection you may have taken money for your vote, and have forgotten it?—I do not think I did.

24,479. Do you think you took some money for your vote in 1859, and have forgotten it?—No; I do not think I had a vote in 1859.

24,480. Yes, you had, and you voted for Watkin and Young?—I forget it then.

24,481. If you forgot that you had a vote in 1859, may you not have forgotten that you got some money for it?—No, I never took any money, I know.

24,482. Mr. Clements has sworn that he did give you money for your vote in 1859?—Mr. Clements never gave me a halfpenny.

24,483. Now you say that you never had any money for your votes at municipal elections?—Never a halfpenny.

24,484. I am told that Mr. Cooper will get into the box and swear that he gave you money?—Mr. Cooper will swear to a great falsehood. I never took a halfpenny in my life.

24,485. Then Mr. Clements and Mr. Cooper will swear falsely, and you will swear the truth?—I never got a halfpenny from anyone.

24,486. How come you to have no vote now?—Because I have left the other house. I have been in this house about two years last August.

24,487. You pay less rent now than you did then?—Yes.

JOHN COOPER recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

J. Cooper.

24,488. Do you know this man?—Yes. I have given him money on two occasions.

24,489. At municipal elections?—I recollect at one place, the "Rose," giving him some money at breakfast time.

THOMAS MOYSE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

T. Moyse.

24,490. Did you hear that statement of Mr. Cooper's?—I never recollect taking any money from that man in my life.

24,491. Mr. Cooper has said that you did. Do you recollect taking any money or not, now?—I never took any money.

24,992. At the "Rose?"—No, I never took any. I recollect going into breakfast. The whole room was full of them, but I never received a halfpenny. He never gave me a halfpenny.

24,493. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Mr. Clements says that he gave you 5*l.*?—He never gave me a halfpenny; I can declare that before Mr. Clements.

24,494. You have denied that you received money at the municipal elections, and Mr. Cooper has stated he paid you?—He has never paid me.

24,495. It is two witnesses against one?—I never had any money.

JOHN COOPER recalled; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

J. Cooper.

24,496. Have you found out anything more? We want you to give us some account of the election of 1859. At that time, we have heard, you were not the chief agent for illegal purposes?—No, William Green was the principal agent.

24,497. Did William Green employ you to assist him in bribing?—He did.

24,498. Besides what he employed you for, were you acquainted with his proceedings generally?—No. I knew he had money for the purpose of bribing.

24,499. You knew only of what you did yourself, as far as the actual distribution of the money was concerned?—Yes, I gave money to several sub-agents.

24,500. You had sub-agents under you?—Yes.

24,501. What did you receive from Mr. Green?—The amount of money I could not state, but I should suppose some 600*l.* or 700*l.*

24,502. The election, I believe, was on Friday?—Yes.

24,503. How soon before the election did you get this 600*l.* or 700*l.*?—I believe it was the Tuesday previous to the election. I think that was the day as as near as I can now remember, two days before the nomination.

24,504. Not all in one sum?—No; I had two or three sums of money.

24,505. In the course of the day, or between that and the election?—Between that and the nomination day.

24,506. Are you aware, except from what you have heard here, where Mr. Green got the money from?—No, I am not. I never asked him the question. He was a very singular man; he would not tell anyone, I am sure.

24,507. Had you been employed at previous elections too?—I was assisting at the election of 1857.

24,508. Were you as convinced at the election of 1859, as you seem to have been at the election of 1865, that the money would come, and that you would be employed?—I did not know anything about it till Mr. Green called on me at my shop. I must say, candidly, I believed there would be money.

24,509. You believed there would be money?—Yes, I believed that.

24,510. Had you made conditional promises previously to the money actually coming?—Yes, I had done so.

24,511. You had prepared the way?—Yes, I had prepared the way to give the money.

24,512. Will you tell us how you distributed that money?—I should tell you there may be one or two men I gave money to as sub-agents, that I am not certain about. I will give you as near as I can recollect the names. I think I gave Mr. Benjamin Lane about 120*l.*; John Trueman Buston, junior—I am merely speaking from recollection.

24,513. How much?—About 100*l.*, I should think.

24,514. The next?—Benjamin Lindoff. I think you have had his name. 45*l.*, he says. I think that was about the amount. I only recollect it from the evidence he has given here.

24,515. The next?—A man of the name of Edmund Stolworthy. I cannot tell you anything like the amount of money I gave him. I do not know whether it was 100*l.* or 200*l.* He is still living, but he is paralysed and blind. He lives in Yarmouth. He had taken the same position then in the North Ward that George Watson took this time. I do not recollect giving Watson money; I may have done so, but I do not recollect it. I think I gave Mr. Rivett some money. I cannot recollect it myself, but I was told so this morning that I did. It would not have been much if I did. He would not have had his money principally from me.

TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY.

J. Cooper.

8 Oct. 1866.

24,516. That altogether would amount to some 300*l.* or 400*l.*?—That would amount to some 300*l.* or 400*l.*, I should suppose so.

24,517. Besides that, did you give any to voters yourself?—Yes.

24,518. Will you name them?—The first man on my list here is a man who was here on Saturday, Charles Botwright.

24,519. What did you give him?—15*l.* I wish to say I did not give it him in the way he has described. I called at the man's house, and he told me he wanted money, and I told him to come up to my shop, and I would give him some. He called and told me he had been offered 15*l.* on the other side, but Dr. Norman was a friend of his, and if I would give him 15*l.* he would vote Conservative. I counted the money into his hand, and he said he would poll by 9 o'clock in the morning. He stated before the House of Commons I put it into his trowsers pocket without his knowledge, and he did not find it out till he got home. Of course it was not a likely thing I should do so. If you knew as much about him as is known of him in Yarmouth you would not attach the slightest importance to any evidence he gave. He stated, I think this time here, I put it into his coat pocket, and before the Committee of the House of Commons he said his trowsers pocket.

24,520. His story here essentially differs from what he told the House of Commons?—Yes, it does. He stated there he sent for a minister, and had a kind of incantation over the money. And that he was bribed in 1859 by the Liberals, there is no doubt of it; he is not a man to vote without money.

24,521. You say distinctly he took 15*l.* from you, and put it into his pocket?—I counted it out to him into his hand. I do not know whether he put it into his pocket or not; he counted the money over after me.

24,522. You understood that he was to vote for Lacon and Stracey?—Exactly. I should not have parted with the money without.

24,523. (Mr. Russell.) Botwright came to you at your shop?—Yes, he came to the office at the back of my shop, and I paid him the money there.

24,524. (Mr. Slade.) Will you go on with your list?—Edward Brady, Row 50. I think you had his evidence.

24,525. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) How much?—I do not know further than what he stated. Rouse Colby, Row 70. I can tell you the ward: it is the Regent Ward. He is not residing in that row now.

24,526. How much?—Well, perhaps, I should not like to give any amount for this man, from 10*l.* to 15*l.*, they will come up and tell you; really I have forgotten the amounts.

24,527. Where is he now?—I think he is lodging in a row in Gaol Street; I can obtain his address for you this evening; I saw him only on Saturday—Samuel Dunn, Gaol Street—he has left the town; I do not know where he is; 10*l.* or 15*l.*; you will not find him; he is in London somewhere; he is not in Yarmouth. William Eliis, Buckenham Place.

24,528. He is dead?—He is dead; he had money from me and the other side too, and he voted one and one; many of these men are either dead, or they have left the town; Charles Green, King Street, he has left the town. Alfred Harpley, Belgrave Place, he is dead; you will find his evidence before the House of Commons in 1859; he was a witness, I think; I think he stated there the amount of money he had; I am sure I forget what it was.

24,529. Ten sovereigns?—I daresay that will be about it; more likely 10*l.* than 15*l.*; most of them had 10*l.* Stephen Holdsworth, Gaol Street.

24,530. Is he on the register now?—He is on the register now; he is living in Yarmouth; I think he had 10*l.*

24,531. (Mr. Russell.) Do you know where he lives now?—No; I think he is generally on the Quay here every day. I can soon ascertain for you; he will be very glad to come up, I daresay. James Horth, Row, 57, you have had him; he says I gave him only 10*l.* in 1865; I know I gave him 15*l.*; Henry Hunter, Gaol Street, 15*l.* I recollect he had; he is residing in London. William D. Hunter, Roman Place I do not know what has become of him; he is not in Yarmouth. Thomas Leyton, Providence Place; he was a Queen's pilot, but he is dead; I do not know whether he had 10*l.* or 15*l.* William Marshall, Gaol Street; he is dead; I think he had 10*l.* William Miller, South Quay you have had him before you; he is now residing on the Denes, Albion Place.

24,532. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) What did Miller acknowledge to?—I do not recollect; I think it was 10*l.*

24,533. (Mr. Slade.) He says 15*l.* from Cooper; that is the last election; nothing about '59?—Nothing about 1859.

24,534. He is a lodging-house keeper?—I thought you examined me about 1859; he had 15*l.* from me at the last election.

24,535. (Mr. Russell.) He denied receiving any money?—There are two William Millers.

24,536. (Mr. Slade.) Where did he live—No. 1, Ely Place, Albion Road?—That is the man.

24,537. He is asked, "Had you a vote in 1859?—"I had. Did you receive any money for your vote at "that election?—Nobody ever gave me anything."—He is mistaken.

24,538. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You are sure he had 10*l.*?—Yes, he is one of the men on my list.

24,539. Have you seen William Miller since?—Not since he gave his evidence here; he is a very old man, and might have forgotten it.

24,540. The question is, whether it is worth while our sending for him again?—Of course, if the Commissioners are so determined, they can; I gave him the money; I do not believe that he wilfully mis-stated it.

24,541. It was not put to him whether he would undertake to swear that you did not?—No; I gave him the money.

24,542. You are quite certain?—Yes; he is a respectable old man; he is an invalid, I think.

24,543. (Mr. Slade.) He is a thin, old man, with weak eyes rather?—Yes, that is the man; he wrote to the Commissioners, I think, once before; he came, or his wife wrote; I do not believe he wilfully mis-stated it. Then Stephen Peachment, Garden Lane; he is dead; he had 15*l.* from me, and, I think, 15*l.* from the other side; he voted one and one; he had money from me again this time. William B. Pye, Howard Street; he lives down Blackfriars Road now if you want him; he was not on in 1865.

24,544. Had he 10*l.* or 15*l.*?—I think he had 15*l.*; it is the son of the woman who came up here this time. Then Samuel B. Roberts, St. Peter's Road.

24,545. He has been examined?—He has been examined.

24,546. In 1859 he got 15*l.* from Mr. Beales?—Then I must have given the money to Beales for him; I recollect taking some money down to Beales. The next is Stephen Rudrum, Alfred Terrace; he had 15*l.*

24,547. He has been examined?—He has been. John Sharman, King Street.

24,548. What is he?—A confectioner.

24,549. John Sharman who was examined was a tailor?—It is John Sharman, a confectioner, King Street.

24,550. He has not been examined—the one in King Street?—No.

24,551. How much?—15*l.*, I think, he had.

24,552. (Mr. Russell.) One word about Sharman. How is it you did not go to John Sharman this last time?—I went to him, but his price was so high that I would not give it.

24,553. Do you remember what he asked?—He asked 20*l.* two or three days before the election; we did not want him, and so I thought I would not give him anything. Then Abraham Solomons, the Jew, in King Street.

24,554. How much?—10*l.*; he is dead. Charles Spurgeon, Howard Street.

24,555. He is not on the register now?—No; he is residing at Hull now.

24,556. How much?—I think he had 15*l.*; I am not positive about it, but I think that is the amount. Then Edward Whitesides, St. Peter's Road; he is dead; he had 15*l.*; I gave it to him in the presence of Rudrum; the two were working together as carpenters; they were working at the same place, and I paid them at the same time. Then William Mayes, in the Gorleston list.

24,557. Has he been up?—No, he has not been up; I have been expecting to see his name this time, though it did not come out; no doubt he was bribed by the Liberals.

24,558. What did he get?—He had 15*l.* from me; he is residing in Southtown now; he is on the register for 1865 for Southtown; you will find him there; he has not been up; I have been particularly looking out for him.

24,559. (Mr. Slade.) He has not been examined?—No; he had money.

24,560. Is it William Mayes, St. Andrew's Place?—That is the man. In 1859 I gave him, I think, 15*l.* to vote for Lacon and Stracey, and I have no doubt he was bribed by the others to vote for Young and Watkin. I mentioned it to him after the election, and told him he was a scamp to take the money and not vote; but he said his brother-in-law Mr. Menthorpe, on the Southtown Road, had been to him, and I suppose Mr. Menthorpe gave him the money. It is George Menthorpe.

24,561. The next?—Robert Fisk, of Charlotte Street; you had him here—a cabman. He had, I think, 12*l.* He went out of town; they got him to go to Breadwell. They shut him up, and he did not vote at all.

24,562. How much did you give him?—I think it was 12*l.* You pressed him about the 1859 election when he was here, and he had no recollection about it.

24,563. "I do not remember Mr. Cooper giving me any money in 1859. If he did I have forgotten it." That is what he says?—That is the man; they bottled him up and got him to Breadwell. He was taken away.

24,564. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) He could hardly have forgotten it then?—He could not have forgotten it.

24,565. (Mr. Slade.) Do I understand that Robert Fisk was paid and did not vote, or was paid to keep away?—He was paid by me to vote, and I daresay he was paid to go away and abstain from voting.

24,566. The next?—Those are all the names that I can recollect. There may be possibly three or four more. I had marked two names here, but I am not certain whether I gave the man the money or not. I do not like to mention the names.

24,567. What are the names?—George Bilsdon, residing at Acle now. I am not sure I gave him the money.

24,568. He is not on the register?—He is not on the 1865 register.

24,569. He is living at Acle?—Yes, he is living at Acle, within seven miles of Yarmouth.

24,570. And the other one?—This man that I have marked here had money, but not from me. I now know—Samuel Seago, junior.

24,571. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Your list of names is 24?—Yes.

24,572. That would not be, according to your calculation, less than 240*l.*?—It would not be less than that; more likely it would be 300*l.*

24,573. Nor more than 360*l.*?—I should think it would be something like 300*l.*; that is the fair way of putting it. There was no one less than 10*l.* I did not give any voter less than 10*l.*

24,574. It would not be less than 240*l.*?—No, it would not.

24,575. And it would not probably be more than 360*l.*?—It would be about 300*l.*

24,576. And what you gave away to other agents was about 300*l.*?—I should think rather more than that. I do not know; it was 700*l.* or 800*l.* that I had, I think.

24,577. I thought you said you had 600*l.*?—No. I think if you refer to the first part of my evidence it was always my impression it was about 700*l.*

24,578. (Mr. Slade.) You had 600*l.* or 700*l.*?—Yes, that was it.

24,579. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you think you received as much as 800*l.*?—I would not swear that I did, or that I did not. There is 50*l.* which, with the knowledge of Mr. Green, I retained for my own services.

24,580. The 50*l.* from Mr. Green you retained for your services?—Yes.

24,581. And you are confident that you gave away 365*l.*?—Yes.

24,582. I suppose you did not give less than 100*l.* to Edmund Stolworthy?—I should not give less than 100*l.*

24,583. Supposing he had 100*l.*, you gave away to other agents 365*l.*, without reckoning what you gave to Mr Rivett?—About 250*l.*

24,584. You said 120*l.* to Benjamin Lane, 100*l.* to John Buston, 45*l.* to Benjamin Lindoff, and 100*l.* or 200*l.* to Edmund Stolworthy?—Yes.

24,585. If you put it at 100*l.* that would be 365*l.*?—It would. Then I think I recollect something the election morning of giving Mr. Rivett money. In fact I do not recollect it, but I was reminded of it, and I thought I had done so.

24,586. Most of these men, you say, had been arranged with before?—Yes.

24,587. (Mr. Slade.) The money you gave to sub-agents was in a great part spent in Gorleston?—No, in Yarmouth; all in Yarmouth, except Lindoff.

24,588. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Lindoff was in Gorleston?—It is in Southtown that he lives, just over the bridge. That is all.

24,589. Were you aware whether Mr. Rivett had any money from Gorleston on that occasion?—Yes.

24,590. Do you know the amount?—No, I do not. I have no idea.

24,591. Are you aware whether Lummis had money on that occasion?—He had not any.

24,592. Mr. Green, according to your view, had it all?—I should think Mr. Green had the whole of it.

24,593. In the first instance?—Yes. Mr. Green occupied at one time in Yarmouth the same position as Mr. Spilling did during the former elections in Yarmouth, during the time of the freemen.

24,594. For the Conservative party?—Yes. You will find in 1835 his name mentioned in the House of Commons.

24,595. I suppose Mr. Nightingale can tell us when the money, or at least part of it, passed into the hands of Mr. Green?—Yes, I should think so.

24,596. Had you and Mr. Green any conversation about the proper time for commencing?—Yes; we talked it over, and Mr. Green asked my opinion about it. I recollect well I told him to be beforehand with us this time, and not to let them buy us out as they did the previous election.

24,597. When did you begin?—Some time on the Tuesday previous to the election.

24,598. Had you any reason to believe at that time the other side had began?—Yes, I had. I recollect a neighbour of mine, a very warm partisan on the Liberal side, Mr. Charles Miller, a great friend of Mr. Steward's, going into a shoe shop, and offering to bet any money that the Liberals would be returned again. I asked him his reason, and he said, "Whatever money it costs, we mean to have it;" and I knew if Mr. Miller said so there was something in it.

TWENTY-EIGHTH DAY.

J. Cooper.

8 Oct. 1866.

He was a man engaged in the election, no doubt, in spending money for the Liberals.

24,599. Did any fact come to your knowledge that made you believe that the actual expenditure of money had commenced?—I do not recollect further than that; that probably some of these men would come and tell me they had been offered money. To many of these men I should say, "If the others come and offer "you the money, if they come and offer you the hard "cash, come and let me know, and you shall have it "directly." I should do that just to find out when they began.

24,600. (Mr. Russell.) Who was Mr. Miller?—A linendraper, in the market.

24,601. Is he alive now?—He is dead now. He was a great friend of Mr. Christopher Steward's.

24,602. Do you believe he took a part in bribing on the other side?—I do not believe he bribed a voter personally. I have no doubt he had money to dispense.

24,603. Mr. Miller was not one of those mentioned by Mr. Christopher Steward?—So I noticed at the time, I expected to have heard his name mentioned.

24,604. You mentioned the name of Samuel Seago?—Samuel Seago, junior. He said he was not bribed in 1859 by the Conservatives.

24,605. He was pushed and pressed upon it, and persisted in his denial?—George Harvey gave him the money.

24,606. Are you sure he had it?—Oh, yes. His father was bribed in 1859 as well.

24,607. Do you know who bribed his father?—I think Harvey bribed them.

24,608. Is he alive?—He is alive.

24,609. (Mr. Slade.) In those days Mr. Green was the person who had the entire distribution of the money on the Conservative side?—Entirely so.

24,610. Do you know who his sub-agents were?—No. Mr. Green would do a great deal himself. I should think Mr. Shuckford had some money from Mr. Green.

24,611. I was going to ask as to him?—I should think he would.

24,612. Had Downing money that election?—Downing had money in the 1859 election.

24,613. From you?—No, from Mr. Shuckford. Mr. Shuckford told me that he gave him 40*l.* for four votes, and not one of them voted Conservative.

24,614. (Mr. Russell.) Do you remember who those four men were?—I do not recollect them now. You have had, I think, two of them before you. You had one on Saturday, a man who took money from Downing and voted Liberal.

24,615. (Mr. Slade.) Were there any other sub-agents of Mr. Green's that you recollect?—I think Mr. Powell had a little money of him. I did not know until Mr. Powell mentioned it here the other day.

24,616. Benjamin Powell?—Yes. I do not know where Harvey had his from.

24,617. That was 45*l.* Powell got?—I do not know the amount. I heard him mention it the other day.

24,618. What Harvey is that?—George Harvey, the whitesmith.

24,619. Has he been examined?—He has been examined, but I do not know whether you asked him about the 1859 election. I only know he had money then; he was telling me after Seago had sworn he had no money. He came and told me he had money himself.

24,620. George Harvey received money from Mr. Shuckford the last election?—I recollect him saying so, but I do not know where he got his money in 1859.

24,621. Was there any other person that was likely to have money to distribute?—I do not recollect anyone. Mr. Rivett would have selected his own persons, the same as I should, or Mr. Shuckford, in the same way, but I do not know who they were.

24,622. Mr. Shuckford, in 1859, did not act independent of Mr. Green; he acted under him?—I should think he acted under Mr. Green. I should think all the money would have gone to Mr. Green.

24,623. Harris Wilshack, was he likely to have had money?—He would have had money I should think from Mr. Shuckford.

24,624. John Thomas Savage?—Mr. Savage had some little to do with the election. I know he was very ill at the time. I think he had only money for two or three persons, and very likely he would get his money from Mr. Green.

24,625. Was there a Mr. Leggett working that side?—There was a Mr. Leggett at Gorleston, he would be working under Mr. Rivett.

24,626. Was that William Leggett of the "White "Lion?"—Yes.

24,627. Robert Dumbleton; did he act in 1859?—I do not know whether he had any money to spend. I have always known him as a warm partisan. I do not think he did anything in the illegal part of the election.

24,628. In the last election he acted under Mr. Teasdel?—Yes.

24,629. And he gave Symonds 10*l.*?—Yes. I suppose he was asked to do it. I do not think he was a man who would have money to spend in the regular way. He might ask one or two persons.

24,630. You never knew him to have money?—I never knew him to have a shilling.

24,631. (Mr. Russell.) I see you do not seem to have raised the price since 1859?—No; we kept much to the same amount.

24,632. Much the same this election that you did the last?—I think ours are a better class of voters generally.

24,633. Your prices ranged from 10*l.* to 15*l.* at the last election, and from 10*l.* to 15*l.* this?—Just so; nor we did not require so many men as the others.

24,634. What do you mean by your men are a better class?—I think they are more reasonable. I selected my men as near as we could. I took the pick of them, many of those men, such as Shearman and such like. I should put them the other side, and make them a present of them.

24,635. Can you tell us anything about the election of 1857?—I know nothing more than this, that I was engaged in the election. I know of no illegal practices at that election, and I believe there was not a shilling spent by the Conservatives.

24,636. That is what I want to ask, if money was spent illegally on the Conservative side in the election of 1857, do you think it would be known to you?—I think I should have known it.

24,637. Have you ever been employed in such practices before 1857?—In 1852 I think I got two or three men for Mr. Rumbold, about 2 or 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

24,638. I do not want to go into it, but I want to know if bribery took place in 1857 on the Conservative side, you would be likely to know it?—I should have known of it.

24,639. You mentioned to us you believed on the Conservative side it was a pure election?—Yes.

24,640. You believe that?—I have reason to believe there was not a shilling spent in bribery.

24,641. Did you hear Mr. Spilling's evidence this morning?—I heard him give his evidence.

24,642. Do you remember the fact of the compromise between Mr. Rumbold and Sir Edmund Lacon?—I remember it well.

24,643. Do you agree with Mr. Spilling that the compromise was hardly adhered to on your side?—I have told Mr. Spilling since he left the room he was quite wrong, for this reason: there were not more than 100 or 120 Liberals voted for Mr. Rumbold at the election, so that there may have been a few isolated cases of Conservatives plumping for Lacon.

24,644. Mr. Spilling fortified his opinion by stating on the morning of the election he found out men were not voting as it had been agreed by the Conservative party that they should vote, and he was therefore driven on the post as it were to bribe?—I do not think Mr. Spilling can mention any prominent men of the Conservatives who did so. Of course there are a class of independent men, who are not party men, who would not vote for a Conservative.

24,645. You agree with Mr. Spilling that the compromise was made, but you do not agree with Mr. Spilling that it was not adhered to on your side?—Quite so; I believe the compromise was made, and was carried on honourably, as far as it could be.

24,646. Did Mr. Spilling at the time ever represent the compromise had not been carried out?—I never heard him say so, until to-day.

24,647. You were the first party to bribe in the election of 1859, were you not?—I think not. I believe the other side commenced on the Monday morning, the Monday of the election week.

24,648. The disbursement of the money is one thing, and the promise of money is another thing. The party who bribes first is the party who promises first. Do you consider you had promised money first in the election of 1859?—I believe they began about the same time as we did to lay the money by.

24,649. You said you promised money as much as a month before the election?—No, I have not said so.

24,650. How long before the election did you promise money in 1859?—A fortnight before the election. I think it was only a short canvass. I think the dissolution of Parliament was not known more than a fortnight before a dissolution took place.

24,651. As soon as you knew it you went to the shaky voters?—No; after the canvass had commenced I should probably have done so.

24,652. When you first began making promises of money, did any men whom you promised tell you they had received promises from the other side?—Yes; that we always hear, whether it is right or wrong.

24,653. That may be merely with a view to stimulate you to offer an additional price?—No; but they were out I know.

24,654. You have no specific information of the promises of money on the Liberal side in 1859 before you promised?—At this moment I have not. I was always under the impression they had begun before us. I think Mr. Watkin was down here before Sir Henry Stracey.

24,655. If they were before you in the field it would not be your fault?—No, that it would not.

24,656. Two gentlemen, Mr. Chamberlin and Mr. Spilling, have very strongly enforced upon us their belief that a compromise would have been the best thing for Yarmouth. What is your feeling?—To allay party feeling, no doubt it would.

24,657. And do you believe, apart from allaying party feeling, it would have great influence in stopping bribery?—I think it would. Since the disfranchisement of the freemen, until the election of 1859, the Conservatives have never spent a shilling.

24,658. Would you have supported Mr. Chamberlin's proposition of a compromise?—We have frequently talked it over, and I have expressed an opinion it would be the best.

24,659. (Mr. Slade.) Who was the great opponent of the compromise here?—The general body of the corrupt electors would be the parties to oppose it; they would get up an opposition themselves, to support any man, Whig, Tory, or Radical, if he would only come and call himself independent, to break up the coalition.

24,660. Are you aware whether Sir Edmund Lacon was ever consulted on the subject of the compromise?—I am not aware of it. I never heard anything about it. I believe Sir Edmund Lacon would have accepted a compromise in 1857, when Mr. Justice Mellor and Mr. Young were here. I have always understood, in that election of 1857, that Mellor and Young were prepared with the sinews of war, although they had not occasion to use them.

24,661. (Mr. Russell.) I suppose, in the event of a compromise, Sir Edmund Lacon would be selected as your candidate?—Yes.

24,662. Therefore, if he took a personal and selfish view of the subject, a compromise would be to his advantage, both in securing him the seat and saving his money?—Decidedly. Sir Edmund Lacon would be the man. The Conservatives are the strongest party in the borough. Even for the second seat I disagree with several witnesses about that; it is proved at the last election that Mr. Goodson had nearly 600 men, or 550, without spending a shilling, to Mr. Brogden's 630. Mr. Goodson has polled very nearly as many pure votes as Mr. Brogden has, pure and impure together.

24,663. In the pure votes of course you include the votes of influence, public-house votes, and so forth?—Yes; the Liberals have influence in the borough as well, and therefore Mr. Brogden's pure votes must be put in the same way.

24,664. But you would not compare the influence of the Liberals in the town with the influence of the Conservatives?—No; but I believe Sir Edmund Lacon never influenced a voter. I believe never one of his tenants have been turned out of his house for voting Liberal, and there are several cases I believe, even in the 1865 election, of men voting against Sir Edmund Lacon, and no notice taken of it; and in 1857——

24,665. A man is influenced by his interest whether he exercises it or not?—Yes.

24,666. Have you ever taken the trouble to go through the register to make out who are, within your knowledge, pure electors of Yarmouth and Gorleston, and what would be, in your opinion, your majority of those?—The majority of pure voters?

24,667. Yes?—I should think we have a majority of 200 more than the Liberals, of pure voters, for the Parliamentary borough.

24,668. You are talking on a mere estimate?—I am talking of my own estimate, for I have gone through it. When this register is revised and reprinted, I shall take the register and mark off all the men who I believe are influenced by money, and those that are not, and keep them.

24,669-70. (Mr. Slade.) How many men are there whom you know will not vote without money in Yarmouth?—I should think there are about 1,000 or 1,050 men that vote without receiving a shilling.

24,671. I say who will not vote without receiving money?—About 550, I should think.

24,672. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Downing said 600?—I should think about 550.

24,673. (Mr. Slade.) Who always require money for their votes?—Who always have money for their votes.

24,674. (Mr. Russell.) I suppose there are men who have some party feeling but who would not vote for their party unless they had money, but would not vote against it?—Decidedly. I should, if I was going to buy them, select men whose feelings I believed were Conservative.

24,675. Those would be men who would not vote at all unless they were paid?—Men who would not vote at all unless they had money.

24,676. On either side?—Yes.

24,677. And if paid on the Liberal side and not the Conservative, would vote Liberal?—Yes, many of them.

24,678. What is the proportion of the 550 of that class of men?—I do not understand your question.

24,679. I want to know how many of the 550 or 600 men are men who would take money, and yet would not vote against their party?—Not a large number.

24,680. Very small?—A very small number.

24,681. What proportion are there, do you think, who would take money on both sides if they could get it?—I do not believe you would find 100 men out of the 500 or 600 men who would do so. It is only the greater scamps of the lot. I have known many instances of men having been offered money after they had it from me, and they have come and told me and refused to take the money.

24,682. I suppose there are a great many men who simply wait for money and take it for their votes, whichever side offers it first?—Yes.

24,683. That would be the majority, I suppose, of the 550?—Yes.

24,684. Did you ever find any reluctance whatever among these men to receive money?—No.

24,685. Did they require no pressing?—Oh, no.

24,686. Do you believe that the proportionate number of voters on the register in 1865 who would take money was greater than the proportion in number in 1859?—Yes, I think so; the inducement was more. The sums were getting larger, and many men who would not sell themselves for 5*l.* would take 15*l.* or 20*l.*

24,687. Giving way to the temptation of large sums?—Oh, yes.

24,688. Supposing that the influence of Sir Edmund Lacon was put out of the question, and an election was to be fought here, and the candidates were to enter into a solemn engagement not to spend a shilling. Would you go for a contest of that sort with any degree of confidence?—Yes; I can give an instance. There is Sandars' and Rumbold's election with Mr. Bagshaw, in 1848. Mr. Sandars, the Conservative, was returned at the head of the poll without the spending of a shilling.

24,689. That was 18 years ago, when the register was quite different?—Take the register of 1852 again?

24,690. That, I suppose, was, to a great extent, a different register?—Yes, but I think the Conservatives have been gaining in influence in the borough since that time. We have certainly since 1852 got the whole of the corporation Conservative.

24,691. You get to the question of influence directly, and I am trying to put aside the question of influence, and, supposing no money to be spent, do you believe the balance of political feeling in the place is Conservative?—I believe the balance of the electors are Conservative.

24,692. I mean the electors?—The majority of the electors are Conservative.

24,693. Then you would be making a noble concession in agreeing to a compromise?—Yes; we start here with a certainty of one candidate being safe,—Sir Edmund Lacon.

24,694. Except in 1857?—But in the event of fighting a pure election, if the others had not resorted to illegal practices in 1857, Sir Edmund would then have been returned for certain.

Adjourned till to-morrow at half-past 10 o'clock.

TWENTY-NINTH DAY.

TWENTY-NINTH DAY.

H. K. Swan.

9 Oct. 1866.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 9th October 1866.

HENRY KING SWAN sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

24,695. What are you?—A fish merchant.

24,696. Who did you vote for at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

24,697. Did you receive any money?—Yes.

24,699. Who gave you the 50*l.*?—Mr. Isaac Shuckford.

24,700. All in one sum?—Yes.

24,701. Who was the 50*l.* for?—15*l.* for Samuel Chapman, of Portland Place.

24,702. Is that Samuel Chapman who is down as Wellington Road on the register?—Yes.

24,703. You received the 50*l.* at the last election?—Yes, this last election.

24,704. What is Samuel Chapman?—He is a beachman, or something of that sort.

24,705. Who is the next?—William King Swan, of Neptune Terrace.

24,707. And the next?—Robert Westgate, of the Tower Road, 15*l.*

24,708. That is 45*l.*?—Yes; and 5*l.* I spent in expenses, or something of that sort.

24,709. Was 5*l.* all you received for yourself?—Yes.

24,710. Did you offer money to any other men besides these three men?—No.

24,711. Had you nothing to do with 1859?—Yes.

24,712. How did you vote then?—For Lacon and Stracey.

24,713. Did you receive any money in 1859?—45*l.*

24,714. What did you do with that?—15*l.* to Thomas Turrell, of the Queen's Road.

24,715. Who else?—15*l.* to Samuel Boulton.

24,716. And the next?—And 15*l.* for myself. I did not give that away to anyone.

24,717. Was that all the money you had to deal with in 1859?—Yes.

24,718. Were you in either election ever offered money by the opposite party?—No.

24,719. You had a vote, too, in 1857, had you not?—Yes.

24,720. Did you vote for the Conservatives then?—No.

24,721. Who did you vote for in 1857?—McCullagh and Watkin, I think, were the two.

24,722. And did you have money to disburse then?—No.

24,723. Are you quite sure of that?—Yes.

24,724. How came you to change your party?—I always belonged to this party. I never belonged to the other party.

24,725. How came you to vote for Watkin and McCullagh in 1857?—Because the old lady gave me a ride up to vote.

24,726. Who is the old lady?—Mrs. McCullagh; and I thought I would take a ride.

24,727. You could not refuse the lady?—I could not refuse the lady.

24,728. Did Mrs. McCullagh give you anything beyond the ride up?—No.

24,729. Had you voted for the other party previous to the election?—Yes.

24,730. That was your only Liberal vote?—I am not sure. I do not know of any other on the Liberal side, and that is the only money that ever I received.

24,731. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Is William King Swan dead?—No.

24,732. They are all alive the names you have given?—Yes, they are; no dead ones.

24,733. I do not understand what you did with the 5*l.* you kept?—I spent it in wines and different things.

24,734. And treating?—Yes.

24,735. You did not put it in your own pocket?—No.

24,736. (Mr. Slade.) You kept 15*l.* in 1857?—Yes.

24,737. What did you get paid in 1865 yourself?—Nothing at all.

24,738. (Mr. Russell.) Had your circumstances improved between 1859 and 1865?—A little, I think.

24,739. (Mr. Slade.) When did Mr. Shuckford give you this 50*l.*?—I think it was the day before the election, or a day or two. I cannot say exactly.

24,740. Did Mr. Shuckford send for you?—No.

24,741. How did he give it to you?—He came to my place.

24,742. Did you give him the names of those three whom you thought you could get?—No; he knew within a little, I think.

24,743. Did you tell him how much money you should require?—No.

24,744. Did he say here are 50*l.* for you?—No.

24,745. How was the arrangement made?—I did not make any arrangement at all.

24,746. How did you settle on the sum of 50*l.*?—That I do not know. I did not settle at all upon it.

24,747. He gave you 50 sovereigns?—Yes.

24,748. Did he say you were to get these three men, or do the best you could with the money?—Do the best I could with it.

Mrs. Elizabeth Humfrey sworn; examined by Mr. Slade.

Mrs. E. Humfrey.

24,749. Are you the wife of Henry Thomas Humfrey?—Yes.

24,750. Is he too ill to attend before us to-day?—Yes.

24,751. Do you remember the election for the last year?—No; I do not know anything about the election at all, not anything.

24,752. Do you know whether your husband received any money for his vote?—No; I do not know anything about the money. I do not know anything about this election, or about the money. I have no knowledge of it at all, and about the other election I know nothing at all.

24,753. Do you know whether the last election was the first time your husband had a vote?—I do not know anything about the election at all. I had no knowledge of it whatever.

George Storey sworn; examined by Mr. Fitzgerald.

G. Storey.

24,754. What are you?—A clerk.

24,755. What in?—A timber merchant's clerk.

24,756. Did you vote at the last election?—I did.

24,757. Who for?—Lacon and Goodson.

24,758. Did you get anything for your vote?—Certainly not. I should scorn such a thing.

24,759. Did you vote at the election of 1859?—I did not.

24,760. Your name is handed in to us?—By whom?

24,761. By somebody who is likely to have taken a bribe?—He is a big scoundrel, let him be whoever he may. I have never received one farthing.

24,762. Were you canvassed by Sir Edmund Lacon?—I was canvassed by Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

24,763. Early in the canvass?—Yes, in the commencement of it; I think the second or third day.

25,764. Did you promise him at once?—I did; and I never saw the other party at all. I must say I consider it a great reflection on my character to be brought here by such a scoundrel, let him be who he may.

24,765. You have had the opportunity of explaining it?—But it is not a very pleasant thing to have your name posted about for nothing.

24,766. (Mr. Russell.) Is there another gentleman of that name?—There are two of that name in Southtown.

24,767. It may be a mistake. Mr. Garson Blake gave the name?—I think it is a mistake. I think you will find it is Mr. John Storey, the carpenter, that lives at Southtown.

24,768. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you know him?—I know him from living in the road.

24,769. Were you ever canvassed by Mr. Garson Blake?—Certainly not; he would not come near me, my coat is different to his.

24,770. (Mr. Russell.) It is a mistake, because Mr. Garson Blake says he canvassed a man of the name of Storey, who evidently wanted a fee?—It was not me.

24,771. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you know who James Storey is?—Yes; there was a James Storey, of Southtown.

24,772. What is he?—He is a painter, I think.

24,773. He did not vote at all I see?—I do not know.

24,774. (Mr. Slade.) John Blake Storey, who is an old man and a carpenter, did vote and got nothing?—That I do not know.

John Alfred Foreman sworn; examined by Mr. Russell.

J. A. Foreman.

24,775. What are you?—I am a fish agent.

24,776. Are you a voter?—Yes.

24,777. Who did you vote for at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

24,778. Did you take an active part at the last election?—No.

24,779. Do you know a man of the name of Scott?—Yes.

24,780. Did you canvass him?—No.

24,781. You never canvassed him at all?—No.

24,782. Did you ever speak to him about his son's place upon the railway?—I met Scott half a dozen times at my place of business in the course of a day, and I talked to him about the election one day.

24,783. What did you say?—I asked him which way he was going to vote. He said both parties canvassed him, and he did not care a straw who got in. I said, "If I were you, your son is on the line, and I "would vote for Lacon and Goodson, as he might get "a lift some day."

24,784. You did lead him to believe it would be to the interest of his son on the line if he voted for Lacon and Goodson?—I said in the course of the conversation, "It may give the boy a chance of having a lift." I said, "If you do not care two straws who gets in I should vote that way."

24,785. You were aware the man intended to vote the other side?—I do not know which way his politics were.

24,786. You had spoken to him several times previously, and he declined to promise?—No; I never spoke to him but that once before or since.

24,787. When you mentioned the influence it would have on the son's position did he then say he would vote for Lacon and Goodson?—No.

24,788. When did he promise?—I know nothing about it. That is all I said to him, and he never said which way he would vote.

24,789. The man has told us, in consequence of what you said to him about his son, he did vote for Lacon and Goodson?—I am only glad he did, if my conversation got them a vote. I had no intention of doing so, nor had I any authority.

24,790. (Mr. Slade.) What are you on the railway?—Nothing on the railway. I am an agent for the delivery of goods; I am no servant of the railway.

24,791. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You are not in the employment of the railway?—No.

24,792. (Mr. Russell.) Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

TWENTY-NINTH DAY.

E. W. Watkin, Esq., M.P.

9 Oct. 1866.

EDWARD WILLIAM WATKIN, Esq., M.P., sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

24,793. You are the present member for Stockport?—I am.

24,794. Are you also chairman of more than one railway company?—Yes, I am.

24,795. May I ask what railway companies?—I am chairman of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, the South-eastern Railway, and the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway.

24,796. You were returned as member for Yarmouth on the 28th of March 1857?—I was.

24,797. And you also contested the borough in April 1859?—I did.

24,798. In the year 1857 you were petitioned against, and the election was declared void?—It was.

24,799. In the year 1857 Mr. McCullagh was your colleague?—He was.

24,800. And Mr. McCullagh had been a candidate at the previous election of 1852?—In 1852 he was defeated, I think, by a majority of 26.

24,801. Will you tell the Commissioners, if you please, who asked you to stand for the borough of Yarmouth?—I think I was asked at the Reform Club by some members of the party, I do not remember who at present, but whatever the first step was, it led to my meeting Mr. McCullagh, and I think I may say Mr. McCullagh asked me to stand, representing the heads of the Liberal party in Yarmouth.

24,802. Did you see any heads of the Liberal party in Yarmouth after that?—Yes. May I state what took place?

24,803. Do so, if you please?—The first thing was an interview between Mr. McCullagh and myself, in the month of March 1856, at the Reform Club. I need not say that the party were anxious at the next election that Yarmouth should be contested, and, as a member of the Liberal party, I felt inclined, if there was a fair chance of success, to contest it. I met Mr. McCullagh and had a long discussion about it, and the result was, after that discussion, the heads of which I should like to state to you, a meeting took place between myself and certain gentlemen from Yarmouth at the Reform Club, and it was finally determined I should stand, subject to my being satisfied with the appearance of the register and the explanations given. When I came down here—I did come here, I think, in the month of October 1856—a meeting was formed at the "Star Hotel," which I addressed, and a resolution was passed inviting me to become a candidate. I think that is the history of it, except I should like to state what Mr. McCullagh said to me at the club, to show that I had made inquiry as to the position of himself. Mr. McCullagh stated to me that Yarmouth was essentially a Liberal borough. It had returned George Anson, whom I had the honour of knowing many years, and used to hear something about Yarmouth; and the Liberal party in Yarmouth were, mainly speaking, the men of wealth and position in the town. That in 1852 he had only been defeated by improper means on the part of the Conservatives, and by the coalition between the Conservatives and the members of the old Whig party represented by Mr. Rumbold. That since 1852 he had given, personally, great attention to the registration, and was quite satisfied that, notwithstanding the improper practices of 1852, having lost by a majority of only 26, he was satisfied by the attention to the register there was a clear Liberal majority upon the register of at least 80. I then discussed with him, and I want particularly to mention that so as not to conceal anything. I discussed with him the knowledge that everybody had, that at the previous election corrupt practices had prevailed, and the freemen had been disfranchised. He told me that he thought the power of altering men's votes by corruption could not be exercised over a large area, and the only thing he was afraid of was the screw; that Sir Edmund Lacon was a rich banker and brewer, and it was the interest of the brewers of Yarmouth to keep control in the municipality, and keep control, if possible, politically; and when an election took place he found before the screw was put on wherever it could be, and that was the only thing he was afraid of. I think that generally was what took place between us in reference to the borough, and I certainly was in the belief that there was a clear Liberal majority upon the register, and I came down to contest it on that representation.

24,804. When you came down, did you make acquaintance with the heads of the parties, such as Mr. Hammond, Mr. Livingston, Mr. Clowes, and other gentlemen?—I came down in October, and went round. I was introduced to Mr. George Palmer, to Mr. Burroughs, Mr. Hammond, Mr. Pulling, Mr. Arthur Steward, the two Mr. Dawsons, Mr. Fellowes, and a great many others; but those I think were, generally speaking, the heads of the party.

24,805. Who was your agent in Yarmouth?—At that election?

24,806. Yes?—The legal agent was Mr. Clowes; the sort of general manager of the election was Mr. Meall.

24,807. You were returned at that election, but the election was void?—Yes.

24,808. We want to inquire about the subsequent election in the month of August, when Mr. Young and Mr. Mellor succeeded you?—Quite so.

24,809. Will you tell us, if you please, what arrangement was made between yourself and Mr. McCullagh, and Mr. Young and Mr. Mellor?—No arrangement whatever, if you mean in the sense of a pecuniary arrangement.

24,810. I did not mean that?—I will not have the question blinked; you mean whether I received any money from anybody?

24,811. Answer that, if you please. I was not going to ask you that, I was going to ask you whether you nominated either of those gentlemen?—What took place was this: immediately after the result of the petition of 1857, I think the same evening, some gentlemen from Yarmouth being in town, there was a meeting of them all at the Reform Club, and Mr. McCullagh and myself were asked to look out for candidates for the place. I mentioned the name of Mr. Justice Mellor, who is my wife's cousin, who is a gentleman that I thought would be a good candidate; and the meeting adopted Mr. Mellor, subject to Mr. Mellor's agreeing to stand, and being approved by the constituency when he came down. Mr. McCullagh mentioned the name, I think, of Mr. Mackenzie—I am speaking from memory—and that gentleman did not seem to answer for some reason or other; and subsequently, I believe, he mentioned the name of Mr. Young. I met Mr. Young for the first time when I came down with Mr. Mellor, one or two days afterwards; but with respect to the matter of the money, I may be allowed to say a word about that. It has been said here, I am sorry to say, by Sir Edmund Lacon, that I received 500*l.* from Mr. Mellor for what may be called the "goodwill" of Yarmouth.

24,812-13. We did not understand that?—I am only speaking from the newspaper report. I have a letter from Mr. Justice Mellor in my pocket, written to Sir Edmund Lacon by Mr. Justice Mellor, which I should like to put in; and I may say, distinctly and emphatically, there is not a word of truth in any sense in that statement. There is the letter (producing it), a copy of which Mr. Justice Mellor sent to me at the time, with his own note to say how much shocked he was to see that any such imputation should be thrown upon me as well as him. This is the letter:—"Otterhead, "near Honiton, Devon, August 23rd, 1866. Sir,—"As I was not aware that the object of the com-"mission of inquiry at Yarmouth was to collect the "gossip of the place, or to enable persons who might "think it expedient to be examined before the Com-"missioners, to give 'as evidence' that which they "have heard 'in conversation,' I was a little sur-"prised to read in the 'Times' of Tuesday, that a "statement, alleged to have been made by you, that "'you had heard in conversation that Messrs. Young "'and Mellor paid something to Messrs. Watkin and "'McCullagh.' In order that you may not be in "danger of wilfully repeating a false statement, I beg

" to inform you that it is absolutely false and without " foundation as against myself, and, as I believe, equally " untrue as regards Mr. Young. I am restrained " from observing upon other statements alleged to " have been made by you and the court, that they do " not regard me and my valued friend and connection " but not 'brother-in-law.'" Mr. Watkin is quite able " to deal with them without having recourse to 'that " which he has heard in conversation.' I do not know whether this is the proper time to ask the Commissioners to allow me to put in a correspondence between Sir Edmund Lacon and myself. I am in the hands of the Commissioners, only two charges are made against me.

24,814. It will be more convenient if you would put it in now.—If I am out-stepping any rules, you must call me to order. I am only anxious everything I know should be stated, and neither Sir Edmund Lacon nor myself should be under any undeserved censure. The first letter was from myself to Sir Edmund Lacon :—" Rose Hill, Northenden, nr. Man- " chester, Augt. 21st, 1866. Dear sir,—Permit " me to enquire if the print in to-day's 'Times' of " your evidence before the Yarmouth Commissioners " is correctly reported, so far as the passages in which " my name is made use of by you are concerned? I " hope I may not fail to receive an answer by return " of post. Dear sir, yours truly, EDWARD W. " WATKIN." I did not receive an answer immediately to that, owing to Sir Edmund Lacon's absence in Scotland, therefore I wrote this following letter :— " Rose Hill, Northenden, August 25th, 1866. Dear " sir,—I have no reply to my note of Tuesday. I " have no doubt you already have it under the hand " of Mr. Justice Mellor, who is not my brother-in- " law, as you have deposed, that the allegation that I " received money from him or from Mr. Young for " the 'goodwill' of Yarmouth in 1857 is a gross " falsehood. Again, I must add, that when you gave " the sanction of your name to the additional ab- " surdities as to my lavish expenditure in 1857, you " could have given no personal credence to such unfair " charges against the constituency of Yarmouth. " Whatever the improprieties of 1857 were—and they " will find no defender in me—you are perfectly aware " that the state of the register was against you, and " that your own unpopularity aided in securing your " certain defeat. You are aware also that in 1857, " and again in 1859, I publicly offered to submit my " claims and yours to a meeting of the whole of the " electors, and to withdraw if I had not a majority of " votes ; thus avoiding all contest. You did not " accept those proposals on either occasion. Again, " I think you know that, pending the inquiry of 1857, " it was proposed to me that your counsel should " state to the committee that no charge was persisted " in against me, and then that my seat should be " saved. Although I felt the kindness of such a " proposal, I declined it, because it involved the unfair " sacrifice of my colleague. You cannot be unaware " also that overtures were made to and declined " by me for the withdrawal of the petition against " you in 1859. I have afterwards been ready, as you " know, to recommend, and have recommended, the " Liberal party in Yarmouth to agree to a compromise, " as was done in the case of Durham ; so as finally to " obviate those scenes and practices which every " honest man must deplore. I have reason to believe " that you made a similar recommendation, but the " obstacle was found in the leading members of your " party, whose practices at last see daylight, I am " sure, to your own surprise and mortification. I " trust you will now correct your evidence, and " complete it by adding that which you have apparently " forgotten. I am, dear sir, yours faithfully, EDWARD " W. WATKIN." Then the letter from Sir Edmund Lacon, which crossed mine, was as follows :—" Stra- " chan House, by Blenchery, Kincardineshire, N.B. " Dear sir,—Your letter was forwarded to me here, " and from not receiving it until my return from " shooting on Saturday, and no post till Monday " morning, I could not send you an earlier answer. I " read the print of the 'Times' on Tuesday rather " hastily, but I believe it represents correctly the " substance of my evidence before the Commissioners, " but am at loss to know the part to which you " more particularly allude. Yours truly, EDMD. " H. K. LACON. 26th August 1866." Then the second letter in reply to the long one which I have just read is as follows :—" Sir,—I beg to acknowledge " your letter dated 1st Sept., and to say that upon " the receipt of your former letter I answered it " from here by return of post, to which I beg to refer " you. If the report I heard in 1859 is incorrect, " you will, no doubt, have an opportunity of correct- " ing me when you appear before the Commissioners " regarding the elections of 1857 and 1859, which " they intend to go into about the middle of October. " I am, sir, yours truly, EDMD. H. K. WATKIN." I do not know how Sir Edmund Lacon knew that, but that is the letter. I am obliged to the Commissioners for allowing me to state that.

24,815. This is what Sir Edmund Lacon said. It will be more satisfactory to yourself to know what actually was said?—I shall be much obliged. I only know what the " Times " reported.

24,816. (Mr. Russell.) I had better perhaps interpose, and state this, that a witness who had been examined previously, stated as a positive fact that there had been a pecuniary arrangement between Mr. McCullagh and yourself, and Mr. Mellor and Mr. Young, and it was in consequence of that that Sir Edmund Lacon was asked by the Commissioners whether he had heard of it.—I am obliged for the explanation. Now I have heard a witness has said so of his own knowledge, if I can do so under the terms of the Commission, I will prosecute him for perjury.

24,817. (Mr. Slade.) The question was, " Did you " ever hear of any compromise or agreement that had " been made between Mr. Mellor and Mr. Young, and " Mr. McCullagh and Mr. Watkin?—No. I mean " in common conversation?—No. Did you ever hear " that Mr. Mellor and Mr. Young paid a sum?—No, " I did not. Mr. Mellor and Mr. Young paid a sum? " Yes, to Mr. McCullagh?—Yes, I think I have heard " of it; I think I remember something about it. " Your impression is that something was paid?—I " think I remember something ; I will not say what it " was, because I supposed when Mr. Watkin and Mr. " McCullagh were turned out, and Mr. Watkin brought " forward Mr. Mellor, and Mr. McCullagh Mr. Young, " it was a private arrangement."—That is not at all so strong as the abstract in the " Times," and if I had seen that evidence I do not think I should have thought it necessary on that point to write to Sir Edmund Lacon.

24,818. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) It was another witness who originated it?—I did not understand that.

24,819. Mr. Russell.) I should like to read you a further question put by myself to Sir Edmund Lacon. " You cannot give us any further information with " regard to the circumstances under which Mr. Mellor " and Mr. Young came to Yarmouth?—No, I cannot, " except that one was introduced by Mr. Watkin and " the other by Mr. McCullagh, and most naturally " that would be the case."—I must say that quite exonerates Sir Edmund Lacon, in my mind, from having said so.

24,820. Mr. Justice Mellor pays us the compliment of saying it was not the duty of the Commissioners to " collect the gossip of the town." The duty of the Commissioners is this—I tell you, and through you Mr. Justice Mellor—that we are to inquire into the preceding late elections, so long as they are proved to be corrupt ; and if, on inquiry, we find corrupt practices have not prevailed, we are not to carry it further back. That is the reason we went into this, to ascertain whether corrupt practices had prevailed in an election which was a walk over?—I would wish to say that Mr. Justice Mellor is not here, but, having the honour of his acquaintance, he is as convinced as I am that the Commissioners have acted with every regularity, and have not in any way over-stepped their duty; and I am certain that he did not mean to express anything against the Commissioners, or intend to impute anything wrong to them.

24,821. I merely wish to state that, because Mr. Justice Mellor holds a very high position?—I am obliged by your kind explanation.

24,822. (Mr. Slade.) Do I understand that you answer for yourself as well as Mr. McCullagh, in saying that no money was paid by either Mr. Young or Mr. Mellor at the second election of 1857?—Mr. McCullagh will answer for himself.

24,823. You answer for yourself?—I answer for myself, and I have no doubt he would give the same answer that I give, that it was not so.

24,824. After the election of 1859, when you were defeated by Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey, you never came forward again as a candidate for Yarmouth?—No, I did not. I was invited to come forward, I think, in the year 1865; I think that was the year I got the requisition. No, 1864, I think; the end of 1864. I believe that is the date.

24,825. Were you at that time member for Stockport?—I think not. I think it was a little before, and if so, it must have been in the early part of 1864.

24,826. Did you give the gentlemen who sent this requisition to you to understand that you would come forward again if necessary?—No, I did not give any answer at all. I had some correspondence in reference to the state of the register and the position of things with Mr. Clowes and Mr. Livingston, but I do not think I ever gave any answer. I did not intend to come forward again.

24,827. We understand when you had given up the idea of coming forward yourself, you were asked to recommend some gentleman to come forward in your place?—Yes. I think that was in the summer of last year. I got a letter—I think it was from Mr. Livingston—to ask if I would speak to the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Brand, in reference to getting candidates for Yarmouth, if I was not prepared to come forward myself, and I did so. And I should state, that Mr. Livingston represented to me that by the results of the registration of the previous year, so large a majority had been obtained, that he thought there was a certainty of two Liberal candidates being returned; and I believe he used the expression in the letter—I am sorry I have not got the letter itself—that he believed they could be returned without the expenditure of a penny.

24,828. Do you remember whether he mentioned any number of new names that had been put on the register?—Yes; he enclosed me a statement. I gave that, I think, to Mr. Brand; not Mr. Brand, of Yarmouth, but the Secretary of the Treasury; I believe so.

24,829. We have heard that you recommended to the constituency of Yarmouth, Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman?—Yes. Some time after the date I speak of, Mr. Brand suggested to me the names of Mr. Hawkins, and I forget the other gentleman's name now.

24,830. Mr. Hawkins, the Queen's counsel?—Yes, and some other gentleman, I forget his name, as gentlemen who wished to contest some place in the interest of the Liberal party, and I think that that went off in some way, and then Mr. Brand asked me if I could find anybody myself, and I really had not intended to interfere in the matter at all, but I was dining out with a friend of mine, Captain Warren, one night; I should say it would be some time in June, but I cannot speak to the exact date; Mr. Marshman was there. I had not seen him for some years, two or three years at all events; and after dinner he asked me whether I could assist him in getting a seat. I believed Mr. Marshman's knowledge of India would be of value to the House, especially to those of us who are connected with the cotton manufacturing districts. I wrote to a friend or two in the north, to see if they could suggest any place where he would be likely to be acceptable; but nothing came of that. There was apparently no opening in that quarter. Then I mentioned this to Mr. Brand, and he said, "Would not Mr. Marshman be likely to stand for Yarmouth?" He said, "Mr. Brogden is also anxious to have a seat, "and he is a friend of yours, do not you think they "would stand?" I said, "I can introduce them together," and I believe that is the reason I introduced Mr. Marshman and Mr. Brogden together. We met at the Reform Club, and went over the matter, and they said, "If the leading Liberals of Yarmouth "would send a requisition they would go down and "address the electors, make a canvass, and then be "guided by the result." That requisition was sent to them, signed by Mr. Clowes, and a number of other Liberals, and they went down, and at their request I went with them to Yarmouth, addressed a meeting in a room at the "Angel," and I think I went away to London the next day. I came down afterwards to address an open air meeting on the Saturday, and went back, I think, on the Saturday night, and that was all the interference I had in the election. As I saw something in the papers, it may be making an error again that may not be evidence, I thought it my duty, as it seemed to me a responsibility was thrown on my shoulders which I did not think I had undergone; I thought it desirable to write a letter to Mr. Marshman, and subsequently I sent a copy of it to Mr. Brogden to detail the circumstances, and, if I may be allowed, I should like to read it

24,831. Do so, if you please?—This is dated the 30th August 1866:—"Dear sir.—If your evidence is cor- "rectly reported in the 'Times' you have not stated "accurately what has passed between you and myself. "At the dinner-party to which you allude, you told "me you had a great desire to get into Parliament, "and urged me to assist you to obtain a seat, and in "consequence of what you said, I discussed the matter "with you, and I remember writing on your behalf to "one of my friends at an important borough in the "north, but the answer was not favorable. I men- "tioned your wish to the Secretary of the Treasury, "and Yarmouth was suggested as a place which "might be obtained for the Liberal party. At your "request I arranged a meeting between Mr. Brogden, "yourself, and myself, at the Reform Club, and I then "explained to you in detail everything that I knew "as to Yarmouth. Again, at your and Mr. Brogden's "request, I wrote to Yarmouth to say, that if a requi- "sition were presented to you you would visit the "constituency, and after you received that requisition, "again at your united request, I went down with you "to Yarmouth, although it was inconvenient at the "time to me to do so. The only advice I gave to you "at Yarmouth was, to judge of the state of the "registry for yourself, after a canvass, and not to "commit yourself to stand unless you were convinced "at the end of the canvass that success was reasonably "certain, and I impressed upon the leading members "of the party before I left you, that if, at the end of "the canvass you were not satisfied of success, they "should not consider the party badly treated if you "retired. With this advice and caution to the party "in your interest my responsibility ceased. When "having been asked for an opinion, I stated that I "did not think your retirement before the canvass "was completed was fair to Mr. Brogden. I had "before me the understanding which had been come to "between you, and which would have been broken by "your prematurely abandoning the canvass, and I "confess that I thought at the time the course you "proposed was neither fair to the party, nor to your "colleague. I shall be obliged if you will confirm me "in this, the true version of the case, and will correct "your evidence accordingly.". To that I received from Mr. Marshman this letter:—"The Elms, Bickley "Park, Kent, Septr. 1st, 1866. Dear sir,—I was "yesterday favoured with your communication of the "30th ultimo., and regret to find that you consider "my evidence as not stating accurately what passed "between you and myself. The printed report of the "'Times' is only an abridgment of my evidence, which

" occupied two hours, and is not, therefore, so full as " I delivered it. I distinctly stated that the under- " standing between us was, that we should go down " to Yarmouth to feel the borough and see exactly " how matters stood, and that if we did not consider " this investigation satisfactory we should at once " retire. I did not, however, consider it necessary to " go into all the details of our conversation (which " you have stated, as far as my recollection goes, " accurately) on a point which had only a remote, if " any, bearing on the question of the inquiry—the " existence of bribery at Yarmouth. The fullest " report of my evidence that I have seen is in the " 'Yarmouth Independent,' tho' it is exceedingly im- " perfect, and in one case egregiously inaccurate. I " have compared it carefully with the statement given " in your letter, and I fail to discover any such mis- " representation as to require correction. But if you " consider that any unintentional omissions in my " evidence are so material as to prove injurious to the " interests of truth, and that a fuller statement should " be placed before the public, I shall be happy to meet " your wishes if you will point out the specific " deficiencies. In that case, I must also ask you to be " so kind as to state how the communication is to " appear. Whether the 'Times' will find room for it " is very questionable, and the short-hand writer of " the Commissioners has, doubtless, a fuller report of " my evidence than has yet appeared, but we cannot " obtain access to it till it appears in print. Yours " very faithfully, JOHN MARSHMAN." There were a few lines passed between Mr. Marshman and myself afterwards, and he reminded me I had dictated a letter to my clerk to him, giving him a sort of remonstrance to his retirement at that particular time. I do not think it is material, and I have not brought it.

24,832. What you understood was, that Mr. Marshman's retirement was not what was agreed on between yourself and him when he went down to stand with Mr. Brogden for the borough ?—No, not fair to Mr. Brogden. The understanding between Mr. Brogden and himself come to in my presence was, that they should go down, complete the canvass of the borough, and they must come to their own conclusion as to their chance of success, and the party should not consider they were treated unhandsomely if the result of that canvass, and the impression it made on their minds, led them to retire. It was that understanding and caution with it, to Mr. Hammond, Mr. Clowes, and every gentleman before I left Yarmouth the short time I was down. I communicated and told them that was their determination; I thought it a reasonable one, and I should not advise them to stand unless they were certain they could carry it by honest means.

24,833. And you understood they were to stand or fall together ?—Yes. They both understood that, and perhaps it would be only fair to Mr. Brogden if I was to read a note I got from him. I sent him a copy of that letter, and he says, " My dear sir,—I think " your recollection of our interview, and of all the " facts connected with our canvass and my contest " of Yarmouth, are accurate and complete. I know " nothing of the earlier interview you had with Mr. " Marshman, but I am very sensible your assistance " to us was of the most friendly character, and given " at great personal inconvenience to yourself. My " strong impression still is, that if Mr. Marshman had " not exhibited his mistrust of the constituency, there " would have been a pure election, resulting in the " return of at least one Liberal. I have only just " returned from the Continent, and therefore unable to " reply to you earlier."

24,834. We have heard from Mr. Clowes that he wrote to you a letter shortly before the election of 1865, asking you to explain to Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman the state of the constituency at Yarmouth, more especially, as I understand, alluding to the corruption of the borough, is that so ?—I remember receiving a letter from Mr. Clowes, but I read his evidence, and it did not quite tally with my remembrance. I remember receiving a letter from Mr. Clowes, I think, with the requisition for M. Brogden and Mr. Marshman; I think so. And I sent that letter with the requisition, or whatever the papers were, on to them. Anything I received I sent on either to one or the other of them. But I should wish to say, in my own justification, at the meeting between myself and these gentlemen at the Reform Club, I told them frankly everything I knew with regard to the borough, not only what I was told was the position of the register, but the fact that there were a number of persons in the borough who were open to corruption. I wish it to be distinctly understood I did not wish those gentlemen to come here. I did not conceal any fact that was within my own knowledge, and I cautioned them to the best of my ability to commit themselves to nothing but a canvass, to see whether the election could be carried under the register as stated.

24,835. (Mr. Russell.) Did you mention 700*l.* or 800*l.* as the probable cost of the election to Mr. Marshman ?—No, I did not. I told him what the cost of my election in 1857 was in rough figures, and when I speak of the cost I do not mean to speak of it in qualified terms, I mean anything before the election, at the election, and afterwards. Whether rightly or wrongly, I told the cost of the first was about 800*l.*, and the second about 1,000*l.* to 1,200*l.* I remember using the words at the Reform Club.

24,836. Mr. Marshman said he inquired the probable cost, and you said about 700*l.* or 800*l.*; and he replied that he was ready to pay anything that went through the legal agents hands ?—I do not remember that, and I am sure I never gave him any estimate of the expense of his contesting the borough. I told him my experience, and inasmuch as he was only intending to use his own phrase, to go down and feel the borough, I did not give him an estimate, and I should also say, when Mr. Young was named, Mr. Marshman said to me, he knew something about the borough, because he had stood twice for boroughs on the east coast.

24,837. Did you collect at that interview, or know from your previous knowledge, that Mr. Marshman was pre-eminently a purist ?—No; I knew nothing of Mr. Marshman, except that he had been defeated twice in some place. My first acquaintance with him was when it was proposed to enfranchise Staleybridge. I met him then, and once having had a call from him in reference to some information that he had; I knew nothing of him except by general report.

24,838. You do not remember Mr. Marshman insisting particularly on his objection to any illegal payment ?—I was not here at the time he made the statement. I remember saying myself—that is, saying to Mr. Brogden—it would be very improper to engage in any irregular proceedings; and I believe myself honestly, when we all three came down, there was not a single one of us who would not have set his face in the strongest way against anything of the kind.

24,839. (Mr. Slade.) Your election in 1857 cost you about 800*l.* ?—About that.

24,840. Can you tell me whether it cost an equal sum for Mr. McCullagh ?—I do not think it did. I have endeavoured to recollect as well as I can the cost of my election, and, if the Commissioners will allow me, I will give it. I have done everything I can to recollect everything paid, and this is the amount of money that I believe I paid from August 1856, when I see I subscribed to the race fund before I came down, up to the spring of 1858. I believe I paid to Mr. Meall, the manager of the election, at various times before and after the election, 650*l.* and 60*l.* I believe I paid to Mr. Clowes 87*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.*, Mr. Meall paying him 150*l.*, which would make 797*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.* Then, late in the year 1857, I received an account from Mr. Meall for something for ringing bells, and the travelling expenses of pilots, and a variety of things which for some reason or other had not been put in the election account, and my half of that was 120*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.* Then I consider I paid in my own travelling and other expenses during that period 100*l.* I do not think it was as much, but I put it down at the outside. I then paid towards the registration meeting 75*l.* I then took shares in the "Yarmouth Free Press" to the extent of 100*l.* I believe I paid 100*l.*, but I am not certain whether 100*l.* or 75*l.* I then considered that I subscribed to regattas, races, and testimonials to various gentlemen, and certain charities, schools, and so on, about 100*l.*; so that I believe I am rather over-stating than under-stating that the whole of the money that I paid in connexion with Yarmouth, from August 1856 to April 1858, is a little exceeding 1,300*l.* Then I was asked a question, whether I believe Mr. McCullagh spent so much. I do not think he did, for this reason—I do not wish to allude to anything unfair, but it is fair to say a portion of this money I believed I was paying on Mr. McCullagh's account. I believed a portion of the money paid to Mr. Meall was in connexion with Mr. McCullagh's expenses at that election, and previously I expected that Mr. Meall would have squared the accounts between him and myself. The fact that it was not so was the cause of a difference and quarrel between Mr. McCullagh and myself. We had many interviews and correspondence extending over the whole of the year, and I got sick of it at last, and I believe he was too, and threw it all up; but my belief is that Mr. McCullagh did not spend as much as I did.

24,841. The 700*l.* you paid Mr. Meall, did you get any account of that?—No, I got no account at the time. I got an account from Mr. Meall in the middle of the year 1858, when he came to stay with me at Northenden. He gave it me in detail, and it was then I learnt for the first time with certainty, that a portion of that money had been spent in illegal expenses. Mr. Meall was a man I entirely trusted. I trusted myself in his hands, believing that what it was right to do he would do; and I got no account until Mr. Meall came to stay with me, and he went over figures with me. I should mention also, before the committee of 1857, when I found the amount of money in the auditor's account was less than the money I had paid, in making an estimate for that portion of what I had paid, which I considered was repayable to me by Mr. McCullagh, I said that to Mr. Meall. I said I would not go into the box without stating the whole of the amount of money I had paid; on which Mr. Meall said he believed he should recover almost everything for me, and he could perfectly satisfy me it was right, and he gave me an I O U for the difference between the amount of money I had paid and the two amounts of what was assumed to be owing from Mr. Meall and what the auditor's accounts were.

24,842. How was he going to recover that?—He said he should receive from Mr. McCullagh a certain portion of it, and he had also advanced a little money to different little fellows, as he called them, who had loans from different societies controlled by Conservatives in Yarmouth, and it was necessary to find the money to prevent them from being sold up and damaged, and that would be recovered before going into the box; but I had it thoroughly understood, as I thought, that Mr. Meall should go into the box and be examined. He was, if I may use the phrase, the unofficial treasurer of the election; and he drew out his evidence and promised me he would go in and give a satisfactory explanation of all that had taken place; but, unfortunately, before the committee, Mr. McCullagh had his counsel and I had mine, and there was no doubt divisions of council, and in consequence the counsel would not call Mr. Meall for some reason I do not know. I was extremely sorry for it, because whether the whole matter was right or wrong it would have come out before the committee.

24,843. Do you know whether Mr. McCullagh set his face against any illegal payments?—I believe we were both setting our faces against any illegal payments. We both believed the register was in our favour, and I was certain it was, and we neither of us believed there was any necessity for any illegal payments.

24,844. I meant rather, did Mr. McCullagh, after he was unseated, ever complain of illegal payments being made against his wish?—Not to me, certainly, and I do not believe to anybody. What Mr. McCullagh, if I remember rightly, complained of—I should be happy to put in the correspondence but I have not got it here—that the grounds on which he refused to reimburse me what I had paid were these, that he had spent a deal of money and time between 1852 and 1857 in looking to the registration and getting it into the state it was in 1857, and which led, as we believed, to our return; and he thought anything he had paid should be taken as a set-off against a portion of the money I had paid at the election. I should have been perfectly ready with Mr. McCullagh or anybody else to agree to that view, but I did not like to appear to be in the position of the rich man in the concern who was buying his way into the House of Commons, Mr. McCullagh being the able and pure man who was leading me to do so. That was the feeling, perhaps a foolish one, that made me stand out upon the question.

24,845. We have had a gentleman before us, a Mr. Christopher Steward, who disbursed money in illegal payments in 1857, and he has told us that he received between 1,500*l.* and 1,600*l.* at that election?—I so read in the "Times" that he said so.

24,846. Can you account for that?—No, I cannot, and I do not believe he did. If I thought so, or had the slightest idea that that was anything but an exaggeration, I should say so at once, but I am here to state everything I know and everything I believe everybody else knows.

24,847. In 1859, you say, it cost between 1,000*l.* and 1,200*l.*?—That is what I stated to Mr. Marshman, and I have, as far as I can recollect it, the details here and I can give them. First, Mr. Clowes's account—half of that 301*l.* 18*s.* 2*d.*; then payments to Mr. Mainprice, 750*l.*; then my hotel bill here, 67*l.*; and then I put a little allowance down for any sundry expenses in travelling backwards and forwards between London and Lancashire, 30*l.* Then there was a dispute between Mr. Clowes and the returning officer with reference to some charge of the mayor. It was said to me by Mr. Charles John Palmer, that if the amount of 16*l.* odd were deducted it would come out of the mayor's pocket. I wrote to say that I could not think it proper that the mayor should be out of pocket, and I sent him the amount of 8*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.* as a half of that charge, so that that would make the expense of the election to me 1,157*l.* 2*s.* 4*d.* Then I subscribed towards the petition in the following year 200*l.*, and I think I was asked for a further contribution, which I put down at 100*l.* I am not quite sure whether it was 100*l.* or 50*l.*, or a larger sum. Then I consider I subscribed and paid other expenses in the borough, the usual expenses which a Member of Parliament is unfortunately put to, about 100*l.* more, so that that makes the whole of my debit for my second connexion with Yarmouth, 1,530*l.* odd., and I believe, as I stated in the other case, I am perhaps a little overstating than understating it, but I wish with regard to both those matters to state this, that I think the question of what the candidate has spent, for his future character should be no matter of controversy. What I am ready to do, and I should hope Sir Henry Stracey and Sir Edmund Lacon would be also ready to do—I am ready to let the Commissioners name an accountant. He shall go through my books and papers, and have my stock taken, and if I am in the slightest degree inaccurate I should be glad to be corrected, for I would not have it on my conscience that I have stated anything here that is incorrect.

24,848. The money that was given to Mr. Mainprice, have you ever heard how that was disbursed generally?—Only from the evidence generally. I should wish to explain with regard to 400*l.* of that money when I came to Yarmouth some time before the election. I gave that to Meall. We had hoped Mr. Meall would be able to conduct the election as he had done in 1857, but unfortunately he was very ill, suffering from consumption, and was unable to do so, so that that 400*l.* was not given by me or my authority to Mr. Mainprice, but through Mr. Meall's instrumentality; but I do not know that 750*l.* went into the hands of Mr. Mainprice as the manager of the election. I do not put it down in any roundabout way, but take it at once to the gentleman who received it.

24,849. Mr. Mainprice, in his evidence before us, has stated that the sum which passed through his hands was something under 2,000*l.* at that election?—I did not see that in his evidence, but I have stated all that passed from me. I have stated with perfect accuracy what passed through me.

24,850. Was there in the election of 1859 an understanding between you and Mr. Young that you were to share the expenses whatever they might be?—Yes, the question was discussed, when we came down here, among the party, as to whether we should issue separate addresses, each having a separate arrangement, or making it a joint contest, the two names being together on the same address. The party recommended the latter course, which we adopted, and of course it was understood. I do not know that there was any discussion about it, but it was understood that we were going on a joint account on equal terms in every respect.

24,851. You were aware that illegal practices were resorted to in 1857 during the time of the election?—No; I was not aware during the time of the election. I was not aware of the position of the matter until Mr. Meall came to stay with me some time in 1858, when he told me everything he knew.

24,852. Did you yourself send to Grimsby for a man named Henry Rundle?—In 1857?

25,853. Yes.—No, I did not.

24,854. He was here in 1857?—I think he resided somewhere near here then. In 1859 Mr. Clark came to me one day and said that Rundle ought to be at Gorleston, as he knew everybody there, and was a very useful man to canvass, and also to bring up voters on the day of the poll. He asked me to send for him. I hesitated for some time. At last he said everybody was anxious he should be there, so I wrote a note to Mr. Rundle to say it was the desire of Mr. Clark and a few friends there, and if he could come for a few days I should be glad for him to do so. I had never any conversation with Mr. Reynolds that I remember about it at all.

24,855. Were you aware at that time that Rundle had been engaged in illegal practices at the prior election?—No, I was not aware at all about it; and in justice to him—the man is dead—I should say I looked upon him as a most respectable man, and it comes on me with great surprise to hear it stated he was. The man was a sea captain. We called him Captain Rundle, and was a man of fair education and character, and I was grieved to read the evidence that was imputed to him. Of course he is dead, and is not here to answer for himself.

24,856. Had you heard of him as an active partisan on your side in the election of 1857?—I do not remember his name in connexion with the 1857 election distinctly. He was, I thought, a sort of superintendent in the North of Europe Steam Packet Company. The North of Europe Steam Packet Company had their place at Lowestoft, and from his connexion with Lowestoft he was frequently over here, and knew everybody. He was a good-natured, kind-hearted man, and very popular with everybody. I have no distinct recollection of him in 1857, but I do remember in 1859 his coming to me, because I had some objection to it. To some extent in Grimsby he was under my control, and it appeared like ordering a servant, which I did not like to do.

24,857. Did you bring him down in 1859 as a person to bring up the voters and to canvass for you?—That was all.

24,858. You knew Mr. Reynolds, the postmaster, at Gorleston?—Yes, I knew him.

24,859. He acted for you in both elections?—He was on the committee at both elections.

24,860. You interested yourself, I believe, in getting him his present appointment?—Mr. Young and myself did. I think he was recommended to us by the party as the most eligible man, and of course you gentlemen are aware Members of Parliament do as the party wish them to do in these matters, and we did so.

24,861. Did you know a man of the name of James Chapman, a draper?—James Denny Chapman?

24,862. Yes.—Yes; he was not residing here in 1857. He might have had a house to keep his vote, but he came down in the election of 1857, and canvassed the latter part of the canvass. I do not remember him in 1859. I do not think he was here.

24,863. Did you ever hear afterwards he advanced money at that election?—If the Commissioners tell me I must answer it I must do so, but if I do it will appear to be stating that which should only be stated by Mr. McCullagh.

24,864. Not of your own knowledge?—I do not know it of my own knowledge.

24,865. We have asked it of other witnesses?—I do not wish to conceal anything, but this is a question to some extent involving an imputation on Mr. McCullagh, and I do not like in his absence to state it.

24,866. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) If any imputation is made on Mr. McCullagh he must come and meet it?—Then in answer to your question I should say, in 1860, there was an attempt made to induce the petitioners, Mr. Pilgrim and Mr. Bayley, of Yarmouth, to withdraw their names from the petition, and as I was informed by Mr. Pilgrim, whose statement I have here in writing, money was offered through Mr. Chapman to these gentlemen to withdraw their names from the petition. It was stated that that money was offered by the authority of Mr. Reynolds, and the name also of Sir Henry Stracey was used, I have no doubt, very improperly and very untruly. In consequence of that I sent for Mr. Chapman to come to me to the "Euston Hotel," believing him to be a Liberal and going with his party. I told him I had heard it, and asked him if it were true. He said it was true. I reproached him. He gave me some particulars regarding what had taken place between himself and Mr. Reynolds and me, and Sir Henry Stracey, and in the course of the conversation he said in 1857 he had advanced, at Mr. McCullagh's request, 300*l.*, which he had not received back again, and that is all I know about it.

24,867. That was the first you heard of it?—Yes, that was the first I heard of it.

24,868. Mr. Chapman is dead, is he not?—I do not know; I have never seen him since the day I spoke of, some time in 1860. I have no acquaintance whatever with him except knowing him to be a voter.

24,869. (Mr. Slade.) When Messrs. Brogden and Marshman spoke to you about standing for Yarmouth, did you tell them generally what you have told us to-day as regards your expenditure here?—Generally speaking, not in the same detail.

24,870. But generally you did?—Yes.

24,871. Was anything said at that time as to more money being required in the election of 1865?—No, nothing whatever. In fact, my own impression, or else I never would have come down to Yarmouth with doubt, was two things; the first was, that after the election of 1859 the Conservative party in Yarmouth would not have resorted to any improper practices; that was one reliance I had. I thought there was that general concurrence of self-reproach with regard to the whole thing, that it would not be done again; and then it was said, I believe, by Mr. Livingston upon the statement he sent to me, that so large a number of new men were put on of Liberal opinions that the election would be carried as it ought to be.

24,872. How do you account for Mr. Brogden supplying himself with so large a sum as 6,000*l.*?—I do not account for it. I know nothing at all, as the Commissioners must well know, about it; and I cannot account for it. It is one of those things that cannot be accounted for except on the theory that Mr. Brogden, in the heat of the election, did what I have no doubt he bitterly reproaches himself with since.

TWENTY-NINTH DAY.

E. W. Watkin, Esq., M.P.

9 Oct. 1866.

24,873. You see he deliberately came down to contest the borough, having previously provided himself with the sum of 6,000*l.*?—I do not know what the evidence has been, but I am certain, if the declaration of anybody can be believed, that Mr. Brogden had never provided himself with a shilling when I came down. I should like that to be cleared up, because I myself appear as if I had some knowledge of it.

24,874. It was not provided until after you came down with him, but was provided some short time before the election, anticipating a severe contest?—I am no party whatever to it, as Mr. Brogden would say. I know nothing whatever about it, and in point of fact I was led to believe that nothing of the kind to any considerable extent had been done, because I was applied to to interfere when the petition was presented against Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson, one evening in the lobby of the House of Commons, to effect some compromise, and I never would have taken the trouble I did take if I had not believed what I did believe, that there had been nothing of the sort on Mr. Brogden's side.

24,875. Was that the compromise with regard to returning one Liberal and one Conservative?—Yes. I may mention that Mr. Spofforth, the agent of the Conservative party, who, apart from politics, is a friend of mine, came to me in the lobby, and said that Sir Henry Stracey and Mr. Brogden had had a conversation about the petition, and he wished me to see Mr. Brogden and see if a fair arrangement could be made. I did; I saw one or two parties, and it was in the course of that, that I was led to believe that there had been no improper expenditure of any serious amount on Mr. Brogden's part; and with regard to my interference it was with this view. I was satisfied from the experience of 1859 that the only way to extirpate the cancer was by a compromise. The same thing was done in Durham, which was as corrupt as any place can be. It has the effect of leading to the dying out of all this class; and I wish to see that state of things established in Yarmouth; that, in fact, the occupation of the men who gave bribes and took them would be done away with altogether.

24,876. (Mr. Russell.) How could a compromise be effected if Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman were to stand and fall together?—I am not speaking of the compromise during the election, because I considered that the time for the compromise was over, that there was nothing but for them to stand together or retire. I am speaking of a compromise for the future, based on the withdrawal of the petition, which the learned gentleman was speaking of.

24,876*a*. You had not contemplated a compromise, after your experience of 1859, as the most advisable thing in 1865?—Yes, I was ready to recommend it if consulted about it, but all I was asked about by the party, who were those who were to deal with it at that time, the members of the Government, they were anxious this place should be contested; and my duty was at an end when at the request of them, and Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman, I came down with them; but then I should have advised one of them to retire if a compromise could have been effected.

24,877. Was it within your knowledge that Mr. Chamberlin, a leading gentleman of your party, was strongly in favour of a compromise?—No, I did not know that. As I said before, I was only down one evening, and then for a part of the day afterwards. I knew very little about the election. I was at the same time fighting my own battle at Stockport, where I had a severe contest, and my head was full of Stockport, and not Yarmouth.

24,878. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you observe that Mr. Brogden did not at that time, the time of the petition, claim the seat?—I was aware of that. I suppose it is not usual to claim the seat because of the necessity of having to go through a scrutiny afterwards. I have always heard that is the reason it is seldom done.

24,879. We are to understand from you that neither after the election of 1857, nor after the election of 1859, you had any knowledge whatever that bribery had been resorted to by your agents to effect your return?—Yes; I have said I saw Mr. Meall in 1858, and knew that to a certain extent it had in 1857, but I am quite certain to so small an extent as not really to effect the result of the election. With regard to 1857, I was cognisant of it in this way.—I am afraid I am giving too long answers.

24,880. Oh, no. My previous question was whether after the election; immediately after the election I meant?—No. Immediately after, I say most certainly I was not cognisant of the 1857 affair until Mr. Meall stayed with me in 1858, when in fact I made him tell me everything. And then with regard to 1859, I was cognisant of it in this way: we canvassed the borough, Mr. Young and myself. I believed from the appearance of the canvass that we had a decided majority in the promises. We handed the canvass book, I think the day but one before the election, to Mr. Hammond. He spent several hours upon it, and reported to Mr. Young and myself we were positively certain. In fact from the beginning the phrase was, my election was as safe as brandy. I believed I was not unpopular, and should be returned. Then on the morning of the election we headed the poll up to 10 o'clock. At half-past 8 we were 27 a-head, something under 30. About half-past 10, from that to 11, the number began to go against us. I was coming in from one of the districts to the "Star," where the poll was being kept, and Mr. Shelley, who was keeping it for us, that is the check poll, beckoned me into the room, and I went in, and he showed me the names of several men down on our list as promises to us, who were voting against us. Soon after that some gentlemen came to Mr. Young and myself, I think Mr. Livingston was one, and said we could only win the election by spending money; and we said we had already provided more money than ought to be, and we thought some of it had been spent improperly. That was not admitted or denied. We were asked to find money; we consulted, and we determined we would not. We went with Mr. Hammond, and I am not sure Mr. Pulling, up to Mr. Mainprice's, and reported that to Mr. Mainprice. Mr. Young said then, or as going along with me, he had given a cheque to somebody, I understood him to say Mr. Mainprice. I said, "As "we have determined we will not be dragged further, "you had better get it back." And it was burnt or torn up in our presence. To that extent I was aware there had been irregular practices. I have only to say, as soon as Mr. Young and myself heard of it, we stopped the expenditure as soon as we could. I rather preferred losing the election in 1857. There were 59 of those who voted for McCullagh and Watkin in 1857, who voted for Lacon and Stracey in 1859. If those 59 had voted according to what we believed to be their principles, clearly Mr. Young and myself would have been returned. I have a list here which some gentleman prepared for me. I do not know whether the Commissioners care to have it.

24,881. You said that you and Mr. Young were to divide the expense on this occasion; did you afterwards ascertain that Mr. Young had paid an equal sum with yourself?—No, I do not think I did. I assumed that Mr. Young, as an honourable man, would pay everything he was asked to pay. The party knowing we were standing together, if they asked me for any, would ask him for the same.

24,882. You were not asked for any money after the election?—I mean during the contest; I mean during the month's contest of the whole proceedings.

24,883. Previous to the day of the election had you paid Mr. Mainprice that 750*l.*?—Yes, in different sums I had paid it to him. 400*l.* I gave to Mr. Meall, and I think three sums of 150*l.* to Mr. Mainprice.

24,884. When about did you pay that?—I really cannot tell you; they were different times; it is quite impossible to tell now.

24,885. You can tell whether it was a few days before the election or a week?—The 400*l.* I gave to Mr. Meall was immediately after I came to Yarmouth.

24,886. How long would that be before the election?—That would be just after the dissolution. I think three weeks before the election, I forget now; I know by referring to when the dissolution was. It was on the Saturday I think. I believe it was the very day I came. And the other sum of money was given to Mr. Mainprice or sent to him, I rather think sent to him at different times; I think the last being the day before the election.

24,887. You did not send the money yourself?—I knew it was going to Mr. Mainprice's.

24,888. Who sent it to him?—I think my clerk, Mr. Rawlinson, took it.

24,889. We have heard from Mr. Mainprice the money came in his pocket on a particular day?—I cannot explain that; all I can say is I gave Mr. Meall 400*l.*, and he told me he gave that to Mr. Mainprice. I was ashamed to hear that statement. I am sure Mr. Mainprice would tell nothing but the truth.

24,890. You say Mr. Mainprice had from you 750*l.* altogether?—Yes.

24,891. I want to know whose hands the money came through from yours?—I believe it was my clerk, Mr. Rawlinson, who took the other money to Mr. Mainprice.

24,892. Straight to him?—Yes, I think so.

24,893. Mr. Mainprice did not say that?—I do not know how he took it. All I know is, to the best of my belief, Mr. Rawlinson was instructed to take it to Mr. Mainprice.

24,894. Was it in Yarmouth?—Yes; he was my clerk at that time in Manchester, and he came over here. I had my business letters to write, and he was here for a few days.

24,895. Do you suppose the money you sent to Mr. Mainprice in this way was part of the sum that he found in his pocket?—I should suppose so. I do not know whose money it was. I do not imagine it could have been anybody's but mine and Mr. Young's. I have accounted for all I paid, and the way it was paid, and to my belief and knowledge, in fact, that found its way to Mr. Mainprice.

24,896. I want to know where the money went to from you, to Mr. Rawlinson—that is all you can say?—That is all I can say, but I have no doubt I directed him to take it to Mr. Mainprice. I do not wish any concealment. It was not a matter that to me seemed to require any mystery.

24,897. I suppose you were aware all monies spent in an election ought to pass through the hands of the election auditor?—I am aware of that, and I wish it were so.

24,898. In this case the election auditor had only 381*l.* from your election agent, and 750*l.* went in an irregular manner?—It ought to have all gone through the regular channel of course, I admit that.

24,899. May I take it that this sum of 750*l.* and 381*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* represents the whole amount that went out of your pocket?—Yes, I am certain it does, except the travelling expenses I have mentioned.

24,900. Tell me about the subscriptions. Who was your disburser of those subscriptions; I do not want the names?—Mr. Meall always did it up to the time of his death, and subsequent to that I think generally Mr. Clowes, but it was generally paid in the regular course, direct to the parties. If the subscription was wanted for a school, or a chapel, or some one who was taken ill, or when they had the unfortunate loss of the 11 boats here, I generally got an application from the secretary of the fund, and directed a cheque to him.

24,901. Were you cognisant of the fact that Mr. Young had given cheques on the day preceding that of the election to Mr. Mainprice?—Only to this extent, that in my presence the cheque from Mr. Young, for the reasons I had said, was torn up at Mr. Mainprice's or put in the fire.

24,902. You have stated the reason assigned, but we have heard from the other witnesses that the reason was the election was considered hopeless by the agents, and any more money spent by the agents would be wasted?—Nobody can know Mr. Young's reason and mine but ourselves. I have stated what my reasons were, and Mr. Young can contradict or confirm me. I have stated the truth.

24,903. As far as you know?—And as far as I am personally concerned, I must say that was my motive, and that was my action.

24,904. You have no other knowledge of the amount of money Mr. Young spent?—No, I have not.

24,905. Who was Mr. Mackenzie, who was nominated by Mr. McCullagh; do you know who he was?—I do not know at all who he was.

24,906. He was not a public man?—I really do not know; I had no acquaintance with him. I do not know who he was.

24,907. In your communication with Mr. Marshman, you have stated that no reference was made to any illegal expenditure at all?—No, I beg pardon, I did not state that. I told Mr. Marshman everything I knew of the facts, that illegal expenditure had taken place in Yarmouth.

24,908. Mr. Marshman gave us to understand he was ignorant of the fact, at least since the disfranchisement of the freemen. Other witnesses have told us that the character of Yarmouth has been notorious since the year 1808?—My experience of Yarmouth is that although there are a number of corrupt and bad men in Yarmouth, who I believe are made more bad and more corrupt by a particular local cause which I will not go into, that the great bulk of the constituency are very honest and good. There are many men in Yarmouth whom I greatly respect, and I believe there is as large an average of good men in Yarmouth as any other place I know.

24,909. The Commissioners must come to their own conclusion?—I am only expressing my own opinion; I think the guilty ought to be punished, and I hope that myself, if guilty, and others will be punished.

24,910. You did not communicate to Mr. Marshman that the borough was a notoriously corrupt borough?—No; because I did not believe it was. I believed there was a corrupt element in it, but it existed in a very small respect.

24,911. You did not believe it was necessary for your own election in 1859 that the way should have been prepared by a month's studious attention to the wants of the electors?—I do not know there was a month's studious canvass.

24,912. One witness told us, I think Mr. Spilling, that your election was secured in 1857 by a careful study of the electors for a month, with the money not in their pockets but promised?—I am not responsible for anything Mr. Spilling may say. All I can say is what I told the Commissioners. Mr. McCullagh told me, after the experience of five years he believed there was a majority on the register, and everything told me, without the expenditure of a shilling, Mr. McCullagh and myself would be elected.

24,913. Do you recollect taking the advice of Mr. Richard Hammond on that occasion?—He advised, with regard to the state of the canvass in 1857, as he did in 1859.

24,914. Do you recollect the circumstance of the canvass book being brought by Mr. Richard Hammond to you?—No.

24,915. Do you recollect what the witnesses said, that you and Mr. McCullagh were to decide whether you would go on on Mr. Hammond's opinion?—That was not the condition, because we had made up our minds to go on in any case; we were committed to the party. We undoubtedly consulted Mr. Hammond, and his report was extremely favourable; he said at the nomination he had gone over the canvass book and thought we should succeed.

24,916. But you or he could not be aware that that canvass book was made safe by the promise of money?—I do not think it had.

24,917. We had it from one of the witnesses who was actually engaged in making promises of money?—I am not cognisant of that. All I know is Mr. Meall kept the canvass, and he assured me over and over again, a short time before he died, there was no doubt we had the larger majority of pure promises in 1857, and I believe Mr. Meall; and I might say further there were all those indications that a man accustomed to an election takes notice of,—the feeling of the town, the countenance of public meetings, and the way you found men assisting in every quarter of the town clearly showed there was a large Liberal majority.

24,918. I am not saying there was, not if the electors had been left alone, but Mr. Spilling's opinion was your election would not be carried on without the expenditure of money?—That was not my opinion.

24,919. It is Mr. Spilling's, who was actually in contact with the electors?—So I understand from you.

24,920. I understand you to say you had written to Mr. Marshman at the election of 1865 to object, or rather to protest against, his retirement?—Yes.

24,921. Were you at that time aware of the motives that were inducing Mr. Marshman to retire?—Yes; I was aware of his motives. He told me himself, if I remember rightly, that he felt certain he could not get in without bribery, and I should not advise Mr. Marshman; in fact, I told him distinctly I would not advise him to spend a shilling, but my advice was by what I may call a desire to see proper election tactics carried out. I was in hopes from what he said, and Mr. Brogden told me, there would be a compromise, and I felt if Mr. Marshman retired before the canvass was completed that might effect it.

24,922. When was this letter?—I can send it to the Commissioners.

24,923. Was it in the last week previous to the election?—No; I think it was at least a fortnight before the election.

24,924. Then probably your letter had the effect of making Mr. Marshman go on to the last?—I do not know if it had. I can tell you a letter was written under these circumstances, in fact, perhaps, it is improper for me to say how it was written. I was leaving London by the London and North-western Railway when one of Mr. Marshman's or Mr. Brogden's people came to me and said Mr. Marshman had told Mr. Shelley he was going to retire and he thought that would upset the compromise, and he wished I would write to Mr. Marshman; thereupon, my shorthand clerk being at the station, I dictated a letter to my clerk to Mr. Marshman, which my clerk sent. I am sorry I have not the letter, I will send it to you; but I did not desire Mr. Marshman to stand with any desire that he should spend a shilling in bribery, but simply that the chance should not be thrown away by the Liberal party, by the mode and the time he should retire.

24,925. (Mr. Russell.) You have given 750*l.* as a sum which Mr. Mainprice had?—Yes.

24,926. The evidence stands thus: Mr. Mainprice received three parcels of money, and that money he took to Mr. Steward. Mr. Mainprice's evidence is that the parcels were very heavy, the two larger ones —there being three in truth—might have contained 400 or 500 sovereigns a-piece. Then Mr. Steward says the amount he received was about 1,600*l.*, which would be quite agreeing with Mr. Mainprice's supposition. Mr. Steward bears out the fact that he received 1,600*l.*, by actually accounting by memory for 1,420*l.*, which he gave to other people, which of course would have been an impossible feat to perform with only 750*l.*?—I can only speak of my own expenditure, and I say again, I am sure I have stated it fairly.

24,927. I have not the slightest doubt about that. That is exclusive of 320*l.* which Mr. Livingston received by a cheque from Mr. Young; and also exclusive of two, if not three, cheques which Mr. Mainprice had received; exclusive also of a sum of 400*l.* or 500*l.* which Mr. Mainprice says he received by driblets. We have it before us, taking the smallest estimated sum as 2,320*l.*?—I have accounted for my own expenditure, and I hope I may with all those concerned in this matter be submitted to the accountant's test.

24,928. The Commissioners do not for a moment doubt, as far as you are concerned, that you have given a fair statement?—I know the painful position that I am placed in, and also that of the Commissioners. It is their duty to suspect everybody, and I do not complain of their suspecting me.

24,929. I do not in the slightest degree suspect you; on the contrary, it is because you have given us your evidence so fairly, that I am anxious to put before you the evidence as we have it. Are you aware of anybody having advanced money on your account?—No; I feel certain that nobody did.

24,930. Or on Mr. Young's behalf?—I know nothing of Mr. Young's arrangements. I think Mr. Young is not one of those men that would ever put himself under the control of anyone whatever. He did the thing himself, and will always do so.

24,931. Taking this account to be correct, as apparently it is at present, Mr. Young has advanced a larger sum than you have?—I of course cannot account for the discrepancy.

24,932. You used the term before, "an unofficial treasurer," with reference to Mr. Meall. I suppose that is a term used for a professional briber?—No; I merely meant that he was the person who took the general management of the election, which a lawyer never does, and never can do upon any election, and to whom the candidates paid the money. I may say, for Mr. Meall's memory, he would not assume that I meant anything of the kind.

24,933. When was Mr. Meall appointed?—At a meeting at the "Star" some time before the election in 1857. We had a meeting with George Palmer, or Mr. Pulling, or Mr. Hammond, and some leading men at the "Star," and the arrangement they made was made among themselves. Neither Mr. McCullagh nor Mr. Young interfered in the management of the election; we had quite enough to do in walking over these flint stones.

24,934. Were you and Mr. Young at the "Star" when Mr. Mainprice was sent for?—I do not remember that; if it was in the evening I have no doubt we were. We sent word that we would be there.

24,935. You can give us no further information as to the means by which Mr. Mainprice obtained the money than we have already?—No. I can give you no further information.

24,936. At the beginning of your evidence you made use of a term, "the screw was put on in the town," with reference to Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes.

24,937. I should like to ask you whether from your personal experience of those two elections you have any reason to believe that the screw was applied?—Yes; I may say I believe it was applied as hard as it could be applied in this borough. It is a great evil that the influence of the brewery should exist at all. If the Commissioners will notice the register, they will find there are a larger number of persons selling drink of different kinds in Yarmouth than, I should think, in almost any borough of the same size, with 1,500 or 1,600 electors. Then, of course, political influence and control is a valuable thing. Men like power, and that is purchased by a system of erecting constantly beer-selling houses, and those beer-selling houses must be under the influence of the man who supplies them with beer, and is so made to vote.

24,938. But the result of an influence of that sort in a town is one thing, the improper use of it is another. What I ask you is this, whether, of your own knowledge and observation, Sir Edmund Lacon's brewery was unduly made use of to influence the election?—I think so. I know in canvassing, many men said they wished they could vote for me, but they said they drew their beer from Sir Edmund Lacon. It is not only confined to the beer, it is perfectly well known, and nobody will deny it with regard to the shopkeepers and all the people who can be influenced, they are influenced by the Conservatives, and they are not influenced by the Liberal party. I do not mean to say that one party is better than the other, but it is the fact in this place.

24,939. I suppose, if you were the owner of several public-houses in the town, you would not object, as the owner of those houses, to their voting for you. But it is a very different thing if you went to them and said, "If you do not vote for me it will be a bad thing for you?"—I do not object to having their votes. If I was a landowner I should object to compelling a man to vote against whatever his opinion may be.

24,940. That is the point. Are you aware that any voter, or can you remember the name of any one man who ever said to you that this undue influence had been used?—I cannot remember the names now, but I know men have said so. I do not attempt to recollect their names, or to make a list of them, because I should be very sorry to put those men in a false position. You see at once the position he would be placed in if he was found to have complained of it.

24,941. Was Mr. Nightingale's name ever mentioned by these men?—Yes.

24,942. Did any of them ever say, for example, "Mr. Nightingale has represented to us, or anybody "has represented to us, that if we vote against Sir "Edmund Lacon it will be the worse for our busi- "ness?"—Yes, I remember many cases. There are the cases of several men who keep cows, who talked in this way, that they got their grains from them.

24,943. Do you know if any of Sir Edmund Lacon's publicans did vote for you or Mr. McCullagh, or Mr. Young?—I do not think any of them voted for us, I do not remember one. There might have been one or two, but I do not think more than that.

24,944. There may have been one or two?—There may have been.

24,945. Did you ever hear yourself of any man having suffered in consequence of voting against Sir Edmund Lacon?—I have heard of such cases, but I cannot charge my memory with the particulars of any one of them. I do not think Sir Edmund Lacon would do it himself, I think he is too good-natured a man; but everybody who understands elections knows very well these influences of other people is a part of the election machinery; it is considered fair, I will not say by men like Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey, they are too high in position, and would be above it; but those under them consider it a fair weapon.

24,946. Take a parallel case—a landlord in the country; as a rule, his tenants generally vote with him?—They do.

24,947. It is a very different thing if he held different political opinions, and he went to them and said, "If you do not vote for me I will turn you out of your farm." Sir Edmund Lacon's position is the same if he merely avails himself of the interest that he has. But if he brought it to bear improperly, then it would be reprehensible?—I entirely acquit Sir Edmund Lacon of any such act; he is of too good-natured a temper to do anything of the kind with regard to those under him; and my opinion is, the screw has been put on, and under present circumstances will be, unless it is checked in some way by others.

24,948. With reference to the election of 1857, do you believe there was any bribery on the Conservative side?—Yes, I do; and I say I believe it for this reason, although it is very unpleasant to mention the difference between Mr. McCullagh and myself. This difference led to antagonism in conducting the defence of the petition, and one of the things proposed by the party there was, that a counter petition should be got up, that counter petition of course charging corruption on the Conservative side. That counter petition, and some evidence upon it, was got up, and owing to this difference of opinion as to the way of dealing with it, Mr. McCullagh and I did not agree as to the course to be taken. I wanted to present it, he did not, and the result was it was not presented. It was in consequence of what I heard in connexion with that that my opinion that corruption was practised by the Conservative party in 1857, was formed, I do not think to a large amount.

24,949. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Who got up that petition?—Mr. Costerton, I think, and Mr. Clowes.

24,950. (Mr. Russell.) Do you believe, from your experience of 1857 and 1859, that there was a sufficient number of impure electors at Yarmouth inevitably to turn the election either way?—I do not think there was in 1857; I think they were made so in 1859. The election of 1857, as to some of those voters, was venal. I have no doubt a large sum was spent on our side. I quite admit it, and that money was spent improperly on the other side I have no doubt, for this reason; I gave you the case of 1859, of men who voted for Mr. McCullagh and myself in 1857, who voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey in 1859. Now, men do not change their opinions in that way in two years without some motive; and I think the constituency was made worse in 1859 than it was in 1857, and I believe in 1865 it was made worse than it was in 1859. Whether at this moment there may not be a number of men sufficient to turn the election I cannot say. I believe in 1857 there was not a sufficient number. If you strike off every man in 1857, who has bemeaned himself by taking money, and let the others stand, that number would be less than the majority that Mr. McCullagh and myself obtained.

24,951. Is it your impression that the town has been made more venal by the prices of votes being made large enough to tempt men?—I believe all temptation makes people worse, and it is the fact here. I do not blame the people who take it, but those who are bad enough to give it, myself included, if I have done anything wrong.

24,952. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) The question I want to ask you is this: In reference to this 1859 election, as to names which you say voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey in 1859, whether you were aware that those men were bribed for you in 1857?—No, I am not aware of it.

24,953. That makes all the difference?—If that were so, it would make all the difference. I had no reason to believe they were. Some may have been, but I have no reason to believe it.

24,954. (Mr. Slade.) Have you got their names?—That is the list (producing a paper).

24,955. Who gave you the names?—That was made out for me by Mr. De Caux. I believe that is right in 1859. I have a copy of the register at home, and that was inside it when I looked to see on Monday.

24,956. You had forgotten all about it before?—I requested Mr. De Caux to take the trouble of going over the two registers and take out the list; I forgot that I had the list from that moment, till I found it in the register, and I thought it better to bring it as I found it.

24,957. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You told us that Mr. Meall told you all about the election of 1857 afterwards?—Yes.

24,958. Did he tell you the amount that he spent?—The impression that he left upon my mind was, it was a very few hundred pounds. He divided it in this way: he first of all took what are very hypocritical, what are called the legal expenses, or that class of expenses. I may interrupt myself here, by reminding the Commissioners that the case of Cooper and Slade was pending. It was decided at the end of 1857, and then it was decided it was quite legal to pay a man to come to vote if he could not afford to pay for himself.

24,959. That was before it went to the House of Lords, where it was decided the other way?—I am giving you the impression upon my mind.

24,960. It was decided one way in the Court below, and then afterwards another in the House of Lords?—1857 must have been the first decision. He took the amount of money which would be spent for that purpose; then he took the amount of money that would be spent in supplying the places temporarily of pilots and other persons who had to leave their ships. Then the balance is the thing to be accounted for. I cannot remember at this moment his dealing with the amount of money that I had paid. It left a small sum, perhaps

TWENTY-NINTH DAY.

200*l.* or 300*l.*, which would be spent in the unmistakeable bribery of voters.

24,961. Did you in 1859, when you sent Mr. Meall 400*l.*, say anything to him by way of caution, as to the mode in which that money was to be spent?—No, I did not.

24,962. You knew that part of the money you had intrusted him with before had been spent illegally; did you not think it necessary at that time to caution him against any illegal expenditure again?—Mr. Meall was of course in that state of health that he could not take any very active part in the election, and I stated to my friends I hoped I should not be got into the difficulty that I was got into in 1857, and I relied upon their prudence to keep me out of any difficulty of that kind.

24,963. You did state that?—I did state that.

24,964. But not to Mr. Meall?—Not to Mr. Meall.

24,965. Did you state it to Mr. Mainprice?—I have no doubt I stated it at the meetings of the committees, where we had all our leading men together. I stated it generally, and there was a sort of understanding that we should not be got into any difficulty of the kind.

24,966. Did you understand they acquiesced in that, and that you were safe in their hands?—Yes, I thought I was safe in their hands.

24,967. Do you think it is a prudent thing to trust 750*l.* through an illegal channel?—Looking at it with the eyes of 1866, I should say decidedly no; but, looking at it in the way we unfortunately look at these things, in the midst of a contest, I should say yes.

24,968. When you trusted that money to Mr. Mainprice, are you prepared to tell the Commissioners you did not contemplate its being employed in an illegal way?—I may say I did not. I expected the money would be employed in bringing up every absent voter likely to vote on the Liberal side; and in Yarmouth, if anybody will analyze the register, they will see there was an unusually large number of persons absent. I remember in 1857 we had to bring a number of men from Scotland, and from Barking Creek. I thought that that would be expensive, and I was told by somebody that there were a large number of persons absent at the time; whether it was from the state of the fishing I do not know. I expected the men who were sent to supply the places of pilots who would have to leave their ships would have to be paid. I expected to have paid through Mr. Mainprice about 500*l.*, and I considered that was 250*l.* too much.

24,969. Why should it not be given to the election agent?—No doubt in strictness it ought to have been; but those who know Mr. Clowes and his engagements would know it would be utterly impossible (that is the opinion of the party) for Mr. Clowes to do the work of the election. It is a matter requiring the whole time of whoever undertakes to do it; it is a large thing to do.

24,970. Is it necessary to appoint Mr. Clowes as the election agent?—That is a legal question altogether.

24,971. I want to know if it is necessary that Mr. Clowes should be appointed. If he could not do the work of election agent why should he be appointed?—I suppose it was an appointment that had always existed at almost every election for many years before, and at many times before. I only say with regard to it, it was the decision of the party that that was the best way to deal with it.

24,972. And the Act of Parliament was set at nought?—I have no doubt the Act of Parliament was set at nought; I do not at all defend it.

24,973. With reference to this letter you wrote to Sir Edmund Lacon, when did Sir Edmund Lacon recommend the compromise?—Because you say here, "I have reason to believe that you made a similar recommendation." When did Sir Edmund Lacon make it?—I cannot give you of course the dates, but my information from Mr. Spofforth and Mr. Rose is this: Mr. Rose is the solicitor of the Carlton; he is a personal friend of mine, and we have often talked upon the sense of making such a compromise.

24,974. Do you know the reasons why Sir Edmund Lacon recommended the compromise?—I suppose the reason is well known—that which, after it is over, we all feel ashamed of.

24,975. Sir Edmund Lacon says he knew nothing about the bribery?—I cannot believe that.

24,976. (Mr. Russell.) May I ask you in what form you brought down the money for the purpose of the election of 1859?—The 400*l.* I gave to Mr. Meall I brought a 100*l.* note, and 300 sovereigns; and the other money in notes of 10*l.*, 20*l.*, and 50*l.*, small notes; what the bankers call "short."

24,977. And the money you paid to Mr. Clowes, the legal agent, was, I suppose, by cheque?—The money I paid Mr. Clowes was—I think I gave him—if I remember rightly, a 100*l.* note; then I think I gave him a 20*l.* note or 20*l.* in sovereigns, and I remitted him the other afterwards, when the account was made up. I remember well now I paid him a 100*l.* note here; then I remitted him 20*l.* here; then I remitted him 80*l.*, and then I remitted him a balance of 7*l.* or 8*l.* I think that makes up the 300*l.* odd.

24,978. And you made no payments by cheque?—No, none whatever.

24,979. All the money was in cash?—All the money was in cash.

24,980. Did you do the same in 1857?—Yes.

24,981. All the money you did spend passed either through the hands of Mr. Clowes or Mr. Meall?—Yes, except the other items which I have read, such as my expenses here, and subscriptions, and those things.

24,982. Of course all the illegal expenditure must have been through the hands of Mr. Meall?—Yes, and Mr. Mainprice.

24,983. That is what I want to know. Do you believe the money Mr. Mainprice had, passed through the hands of Mr. Meall?—In 1859 I gave Mr. Meall 400*l.* the moment I came here, to get rid of it, and not to be bothered with it. I did not know at that time who would be appointed to engage the clerks and the stave-men, and who would have to pay for them. Mr. Meall informed me when Mr. Mainprice had been appointed by the party to keep the canvass and do the work, that he had sent to Mr. Mainprice this 400*l.*

24,984. Mr. Meall said so?—He told me so.

24,985. And you are not aware of any other money which Mr. Mainprice received of yours?—350*l.* I cannot exactly remember the sort of notes it was in. I believe there was a 100*l.* note, and the rest in small notes, that is my impression.

24,986. Did that go through Mr. Meall?—No, that did not I believe; I cannot quite recollect. I believe I gave that, to the best of my recollection, to him, and told him to take it or give it to Mr. Mainprice, but I am not quite certain.

24,987. (Mr. Slade.) You are sure the money that Mr. Rawlinson took to Mr. Mainprice was not in sovereigns?—I do not know; I have the strongest impression that it was not. The only sovereigns were the 300*l.* that I spoke of.

24,988. Did you ever hear from Mr. Rawlinson in what manner he gave that money to Mr. Mainprice?—No, I never heard of it.

24,989. Is this quite new to you, this story we have heard from Mr. Mainprice, about finding the money in his pocket?—Yes, I know nothing of it. Mr. Mainprice has never told me anything of the kind.

24,990. I meant more with regard to what you might have heard from common report?—No, I have heard nothing from common report. I knew of it first on reading the "Times." I do not wish to throw the slightest stigma on anything that Mr. Mainprice has said.

24,991. (Mr. Russell.) When Mr. Meall told you in 1857 how the money had been applied, did he give you a detailed account of it?—No, he did not. He made out the account to me in the way I have told you. Mr. Meall and I were very intimate. He was a man that I had a great regard for, and I on one or two occasions lent him a little money to buy stationery or paper with. I had lent him about 300*l.* at different times, and he had given me an I O U. I thought I ought not to pay this, and therefore he ought to account to me for that and some other money. It was this sort of statement he made at my house; he dealt with it in this way: assuming that I had given him so much money, the 650*l.*, he put down so much paid to Clowes, which I think was 150*l.*; then so much for subscriptions to the Nelson monument, and a number of things of that kind. I had to pay about 60*l.*, and then so much for the travelling expenses of voters, so much for pilots; and all that sort of thing. Then there was a balance, and my impression was, that balance was 200*l.* or 300*l.*, which could only have been spent in this improper way. He did not give me any list of it.

24,992. When you settled the account with Mr. Meall, was the balance in your favour or in his?—The balance was in my favour, and Mr. Meall paid me every farthing that he had borrowed from me, with the exception of 100*l.* which was left over, and which I received from his executors after his death. Mr. Meall did not die indebted to me in one single shilling, nor did he ever receive one farthing from me.

24,993. Was there any account of any sum of money which Mr. Meall had expended on your behalf other than what he received from you?—I do not think there was. There may have been, but I do not think there was.

24,994. If so, it was a considerable sum?—No, there was no considerable sum I am sure, or I should remember it. But Mr. Meall being, as it were, my friend and representative here, anything that I had to do here would pass through his hands.

24,995. I am sure you would tell us in a minute. I mean this, whether you are not aware that Mr. Meall himself advanced in your interest any further sum than the sum that you put into his hands?—I am not aware that he did; I do not think he did. It is not impossible of course. Mr. Meall was doing a business giving him a profit of 300*l.* or 400*l.* a year, and perhaps sometimes 500*l.* He had many family connexions, which he had to assist; perhaps he was worth 1,000*l.* or 1,500*l.*; but his illness caused him to lose a great deal of it, and a man of such moderate fortune I do not think had the means of paying anything for me.

24,996. I daresay you heard of the capacity in which Mr. Nightingale acted for Sir Edmund Lacon?—I had no friend of that kind.

24,997. Mr. Meall was not your Mr. Nightingale?—No, Mr. Meall was not my Mr. Nightingale. If any money has been spent for me beyond what I have stated it must have been paid by him, and I am responsible for it. If it has been I have understated the amount, but I feel perfectly confident I have not, and that is why I am perfectly ready to go into the inquiry.

24,998. Do you know Mr. Humphreys, the coroner for Middlesex, who was here at the election of 1857 or 1859?—Mr. Humphreys was here with Mr. Young at the election, when the present Sir John Mellor and Mr. Young were returned. He was here, I do not think the whole of the time, but a portion of the time.

24,999. As Mr. Young's friend?—As Mr. Young's friend. He came down with Mr. Young. He was not here in 1859 I think.

25,000. Did you know him?—I never knew him till the election of 1857, when Mr. McCullagh and I differed. Mr. McCullagh had appointed him as his solicitor, and he acted for the defence of Mr. McCullagh in the petition of 1857.

25,001. Do you know in what capacity he was here?—I do not. I should think as a man who contests a place for the first time, as Mr. Young did in England, although he was a member of Parliament upon the other side of the world, he would bring his solicitor down with him as a friend. With regard to that election, if ever there was an election where on neither side there was not a shilling spent, I should think it was when Mellor and Young were returned by acclamation of the people. I believe all the money in the world at that time would not have returned anybody but a Liberal.

25,002. You have stated with reluctance, as any gentleman would do, that there was a disagreement between you and Mr. McCullagh as to the settlement of accounts. Of course Mr. McCullagh probably will make some remarks upon that statement, and I should like to ask you whether it was clearly understood between you that you should pay equal sums?—I do not think it was. I do not think Mr. McCullagh came to any understanding with me about this, that we should settle the expenses fairly between us. I should have been perfectly ready, but for the fear of being left under the imputation of having found money for bribing; like their saying I was the man who in point of fact brought down the oyster barrels, which is as absurd and as great a falsehood as ever was uttered; except for fear of being under that imputation, I should have with pleasure paid a larger amount of the expenses than Mr. McCullagh, because Mr. McCullagh had spent his time in making up the register to the state in which I found it.

25,003. Mr. McCullagh was very popular?—Mr. McCullagh was very popular.

25,004. And he, giving you the advantage of his popularity, might have expected you to pay a larger proportion of the expenses?—He might have done so.

25,005. He never suggested it to you?—No; except in the correspondence that has followed between us. He may have had it in his mind, and he may have stated he considered me pledged to do so, but I do not understand he has ever contended that I was liable to do so, except as a matter of equity, because I had the advantage of his working up the register to 1857, and therefore I ought to pay a larger portion of the expenses.

25,006. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Are you aware that Mr. McCullagh ever complained that but for the money you expended in 1857 he would have been returned?—I never heard that. If he has, he has complained unjustly.

25,007. You never heard that?—I never heard that.

25,008. (Mr. Russell.) As you have mentioned the oyster barrels, perhaps it is as well to ask you how you did bring it down?—I brought it myself in my portmanteau. If the Commissioners will bear with me for a moment—I know it is not evidence, but it is in justice to myself—as to the difference between Mr. McCullagh and me, I offered two or three times to leave the matter to the arbitration of some mutual friend.

25,009. Supposing the Commissioners afterwards determined to call Mr. Rawlinson, where is he?—I wish he was here to call. He was drowned two or three years ago. It puts me in a false position, having to state certain things done by a man that I cannot produce. I assure you he would have been here to-day but for that unfortunate circumstance.

Sir Henry Stracey, Bart., sworn; examined by Mr. Fitzgerald.

25,010. You were a candidate and member for this borough in 1859?—Yes.

25,011. Will you be good enough to tell the Commissioners how you first became a candidate for the borough?—I had been invited on different occasions to be a candidate for this borough, and on this occasion I rather think I offered myself if I remember rightly. I came over here, having been unsuccessful for East Norfolk, which I had previously represented, looking for a seat in Parliament. I believe I came over and represented to the party my political views at the "Angel," and they accepted me, and I then stood.

25,012. Had you any communication with Sir Edmund Lacon before becoming a candidate?—I think

TWENTY-NINTH DAY.

Sir H. Stracey.

9 Oct. 1866.

I had, but it must have been merely momentary, at the Carlton Club. I think I told him that I would stand, but positively I do not know whether it was before or afterwards. I think I told him I would stand with him, and I would bear half the expenses; that was either before or after.

25,013. It was your own idea of becoming member, and not from the solicitation of the people?—I had been asked on different occasions, and I had been over in fact to the party on a former occasion.

25,014. How long before the election had you announced yourself as a candidate?—I cannot say that certainly, but I should think about three weeks or a month.

25,015. How long did your canvass last?—My impression is I understood it was three weeks canvass, but I am not positive I was there three weeks previously.

25,016. Did you canvass in company with Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes.

25,017. We hear that you were returned?—Yes.

25,018. Will you inform the Commissioners how much your election cost you?—I would with all my heart, but I do not know, nor do I know nearly what it cost me. I did not settle for any election matter, not only not for many months after, but I believe a year and a half after.

25,019. You did settle?—I did settle, not for the election alone; I merely sent to my bankers requiring to know the state of my accounts. I found that it required rectifying; for I had then to settle partly for the county election, and for the election petition against me, and also for the Yarmouth election.

25,020. What county election?—The eastern division of this county.

25,021. Had you stood for the county?—I had stood for the county at the general election, and I was unsuccessful.

25,022. In 1859?—No, in 1857. I had previously represented it from 1855 to 1857.

25,023. Who was your agent who acted for you then in 1859 in this borough?—My solicitor and agent was Mr. Reynolds.

25,024. Can Mr. Reynolds give us the information which we want from you?—Mr. Reynolds is much more likely to give it than myself, because all the disbursements, to the best of my belief, took place through him; none through myself, not a shilling.

25,025. You advanced no money for the purpose of the election of 1859, and you paid none afterwards except as you say?—That is the case.

25,026. When did you become aware what the election had cost you?—I never knew what the election cost me.

25,027. You do not know now?—I know no more than the man in the moon now; it was a general lump sum in my accounts. I have rather large matters occasionally with my bankers, and I never inquired about it; in short I made a point of not inquiring.

25,028. Before you came to Yarmouth were you aware of the character the borough bore?—Perfectly. I knew what it was, and had known it from my boyhood, I may say, as being, one part of the constituency, venal. I think the heads of the party have always struck me as being enlightened to a degree as a constituency, and most worthy and respectable men, but my belief is that I heard that there were nearly one-fourth of the electors were venal, that is my impression. When I say one fourth, I believe it was more than one-fourth of the electors were represented to me as venal.

25,029. I suppose I may take it that you deliberately abstained from inquiring into the expense because you felt assured part of that expense would go in an illegal manner?—You know I know nothing of any individual instance of illegality, and I made a point of never inquiring anything about it; but if you ask me what was my opinion, in fact what was my conviction, at the election, I have stated my conviction was that there was corruption going on, although I knew nothing about it.

25,030. You deliberately abstained from inquiring?—Not deliberately, but I made a point of not doing it

25,031. When did you settle up with the bankers when did you ascertain the whole that it cost you?—It is some seven or eight years since, and I do not remember. I never ascertained what it cost me, as I tell you there were so many different things to settle. I am not sure whether I had not bought land at the time. There were so many different things that I arranged with my banker and put my account in a proper state; from I presume some securities which I had, and the balance at my other bankers, that I do not accurately know, but I know I put it all straight and proper.

25,032. First of all I will ask you, was Mr. Reynolds your agent for the county as well as for the borough?—No, I do not think he was.

25,033. Did Mr. Reynolds ever render you an account of the expenditure for the borough?—Never.

25,034. Did you receive an account from your county agent as to the expenditure in the county?—I am not sure about that. I certainly have got no accounts. I have not a paper or document of any kind relating to Yarmouth election or to the Yarmouth petition.

25,035. I suppose you have some means in your own mind for separating the county and borough election expenditure from your expenditure on other accounts?—No, indeed I have not; I have no means of knowing accurately, or in any way the separate cost of each.

25,036. I suppose you could ascertain?—I do not know that I could. I know I have no document of any kind, and I have never searched for any.

25,037. How did you pay Mr. Reynolds when he asked you for a sum on account?—At that time he was paid through my bankers, and he had a carte blanche at my bankers to be supplied with any money that was requisite for the election expenses.

25,038. It is impossible for you, you say, to tell the Commissioners whether any part of the money in 1859 was furnished, to what we have heard called here the illegal agents, for the purpose of direct bribery?—I know nothing about it. All I know is, that I settled my account, and I do not know any of the separate items, or of the separate cost of the Yarmouth petition, nor of the Yarmouth election. In fact I know nothing more than this, that I settled all at once.

25,039. You appointed another agent besides Mr. Reynolds?—No.

25,040. You appointed an agent at the election of 1859?—No.

25,041. Was not Mr. Charles Preston acting for you?—No.

25,042. Who was the election agent under the Act of Parliament?—I had none except Mr. Reynolds.

25,043. Did you make no regular appointment as required by the Act of Parliament?—I do not remember making any appointment of any kind. I always understood that Mr. Reynolds was my local agent.

25,044. You will not say you did not?—I will not say I did not, but I have no recollection of having done anything of the kind.

25,045. You were standing with Sir Edmund Lacon on a joint interest?—Yes, in 1859.

25,046. Sir Edmund Lacon had an agent, and no doubt you have forgotten it?—That is his affair.

25,047. You never saw any account furnished by the agent as to the expense of your election?—Never. The only thing I can ever remember receiving from Mr. Reynolds was some bill relating to some subscriptions. I had perfect confidence and trust in Mr. Reynolds as an honest man, and I have had no reason to distrust him or to think he was otherwise than honest up to the present time.

25,048. Did you give Mr. Reynolds any instructions at that time as to expending or not expending money in bribery?—Not the least in the world. I gave him no instructions.

25,049. (Mr. Slade.) Had you any connexion with

Yarmouth beyond being a gentleman of large fortune, residing in the county ?—Not the least in the world.

25,050. When you and Sir Edmund Lacon stood together in a joint interest, were you to share the expenses ?—Clearly.

25,051. Was it understood at the time you were to share both the legal and illegal expenses ?—I never referred to the illegal expenses, nor did he. I knew nothing about that. All I know is, that I determined to pay half the expenses whatever they were.

25,052. You had always understood that more than a fourth of the electors would have to be bought, and knowing that, should you not anticipate having something to pay for illegal expenses ?—I have mentioned to the Commissioners, I just now said, that I had no doubt of it. My opinion, if it was asked, and my conviction, if it is to be given, is that corruption and illegality was going on, but I, individually and personally, knew nothing about it.

25,053. Of course you knew eventually the candidates would have to pay for the illegal expenses ?—I have not the least doubt in the world of it.

25,054. Did any conversation occur between you and Sir Edmund Lacon, before you went to the poll, as to what the expenses would be ?—No, none at all.

25,055. Did you ever mention to Sir Edmund Lacon that you understood that Yarmouth was a corrupt place ?—No, I do not think I ever said a word about corruption to him.

25,056. Did you ever ask him what it would cost to represent Yarmouth ?—Not a bit ; never.

25,057. Who did you make this inquiry of ?—I do not think I made any inquiry. I did hear to the best of my belief—I do not wish unnecessarily to introduce names, but if it is required by the Royal Commissioners I must introduce a name to the best of my belief. I cannot say for truth it is the case. Is it your wish I should do so ?

25,058. It is.—I received the information as to the corrupt voters from Mr. Lushington Preston. Whether he was correct or not is another point. That is the information, to the best of my belief, I received from him.

25,059. Did you ascertain from Mr. Preston what the probable expense would be ?—Not a bit ; never.

25,060. Were you prepared to come and spend whatever was required to get in for Yarmouth ?—Yes, whatever was required for the election.

25,061. You gave Mr. Reynolds a carte blanche to draw on your bankers ?—I never said a word to him about a carte blanche on my bankers, but I represented to my bankers that whatever was requisite for the election expenses he might pay to Mr. Reynolds.

25,062. Was Mr. Reynolds to draw it out by an order ?—That I know nothing about, but I was answerable for it.

25,063. What was the arrangement between you and your banker as to how Mr. Reynolds was to get the money ?—I had no arrangement beyond that ; and to say the truth, I do not remember that I directly told my banker so, but I know it was conveyed to him. Whether by me in conversation or not, he became at any rate acquainted with my wish that he should supply Mr. Reynolds with the necessary funds for the election.

25,064. Not to be drawn out through you directly, but by Mr. Reynolds ?—Not a bit. I never drew a cheque upon it.

25,065. It was directly by Mr. Reynolds ?—He knows best ; he has never rendered any account to me of it, and I have never required it.

350,66. Was any limit specified to your banker ?—No, no limit whatever. I had all confidence in Mr. Reynolds.

25,067. Do you know Mr. Nightingale ?—Yes.

25,068. When did you make his acquaintance ?—I believe at that time. I know he accompanied us through our canvass. I do not think I knew him before at all, and I do not think I have seen him twice since ; not half a dozen times since.

25,069. You have a very slight acquaintance with him ?—I cannot say otherwise.

25,070. You knew he was Sir Edmund Lacon's partner in the brewery ?—I did not know it even at that time till I heard it on the canvass, then I heard he was Sir Edmund Lacon's partner.

25,071. We have heard from Mr. Nightingale that he advanced money at that election ?—I know nothing of it. He did not advance it for me ; I am quite certain of that.

25,072. To your knowledge, has that money ever been repaid by you to Mr. Nightingale ?—No. I did not know it till I saw it in the papers. I did not know he even advanced it. I have never paid Mr. Nightingale a shilling, and he has never made any claim on me for it.

25,073. The money might have been repaid by Mr. Reynolds, and you not be aware of it ?—I think it very unlikely. I never heard his name mentioned in connexion with expenses at all.

25,074. You never had any detail of any expenditure ?—Very true.

25,075. Were you asked to stand again at the election of 1865 ?—No, I was not ; because, previous to the election, I had signified publicly, by an address in the newspapers to the electors, that I did not intend to stand.

25,076. That was in the previous year ?—I believe it was in the previous year.

25,077. Did you see Mr. Goodson about that time ?—Yes ; and I recommended him, as far as my recommendation went, to the electors.

25,078. Did you come with him to Yarmouth ?—No ; and I have never, to the best of my belief, seen him but once.

25,079. You say you recommended him in your farewell address ?—I think he was chairman of this railway, and I did hear that he had a wish to be in Parliament, and I ascertained that he had that wish ; and that was the time I saw him. He then called on me. I found that he wished to come forward, and consequently I thought, from his position, he would be the best man I could recommend to the electors to succeed me ; in short, much better than I could possibly be to them, as chairman of the railway company. Perhaps I ought to tell you that when I came over here to stand I fancied—and evidently very wrongly, but I fancied—that there would be no opposition. I thought that Sir Edmund Lacon's position here, as a banker and brewer in the town, could carry a great deal, and I was pretty well known, having twice canvassed the town for the county before that, when there were then 800 voters. I thought, being a county man in addition, that with him the chances were there would be no opposition, because the persons would think probably they would be beat, but it turned out otherwise. That, to say the truth, was one of the most prominent reasons I had for offering myself here.

25,080. You were not asked to stand by Sir Edmund Lacon himself ?—No ; I do not think he had any idea I was going to stand, certainly not before I saw him at the Carlton, and nothing at all passed hardly betw n us.

25,081. You were aware that Sir Edmund Lacon had been always opposed for Yarmouth ?—Well, I am not sure I was aware of it. I do not think I was aware of it ; in fact I fancied on one occasion he was not opposed. I do not feel certain, but I fancy on one occasion he was not opposed.

25,082. He was opposed in 1852 ?—I have no doubt I am wrong. You are a much better authority for it than I am. That is the impression I had at the time.

25,083. You thought his local interest was enough to carry you ?—I think he is in the same position as a landowner among his tenants. I looked upon it in that light.

25,084. Did you represent that impression of yours also to Mr. Goodson, or were you undeceived by the election in 1859 ?—No, I was not undeceived in any way. I did not mention it to Mr. Goodson, not a word.

TWENTY-NINTH DAY.

Sir H. Stracey.

9 Oct. 1866.

25,085. Did you tell Mr. Goodson you thought Sir Edmund Lacon ought to be able to return himself and Mr. Goodson?—I do not remember saying so at all. I must have thought so, I have no doubt, but I do not remember saying so.

25,086. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Goodson about the borough?—Nothing more than I tell you. He came to me when he found I had heard of him as wishing to stand for the borough. He called on me in Dover Street, in London, and we had a conversation about it, but nothing particular of any kind, and I think he said he should go down and see the constituency. I think that I had written then, or that he had decided then to stand, because I wrote down, saying that I had found a gentleman to replace me on my resigning, and this was Mr. Goodson, whom I thought they would be very glad to receive.

25,087. Had you at that time, when Mr. Goodson came to you, any notion that Sir Edmund Lacon would be allowed to walk over the course?—No, not the least in the world.

25,088. Did you expect he would be opposed?—Really I formed no conjecture upon it; it never struck me. All I wanted was, in justice to the constituency, I wanted to give them a man whom I thought would represent their interests well, and I thought I could not do better than embrace the offer of Mr. Goodson's wish to represent Yarmouth, as the chairman of this particular railway.

25,089. Did you convey to Mr. Goodson's mind what you have told us to-day, that Yarmouth was a very venal place?—No, never. I never said anything to him about it, to the best of my belief.

25,090. Did you know, or had you heard, anything of Mr. Cooper, the printer?—I heard his name, but I do not know him even by sight.

25,091. You had heard of his name?—Oh, I have heard of his name. I do not know him by sight, and if you ask me at this moment whether he voted for the Whigs or Tories I could not tell you.

25,092. In what way have you heard of him?—By seeing his name in the papers.

25,093. You have not heard about him except till this inquiry commenced?—Not a bit. I have just looked at some of the evidence, but I have never read a whole column of it since you have been sitting.

25,094. Was he known to you at the time you stood for here?—No, he was not. I have no recollection of his countenance that I know of at all in any way.

25,095. Can you say, one way or the other, whether he was or not?—I have no recollection now, at any rate, of him. I do not even know where he lives. I have no recollection of his countenance, and I may naturally conclude I know nothing about him.

25,096. Did you know at that time that he was the person who had the spending of the money on your side?—Not a bit; not the least in the world.

25,097. You are aware money was spent illegally at the election?—I have not the least doubt in the world about it.

25,098. When was that knowledge first brought to your mind?—I think I used the words, "If my "opinion had been asked during the canvass, my "conviction was corruption was going on." I think you will remember I used these very words. I have no doubt of it, but as for my knowledge of corruption going on; I had none. I had no knowledge certainly of the corruption going on.

25,099. How came you to suspect?—It was merely an opinion.

25,100. From the demeanor of the voters?—I saw men here and there canvassing for the opposite party, and doubtless canvassing for our party. Not that I knew which was our party and which was the other party; but nevertheless I had my own suspicions upon it.

25,101. Was it from voters hanging back, and not giving a promise?—Perhaps one instance which occurs to me may exemplify the venal voters of Great Yarmouth. I remember going to one man, whom I was told was a voter, on the Quay. I do not know his name. I asked him to vote for me. He evidently held back, and gave an evasive answer. I then thought it was necessary to tell him exactly my political principles. I did that, and still he answered evasively; and, to bring the matter to a crisis, I told him, "Well, if you will only tell me your political "principles, I will tell you whether you can vote for "me or not;" and the man turned round at once, and said, "Principles! I have not got any principles." Then I walked away immediately, because I knew perfectly well that this man required bribing, but I saw nothing more of the man.

25,102. Do you recollect that gentleman's name?—Not a bit.

25,103. Did you canvass chiefly in the company of Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes, I believe so.

25,104. Can you say whether on that occasion Sir Edmund Lacon was with you?—No, I think not. My impression is that we perhaps canvassed different electors at the same time. I do not think that Sir Edmund Lacon was with me. I have not the least recollection of his being near me at the time. I daresay some others of the party might remember it. I have no recollection of Sir Edmund Lacon being near me at the time.

25,105. That was not the only case in which it was brought to your knowledge that men were wanting in principle, was it?—Well, I cannot say. I had no palpable case except that; but I saw very clearly that bribery must have been going on with that sort of man, and no doubt that it was practised.

25,106. Did you ever mention your suspicions to anybody at that time?—No, I do not think I ever mentioned them to anybody.

25,107. May I ask why you did not?—I did not feel it to be my duty the least in the world. My object was to be returned. I did not think it was necessary to attend to it, my own impression being at the time that three-fourths of the boroughs of the United Kingdom were perhaps equally venal with Great Yarmouth. I will not say quite equally venal; but, as a general rule, my impression has always been, and I am quite certain I am right in it; that three fourths of the boroughs of the United Kingdom are venal. I do not look upon this as a peculiar case at all.

25,108. You came here quite prepared for what you found?—Quite.

25,109. Then you are not of the same opinion as Sir Edmund Lacon, that there was no corruption practised on your side at the last election?—To tell you the truth, I have not read his evidence; but if he is of that opinion, I certainly am not of his opinion.

25,110. In fact you know very well to the contrary?—I fully believe to the contrary. My conviction is to the contrary. I know of no instance of it.

25,111. (Mr. Russell.) When you first had an interview with Sir Edmund Lacon, did he mention to you any probable sum?—No, certainly not. We never touched upon the subject of money the least in the world, with the exception of my saying, "I am perfectly ready to bear half the expenses."

25,112. I daresay you have heard that Mr. Nightingale stated that he had spent 1,000*l.* for Sir Edmund Lacon at that electon?—I read it.

25,113. And the probability is that at all events an equal amount was expended on your behalf by Mr. Reynolds?—Well, I do not know that at all, I could not. I did not know that he did. I knew nothing about it.

25,114. If you were to share the expenditure that would be the natural result?—I should not say that exactly. Mr. Reynolds, to begin with, was not my partner; he could not be as much interested in it as Mr. Nightingale and Sir Edmund Lacon; that is a mere matter of conjecture; all I know is, I know nothing of Mr. Reynolds having done anything of the kind.

25,115. That is a very fair remark of yours. Did you ever have any application, directly or indirectly, from Sir Edmund Lacon as to your repaying him half of that money ?—Never in the slightest degree.

25,116. I said from Sir Edmund Lacon ; I should have said or anybody else on his behalf, that would of course include Mr. Nightingale ?—Never a word.

25,117. I believe you were in the room while Mr. Watkin was examined ?—I was, but I did not hear all the examination, he spoke in so low a tone of voice.

25,118. I was going to ask you whether you agreed with him on two points ; he stated when he came down here in 1859 he was convinced that the Liberals had a majority on the register?—As far as the representation to me was concerned, it was just the other way.

25,119. I was going to ask you whether before you came down here you inquired what the state of the register was ?—I do not remember doing that, but I thought there was very fair data to go upon, which was Sir Edmund Lacon's interest, and also the council being represented by gentlemen of Conservative opinions generally.

25,120. Did you remember whether Sir Edmund Lacon represented to you that probably the two seats would be gained ?—Never at all ; I always thought he seemed doubtful about it.

25,121. Was there any understanding between you, that in the event of one seat only being retainable, who should retire ?—No ; but I am quite sure I should not have been the one selected.

25,122. The other point I want to ask you with reference to Mr. Watkin's evidence is the undue influence of the brewery ; did any discussion take place between you and Sir Edmund Lacon as to the brewery influence ?—Never ; to say the truth I was rather disappointed at his want of influence, for I remember more than one instance of voters asserting their own independence, that is, one of them saying " I " buy my beer of Sir Edmund Lacon, but I have no idea " of voting for him because I buy my beer of him."

25,123. Do you remember who that man was ?—No, I cannot say. My impression is it was some one on the Quay, I cannot say who.

25,124. Have you any accurate recollection of canvassing the publicans ?—Yes, I have. I cannot apply it to any individual, but I remember that answer from one man, and I remember one woman being rather violently independent on the point ; that is all I can remember.

25,125. Can you remember whether, when you found the publicans who drew their beer from Sir Edmund Lacon unwilling to pledge themselves to vote for you and him, any representation was made either by you or Sir Edmund Lacon, or anyone on your behalf, to induce them ?—Do you mean to bribe them ?

25,126. No, to put pressure upon them ?—No, I do not, indeed. I thought that he was very quiet on all occasions. I never heard a suggestion of pressure on any one occasion, or the stamp of pressure put on any one by him, nothing like it. This man and this woman very likely might have been in liquor, their great independence might have shown itself owing to liquor. I do not know that it was.

25,127. Now, you said that you were partly induced to come down here because of Sir Edmund Lacon's influence ?—I was not induced. I have no recollection of being induced in 1859 to come down. I think, if I am right in my memory, I volunteered it, that I offered myself.

25,128. You said it had some influence on your mind ?—Yes.

25,129. In fact, that you did not contemplate a contest ?—My idea has always been, that a man who is a banker and a brewer in a country town naturally ought to carry everything ; that is the general reasoning.

25,130. Do you consider that he ought to carry it without any undue pressure at all ?—If these people look upon themselves as his tenantry, he ought naturally to feel the weight of his influence.

25,131. Ought he, do you think, to make them feel the weight of his ?—If a man is disinclined to follow his landlord it is another point. I think that in nine cases out of ten men do look through the eyes of their landlord, and if they like the landlord they are only too glad to oblige him in any way. If there is an ill-will it is a different matter ; it is a very unpleasant thing to have a man under one having that ill-will. I have never asked a tenant of mine to vote for anyone ; they always willingly, whenever an occasion offers, vote as I do, and they are always anxious and willing, all of them, to support me.

25,132. You told us you had previously canvassed the borough with reference to county votes ?—Yes.

25,133. Can you remember if the men who voted for you for the county election voted for you for the borough ?—Yes, I believe so. I know in different instances several highly respectable men who have a vote for the county and the borough did.

25,134. As far as you remember they voted for you both for the county and the borough ?—I think so.

25,135. As you are fond of being in Parliament did you retire in consequence of the expense Yarmouth put you to ?—Well, no, that was not it ; to tell you the truth I had other views at the time. I do not know whether it is necessary to refer to them.

25,136. Certainly not ; that was not your motive ?—No.

25,137. Did you ever hear that there was a tariff of prices in Yarmouth, so much for a lord, so much for a baronet, and so much for an individual who was unfortunate enough to be neither ?—No, I never heard that.

ELIZABETH HURREN sworn ; examined by Mr. SLADE.

E. Hurren.

25,138. Are you the widow of George Hurren ?—Yes.

25,139. Did you, or did your husband, keep a public house at Gorleston ?—At Southtown.

25,140. What was the name of it ?—The " Ferry Boat " inn.

25,141. Did he keep it at the time of the last election ?—Yes. He has been dead six years the 6th of next month ; he kept it in 1859.

25,142. At the election of 1859 he kept the " Ferry Boat " inn ?—Yes.

25,143. Do you know a man named Greenhow ?—I do know him now, but it is since my husband's death ; he and his men have been doing some ships, and they used my house.

25,144. Did your husband know Greenhow ?—I do not know. I do not think he did. I did not know him at that time. I cannot say whether he did or did not.

25,145. Your husband's name has been mentioned as having received a bribe from Mr. Greenhow at the election of 1859 ?—Yes, I saw it in the papers last week, but it is a very false statement. I think it is a mistake. A man of the name of Robert Hurren came to mine yesterday, and he told me he had received a bribe of 5*l.* from Mr. Greenhow at that election.

25,146. You cannot say positively whether your husband received money or not ?—I might be almost sure that I could. My husband was a man that never kept anything from me, and I am sure if he had taken it he would have told me of it. I feel sure I can answer that as if he was here to answer for himself.

25,147. Where does Robert Hurren live ?—He lives pretty close to where I live.

25,148. When did he tell you he had received the 5*l.* ?—Yesterday. I was naming about what I saw in the papers as being a mistake ; that paper was sent to him, and he brought it me this morning ; it was through a mistake.

TWENTY-NINTH DAY.

J. Nelson.

9 Oct. 1866.

JOHN NELSON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

25,149. What are you?—A small farmer and cow-keeper.

25,150. Who did you vote for at the last election?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

25,151. Did you receive any money for your vote?—Certainly not.

25,152. Did you give any money to anybody else?—Certainly not.

25,153. Were you canvassed by Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—I met him promiscuously the first time they were canvassing, and Sir Edmund Lacon asked me for my vote and I promised him, and so did Mr. Goodson ask; that was the only time I was canvassed by any gentleman.

25,154. You were never canvassed by the opposite party?—No.

25,155. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

25,156. Who did you vote for then?—Sir Henry Stracey and Sir Edmund Lacon.

25,157. Did you receive any money on that occasion?—Certainly not.

25,158. Were you again canvassed by them?—I was canvassed by them only once on that occasion.

25,159. Did you promise them at once?—I did.

25,160. Do you remember if you were canvassed by Mr. Watkin and Mr. Young in 1859?—I think I was once; I think I distinctly told them my principles were for the Conservative party, and I should not give them my vote.

25,161. Did you take any part in 1859 in introducing other people to the party?—Not that I am aware of. I might ask people who they were going to vote for, and I might say I was going to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon; never in any other way.

25,162. You did not give anybody any money?—Certainly not; I never took a sixpence in my life.

25,163. I do not find you in the poll book at all in 1859, at the time Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey were returned?—I think you will if you look for it.

25,164. My belief is that you have been summoned by mistake; the only possible mark I can find about you is, one gentleman was asked to mark off on the register the voters in Gorleston who could not be bought, and you are one of those gentlemen who are marked off?—I was never bought in my life.

25,165. You are marked off as a gentleman who would not be bought, and I think you have been summoned here by mistake for your namesake?—I was surprised when I was summoned.

25,166. Do you know a man named George Nelson?—Yes.

25,167. Is he a Gorleston man?—Yes; at least he has been living in Gorleston the last 20 years.

25,168. Is he any relation of yours?—Yes, my brother.

25,169. Do you happen to know if he received any money?—I do not know at all. He was in a little farm at that time; he had a vote at the time; whether he received any money or not I cannot tell you.

C. Spachett.

CHRISTOPHER SPACHETT sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

25,170. What are you?—An innkeeper.

25,171. Living in Gorleston?—Yes.

25,172. Did you vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson at the last election?—Yes.

25,173. Did you get anything for your vote?—No.

25,174. Were you ever offered anything?—No.

25,175. Nobody ever did offer you anything?—No.

25,176. And the same in 1859?—The same.

25,177. Did the Conservative party come to your house and occupy your house?—They had a committee room there for a little time, and so did the Liberal party: they had two or three meetings, I believe.

25,178. Two or three meetings of each?—Two or three meetings of each.

25,179. There was no room set apart for the Conservative committee room?—No, no particular room; we have a room that they held their meetings in; the meeting was of a very short duration.

25,180. Do you know Mr. Rivett or Mr. Bunn?—I know Mr. Rivett perfectly well.

25,181. Was he ever there?—I do not remember seeing Mr. Rivett there. I think not.

25,182. Was Mr. Bunn ever there?—Yes, I have seen him there.

25,183. Did you ever see him in company with voters?—Yes.

25,184. Do you know that Mr. Bunn was acting under Mr. Rivett in the election?—No, I did not.

25,185. How did you vote in 1859?—I voted Liberal in 1859.

25,186. For Watkin and Young?—Yes.

25,187. What led to the change in your opinion?—Time.

25,188. Between the two elections you were convinced the Liberals were in the wrong and the Tories in the right?—I fancied so, and I changed.

25,189. Do you get your beer from Sir Edmund Lacon?—No.

25,190. Were your rooms paid for—the use of them?—Yes.

25,191. Who paid you?—I am sure I do not know who it was. I charged 18*s.*, which was paid me for the use of the room.

25,192. To each side?—No, only one side.

25,193. Which side did you charge it to?—The Conservative side.

25,194. Why did you not charge it to the Liberals?—They were not there two or three times, I think, and they never called to pay their expenses.

25,195. Did you ask for them?—No, I did not.

25,196. I do not understand why you made the difference?—I did not make any account out to them.

25,197. Why?—I had no particular reason why, but did not do so.

25,198. Had they any committee room there?—They held a meeting in the room, I think, on two or three occasions.

25,199. Then I suppose they had beer?—No; they never spent a penny piece in the house neither side.

25,200. Why did you not make a charge to them?—It was so trivial that it was not worth while.

25,201. There was no committee room in fact?—There was no appointed committee room, though they used the room for the purpose.

25,202. But there was on the Conservative side?—Yes; they each used the room on two or three occasions, not more.

W. B. Pye.

WILLIAM BLOOMFIELD PYE sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

25,203. What are you?—I am a fish merchant and butcher.

25,204. Did you vote at the last election?—No.

25,205. At the election of 1859 whom did you vote for then?—I do not know whether I voted in 1857 or 1859. I do not know who it was; perhaps you can refer to the poll book and tell me. I voted for the Tory party.

25,206. It would be Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey?—I would not say which it was, for it was on the Tory side.

25,207. Did you get anything for your vote then?—No.

25,208. Mr. Cooper says that in 1859 he gave you 15*l.*?—I never had a penny from Mr. Cooper, nor yet any other man. I was tempted several times.

25,209. Who tempted you?—Those on the Tory side, one of them was I am sure, I could not say which it was. I could not swear.

25,210. On the Tory side ?—I think it was on the Tory side, I could not say ; they knew I never took any money, and never did.

25,211. Will you tell us whom it was who tempted you ?—I could not ; it is no use my swearing to a thing I do not know, because I always voted Tory, all the way through.

25,212. You never took any money at all ?—I never remember taking a penny, or even such a thing as a glass of grog.

25,213. How long have you had a vote ?—I could not say.

25,214. A long time ?—I cannot say.

25,215. How came you to be off the register at this last election ?—I removed to a smaller house. I went to Southtown, that is how I reckon I got cut off it, no other reason than that.

25,216. When you were in Yarmouth did you vote at the municipal elections ?—I voted for several of them.

25,217. Did you ever get paid then ?—Never.

25,218. You were never paid anything at all ?—I never took a penny.

25,219. At any time ?—Never. I can prove by those who offered me money I never took it, that is all.

25,220. Who has offered you money ?—Mr. Stagg offered me money ; he offered me 15*l.* for a municipal election, and I would not take it.

25,221. Which side did he offer it you for ?—I do not know which side, it was James and Chapman.

25,222. Have you always voted with the Tories ?—Except once, that was McCullagh and Watkin through turning them out, I do not know what it was about ; it might be McCullagh and Young when they were turned out, and I said I would vote for them on account of the unfair way of turning the men out.

25,223. That was in 1857 you voted for Mr. McCullagh ?—I could not tell you the year. I could not say ; after they had been turned out, I think I voted for one or two of them. I swear I never had a penny in my life for my vote.

25,224. After they were turned out by the House of Commons ?—That is what I mean.

25,225. The next time was in 1859 when you voted for Sir Edmund Lacon ?—I voted for them once, and that is all.

25,226. You seem to have a very bad memory ?—I have a very good memory, as far as that goes.

25,227. Are you prepared, in the presence of Mr. Cooper, to say you never received any money at municipal elections ?—Yes, I will say before Mr. Cooper or anybody else that I have never taken a penny nor yet a halfpenny.

25,228. Mr. Cooper says you have ?—I defy Mr. Cooper to bring his witnesses.

25,229. Mr. Cooper is the witness himself ?—I swear before Mr. Cooper or any other man that I never took a penny. I am speaking the truth, and he cannot deny the truth, he knows that to be the truth.

25,230. You say the only time you voted for the Liberal candidates was at the time you thought they were unfairly dealt with by the House of Commons ?—Well, I think so. I will not be sure. I fancy it was the same parties. I would not go to be on my oath unless I was quite certain.

25,231. You have given us a reason why you voted against your ordinary principles ; it is either true or it is not. You suggested it yourself. Is it true that you voted for the Liberal candidates because you thought they were unfairly turned out ?—I think so.

25,232. Now the time the Liberal candidates were turned out was in 1857, and the only opportunity you had of giving them a vote was in 1859, and then you said you voted for the Tories ?—I will not swear who I voted for, but I will swear I never had a penny ; that is all I will swear ; nor yet at municipal elections, though I have been tempted.

JOHN COOPER recalled ; examined by MR. FITZGERALD.

J. Cooper.

25,233. Do you know this witness, William Bloomfield Pye ?—I have known him from a child.

25,234. Have you considered him a member of your party, or not, in this borough ?—I have always looked upon him as a man that would not vote without money.

25,235. You have already stated, and will you confirm it to-day, that you offered him money in 1859 ?—I not only offered him money, but he took 15*l.* in Howard Street.

25,236. Did you ever give him money in municipal elections ?—Upon two or three occasions.

25,237. And has he always voted for your party ?—He voted for our party in preference to the others if we gave him money.

25,238. Are you aware on one occasion he voted for the Liberal party ?—I was not aware of it. If he did, I have no doubt he was paid for it.

25,239. You are not aware of the fact ?—I am not aware of the fact, but I have no doubt that was why he voted that way.

25,240. You are not aware of the fact that he did vote on the other side ?—No, I was not aware of it till he mentioned it.

WILLIAM BLOOMFIELD PYE recalled ; examined by MR. SLADE.

W. B. Pye.

25,241. You have heard Mr. Cooper's statement ?—Yes. I had been out of my shop many years previous to that time. I can prove it by the gentleman living in my shop. I can prove it by the man who bought the shop of me, that in 1859 I had nothing to do with the shop. It will not take me five minutes to bring the man round to prove it. I can go and bring the man who bought the shop after I left, over two years before the election in 1859, who bought the premises from me ; and I was not living in Howard Street in 1859.

25,242. You voted in 1859 ?—No, nor yet even voted in 1857, because I had been out years before ; I sold my premises long before, and I could not vote.

25,243. Where was your shop in 1859 ?—I had no shop. I was out of business in the shop way.

25,244. You had a vote in 1859 ?—I will not say whether it was 1857 or 1859.

25,245. (Mr. Russell.) You had a vote, and you voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey, and you are in the poll book as of Howard Street ?—I never lived there, not after a certain period, and that was years before that.

25,246. (Mr. Slade.) How many years before 1859 had you sold your shop ?—I do not know ; it must have been a long time.

25,247. You say two years ?—It must have been two years.

25,248. Here is the register in which you are put down in the year 1858, which is for the election of 1859, as having a house and shop in Howard Street ?—Yes.

25,249. And you could not be upon the register if it was not so ?—The conveyance will prove it.

25,250. No, it will not ; you may have been in possession, though you sold it ?—No, the man was in possession before I came out of it ; I can prove that.

25,251. If you can prove that we shall be very happy to hear it ?—I can bring him up at any time to prove it.

25,252. (Mr. Russell.) Who is it living there now ?—James or John William Girling, I do not know which.

25,253. (Mr. Slade.) If you will bring us that evidence we will hear it ?—When shall I bring it up ?

25,254. Directly, if you can.—If he is in the way I will, but he may be in the country.

25,255. Then bring him up to-morrow ?—I will do so, if he is at home.

TWENTY-NINTH DAY.

9 Oct. 1866.

J. Roberts.

JAMES ROBERTS sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

25,256. What are you?—A wheelwright.

25,257. Had you a vote at the last election?—I have never had one.

25,258. Do you remember the election of 1859?—Yes.

25,259. Do you know a man named Greenhow?—Yes.

25,260. Did he ever give you any money to give to a voter?—Yes.

25,261. What was it?—10*l.*, to a man of the name of Marjoram.

25,262. Daniel Marjoram?—Yes.

25,263. Did you give it to Marjoram?—Yes.

25,264. Did you have any other money to give away at that election?—Yes, 5*l.*, to a man not to vote, of the name of Rivett.

25,265. What did you give it to Rivett for?—Not to vote, by order of Mr. Greenhow.

25,270. He says, "I took 5*s.*, and I went and spent it." Then I said, "Who gave you the 5*s.*?" and he said, "I took it out of my own pocket."—I gave him a 5*l.* note in his own house, before his wife.

25,403. Were you offered any money by the other party ?—Yes.

25,405. By whom ?—I do not know who the man was. He came in the evening ; a dark man. I do not know who he was.

25,406. Did you accept that ?—No.

25,416. Is his name Samuel ?—No.

25,417. What is his christian name ?—Edward.

25,418. He is down for Row, No. 52 ?—I think Samuel Leggett took the license out. I do not know whether his name is there.

25,419. Did your father tell you whom he got the money from ?—No.

25,420. Did you understand from him that he got money for himself ?—No.

25,438. Did you know Mr. Rivett ?—Yes, well.

25,439. Did he not give you some money ?—No.

25,440. Are you prepared to swear that ?—Yes.

25,441. Neither at the last election, nor in 1859, did he give you any money ?—No, not a farthing. I never received a farthing from Mr. Rivett in my life.

25,442. Either directly or indirectly ?—No.

25,443. (Mr. Slade.) Have you ever given any money to anybody at any election ?—No, never took any part in any election at all.

W. Matson.

WILLIAM MATSON sworn ; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

25,444. What are you ?—A marine store dealer and boat owner.

25,445. Did you vote for Lacon and Goodson at the last election ?—Yes.

25,446. What did you get for your vote ?—Nothing as I know of. Mr. Rivett asked me about a fortnight before the election if I would give him my promise to vote. Accordingly I did. He never said anything to me about money nor anything of the kind, and I never saw him. I voted for Lacon and Goodson, and either before the morning or on the election morning, I cannot say which, Mr. Rivett called at my house and gave my wife 10*l.*, and I did not know anything about it.

25,447. When did your wife tell you she had got 10*l.* ?—He called in there and told her he made her a present of it.

25,448. When did she tell you of it ?—She told me of it there and then. I was surprised, and said she would get me into Newgate.

25,449. You did not tell her to return the money ?—Mr. Rivett was dead, and I could not return it back.

25,450. What did you get in 1859 ?—The same sum, in a similar way.

S. Newman.

SAMUEL NEWMAN sworn ; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

25,451. Have you been examined before ?—I was ordered here on the 5th of September. I attended. I was here the day and was not called, and I came on the Thursday ; and Newman, the younger one, has been here.

25,452. Has your son been examined here ?—Yes.

25,453. What are you ?—A butcher.

25,454. Did you vote for Sir Edmund Lacon at the last election ?—I did.

25,455. Had you anything for your vote ?—Yes.

25,456. How much did you have?—I had 15*l.* discounted from a bill which I owed Mr. Bunn. I did not receive any money. I had it not.

25,457. Whom did you vote for at the election of 1859?—Lacon and Stracey I think.

25,458. Did you get anything for your vote then?—Yes.

25,459. How much?—The same amount.

25,460. From Mr. Bunn?—No.

25,461. Who from?—I think the man's name was Fisk. I did not get any money, but it was left for me. I was not at home the night before the election, and the money was left for me.

25,462. By Mr. Fisk?—Yes. He was in Gorleston at that time, but I do not know where he is now. I have not seen him, and I did not see him then.

ROBERT BANHAMS recalled; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

R. Banham.

25,463. What are you?—A baker.

25,464. What did you get for your vote at the last election?—Not anything.

25,465. Did Mr. Bunn see you?—No, I never saw Mr. Bunn, and Mr. Bunn never saw me.

25,466. You are quite sure of that, are you?—I am quite sure of it.

25,467. Nor Mr. Rivett?—Nor Mr. Rivett; only they told me to be early at the poll the morning of the election.

25,468. Who told you that?—Mr. Rivett; and I said I knew what time to give my vote, because I always gave it at the time it suits me best.

25,469. Mr. Rivett knew you were going to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes, he knew I was going to vote for Sir Edmund. I always gave my vote to Sir Edmund Lacon, or the Tory party.

25,470. You always do?—I always do. Ever since I had the power to give a vote I never varied.

25,471. Are you a Conservative on principle?—Yes.

25,472. Or is it your interest?—Principle; and always has been so since I had the power to give a vote.

25,473. Did you vote for them in 1859?—Yes.

25,474. Did you receive anything for your vote then?—No.

25,475. Why did Mr. Rivett come to you?—He merely called on me the same as he did on others, in the way he always did.

25,476. You knew Mr. Rivett always called for a particular purpose?—No, not any particular purpose.

25,477. You say he called on you in the same way as he called on others. We know how he called on others?—In respect of soliciting the vote he said, "Be at the poll early." Mr. Rivett was a customer of mine since I set up in business, and gratitude made me acknowledge my vote.

25,478. Did Mr. Rivett owe you anything at the time of the election?—Not anything.

25,479. Did you owe him anything?—No.

25,480. Had he offered it you before the election?—No, only called on me the election morning.

25,481. Did he give anything to you for your vote?—No, not anything.

25,482. Are you sure of that?—I never received a farthing in my life, not a penny, and no one can say to the contrary. I have been enabled to give a vote the last 26 years, and I have always voted for the Tory party.

25,483. Have you been examined before?—Yes.

25,484. Then, I suppose, if anybody has said you did receive something it is not true?—I will defy him to speak the truth.

25,485. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know John Hart?—Yes; he is unwell.

25,486. How long will it be before he gets up?—It may be this week. There was word sent to me to say he could not attend on account of his being taken bad suddenly. Whether he will be able to attend to-morrow or the next day, I cannot say.

GEORGE HUMPHREY recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

G. Humphrey.

25,487. Do you know a man by the name of William Grief?—Yes.

25,488. Did he offer you any money at the last election?—He did. You would call it an offer. A man met me in the New Street and asked me what I was going to do at this election. I said I should not alter at all. He said, "You can have 20*l.*," or something to that effect. "I will give you 20*l.*," or "I will get you 20*l.*" I said, "I thank you all the same. If you got me 40*l.* I should not take it."

25,489. In your last examination you stated that to us?—I said he offered me the 20*l.*, but when I came to see it stated in the "Independent" that I received 20*l.* from Mr. Grief, of course a man is justified in denying that, because I never received it from Mr. Grief or anybody else.

25,490. Mr. Grief has come and sworn he has never offered you a shilling?—I see he has come here, but, as I said before, I felt aggrieved. I am not going to put up with the perjury to say that a man did not offer me that when he did. I said that before when I was here.

25,491. Was it to vote for Lacon and Goodson?—Oh yes; and, if you recollect, you asked me the question whether he offered me that before I received it from the other side. I did not know there was anything going the other side when he offered that. You would call it an offer if a man meets you in the street and says, "You can have 20*l.* if you like to vote the other side." I take it as an offer.

25,492. Did you understand he would get you 20*l.* if you voted for Lacon and Goodson?—Yes. I wanted to clear myself of that, and seeing it in the paper I thought the only thing I could do was to come before you.

25,493. Do you recollect who the stranger was that gave you the 10*l.* in 1859?—I do not recollect; in fact I have not given anything of that kind a thought, not in 1859. I do not know who it can be, and I cannot recollect who it was at present. I think it was Clements.

WILLIAM COLLETT REYNOLDS recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

W. C. Reynolds.

25,494. Can you give us any information about the election of 1859?—Yes, I have no doubt I can.

25,495. We have heard that Sir Henry Stracey had given orders to his banker that he should honour your draft; did you draw upon Sir Henry Stracey's banker?—Certainly not.

25,496. You sent in a bill to Sir Henry Stracey after the election?—No, I did not; I sent in no bill to Sir Henry Stracey. He said in his evidence the only account he ever had from me was an account of money expended some time after the election, during the time he was member, in charities.

25,497. About subscriptions?—Yes, that was all. A merely small account of money paid for him, and he sent a cheque for it.

25,498. How much was it?—Between 60*l.* and 70*l.*

25,499. Did you obtain any money from Sir Henry Stracey's bankers?—I did not obtain any, but I knew money was obtained from his bankers, and I can give information about it; but Sir Henry Stracey said this morning that I had a carte blanche to draw on his bankers; that is the first I heard of it.

25,500. How was the money obtained?—I will tell you how it occurred. Sir Henry Stracey was incorrect in saying that I was his agent at that election. I acted as the private solicitor of Sir Henry Stracey at his request, and it was intimated previous to the election, that if any money was required it was to be applied for to Sir Henry Stracey's bankers at Norwich.

25,501. Who intimated that to you ?—I am not able to fix my memory, and I have been trying since, but I think it was Mr. Green.

25,502. Did Mr. Green draw upon Sir Henry Stracey's account at his bankers ?—No, certainly not.

25,503. How was the money obtained ?—I think, from what I can recollect of it, that a note was sent by some one, not by me, to Messrs. Harvey and Hudson's bank for what money was required. I was not aware my name was used for it.

25,504. What was the meaning of all this secrecy ? —What secrecy ?

25,505. The roundabout way of getting the money ? —Mr. Green intimated it was money for illegal purposes.

25,506. Was money drawn out from Messrs. Harvey and Hudson's bank ?—On two or three occasions.

25,507. How were you aware of that ?—I was aware of the money coming to Yarmouth, and that it came from Messrs. Harvey and Hudson's bank.

25,508. To whom was it consigned ?—It was brought to the committee rooms I should say. After Mr. Green told me that money was coming from Harvey and Hudson's, being in Norwich I called at the bank, and I think I saw Mr. Hill, and asked whether it was correct or not, and he said it was so.

25,509. Asked who ?—Mr. Hill, the manager there.

25,510. Did Mr. Hill give you to understand he had had instructions from Sir Henry Stracey to honour any drafts upon Yarmouth ?—No, he did not mention Sir Henry Stracey's name in that way at all.

25,511. What did you learn from Mr. Hill about it ?—I learnt from Mr. Hill whatever money was required was to be sent for in a particular way. I do not recollect whether it was by any name to be given, by any man calling, or a note to be sent. I did not know any money was sent for and obtained from Messrs. Harvey and Hudson's bank.

25,512. Mr. Hill had received instructions from Sir Henry Stracey ?—From some one, I do not know who from at all; he had received instructions evidently.

25,513. Since you have heard Sir Henry Stracey's evidence to-day, you have no doubt Sir Henry Stracey gave instructions himself ?—I will not say that at all; I did not understand Sir Henry Stracey to say so, and I had no conversation with him on the subject at all. If he said so it was so.

25,514. Sir Henry Stracey said you had a carte blanche to draw on the bank ?—So I heard to-day for the first time.

25,515. Do you know whether your name was given to Mr. Hill or not ?—I do not think it was.

25,516. Can you say whether it was or not ?—No, I cannot; because I do not recollect the circumstance distinctly, the whole minutiæ of it.

25,517. Is it not most probable you are the person whose name was to be given in ?—I think if I had been I should have signed a cheque or order, and I am confident I never did.

25,518. Are you confident you never gave any order for money at the bank at Norwich ?—I am confident I never gave any order for money at the bank. I called to know whether money would be sent in that way; and I called, and they said it would be. But how it was to be drawn, on what authority I do not recollect.

215,519. When you went to the bank at Norwich, did you bring back any money with you ?—No. I should have called at the bank probably a fortnight before the election, when I first heard of it.

25,520. Did you take any money at that time ?—No.

25,521. Did you ever take any money afterwards ? —I think the Saturday before the election I saw Mr. Hill close by the bank, and he said "I have got a parcel for you to take to Yarmouth."

25,522. What was the parcel ?—I said, "What is it ?" He said "We have received a note, and this is a parcel for Yarmouth, connected with the election." That I brought to Yarmouth and handed to Mr. Green.

25,523. Have you ever heard since what that parcel contained ?—It contained 1,000*l.*; I knew that at the time. After I had given it to Mr. Green I had the curiosity to ask him, because, acting for Sir Henry Stracey, I felt it was my duty to ask Mr. Green whether he had obtained a similar amount on behalf of the other candidate.

25,524. And what answer did you get ?—He said, "Certainly." I knew it was my principal duty to act on behalf of Sir Henry Stracey, if I may use the expression, to see fair play between one candidate and the other.

25,525. Did Mr. Green tell you from whom he received the 1,000*l.* on the other side ?—No, I did not ask him.

25,526. Did you ever receive any more money from the bank ?—No, I received no more; but I think there were one or two more parcels come, but I did not receive them; they came from Norwich.

25,527. How do you know that ?—Because I saw them delivered to Mr. Green, and I made the same inquiry of Mr. Green, whether he had received similar amounts on behalf of Sir Edmund Lacon.

25,528. Do you mean parcels containing 1,000*l.* each ?—I do not know the amount of the other two, but I think the total amount brought on behalf of Sir Henry Stracey was, if I may say so, 1,500*l.* But the bankers can tell you, I do not know of my own knowledge. I knew it all at the time, but it is eight or nine years ago, and I did not particularly care to recollect much about it.

25,529. I understand it was 1,000*l.* in the first, and the other two 250*l.* each ?—That I cannot say, but I think the whole amount was 500*l.* in the other two. It might have been more or it might have been less.

25,530. And Mr. Green received a similar sum, whatever it was, from the other candidate ?—So he informed me. In fact, I pressed him particularly about it, because I felt it my duty to see to it. I do not think he would deceive me about it.

25,531. You sent in an account to Sir Henry Stracey after the election, did you not ?—No, no account at all.

25,532. How were you paid for your services ? —I was not paid for my services until after the petition. I then assisted Mr. Cory in defending the seats, and was paid altogether in one lump, 50*l.* for my services. I did not send in any bill for the matter.

25,533. I meant to say that eventually your account was sent in after the petition ?—I mentioned it to Mr. Cory when he was settling up the accounts, and he said, "Well, you ought to be paid, of course, for what you have done." He asked me if 50*l.* was a reasonable sum, and I took it.

25,534. Mr. Cory was acting for Sir Edmund Lacon ?—He was acting for both in defending the seats. I merely assisted him in defending the seats. I acted more as clerk, in fact, to Mr. Cory at that time.

25,535. Do you know what the amount of the bill sent in to Sir Henry Stracey by Mr. Cory was ?—I saw it at the time, but I do not recollect it at all. I think Sir Henry Stracey sent it on to me before he paid it, and asked me whether I thought it was correct, and I returned it to him. It would have been probably shortly after the petition.

25,536. Your fee of 50 guineas or 50*l.* was paid by Sir Henry Stracey, I imagine ?—It was paid by Sir Henry Stracey, and charged to him in his account with Mr. Cory, no doubt.

25,537. Quite independent of Sir Edmund Lacon's account ?—I should say so; I had no claim on Sir Edmund Lacon for anything, unless he might consider my services on the petition were worth anything.

25,538. When Mr. Cory said you were entitled to 50l., it was understood you were to be paid by Sir Henry Stracey?—I took it in this way, that generally for what I did at the election, and my services in assisting him in defending the seats; it was a general charge. It did not occur to me whether it was to be charged exclusively to Sir Henry Stracey, or part to Sir Edmund Lacon and part to Sir Henry Stracey.

25,539. Do you remember whether it was charged to Sir Henry Stracey?—No, I do not recollect. My impression is, that it did not appear to be charged to Sir Henry Stracey, because I have some recollection of having a letter from Sir Henry Stracey a year after, in which he said, "I have settled all election accounts, but I have not paid you." I think I had a letter to that effect, and I told him I had been paid through Mr. Cory.

25,540. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Have you got that letter?—No, I have no letter relating to the election.

25,541. Have you no correspondence with Sir Henry Stracey?—No, I have no correspondence with him on the subject of the election. I had a correspondence respecting charities, and so on.

25,542. Have you no letter referring to the accounts?—I have no letter referring to the accounts except that one, certainly.

25,543. (Mr. Slade.) Can you give us any idea what the bill was Mr. Cory sent in; what sum it amounted to?—No. I should really not like to say. I have no recollection on the subject. I know the Parliamentary agent's account included the expenses of witnesses and all charges connected with the petition; but I looked through it, and it appeared to me to be a correct account.

25,544. It did not include the expenses of the county election?—No; nothing at all to do with it. The county election was altogether separate, nothing to do with Yarmouth at all.

25,545. Sir Henry said the county election and the expenses of the petition, and the Yarmouth expenses, were all settled at the same time?—With his bankers; I take it he had given cheques for the different accounts at the different times, and from what he said there was a deficiency in the banking account, and it was wiped off by one lumping sum being paid in. The county was some years before, and the expenses for the county would have been heavier I should think.

25,546. Mr. Cory of course will have this bill?—I cannot tell whether he has or not. I have never asked him for it.

25,547. Your fee was not charged in this bill I understand, because Sir Henry Stracey wrote to you afterwards to say he had not paid you?—It did not appear by itself. Whether it was put with the sundry expenses for witnesses, in the items of a lump charge, I do not know. It might be put in with sundry expenses, services rendered, or so on.

25,548. You cannot say whether it would or not?—I cannot say whether it would or not. It did not appear in detail, or Sir Henry Stracey would not have made that remark in writing to me. You asked me a question whether Green said anything as to where Sir Edmund Lacon's money came from. I should like to correct that; the only reference he made at all as to where the money came from was one day in conversation; I understood him to allude to the Dowager Lady Lacon.

25,549. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Who was that?—Mr. Green. And it produced an impression on my mind that the money might have come from the Dowager Lady Lacon.

25,550. (Mr. Slade.) Did he ever mention Mr. Nightingale's name?—No. It was never mentioned at all.

25,551. Is the Dowager Lady Lacon alive?—She is dead. She has been dead some three or four years.

25,552. I presume that all the money that Mr. Green received would have been spent in illegal payments?—Yes, I believe so.

25,553. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) I do not understand the position you hold with reference to Sir Henry Stracey. Sir Henry Stracey has thrown the whole responsibility on you, and you are inclined to throw it off. When were you first employed by Sir Henry Stracey?—On his first coming to Yarmouth he asked me to act as his private solicitor.

25,554. You were not acquainted with him before?—I have known him for years.

25,555. Have you ever done business for him before?—I acted in some way in the county election, but not directly for him.

25,556. Did you act for him in private business?—No. He had a private solicitor in Norwich.

25,557. Have you acted for him since as private solicitor?—I have acted for Sir Henry Stracey in some respects as his private solicitor in election matters.

25,558. Sir Henry Stracey told us that this election account and the petition account was settled together with other private affairs he had with the bank?—Yes.

25,559. Are you cognisant of anything of the sort?—I did not know it until he gave his evidence whether it was settled or unsettled, or anything about it.

25,560. When he acknowledged you as his private solicitor it was for nothing but to see fair play?—I should say, I think, when Sir Henry Stracey first spoke to me, he was under the impression I should act as his legal agent, but it was thought advisable to have only one legal agent, and I have no doubt he thought so.

25,561. He told us you acted as his private solicitor?—Just so.

25,562. That was simply to see justice was done between him and his brother candidate?—Yes. And advise him from time to time whether he had a chance. To look to the canvass and advise him as a private solicitor would.

25,563. He gave us to understand his bankers had authority to advance money on your responsibility?—Quite so.

25,564. That you say was not the case?—That was not the case certainly. I did not understand it so, and I never signed any order on the bankers.

25,565. You never drew a cheque or signed any order on the bankers at all?—Certainly not. All I did was, I called at Harvey and Hudson's bank to know whether money would be forthcoming for the Yarmouth election, and they informed me it would. I have no doubt they explained to me at the time how it was to be sent for, but I do not recollect the machinery.

25,566. Who paid the election auditor?—My impression is that Sir Henry Stracey sent his own cheque direct to Mr. Charles Preston. He will tell you that. I do not think it came through me at all. I have no recollection of its coming through me.

25,567. Having been appointed private solicitor, had you no control over the expenditure?—Yes. Mr. Charles Preston asked me to give him money on account of Sir Henry Stracey, and I think my impression is I said, "You had better write to Sir Henry Stracey himself." But he will tell you how that was. I had this control, that Mr. Charles Preston consulted me as to the control of clerks and the general expenditure in the room. We acted together, and anything going on he asked my advice about.

25,568. You knew nothing about it, except that you ascertained from Mr. Green that he had obtained a certain sum from the bank?—I knew it came, because I brought one myself, and I knew the other came, because I saw it brought to Mr. Green.

25,569. How did you get the money from the bank?—I saw Mr. Hill the manager of the bank, and he said he had a parcel for Yarmouth if I would call, or I am not sure whether he sent it to the station. It was a small brown paper parcel.

25,570. (Mr. Russell.) How came you to go to Harvey and Hudson's bank in the first instance?—I had been informed by Mr. Green that the money was to come from Harvey and Hudson's, whatever was required for Sir Henry Stracey, and I wished to confirm myself as to that.

TWENTY-NINTH DAY.

W. C. Reynolds.

9 Oct. 1866.

25,571. Do you know from whom Mr. Green obtained that information?—I do not.

25,572. You have told us Mr. Hill said the money was to be sent in a particular way?—It was to be sent on a particular name being given, or something of that sort.

25,573. Can you remember what that particular name was?—I do not; or what order was given. All I know is I did not give any order.

25,574. Mr. Hill gave you information as to the manner in which money could be obtained?—I did not go for that purpose to get the information. I went to satisfy myself whether it was coming, whether Mr. Green's account was correct or not.

25,575. Had Mr. Green told you how much was to be lodged in Harvey and Hudson's bank?—No. He did not tell me that, and I did not ask him.

25,576. What do you estimate as the total illegal expenditure of Sir Henry Stracey in 1859?—I do not think it was 1,500*l.* As I say, there might be a hundred or two more or a hundred or two less than that sent.

25,577. Taking it at the minimum of 1,500*l.*, Sir Henry Stracey has told us he entered into an engagement with Sir Edmund Lacon to share his expenses?—Quite so.

25,578. So if the 1,000*l.* advanced by Mr. Nightingale was all Sir Edmund Lacon spent at that election, they did not share the expenses equally?—Mr. Green positively assured me whatever he obtained on the part of Sir Henry Stracey he obtained at the same time a similar amount on behalf of Sir Edmund Lacon, and I have no doubt it was so.

25,579. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Was the Dowager Lady Lacon in such a position as to be able to advance it?—Yes.

25,580. You knew that?—I do not know it of my own knowledge, but she was reputed to be a lady of very great wealth, and no doubt she was.

25,581. Do you know where she banked?—Not the least. I have no knowledge of her private affairs at all.

25,582. Who was her solicitor, do you know?—No, I do not know who her solicitor was. I think she had a London solicitor.

25,583. (Mr. Russell.) Sir Henry Stracey told us he did not settle his account, I think he said, until 18 months afterwards?—Yes.

25,584. I suppose the money did not continue due here all the time?—The money came at the time of the election.

25,585. The whole of it?—Yes.

25,586. There was no money due in Yarmouth?—Except what was due to Mr. Cory for the petition account.

25,587. That is what I want to know; beyond the money you know was spent, did Sir Henry Stracey owe any money?—Not that I am aware of. I never heard of any.

25,588. Then you are not aware why Sir Henry Stracey deferred the settling of the account to such a late period?—Not at all. It was for private reasons of his own I think. The petition you see would be some time after the election, and it would take some time to settle the account after the petition.

25,589. Did Mr. Hill mention to you what sum you would be authorized to draw from the bank?—I have no recollection of his mentioning any particular sum at all.

25,590. Is Mr. Hill still the manager of Messrs. Harvey and Hudson's bank?—I believe so.

25,591. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you know his christian name?—He is very well known at Norwich. I should like to contradict a statement Barber made, that he told you when I canvassed him I said I would send Buston to him. I read the report in the paper that he said so. I wish to contradict that.

25,592. (Mr. Slade.) He said, "Mr. Reynolds said he would send Buston to me?"—I never said anything of the kind, certainly not.

25,593. Do you remember speaking to Barber at all?—I have no doubt I canvassed him with the candidates. Beyond that I did not go to him. I do not think I went to any voters without the candidates.

25,594. (Mr. Russell.) I must ask if you yourself disbursed any money in 1859?—Certainly not. And I never gave a voter any money in my life. And I should like to take this opportunity of contradicting that evidence before the House of Commons in 1859 by Fayerman, that I gave him a 5*l.* note. There is not a word of truth in it. It is equally untrue, as Mr. Livingston knows, and nobody knows it better than Mr. Livingston. As I am informed it has come to Mr. Livingston's knowledge since the prosecution for perjury, the source from which Fayerman obtained these notes. It has come to Mr. Livingston's knowledge.

25,595. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Were you acting for Sir Edmund Lacon in that prosecution?—No, not at all.

25,596. Were you a witness?—I was there ready to attend but was not called. I was in the court the whole time and was anxious to be called. And there was also a count in the indictment as to my case as well.

25,597. How was it the prosecution failed?—I think it was on some ground that they could not produce the two witnesses to every stage. My own recollection is that Sir Edmund Lacon was unable to produce two witnesses to prove he was in the Victoria Hotel at the time Fayerman alleged he met him and gave him the 5*l.* notes. There was only one witness to that. I think that was the link that was wanted.

25,598. Fayerman had said that Sir Edmund gave him a bribe at his own house?—No; on the road.

25,599. And Sir Edmund Lacon called one witness to prove his being in the Victoria Hotel at the time?—It appears Sir Edmund came into the Hotel, took his candle and went straight upstairs, and he only saw one person at that time.

25,600. Sir Edmund Lacon was called as a witness himself?—He was.

25,601. And he called this witness to prove that?—Yes.

25,602. That is two witnesses?—Not two corroborating witnesses.

25,603. That is not necessary, as I am aware of?—The corroborative witness did not give his evidence satisfactorily perhaps.

25,604. The case went to the jury?—Yes, the case went to the jury.

25,605. It was not then on a legal technicality that the prosecution failed?—I think it was. My recollection was that it was so at the time.

25,606. It could not be, or the judge would have withdrawn the case from the jury?—Just so.

Adjourned until to-morrow at half-past 10 o'clock.

THIRTIETH DAY.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 10th October 1866.

WILLIAM BLYTH recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

25,607. Do you know William Bloomfield Pye?—Yes.

25,608. Did you go up with him to the poll on the day of the election last time?—Yes; he polled the same time I did; not the last time, 1859 I mean.

25,609. Did you have any conversation with him?—Yes. He told me he got some money from a Mr. Cooper.

25,610. Did he say how much?—I cannot exactly remember, it was so long ago; I have an impression on my mind it was 15*l.* I know Mr. Cooper told me he gave it to him, because Mr. Cooper told me to look out after Mr. Pye, and poll him if I could when I polled myself.

25,611. William Pye has denied receiving any money of Mr. Cooper. You say that is not true?—He told a story then.

25,612. He told a story either to you or to us?—Yes. He told a story somewhere. I believed he had the money, because Mr. Cooper asked me to look out and poll Pye, because he had secured him; and when I met him I said, "Billy, are you going to vote?" He said, "Yes," and I took him to have a glass of something, and he went and polled with me.

25,613. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) That was in 1859?—Yes.

25,614. You recollect it distinctly?—Yes.

25,615. Did Mr. Cooper come to you and ask you about it?—I saw Mr. Cooper last night.

25,616. Who spoke about it first?—I remembered it immediately Mr. Cooper told me, and I said, "It is a lie." Because I remember the circumstances well, because I recollect seeing Mr. Cooper tinning him at the municipal election.

25,617. (Mr. Slade.) Have you seen Mr. Cooper give him money at the municipal election?—I have seen Mr. Cooper give him money at the municipal election. I saw it at the time, and there was some one by at the time, but I cannot recollect who it was. I saw Mr. Cooper do it. I do not know whether Mr. Cooper gave that in evidence.

25,618. How long ago was that?—I should think that must be in 1856, 1857, or 1858; I cannot remember the date. It was one municipal election, when he lived in Howard Street and had a butcher's shop.

25,619. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you recollect where Pye lived in 1859?—If my memory serves me right, I think he moved from the butcher's shop in Howard Street into James Street, and kept a public-house called the "Windsor Tavern."

25,620. Was he in the public-house at the time of the register?—I think he was. I should think he moved out of that shop somewhere about the latter part of 1858, in that street? It might be 1859, but I cannot say directly.

25,621. (Mr. Slade.) Had you anything to do with money in 1859?—No, I do not remember giving any money. I do not think I had any money from anyone. I never had a farthing myself in my life, until this last affair. I do not remember that I had any.

25,622. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) But you knew Mr. Cooper was giving money then?—Yes, of course; Mr. Cooper told me so.

25,623. You were sent and asked by Mr. Cooper to watch this voter and take him to the poll?—Yes, that is right. That was the nomination night he told me to take him to the poll with me, as he had secured him.

25,624. Were you employed as one of the messengers?—No. The only thing I received was for repairing some windows in the committee room, and my bill was charged in the ordinary expenses.

25,625. The committee room was at your house?—No, it was where the new savings bank is, and I sent in my bill and it was paid, I think, by this gentleman here, Mr. Aldred, who was the auditor.

JOHN SHARMAN sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

J. Sharman.

25,626. What are you?—A confectioner.

25,627. Where do you live?—In King Street.

25,628. Who did you vote for at the last election?—I did not vote at the last election.

25,629. Who did you vote for in 1859?—Lacon and Stracey.

35,630. Did you get anything for your vote on that occasion?—10*l.*

25,631. Who from?—Mr. Cooper.

25,632. You had no vote in 1865, you say?—Yes, I had a vote.

25,633. Why did you abstain from voting?—Because I wanted 20*l.*

25,634. And Mr. Cooper refused to give it you?—He said if it was given I should have it. I told him I was in great difficulties, and 20*l.* would do me a good deal of good; and he said if the amount was given I should have it, and I never saw him any more.

25,635. (Mr. Slade.) Were you paid for not voting?—No.

EDWARD REYNOLDS ALDRED sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

E. R. Aldred.

25,636. What are you by profession?—A jeweller.

25,637. Were you the election auditor at the election of 1859?—Yes.

25,638. Did you send in the accounts to the returning officer?—No, I had nothing to do with the returning officer.

25,639. Who did you send in the accounts to?—To the town clerk.

25,640. Did you publish them in the papers?—Yes.

25,641. Have you a copy of the paper there?—Yes.

25,642. Is that one of the local papers?—Yes.

25,643. Will you give us the account as it stands in the paper? Give us the sum total, and hand the paper in?—809*l.* 15*s.* Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey; Mr. Watkin and Mr. Young, 603*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.*; and there appears to be some small sum, some few pounds besides that, for expenses prior to the election, that were not added to either of them, I do not know why.

25,644. What expenses were those?—Postage stamps, for coals, carpenters, messengers, posting bills, and telegraphs.

25,645. What is the amount of them?—They are not cast up; it is about 20*l.*

25,646. (Mr. Russell.) Were those last items divided among the four candidates?—I do not know. It is a separate account here, but why it is I do not recollect. I know nothing about it.

THIRTIETH DAY.

E. R. Aldred.

10 Oct. 1866.

25,647. Were you the election auditor in 1857 ?—Yes.

25,648. The election of March the 28th ?—I was auditor for the three elections, and therefore of course I was for that. I do not know what date it was.

25,649. Then will you give us the expenses of the three elections ?—I cannot do that.

25,650. Can you give us the expenses of the election when Mr. Young and Mr. Mellor were returned ?—Yes.

25,651. That was in August 1857 ?—That would be the 10th of August 1857, 375*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*

25,652. The joint expenditure ?—Yes, of Mr. Mellor and Young.

25,653. The previous election ?—I know nothing about that; I have no papers, or know nothing about it. The papers were all kept by the House of Commons, that was during the inquiry. I took them up, and they were kept by the House of Commons.

25,654. You are not able to get a copy of the local paper ?—You said 1859, and I had great trouble to get that. I had to get that of a private person; the paper is out of print.

25,655. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You paid yourself these accounts ?—Yes, I paid them after being passed by the election agent.

25,656. You received your money from whom ?—From the agents of either party.

25,657. Were there any accounts sent in to you that you refused ?—I had nothing to do with that. My duty was simply to pay the accounts sent in by the election agent. I had nothing do with whether they were right or wrong.

25,658. (Mr. Slade.) Have you the details of the uncontested election of Mellor and Young ?—No; they were given to the town clerk, and upon the removal, he supposes, of the papers to the Record Room, being papers of no value, they were destroyed. I cannot find them.

25,659. What have you in that paper you have in your hand ?—I have the items, but not the vouchers.

25,660. Have you the items ?—Yes.

25,661. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Was the election of 1857 the first at which you were auditor ?—Yes. I think I was the election auditor for only three elections. I was the auditor from the beginning to the end, until the office was abolished.

25,662. Did it strike you that the sum of 375*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.* was a large sum to pay for an uncontested election ?—No.

25,663. (Mr. Russell.) Do you know if there were hustings erected at the uncontested election ?—I think not; I think it was understood. I am speaking merely from hearsay; I purposely avoided taking any part in it, therefore I know nothing about it.

Mrs. M. Barber.

Mrs. Matilda Barber sworn; examined by Mr. Russell.

25,664. Are you the wife of Thomas Robert Barber ?—Yes.

25,665. What have you come here to tell us ?—To contradict the statement made by Mr. Samuel Aldred, the auctioneer of Regent Street. He said he never offered my husband money.

25,666. What is that you have in your hand ?—It is the paper of the statement Mr. Aldred made on Saturday.

25,667. An extract from the "Yarmouth Independent ?"—Yes.

25,668. Do you come here to corroborate the statement that your husband was offered money by Mr. Samuel Aldred ?—Yes.

25,669. Were you present ?—Yes.

25,670. Can you remember what Samuel Aldred said ?—The first time he came in he asked me which way my husband would vote, and I told him. He said, "Do you think 10*l.* would turn him the other way ?" I said, "No;" he said, "Tell your husband what I say." And he came again and again, and my husband would not be seen for some time. I was also present when he did see him. He said, "You will vote for us, won't you ?" My husband said, "Which way ?" He said, "Sir Edmund Lacon." My husband said, "No money will make me vote for him;" and he stuck to what he said. He came in sometimes three or four times a day to see my husband.

25,671. Did he offer money to your husband ?—Yes, he offered money to my husband as well as me.

25,672. How much ?—From 10*l.* to 25*l.*; different sums, rising 5*l.* each time.

25,673. 10*l.* the first visit, 15*l.* the second, 20*l.* the third, and 25*l.* the fourth ?—Yes.

25,674. And you were present every time ?—Every time.

25,675. Did he ever produce any money ?—No.

25,676. Did your husband tell you to come and swear this ?—No; I said I thought I ought to come, as I knew it was the truth he spoke when he was here last Thursday. I considered it was quite right in me to come.

25,677. Do you know that your husband did receive money on the other side ?—Yes.

25,678. Did he tell you that at the time ?—Yes.

25,679. Did you tell Mr. Aldred, when he first came to you, that you were sure no money would make your husband vote on that side ?—Yes.

25,680. Do you remember the election of 1859 ?—I remember something about it.

25,681. Can you remember if your husband was offered money then ?—Oh yes.

25,682. In your presence ?—Yes.

25,683. By whom ?—By Mr. Reynolds; or rather not offered money by him, but he said he would send Mr. Buston to make things right with him.

25,684. Mr. Reynolds was examined here yesterday, and before he left the witness-box, without being asked, he said he wished to state that it was false that he ever had said he would send Mr. Buston to your husband ?—He did, and Mr. Buston came and asked to speak to my husband privately.

25,685. Were you present when Mr. Buston came ?—Yes.

25,686. Do you remember if Mr. Buston offered any money when he came ?—He went into the hall with my husband, and when he came back he said, "Mr. "Buston has offered me 15*l.* to vote for Sir Edmund "Lacon;" and my husband ordered him out.

25,687. You were not in the room when Mr. Buston offered the 15*l.* ?—No, I was in the hall.

25,688. Did you say your husband turned him out ?—My husband opened the door and said, "Mr. Buston has offered me 15*l.* to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon;" and he said, "If you do not walk out I will help you out;" something like that.

25,689. Do you know that your husband did take money in that election ?—Yes.

25,690. How much ?—7*l.* 10*s.*

25,691. Do you remember who gave it to him ?—Mr. Edwards, the tailor.

25,692. Were you present ?—No.

25,693. Has your husband reminded you of what took place in 1859, that you remember it so well ?—Oh no, not at all. I can remember, so far as that goes.

25,694. Did anybody else besides Mr. Aldred offer your husband money at the last election ?—Not that I know of it.

25,695. Or in 1859 ?—Not that I know of.

S. Chapman.

Samuel Chapman sworn; examined by Mr. Fitzgerald.

25,696. What are you ?—I keep a fish shop at the gate, near the old pier, and I have a pleasure boat.

25,697. Who did you vote for at the last election ? Sir Edmund Lacon.

25,698. Sir Edmund Lacon ?—Certainly I did.

25,699. Do you live in the Wellington Road ?—Yes, that is right.

25,700. That is the place ?—Yes, part one way, and part the other. I live at the corner as you go down to the pier.

25,701. Did you vote for Sir Edmund Lacon alone, or for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson ?—For Sir Edmund Lacon alone.

25,702. Did you get anything for your vote, any money ?—For the vote ?

25,703. Were you paid any money for your vote ?—Yes.

25,704. How much ?—I received, I think, about 15*l.*

25,705. Who paid you ?—I found it in my boat. I may guess who put it there.

25,706. Do you know who put it into your boat ?—I may guess.

25,707. Then guess if you please ?—I should say Mr. Swan, and that will do. I knew it was there.

25,708. What is Mr. Swan's christian name ?—Mr. Henry King Swan.

25,709. What day was this that you found the money ?—I could not say ; I think it was towards the evening.

25,710. I find you did vote for Mr. Goodson ?—Mr. Swan was a brother-in-law of mine. If I had not seen Mr. Swan at all I should have voted for Sir Edmund Lacon ; I lived in the family several years, in Sir Edmund Lacon's family, and I should have voted, if it had not been for my brother-in-law, without a halfpenny, but I thought I might as well have had 15*l.* as other people.

25,711. Had you a vote in 1859 ?—No, that is the first one, and I should have voted for Sir Edmund, as I lived in the family 30 years ago.

William Spencer Eidsforth sworn ; examined by Mr. Fitzgerald.

W. S. Eidsforth.

25,712. What are you ?—A tailor.

25,713. Who did you vote for at the last election ?—I voted for Brogden and Vanderbyl.

25,714. What did you get for your vote ?—20*l.*

25,715. Who from ?—Mr. Eastick.

25,716. What is Mr. Eastick's christian name ?—Zachariah.

25,717. Do you know where Mr. Zachariah Eastick got this money ?—I do not.

25,718. He did not tell you ?—No.

25,719. Had you a vote in 1859 ?—No.

George Lemon Manthorpe sworn ; examined by Mr. Russell.

G. L. Manthorpe.

25,720. What are you ?—Formerly a master mariner.

25,721. Who did you vote for at the last election ?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

25,722. Did you receive any money ?—Not a shilling.

25,723. You did receive some to give to others ?—Never in my life ; I never received a shilling or gave a shilling in my life, not for electioneering purposes.

25,724. Have you heard it has been stated here that you did ?—No, I have not heard it has been stated here. Yesterday morning I went to the "Free Press," because I heard Mr. Cooper had mentioned my name, and if it had been in the "Free Press" I should have come up yesterday morning, but as my name was not mentioned there I thought I should not be called up.

25,725. Do you know a man named William Capon ?—Yes.

25,726. Did you offer him any money in 1859 ?—Never.

25,727. Never offered any men any money ?—No, never did in my life.

25,728. Neither in 1865 or 1859 ?—In no election whatever.

25,729. How did you vote yourself in 1859 ?—I voted Liberal in 1859, and always have done.

25,730. Did you ask Capon to vote ?—In 1865, the morning I went down to vote myself, I saw him standing by the door, and I asked him if he was going down to vote, and he said nobody had been to see him. I said, "What do you want anybody to come and see you for," and I walked away. About a minute after this Mr. Clowes the solicitor came driving past me in a gig, not a minute, and I said, "There is Capon standing at his door, and says nobody has been to see him," and he turned back and went and spoke to him. He came to me again in less than five minutes, I went walking on down to Gorleston, and said, "What did he say ?" "He says he wants a situation." That is what Mr. Clowes told me.

25,731. A situation during the election ?—I suppose so. I never asked any more questions at all about it.

25,732. Mr. Capon said he voted to oblige you ?—So I understood, but I never heard that anybody ever stated I had given him money. I understood he should say he voted to oblige me ; I do not know what for.

25,733. You did not offer him any inducement ?—None whatever ; I never did. Mr. Capon is a man that I never was six hours in his company in my life. I think the last time I was in his company was in Rio de Janeiro, about 20 years ago, and then I asked him to take a plate of soup with me.

25,734. Do you know William Mayes ?—Yes.

25,735. He is your brother-in-law ?—Yes, he married my sister.

25,736. Did you canvass him at the last election ?—No, I do not think any man can canvass Mayes ; he has a will of his own, although I believe Mr. Cooper said in the 1857 election, or I heard Mr. Cooper said, he gave him 15*l.* I do not believe it. I do not believe Mr. Mayes ever took a shilling in his life. There is no occasion for it, he could buy Mr. Cooper twenty times over. I do not think Mr. Cooper had any occasion to mention my name at all, or about Mr. Mayes.

25,737. Did Mayes vote the same way with you ?—Yes, he voted the same way with me.

25,738. Why did not Mayes come himself ?—He cannot.

25,739. Is he ill ?—He has a very bad leg, and is 80 years of age, but at present he cannot walk ; still I think he could be got up by a fly. If he could get within reach of Mr. Cooper, so that he could get hold of his collar, I believe he is strong enough now to Cooper him.

25,740. You do not know of your own knowledge that Mayes had not received money ?—I never heard him say in my life he received a shilling, and I never believe he did.

Robert Margetson Rope sworn ; examined by Mr. Fitzgerald.

R. M. Rope.

25,741. What are you ?—I am a landowner.

25,742. Who did you vote for at the last election ?—Do you mean 1865 ?

25,743. Yes.—I voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

25,744. Did you get any money for your vote ?—Certainly not.

25,745. Were you offered any ?—No.

25,746. By neither side ?—By neither side ; I would scorn to have it. I take the money of no man,

THIRTIETH DAY.

R. M Rope.

19 Oct. 1866.

I come here with a honest principle. My name is represented as Robert Margetson Rope, and I am a honest man.

25,747. Answer my questions only. Had you a vote in 1859 ?—I had.

25,748. Who did you vote for then?—Lacon and Stracey.

25,749. Did you get anything for your vote?—Certainly not.

25,750. You never had any money?—Never had any money.

S. Holdsworth.

STEPHEN HOLDSWORTH sworn ; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

25,751. What are you?—A coal porter.

25,752. Who did you vote for at the last election?—I had not one at the last election.

25,753. Who did you vote for in 1859 ?—Lacon and Stracey.

25,754. What did you get for your vote?—10*l.*

25,755. Who gave it to you ?—Mr. Cooper.

25,756. Were you offered anything on the other side in 1859 ?—Yes.

25,757. Who by ?—Mr. Livingston and Mr. Cooper.

25,758. Did you not take some money from Mr. Eagleton ?—No.

25,759. Are you quite sure of that ?—Oh yes.

25,760. Mr. Eagleton says you had money from him ?—No, I never received a farthing from anyone except Mr. Cooper.

A. W. Young, Esq.

ADOLPHUS WILLIAM YOUNG, Esq., sworn ; examined by Mr. SLADE.

25,761. Have you any profession ?—Not now. I was educated as a solicitor ; I have been long out of practice.

25,762. You have been abroad, have you not ?—I never practised in England. I was articled to my father, of the firm of Young and Vallings, very well known in London, and immediately after I was admitted I went to Australia.

25,763. Mr. Watkin told us you were a member of the Legislature in Australia, was that so ?—Yes, I represented what is now the colony of Victoria. The whole of that colony, which has now a separate government, was in my time a province or district of New South Wales, and at one time I represented that in the Council at Sydney, they sending so many members.

25,764. In what year did you return to England ?—About 14 years ago. 15 years ago, next June, I think, we landed.

25,765. You were elected a member for Yarmouth with Mr. Mellor in the month of August 1857 ?—Yes, in August 1857.

25,766. Was that the first occasion on which you had attempted to obtain a seat in Parliament in England ?—Yes, that was the very first.

25,767. We have been told by Mr. Watkin that after the result of the petition in 1857, there was a meeting at the Reform Club, and that Mr. Watkin and Mr. McCullagh were asked to find candidates for Yarmouth, that he nominated Mr. Mellor, and that Mr. McCullagh nominated a Mr. Mackenzie at first, but subsequently to that Mr. McCullagh mentioned you, are you aware of that ?—No. I know nothing about the meeting at the Reform Club nor of Mr. Mackenzie; I never heard of his name.

25,768. Was Mr. McCullagh a friend of yours ?—No. It is difficult rather to take one's mind back. He was certainly no friend of mine. He was a club acquaintance I think, certainly not more than that.

25,769. Can you tell the Commissioners how it came that Mr. McCullagh nominated you to take his place as member for Yarmouth ?—I can tell you how I first came to have anything to do with it.

25,770. If you please. — That was through a gentleman of the name of Humphreys, Mr. Humphreys who is now coroner for Middlesex, and with him I had some slight acquaintance. He was the first person, I think, who introduced it to me, and there was a talk about wanting a candidate, and would I stand, and so on.

25,771. With reference to Yarmouth ?—Oh yes, it was all with reference to Yarmouth ; it was subsequent to the petition being over, it must have been.

25,772. (Mr. Russell.) Do you mean that Mr. Humphreys introduced you to Mr. McCullagh, or that Mr. Humphreys introduced you to Yarmouth ?—I am not certain that he introduced me to Mr. McCullagh ; I do not think he did, because I think I knew Mr. McCullagh in that slight way that I know so many people ; I am not very positive how that was, but Mr. Humphreys I know brought Mr. McCullagh and myself together, that I remember, and we came down here. I forget whether Mr. McCullagh came with me, I do not think he did. I know there were a lot of Liberals down here, and a lot of men who wanted to be candidates, and at last I was elected, and I know Mr. McCullagh, through Mr. Humphreys, stood my friend, that I know. I know there was a good deal of talk, and so on, about whether I had any connexion with the place, and my family happened to have been all their lives intimate with the Gurney family, and I believe that might have been a turning point, I do not know that it was altogether, and I do not know that it did any good ; but I know they were people who would not have interfered, but they were people who would have done me a good turn if they could.

25,773. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know if Mr. Humphreys was a friend of Mr. McCullagh ?—Yes, I am certain he was. I know he was the gentleman who conducted the petition.

25,774. Mr. Humphreys I understand was a friend of your own ?—I do not know more than a very slight acquaintance ; I cannot remember any friendship.

25,775. Was that the first time that you knew Mr. Humphreys, when he came to you with reference to the election at Yarmouth ?—No, I think I knew Mr. Humphreys before slightly, if I mistake not. He was a member of the Reform Club, and I have been a member since I have been home ; I believe in that way, and I believe it was generally understood. I think I once spoke to Mr. Coppock, saying I should be very happy to stand for any eligible place.

25,776. It was understood you were anxious to get into Parliament ?—I believe it was generally understood among the party, and I knew myself I should stand, if I could find a place.

25,777. (Mr. Russell.) If I understand, Mr. Humphreys was employed by Mr. McCullagh to negotiate with reference to his successor ?—I can hardly say how that was ; all I know is Mr. Humphreys spoke to him, and brought us together, and we talked it over, and they said, "What is your interest there ?" It so happened that my mother's family are Norfolk people ; I do not know that that had much to do with it. They have an estate in Norfolk.

25,778. (Mr. Slade.) Mr. Humphreys came with you to Yarmouth, because he introduced you to Mr. Chamberlin ?—He either came with me or for me ; he certainly came for me. He came either with me, or a day before, or a day after, something of that kind ; I cannot charge my memory exactly.

25,779. Was there any arrangement between yourself and Mr. McCullagh, as to the terms on which you should come forward as a candidate for Yarmouth ?—Do you mean a pecuniary arrangement?

25,780. Was he to come down and lend you his interest ?—No.

25,781. Was he to come down and canvass for you?—I do not think there was any arrangement. He certainly did. It was of great consequence to Mr. McCullagh to get the seats represented by Liberals, I suppose, as a party man.

25,782. What was the arrangement between you and Mr. McCullagh?—There was no arrangement at all. He came and did some very good service, I think, both to Mr. Mellor and myself.

25,783. Mr. Mellor was related to Mr. Watkin we have heard?—There is some relationship, but I think it is through the wife.

25,784. Mr. Watkin told us yesterday?—Mrs. Watkin is first cousin to Sir John Mellor.

25,785. And you, I understand, had no personal connexion at all with Mr. McCullagh, not even that of friendship?—No, I cannot lay claim to it at all, not any friendship. I knew him a little.

25,786. A mere casual club acquaintance?—Yes.

25,787. It has been mentioned before us in the inquiry, that it was currently reported in Yarmouth that a sum of 500*l.* was paid to Mr. McCullagh for his "good will?"—Yes, I have heard the story.

25,788. Had you ever heard it previously to its being mentioned before us?—Yes, I think I had.

25,789. When did you first hear it?—I cannot charge my memory, but it is long ago I heard it.

25,790. Did you hear it at the time you came down to stand in 1857?—I cannot charge my memory if I did, but I know I heard it; at least there was some arrangement it was supposed between us. I think the general idea was I agreed to give Mr. McCullagh 500*l.*, and Mr. Mellor to give Mr. Watkin 500*l.*; that is what I heard.

25,791. Did you hear Mr. Mellor was to give the 500*l.* to Mr. Watkin or Mr. McCullagh?—I think to Mr. Watkin. But it was only that sort of public rumour with no foundation.

25,792. Was it reported to you by any particular person?—I cannot say. I have it running through my head. I certainly heard of it.

25,793. Did you ever take any opportunity of contradicting it publicly?—I do not remember doing so.

25,794. Did you ever hear of it from any person who took an active part in politics on your side?—I read, since this has been going on, in the papers something about it, and I have a sort of recollection of being asked, I think it was by Mr. Owles, I am not sure, but by some of the party I think.

25,795. Were you asked privately by Mr. Owles, or in the presence of other persons?—If I remember right we had, I do not think you can call it a meeting, at any rate some of us were down at Mr. Owles', and I was asked.

25,796. Were you asked positively whether you had paid the sum of 500*l.* to Mr. McCullagh?—I think I was.

25,797. In consequence of the rumour that had got about?—Yes, that is my remembrance.

25,798. Was there any arrangement of that sort between you and Mr. McCullagh?—No, there was not.

25,799. What in your opinion gave rise to that report?—I cannot tell. I have not the most remote idea; because if it had been true I could not have imagined how anybody could have known it. It was that sort of idle rumour I suppose.

25,800. When you came down to Yarmouth did you anticipate a contest?—In 1857?

25,801. Yes?—I do not know. I think we came intending to fight it if there was a contest. There was every appearance of a contest certainly, and if I remember right Sir Edmund canvassed. We met him at the corners of all the streets, and everything was going on like a contest up to the eve of the election. I forget exactly how long before he wrote a note to say there was no opposition.

25,802. He wrote a note saying he was not going to oppose you?—Yes; but all sorts of rumours up to that time had been about, about negotiations with other people to fight with him, and all the rest. Some of them may have been true, and some exaggerations and not true; one cannot tell.

25,803. You say you never heard of Mr. Mackenzie's name. Were you aware that Mr. McCullagh had asked anybody else to take his place before he asked you?—No, I was not. I do not know who Mr. Mackenzie is. I do not know anything about him.

25,804. I want to know whether you were aware that you were not the first choice of Mr. McCullagh?—No, I was not aware of it. I never heard anything about it.

25,805. Did you consult with Mr. McCullagh as to the probable expense of standing for Yarmouth?—I really do not remember whether I did or not. I cannot call to mind.

25,806. It is so far back?—Yes.

25,807. Generally did you understand that Yarmouth would be an expensive place to contest?—Well, when I came down first I do not know that I knew anything about it; but one by degrees gets one's mind informed on these things, and from that time to this I have heard so much. The story that I was told at the time was, an unfair committee, and all the rest of it, and that they were the aggrieved parties.

25,808. Did you ever hear that Mr. McCullagh ever received any money from anybody for transferring his interest to you?—No, decidedly not.

25,809. Not from any person;—Not from any person. I am quite certain no person has ever paid, at least if they have it is some other unknown friend who would spend money for me. I have not the least idea that anybody ever spent a farthing for me in electioneering, or any other way; they could not.

25,810. Then there is no foundation for that rumour?—Not the slightest. I made no arrangement with Mr. McCullagh at all, except that either Mr. McCullagh or Mr. Humphreys said, "I suppose if Mr. McCullagh wants to go there again, you will not be in his way," or something to that effect. I do not know who said that, but I know it ran in my mind that I had a sort of honourable understanding.

25,811. That is a very different thing?—That is the fact.

25,812. We can understand you would not stand in Mr. McCullagh's way if he gave you his assistance now?—No.

25,813. There was no other understanding that you ever heard of?—Never.

25,814. Was Mr. Justice Mellor ever asked this question about the 500*l.* being paid on his side, to your knowledge?—I really do not know.

25,815. You were asked by Mr. Owles?—I think it was Mr. Owles, I do not know at all, I do not remember Mr. Mellor ever telling me about it.

25,816. He never was asked in your presence?—I do not think so. No, I think not.

25,817. Do you know whether it was brought to Mr. Justice Mellor's knowledge that this rumour had got about?—I do not know that.

25,818. I want to ask you a question about the election of 1859; you came down here with Mr. Watkin to canvass before the election?—Before the writ was issued.

25,819. Before the poll I mean?—Before the poll; we were here some time.

25,820. A month or six weeks before the polling?—I should not have thought it was so much as that, but we were here a good while. I should not think it was so much as that.

25,821. Did you canvass with Mr. Watkin the whole borough?—Yes, sometimes I think with Mr. Watkin and sometimes with other canvassers, but generally I think with Mr. Watkin. He was a capital canvasser and a very active man.

25,822. Who was your election agent?—I think it was Mr. Clowes, but Mr. Chamberlin was what I may call my friend, my professional friend. I do not know that he did anything particular, but he was the man.

25,823. He was introduced to you by Mr. Humphreys?—That I do not remember, but I must have been introduced to him by somebody in 1857. I know ever since 1857 Mr. Chamberlin is the man I should apply to.

THIRTIETH DAY.

A. W. Young, Esq.

10 Oct. 1866.

25,824. And you sent him a fee after the election ?—Yes.

25,825. Of 25*l.* ?—Yes, or guineas. It was a small fee I know.

25,826. But he acted for you in the previous election of 1857, he had assisted you ?—He certainly was a friend, but I do not think he got anything.

25,827. I do not say he got anything ?—I looked upon him always as my friend here.

25,828. Mr. Watkin has informed us, that he stood on a joint interest with you, and on the understanding that you were to have joint expenses ; is that so ?—I do not think that we ever had any conversation about the matter, but that was certainly my understanding.

25,829. Will you tell us or can you tell us what your expenses were at the election of 1859 ?—Yes, within a little.

25,830. Have you any memoranda ?—No, I have no memoranda, but I know what they were. They were between 1,100*l.* and 1,200*l.* the whole of the expenses.

25,831. That would be very similar to the expenses of Mr. Watkin ?—It ought to be, but I really do not know. If you will tell me what Mr. Watkin said.

25,832. Mr. Watkin says the election of 1859 cost him from 1,000*l.* to 1,200*l.*, and you are between 1,100*l.* and 1,200*l.* ?—Yes.

25,833. So I may take it they are very much the same ?—I have no doubt they were the same, or near it.

25,834. How was the money paid ; was it paid after the election ?—No, a good deal of it was paid during the election. I am only speaking of what I paid myself after ; I do not know what Mr. Watkin did.

25,835. That includes the legal expenses ?—That includes everything that came out of my pocket in any shape.

25,836. The legal expenses for you and Mr. Watkin were 603*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.* ?—That is the money that is paid through Mr. Clowes, is it not.

25,837. That is the money that is paid through the election auditor ?—I suppose it is correct.

25,838. Will you tell us what money you paid during the election ?—I brought down 500*l.*, and I gave some cheques during the election to the extent of 320*l.*

25,839. Is that all you spent during the election ?—That is all, to the best of my belief, that I spent during the election ; at least I am certain it is. Then Mr. Clowes had 300*l.* and something, and there were 25 guineas to Mr. Chamberlin. I suppose I paid my hotel bill, no doubt I did. I have a distinct recollection in the accounts of the year putting down 1,200*l.* as having been spent at Yarmouth, which, from my ordinary mode of doing things, was a little exaggerated, because I always put it ample, but I remember doing that. I remember seeing it often afterwards, and thinking what a waste of money it was.

25,840. Were you a party to the petition ? — I subscribed to the petition. I remember there was a pressure upon me to petition, and I would not.

25,841. What did you subscribe to the petition ?—I am pretty sure it was 150*l.* ; I am not certain whether afterwards they did not ask me for something more. It was a petition got up in the town.

25,842. That was in addition to the 1,200*l.* ?—Yes, I think that was the next year it came on, if I remember right. Our election was in March.

25,843. The 29th of April ?—Yes, I think the petition was not tried until the next year, if I remember right, but I will not be sure about that.

25,844. It was tried in 1860 ?—Then my memory is right, but I cannot think how that was, because the House must have been sitting. However, I do not suppose that signifies.

25,845. Will you tell us, if you please, to whom you gave that 500*l.* that you brought down ? First of all, did you bring it down in gold ?—My impression is that I brought it down partially in gold and partially in notes, but I would not be quite certain. But I should have said I gave it to Mr. Mainprice, I should have said so ; but I have read what he says, and at this distance of time it is impossible to say. I certainly knew it was going to him.

25,846. Has Mr. Mainprice said anything to cause you to alter your impression ?—No, nothing ; except I saw some story about putting money in a great coat. I never picked a pocket, nor the converse, that I remember. This is rather the converse of it.

25,847. Do you mean that your impression is that you gave the 500*l.* to Mr. Mainprice yourself ?—I cannot remember, except this, I know that it was said money would be wanted, and "Who is conducting the election ?" "Mr. Mainprice. Mr. Mainprice wants some money," therefore I should have thought I did, but I have no recollection of giving it to Mr. Mainprice. I may have given it to one of the party to give to him, but I knew it was going to him, and I suppose he got it.

25,848. Mr. Mainprice's evidence may tally with yours. Of course we do not suppose you put it in his pocket ?—Not I. But I can only say what I remember doing, and if it tallies or not I cannot help it. It must go for what it is worth.

25,849. Still you are sure the whole of the 500*l.* did go to Mr. Mainprice ?—I have every reason to believe so.

25,850. The cheques for 320*l.* Mr. Livingston says you gave to him ?—That surprises me, because I am as certain of anything as I can be—that occurred seven and a half years ago—that I never had any money transactions with Mr. Livingston in my life. I do not remember the slightest of it ; besides I could not have given it to both.

25,851. Mr. Livingston has told us that he received two cheques from you, one the 28th April for 200*l.*, and the other the 29th April for 120*l.* ?—Those are the identical cheques. I have not the least recollection of giving it to him but it is a question of memory, If I gave it to him they must have been for Mr. Mainprice, but I should have said certainly that I gave them to Mr. Mainprice, because there was another cheque that was destroyed.

25,852. How much was that for ?—I cannot be certain, but I think it was 80*l.* I think it made round money. Cheques were given in moderate sums for the purpose of getting them cashed I suppose.

25,853. To whom did you give that cheque ?—I certainly gave them to the one person, whoever he was, and I believe it was Mr. Mainprice.

25,854. Do you recollect a cheque for 80*l.* being destroyed in your presence ?—Yes, I do, at Mr. Mainprice's office I believe, if my recollection serves me, it might have been.

25,855. Between 10 and 11 o'clock on the morning of the election ?—Yes, it was the morning of the election. I would not say to half an hour.

25,856. Can you remember, did you ever hear of a Mr. Christopher Steward ?—Yes.

25,857. Did you ever hand any money to Mr. Steward ?—When I was member for Yarmouth I remember before I left the town in 1857 I gave a cheque for 40*l.* to Mr. Steward for races, and that came the next time, because I remember Mr. Mellor and I used to grumble at the amount, and thought it was too much ; but I never had any other transaction with Mr. Steward. I understood he was a man used to the races.

25,858. Mr. Livingston gave the cash for your two cheques to Mr. Steward ?—So it appears. I knew nothing of that. I never heard of Mr. Steward during our election, and I do not think I should know Mr. Steward if I saw him, but I remember the name well because of the races. He seemed to be the active man.

25,859. Then according to your recollection Mr. Mainprice received 820*l.* from you ?—Yes, I think he did. He received all the money that I spent at the election.

25,860. Did you understand at the time what Mr. Mainprice was doing with your money ?—I understood that Mr. Mainprice was conducting our election and would pay whatever was required. There was a great deal of talk about bringing people from long distances and all sorts of things—"an army of observation" I remember somebody christened it. I suppose it was other people employed.

25,861. Did Mr. Mainprice ever give in any account to you?—Never.

25,862. Did you consult your adviser Mr. Chamberlin as to the money you gave Mr. Mainprice?—No, certainly not.

25,863. How was Mr. Mainprice introduced to you?—Really I cannot say. He was one of our most active supporters, I considered one of the leaders of the Liberal party. I had known him from 1857, and had often had correspondence with him on various matters.

25,864. Had he ever asked you for money for subscriptions for Yarmouth?—I do not know that Mr. Mainprice had. I know very well I was perpetually applied to, and had to respond occasionally, but I forget exactly who were the people, except this large sum of 40*l.* a year, which seemed to be a regular thing to the races. I remember that, and I think we gave each of us 25*l.* for registration, and which I sent a cheque for; I have not the least remembrance. I remember that was about the thing, and then there was always a church to be repaired, or a chapel building, or schools—in fact, the ordinary things members are applied to for. I reckoned, if I sat for Yarmouth, it would be about 200*l.* a year, but I cannot make out exactly how 200*l.* would be spent, but I think coming down and stopping here, and bringing one's people. That was a sort of rough estimate in my own mind.

25,865. Did you understand at the time that Mr. Watkin had spent an equal sum with yourself. Was that the understanding between you?—That even I can't remember, I had no conversation with Mr. Watkin on the subject, but I suppose if I had thought about it I should have thought he had. I do not know that I thought about it. One cannot bring one's memory exactly to it, but we never had any other arrangement or any arrangement at all; therefore I presume two gentlemen standing together would pay everything equally; it was merely that sort of understanding.

25,866. Mr. Watkin had his clerk, Mr. Rawlinson, with him, do you remember?—There was a lot of people down with Mr. Watkin, if I remember right, but I do not remember this gentleman, Mr. Rawlinson. He probably never introduced him.

25,867. Was there any gentleman acting on your behalf, looking after your pecuniary interests?—In Yarmouth?

25,868. Yes.—None whatever.

25,869. You did it entirely by yourself?—I was here entirely by myself, nobody ever came with me. The first election Mr. Humphreys came; the second election I considered myself in the hands of the party.

25,870. And that would be so, if your recollection is right, that all the money you gave was given to Mr. Mainprice during the election?—Yes, that would be so, and I have no doubt about it myself.

25,871. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you understand, when you first saw Mr. Humphreys, that he was authorized by Mr. McCullagh to look out for a candidate, to ask you to be the candidate?—I cannot remember the exact words, or in fact how it came about, except that Mr. Humphreys looked me up and found me, and said, "Now, here is a chance for you at Yarmouth. Are you not friendly with the Gurneys?" I believe that was about the beginning of it.

25,872. Did he say he had come from Mr. McCullagh?—I do not think he did. I cannot charge my memory with that. I know we were brought together I suppose that day.

25,873. Who was brought together?—Mr. McCullagh and myself, and then it was, "Will you stand?"

25,874. Had you an interview with him that day?—You mean the first day. I certainly had an interview before I came down.

25,875. Did Mr. McCullagh at that interview tell you his position with regard to the borough?—My impression is that the conversation was something to this effect, "You see we have been unseated on petition," and of course going terribly against the committee, and saying how very unjust, and that sort of thing, and "Will you go down? are you prepared to go down?" something to that effect. I am not certain that he did not say, "Mr. Humphreys tells me that you have some little local interest," or something of that kind. I would not charge my memory with the exact words.

25,876. He told you, you say, that he was unjustly turned out?—That was the conversation with either him or Mr. Humphreys, I certainly understood; in fact I have heard no end of that from the beginning; that is the view they take.

25,877. Did he tell you anything at all about his previous connexion with Yarmouth?—I do not think he did then. I have heard all of it since, partially perhaps from him, but I think more from other people.

25,878. Then no sort of allusion to money having been spent there by him was made?—No, none whatever, that is he never told me about it.

25,879. I want to know whether Mr. McCullagh made any allusion to it?—No, certainly not.

25,880. Nor at any other time?—Nor at any other time.

25,881. Did you know at any further time, any subsequent time, whether Mr. McCullagh had been at any expense in consequence of his connexion with Yarmouth?—In the election at Yarmouth?

25,882. In consequence of his connexion with Yarmouth?—No, I cannot say I did.

25,883. We have heard it stated that Mr. McCullagh had watched the registration here for some time, did you know of that then?—No, I did not know of it. I have known since, at least I have understood since, that he was a candidate in 1852, I think it was, and that he kept up his connexion here all the time between 1852 and 1857.

25,884. That is what I want to know. Did he tell you that at the time?—No, I do not think so. I do not think we had any talk about prior events.

25,885. Did he tell you of his connexion with Mr. Watkin?—No, I do not think so. I do not remember any talk about Mr. Watkin.

25,886. Did you know Mr. McCullagh and Mr. Watkin had had differences with respect to money spent at Yarmouth?—In 1857?

25,887. Previously to this interview with you?—No, certainly not.

25,888. You know nothing about that?—I know nothing about that.

25,889. And nothing was said about that?—Certainly not.

25,890. Was anything said upon that subject by Mr. Humphreys when he first spoke to you on the subject?—No.

25,891. Nothing whatever?—No.

25,892. That was never brought to your knowledge at all?—No.

25,893. Did you canvass the borough in 1857?—Yes.

25,894. A long time?—I forget. I do not remember how long it was; not near so long as in 1859. I think it was a short canvass if I remember right.

25,895. What conclusion did you come to from your own observation during that canvass as to the purity or impurity of the borough?—The question never was raised. I had every reason to be satisfied.

25,896. But previously to your coming down, I think I heard you say you were not at all aware of the character Yarmouth bore?—No; I knew nothing about Yarmouth. I have heard since, there is a great deal of chit-chat.

25,897. I ask about that time?—No.

25,898. You were not cognizant of the fact that the freemen had been disfranchised in consequence of a report by the Committee of the House of Commons that they were all corrupt?—I did not know it then, I have heard of it since.

25,899. Did your observations during your canvass

THIRTIETH DAY.

A. W. Young.

of 1857 lead you to form any opinion as to the purity or impurity of the borough?—I do not remember forming any opinion about it; I never thought about it. We canvassed, and it was a sort of ovation.

25,900. You told us just now that Sir Edmund Lacon did not withdraw till the last moment, and you must have expected a contest?—We were prepared to have a contest, if necessary.

25,901. I want to know whether you found in your canvass that the electors hung back?—No; we had a most successful canvass, I know. I suppose that prevented Sir Edmund Lacon standing against us.

25,902. Now we will go down to 1859; you were returned without any expenditure at all in 1857?—Yes.

25,903. And I suppose you remained under the impression that Yarmouth was a perfectly pure place—have you thought that? was that so?—I do not remember thinking anything particular about it.

25,904. When you came down to canvass the borough in 1859, what was your idea about the canvass then?—We had a very good canvass, if I remember right.

25,905. You did not find the electors hung back then and wanted money?—No, there was nothing that struck me at all. I do not say every man said he would vote for us we came to; they did not.

25,906. Did you find any hang back and say they would not vote at all?—There were certainly some who appeared to be neuter and did not intend to vote.

25,907. It did not strike you they were neuter because the proper inducement was not offered to them?—No.

25,908. Do you recollect any question arising as to whether you should go on or not towards the end of your canvass, and the subject being referred to Mr. Richard Hammond?—No; I remember something about Richard Hammond. Mr. Richard Hammond always told us we should win; I understood so, at least.

25,909. Do you recollect it was once a question that was to be determined by Mr. Hammond as to whether you should go on or not?—They kept me in the dark about it, if it was.

25,910. You were ignorant about that?—I never heard it was ever a question that we should retire.

25,911. If there was anything of that sort, it was all unknown to you?—Yes.

25,912. Did you never hear, during the whole course of the election of 1859, any suggestion that it would be necessary to bribe?—None whatever.

25,913. You saw then there was bribery on the other side?—I do not remember hearing anything about it, except just towards the last, or in fact the day of the polling, I think. I do not think I heard anything until then, and I do not know who it was told me, or whether it was Mr. Watkin, I suppose, said, "They have bought our votes," or something of that kind. Then I began to see or suppose. In fact I did not know it till the whole thing was over.

25,914. Up to the polling day had you any suspicion whatever that any part of the money you had entrusted with Mr. Mainprice had been distributed in the purchase of votes?—Not the slightest.

25,915. How soon afterwards did the suspicion arise in your mind, if at all, that you owed your return partially to bribery?—We did not get a return in 1859.

25,916. You were turned out?—Thrown out by bribery.

25,917. I am wrong; I was thinking of the election of 1857. Did you think up to the time of the petition that your party had been perfectly pure?—I do not think I did; I could not.

25,918. When did it first come to your knowledge?—My impression is, on the day of the polling, Mr. Watkin said something about "They want more money, Young," or something of that sort. The day of the polling, I think, because that is how that cheque was given; and I said, "Well, I will have nothing "more to do with it, and I think I have given too "much money already," or something of that sort. I said so to Mr. Watkin, and he said, "Then let us go to Mainprice," and I do not recollect exactly what the conversation was, but I know we both were rather angry, and I said, "Have you got any of my cheques?"

25,919. What were you angry at, at the demand for more money?—Mr. Mainprice did not ask me for more money. Mr. Watkin told me more money was wanted.

25,920. And you at once understood what was meant?—It looked so like it that I would not have anything to do with it. I went on to get as much money back as I could.

25,921. Did you know Mr. Clark as a supporter of yours?—Yes, a Mr. Clark, a gentleman who lives at Gorleston.

25,922. William Thomas Clark?—I do not remember his christian name. He is a gentleman who lives at Gorleston, I think.

25,923. Was he an active supporter?—Yes.

25,924. I will not ask—you did not know at that time, how he was employed?—No.

25,925. Did you afterwards hear that he was employed in buying voters?—This is the first time I heard of it; he was a magistrate.

25,926. Was it ever brought to your knowledge that he complained he had lost 300*l.* by the election?—I never heard of it; this is the first. I remember Mr. Clark very well, because he had Admiralty cases, and he used to be always talking to me about my uncle, who was a doctor in Doctors' Commons, a Dr. Haggard. I remember it; we went and dined or lunched there. He seemed a very hospitable kind of man.

25,927. No demand was made on you?—Never.

25,928. Was it ever intimated to you after the election that there had been a larger expenditure than you were aware of?—No, certainly not; and there was no application for money, and I never gave any; nor was I applied to except for the petition. I remember perfectly well about the petition; 150*l.* I think it was.

25,929. I should like to know when it was you gave that first sum of 500*l.* to Mr. Mainprice?—I cannot tell.

25,930. Was it in the early part of your canvass?—I really cannot charge my memory; it was in the canvass certainly.

25,931. Did you ever hear of a Mr. Meall?—Mr. Meall kept a stationer's shop, if I remember right.

25,932. (Mr. Slade.) A bookseller?—Yes, I remember him well. Mr. Meall, I think, in our election of 1857 was an active partisan, but I think in 1859 he was on his death-bed, I think so. I believe he was very ill, and my impression is he died very soon.

25,933. Mr. Watkin gave him 500*l.*?—I know Mr. Watkin and he were friendly. I think Mr. Watkin said he had him at his place to recruit his health.

25,934. Do you know Mr. Spilling?—I remember once coming on Spilling with Mr. Watkin in our canvass.

25,935. Do you know if he was actively engaged in the election?—My impression is he was greatly.

25,936. I am speaking of 1857.—In my election of 1857.

25,937. (Mr. Russell.) At the time you were invited to come down here in August 1857, were you informed there were any outstanding liabilities of Mr. Watkin or Mr. McCullagh?—No, I never heard of them.

25,938. Was any arrangement made at that time as to a different course to be adopted by you in the event of there being a contest and there not being a contest?—Certainly not the least.

25,939. I understood that you subscribed about 200*l.* a year in the town while you sat for it?—I am speaking without book; it is only that I keep it rough in my mind. That is about what the place would cost to do the thing, what was considered proper, to come down and see the people, and so on.

25,940. Was it represented to you that that was the sum that Mr. McCullagh was in the habit of subscribing?—No, certainly not.

25,941. Or Mr. Watkin?—No, I never heard of it; it is a mere rough guess of what I think it may have cost me, and what I was quite prepared to do if I sat for it.

25,942. Did you subscribe towards the registration fund?—Yes, and I remember it was 25*l.*; I am speaking from memory, but I think that was the amount.

25,943. I think you said you were not aware Mr. McCullagh was in the habit of subscribing to that fund?—I know nothing about it; I do not know if such was the case. The only item he grumbled at was the races; we thought it was rather large, and I remember Mr. Justice Mellor, who cared nothing about racing, thought that 40*l.* was a good lug every year, but Mr. Steward was the man who managed it.

25,944. Then in fact there was no agreement or understanding when you sat for Yarmouth that you should pay the sums which Mr. McCullagh had previously paid?—None whatever. Of course there was no discussion about it; as a member I was prepared to do all that was fair for a member to do.

25,945. Do you remember what sum of money you brought down in 1857?—Yes, I brought none; I remember that so well because there was some discussion. Of course it is the case in every borough. I do not think I was here long before somebody asked me for some money, and I drew a cheque.

25,946. And yet in 1857 you contemplated a canvass?—I came down in such a hurry without any sort of thought.

25,947. How came you to bring money with you in 1859?—I cannot explain it, unless the experience of 1857 showed that some money would be wanted.

25,948. That is a very good reason.—I really do not know; it is such a long time.

25,949. I have asked Mr. Watkin, and I will ask you; you know there is some little discrepancy as to the money that has been mentioned to us as having been received by Mr. Mainprice and Mr. Steward, and the money you and Mr. Watkin have acknowledged to. Mr. Steward says that he received altogether about 1,600*l.*, that he had two parcels of gold at the inn, which he thought contained about 500*l.* or 600*l.* each, and subsequently he received about 500*l.* or 600*l.* in driblets. The 1,000*l.* that he received at the "Star" would exactly account for the money which you and Mr. Watkin gave, exclusive of the two cheques which you and Mr. Livingston had; then there remains the 500*l.* or 600*l.* that Mr. Mainprice received in driblets to be accounted for?—Nobody got it from me; that is all I can say.

25,950. You are not aware of Mr. Watkin having spent any more than you did?—I am not aware.

25,951. I believe, Mr. Young, you wrote some subsequent cheques that were destroyed?—No, only one.

25,952. Do you remember the amount of the cheque?—I think it was 80*l.* I will not be quite certain about it.

25,953. Do you know a man named Peter Ashcroft?—No, I never heard of him.

25,954. You are not aware that he was down here at the time?—No. I never heard of him. I do not know his name. I remember hearing there were people about with Mr. Watkin, that a man was at his heels always; he is connected with railways so much.

25,955. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You were a lawyer yourself originally?—Yes. I was a solicitor, originally educated for it.

25,956. When you came down to Yarmouth did you make yourself acquainted with the law upon the subject of elections?—I cannot say I ever thought much about it. I do not know what the law is now.

25,957. You were cognizant of the fact that an Act of Parliament was in existence that required all payments to be made through the election agent?—It seems very ignorant on my part, but upon my word I do not know it.

25,958. No one called your attention to it in the town of Yarmouth?—Oh dear no. Was the Act in force then?

25,959. I forget the date of the Act now, but the Act was in force at the contested election of 1859 certainly.—I never made any inquiries. I think it is very likely certainly.

25,960. Were you not called upon to make a regular appointment of an election agent?—I do not remember that.

25,961. Do you recollect who was your legal agent?—I recollect Mr. Clowes was a sort of an official of some sort, but I do not know what it was called. I think it is Mr. Clowes.

25,962. You did not think it necessary to give the money to Mr. Clowes rather than to Mr. Mainprice?—I did not do it at any rate.

JOHN POWELL sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

J. Powell.

25,963. What are you?—A pilot.

25,964. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

25,965. What did you get for your vote?—Nothing, and I paid my own cab hire into the bargain.

25,966. How did you vote in 1859?—For Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey.

25,967. Did you get anything at that election?—Yes, I did.

25,969. Who from?—I do not know the party, but I got 20*l.*

25,970. Was that 20*l.* to vote for Lacon and Stracey?—No, it was not. It was for my time that I lost to stop on shore. I lost two ships by it, which I could have got more than 30*l.* for, so that I got 20*l.* to make up for the injury.

25,971. Had you determined to vote for Lacon and Stracey in 1859 before you got it?—Yes, without a farthing; only I do not like to lose money by them, and I would not now, not for any one of them.

25,972. Have you any objection to tell me how you voted in 1857?—In 1857 I did not vote at all. I was not here; I was not in Yarmouth. I was at sea at the time when the election came round.

25,973. You did not vote in 1857 at all?—In 1857 I never gave a vote. I was at sea following my occupation.

EDWARD LEGGETT sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

E. Leggett.

25,974. What are you?—I am a sailor.

25,975. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Sir Edmund Lacon.

25,976. And Mr. Goodson?—No.

25,977. Sir Edmund Lacon alone?—Yes.

25,978. Did you get anything for your vote?—No.

25,979. Nothing at all?—No.

25,980. From neither side?—No.

25,981. Why did you not vote for Mr. Goodson? It seems that you did vote for Mr. Goodson?—If I voted for Mr. Goodson, I voted for Sir Edmund Lacon as well—for both of them. I might make that mistake.

25,982. Was any offer of money made to you?—Not to me.

25,983. Whom to then?—Not to anyone that I know of. I did not get anything for my vote. I did not wish for it, I did not want it.

25,984. Did you get anything for your son?—Yes.

25,986. Who from?—From the deceased Mr. Rivett.

THIRTIETH DAY.

E. Leggett.

10 Oct. 1866.

25,987. Did Mr. Rivett offer you nothing for yourself?—No. He was too good a judge. If he had the money he would take care of the money himself rather than give it to me.

25,988. Did he give you money for anybody else besides your son?—Yes.

25,989. Who for?—He gave me 10*l.* for another young man of the name of Samuel Leggett of Gorleston.

25,990. Anybody else?—No. That finished my agency.

25,991. That was all?—That was all.

25,992. Were you well acquainted with Mr. Rivett?—Yes. He was a relation of mine.

25,993. Did he ever communicate with you upon the subject of the elections at any time?—Very little.

25,994. Did he tell you anybody else to whom he had given or was about to give money?—No. He was a man of few words. He in general kept his business to himself. He never exposed his own business.

25,995. You were intimate with him, perhaps you can inform us to whom he did give money?—No. I was not in possession of much of his affairs, very little. I was brought up within 10 yards of him. I always saw him; and so far as daily conversation went we had some.

25,996. I daresay you know a little about this election, if you had some conversation?—I do not know much about it.

25,997. Tell us what you do know.—I do not know anything further than what I have now reported.

25,998. I daresay you can tell us something more about it if you like?—I cannot. You have me here to speak the truth, and I am now about to speak it.

25,999. Do you know the parties whom Mr. Rivett visited previous to the election?—I have been separated from Mr. Rivett these seven years. I live in Yarmouth, and Mr. Rivett lived in Gorleston. I have been separated from Mr. Rivett ever since. The time before I was brought up with him for 20 or 30 years.

26,000. Do you know any other persons, besides these two whom you have mentioned, to whom Mr. Rivett gave money previous to this election?—I do not.

26,001. You cannot give the Commissioners any information?—No. I would willingly do it if I could.

26,002. Mr. Rivett was a relation of yours? Mr. Rivett is said to have received some 1,500*l.*?—So I have been told.

26,003. It would be very desirable if that money could be accounted for?—If I could lead you on to any of it I would; but at the last election I had less to do with Mr. Rivett than I ever had to do with Mr. Rivett at any election.

26,004. You cannot tell us any of the parties whom Mr. Rivett employed as under agents for the distribution of this money?—No. I know nothing at all about it. You see he was an old man. He could not get to me every day. He had a pony, but he was very ill some time, and he could not get out.

26,005. Being very intimate with him I thought you might be able to tell us who were the parties whom he trusted?—I do not know. He never told me. Of course I am not here to tell a tale from hearsay.

26,006. That is what I want to know. That is the very thing we want. We know that he gave money to Mr. Hammond and Mr. Bunn, they have told us so? Yes. And Mr. Bunn told me that he did give him some. He gave me the paltry sum I now tell you of. He gave it to me at Sir Edmund Lacon's bank door. He was always in the habit of getting his dinner at half-past 12, and he asked me if I saw those two whether I would give them 20*l.* for him.

26,007. You can tell us other parties who had Mr. Rivett's confidence?—No. I do not really know.

26,008. You cannot guess anybody to whom Mr. Rivett is likely to have given money to bribe?—It would do me no good to guess.

26,009. It will do us some good.—It is a very unfortunate affair that he did not live a year or two longer, and you would have had him himself.

26,010. I think you ought to give us a guess.—I told you the election was carried out very quietly on my part. I have sworn the truth. That was all the money I handled at that election. I was a dutiful agent; I never kept any money back.

26,011. I am satisfied as to your own proceedings, but I want you to tell me some of the parties whom you believe in your own mind were employed by Mr. Rivett to distribute money?—I do not know, except what you have mentioned, Mr. Hammond and Mr. Bunn.

26,012. Are there no other parties whom you could suggest?—I could not suggest. The distance I was from Mr. Rivett at the time of the election caused it. If I had been as near to him as I had been previously I might have known a good deal of it.

26,013. If you tell me you cannot suggest any other name I am satisfied?—Well I cannot.

26,014. In 1859 did Mr. Rivett give you any money?—No.

26,015. None at all?—No. I had no vote in 1859 I think.

26,016. Did he give you any money to distribute?—No.

26,017. Does Samuel Leggett, the man you put down for 10*l.*, keep an alehouse on the Hall Quay?—Yes.

26,018. (Mr. Slade.) Are you right about Samuel Leggett?—Yes.

26,019. "Great Yarmouth, alehouse, Hall Quay?"—Yes, I am right. I live in the very same house, but the house is worked under his name. That is the reason he gave the vote for it.

R. Veale.

ROBERT VEALE sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

26,020. Where do you live?—South Quay.

26,021. What are you?—A mast maker.

26,022. Did you vote at the last election?—Yes.

26,023. Who for?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

26,024. Were you canvassed by them?—Yes.

26,025. Did you promise them when they canvassed you?—Yes.

26,026. Were you canvassed on the other side?—Yes.

26,027. Was any offer of money made to you by the other party?—Certainly not.

26,028. If it had been you would not have taken it?—Of course not.

26,029. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

26,030. Did you vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey?—Yes.

26,031. I am sorry you have been brought here, it is a mistake.—I suppose it is no use asking you the name of the officious gentleman. I should like to know it if you could tell me.

(Mr. Russell.) I have just said I do not know why you are here.

R. Westgate.

ROBERT WESTGATE sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

26,032. What are you?—A mast maker.

26,033. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

26,034. Did you get anything for your vote?—Yes.

26,035. How much?—10*l.*

26,036. Who did you get it from?—Henry King Swann.

26,037. Had you a vote in 1859?—No, I had no vote in 1859.

WILLIAM KING SWANN sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. W. K. Swann.

26,038. What are you?—A fish merchant.

26,039. Did you get 15*l.* for your vote at the last election?—Yes.

26,040. From Henry King Swann?—Yes, from my brother.

26,041. To vote for Lacon and Goodson?—Yes.

26,042. Did you get anything in 1859?—No, I had no vote then.

26,043. Is that all you got, 15*l.*?—That is all.

GEORGE CHASTON sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. G. Chaston.

26,044. What are you?—Well, I have been a hemp dresser at times.

26,045. What are you?—I have retired from work now altogether.

26,046. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—I had no vote at all.

26,047. Whom did you vote for in 1859?—Watkin and Young.

26,048. Did you get any money then for your vote?—No, I have no recollection of getting any.

26,049. Do you know Mr. Eagleton?—Yes.

26,050. Did he canvass you?—He came to me as I thought, but whether it was him gave me the money or no I do not know, I am sure.

26,051. Did you get the money?—I thought I got 5*l.*, it was brought to me, but I hardly recollect whether I had any or not.

26,052. Did you have 5*l.*?—Yes, I think I had. I can say that I had it.

26,053. Was it brought to you by Mr. Eagleton?—I do not know, I am sure.

26,054. Did Mr. Eagleton promise you?—I do not recollect seeing Mr. Eagleton at all. I do not know anything about it.

26,055. Are you married?—Yes.

26,056. Did your wife get it?—No.

26,057. What makes you think you had 5*l.*?—I I think it was brought to me at the time, a day or two after the election, and made me a present of. That is all I can recollect, but who brought it I cannot say, I have no recollection at all who brought it.

CHARLES ROBERT LUBBOCK sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE. C. R. Lubbock.

26,058. What are you?—A brewer.

26,059. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson at the last election.

26,060. Did you receive any money for your vote?—Not a penny, I have never received any.

26,061. Whom did you vote for at the election of 1859?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey in 1859.

26,062. Do you know Mr. Eagleton?—Yes, I do.

26,063. Did he canvass you at that election?—He did not.

26,064. Did you see him then?—No, I think not. I do not recollect seeing Mr. Eagleton then.

26,065. (Mr. Russell.) Do you live in Regent Road?—No, I live 70, King Street.

26,066. Did you ever live in Regent Road?—No, never.

26,067. You have got a namesake, another Charles Lubbock, in the town?—Yes, there is another living close by the Methodist Chapel, in Regent Road; he did once live in the Regent Road, some two or three years back, 26,068. Do you know where your namesake is now?—In Yarmouth, close by here.

26,069. Whereabouts?—It is directly opposite the Methodist Chapel, going from the Regent Road.

26,070. If there are two men in Yarmouth of the same name it is a mistake?—My name is Charles Robert Lubbock, and his name is only Charles Lubbock.

26,071. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Is that so upon the register?—I think it is so. I think you will find it is so.

26,072. You took no part in that election?—In neither.

26,073. I am exceedingly sorry you should have been put to the inconvenience of being called.—I was rather surprised I should be called up.

ROBERT LITTLEWOOD sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. R. Littlewood.

26,074. What are you?—An ironmonger.

26,075. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—For Lacon and Goodson.

26,076. Did you get any money?—No.

26,077. Were you offered anything on the other side?—No.

26,078. Were you canvassed on the other side?—They called on me, I was out, and they left their card. I did not see them personally.

26,079. They did not leave you any money?—No.

26,080. They did not give you a ticket for 10*l.*?—No, nothing of the kind.

26,081. You are Robert Littlewood of King Street?—Yes.

26,082. You are down here as having received 15*l.*?—I think you will find that is William Littlewood.

26,083. Perhaps it is a mistake; William Littlewood was examined?—Yes, he was examined on Saturday, I think.

26,084. (Mr. Russell.) You voted for Watkin and Young in 1859?—I did.

26,085. How came you to vote for them?—Sir Edmund Lacon called at the governor's, instead of calling at my house, and therefore I voted against him; he did not call at my house. The governor I was living with at that time was a Conservative. Sir Edmund Lacon did not call at my house, and I thought he endeavoured to bias the governor to get me to vote for him. I should have voted for him if he had called at my house instead of at the shop.

26,086. That offended you?—Yes.

26,087. (Mr. Slade.) You promised the Liberals?—No, I did not see them to promise them.

26,088. In the canvass book we have got they have put you down for them.—Indeed, I did not see them at all, they called at the shop and I was out at the time, and they left a card, that is how I know they called on me, seeing the card when I went home.

26,089. (Mr. Russell.) Had you a vote previous to 1859?—No.

26,090. Do you consider yourself a Conservative or a Liberal?—A Conservative.

26,091. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) I see you are marked with having promised Sir Edmund Lacon in their canvass book?—Yes, I promised Sir Edmund Lacon.

ROUSE COLBY sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE. R. Colby.

26,092. What are you?—A cabinet-maker.

26,093. Had you a vote at the last election?—No.

26,094. Had you at the previous election in 1859?—Yes.

26,095. Whom did you vote for?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey.

26,096. What did you receive for your vote?—12*l.*

26,097. Who from?—Mr. Cooper.

THIRTIETH DAY.

R. Colby.

10 Oct. 1866.

26,098. Were you offered any money on the other side?—Yes, 20*l.*

26,099. Who by?—Charles Miller, deceased, linen-draper.

26,100. Charles Miller, now dead?—Yes.

26,101. Did you take any money on the other side?—No.

T. Image.

THOMAS IMAGE sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

26,102. What are you?—A conchologist.

26,103. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

26,104. Did you get anything for your vote?—Not anything.

26,105. Were you canvassed at all?—I have not been canvassed for the last two elections, for I gave the members to understand that I am with them, and I did not wish them to trouble themselves to call at my house. I have an objection to canvassing, and I trust that we shall return members without the trouble of their calling on us.

26,106. You think the electors ought to be left to themselves?—I have an opinion, if you will allow me to express my opinion upon elections. I will not occupy you many minutes.

26,107. Certainly.—I trust I shall live to see the time when corruption and bribery will be done away with, for I am convinced, where we send men to fill so honourable a position, we shall never have a true administration till we do away with corruption and bribery. I could not take money for my vote if it was almost to save my life.

26,108. (Mr. Russell.) Have you always held this opinion?—I have always held that opinion. That has always been my political opinion.

26,109. In 1857?—In 1857 likewise.

26,110. Did you not receive any money then?—I did not receive any money for my vote then, as I can prove.

26,111. Did you receive any money which was not for your vote?—As the question is put I will explain how I received money.

26,112. (Mr. Slade.) In 1857 you voted one way, and in 1859 you voted another?—I did.

26,113. (Mr. Russell.) How came you to vote for the opposite party in 1857?—In 1857 I met Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Vereker on the quay, about a fortnight or three weeks before the election. I told them I should vote for them; unfortunately the Friday, previous to the election on the Saturday, I had a commission sent from Mr. McIntosh, in London, to go to Ipswich to sell some goods wholesale. I was not in a position that I could afford to lose my time to serve the principles I had, which were Conservative; the consequence is I went to Mr. Green; I said, I am sorry to say I cannot afford to stop to serve you; I have a commission at Ipswich; and the words he said to me was, Mr. Image, I shall not want you; I said, Very well; I shall call at the committee on Monday morning. I called on Monday morning; I think I saw Mr. Reynolds, or one of the committee; I said, Will you have the goodness to receive my vote for Sir Edmund Lacon, as I cannot give my time to serve; he said, We are sorry for it; then the Liberals picked me up and said, We will pay you for your detention. I said, I do not wish to be paid for my vote; I said, I know a person who has left Yarmouth intends to vote Liberal; I think he is living at Harlestone, and they said, If you can get him we will compensate you.

26,114. To make a very long story short, how much did you receive?—I received 5*l.* for a journey which came to 6*l.* 4*s.*

26,115. 5*l.* is all you got?—5*l.* is all I got.

26,116. Who gave you the 5*l.* in 1857?—A man of the name of Royal gave it to me, not at the time of the election, but some time after. I would not take it previous for my vote. I would not accept it at the time I gave my vote.

26,117. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) In 1857 you voted contrary to your principles?—I voted contrary to my principles in 1857, as it were; I had recently come to Yarmouth, I was not acquainted with the principles of the town.

26,118. You voted contrary to your principles?—I voted contrary to my principles.

26,119. And you were not bribed in 1859 to do so?—I was not bribed in 1859, I came a journey and I did not receive any expenses.

S. Clarke.

SAMUEL CLARKE sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

26,120. What are you?—A boat builder.

26,121. Did you vote for Lacon and Goodson at the last election?—Yes.

26,122. Did you get anything for your vote?—No, not a penny.

26,123. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

26,124. Were you canvassed at all for your vote in 1865?—Last year?

26,125. Yes.—Sir Edmund Lacon came and asked me for my vote.

26,126. Did you promise him?—Yes.

26,127. Were you offered anything at all by the other side?—No, the other side called at my house, but I was not at home. I never saw them at all.

26,128. Do you live in Regent Road?—I did do so at the time of the election.

26,129. Do you recollect how long before the election it was that you promised Sir Edmund Lacon?—Well, I think it might be a week, I cannot say for a day or two; he came to the house one time when I was at dinner, between one and two.

26,130. Are you prepared to say no offer was made to you at all?—No, certainly not.

26,131. (Mr. Russell.) Did you ever live in Crown Place?—No.

26,132. Who is Samuel Clarke who lives in Crown Place, is he a relation of yours?—No, I do not know him at all.

S. Lessey.

SAMUEL LESSEY sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

26,133. What are you?—A grocer.

26,134. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

26,135. Did you take any part in the last election?—No.

26,136. Did any person come to your shop at the last election, the day before?—With reference to the election?

26,137. Yes.—Not that I am aware of.

26,138. Was there any meeting held at your shop at two o'clock on the morning before the election?—Well, there was a meeting of three folks who called in, three friends of mine, and they smoked a cigar in my shop.

26,139. To what time?—3 or 4 o'clock in the morning.

26,140. Who were they?—Robert Veale, Robert Silvers, and John Cable. They could not get any lush anywhere else, and they came to mine.

26,141. Did all those three gentlemen and yourself vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson? I think they did.

26,142. Or else they would not have been there?—Yes.

26,143. What did they come for?—I tell you they could not get any allowance anywhere else, and they cracked a bottle at my shop and smoked cigars till 3 or 4 o'clock, then they went home; we often meet of a night.

26,144. Had you asked them to call at your shop?—No, only promiscuously; when we left the room we were in I said, "Step into mine," and the gas was alight, and we sat in the shop till 3 or 4 o'clock.

26,145. Are you aware of any money being paid to voters at the last election?—I am not indeed, I assure you.

26,146. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes, I have been a voter for 40 years.

26,147. Did you always vote the same way?—The last 20 years I have.

26,148. Always voted for the Conservatives?—Yes. The first part of the time I did not; I voted the other way.

26,149. What made you change your politics?—I did not like the party.

26,150. You received nothing, of course?—Oh dear no.

RICHARD BROWN, senior, sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. R. Brown.

26,151. What are you?—Well, I am not anything just now; I have been at work at the bathing machines, but I have left off.

26,152. Retired from business?—Yes.

26,153. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

26,154. Did you get anything for your vote?—No.

26,155. Whom did you vote for in 1859?—That was the election before?

26,156. Yes.—The same, Lacon and Stracey.

26,157. Whom did you vote for in 1857?—I voted for the other party then.

26,158. What caused you to change your opinions?—Well, I do not know exactly what it was; I did change them.

26,159. Did you get any money in 1859?—No, never in my life, except once I got half-a-crown to pay a man 4*s.* for my day's work. I was forced to hire a man and pay him 4*s.* for his day's work, and when I went to the committee room they gave me half-a-crown.

26,160. Then you are not a person who changed his opinions in 1859 for money?—No, I never asked for any, and I never was offered any.

26,161. You voted for Watkin and Mellor in 1857? I voted for Mr. McCullagh twice, I think. I think he put up here twice.

26,162. You voted for Watkin in 1857, did you not?—He and the Blue party; I have voted only for this party twice.

26,163. Can you give us the reason for your change of party?—I have no particular reason, not particularly. Where I live there are a great deal of nuisances around the house, and they promised me they would put it by, but they did not, and so I left them and went to the other party

26,164. (Mr. Slade.) Did you see Downing at the last election?—No.

26,165. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Mr. Watkin thinks because you voted for him in 1857, and did not vote for him in 1859, therefore you must have been bribed?—No, I never was bribed in my life.

ABRAHAM HALL sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE. A. Hall.

26,166. What are you?—A kiddier, a pork-butcher.

26,167. You had not got a vote at the last election?—No.

26,174. Had you anything for your vote?—No.

26,175. Are you the son of the last witness? You are Richard Brown, junior?—Yes, he was up here a little while ago.

26,176. He was the last witness but one?—Yes.

26,177. You got nothing for your vote?—No.

26,178. Did you promise Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson as soon as they asked you?—No; Sir Edmund Lacon never asked me, he came round to my house to ask me; I was not in the way, and I did not see him.

26,179. You did not promise him at all?—No.

26,180. Did your father promise him for you?—No, I think not. I think my father would not do anything of that kind for me.

26,181. Were you known to belong to that party?—No, I never did vote before.

26,182. Both parties have taken the liberty of putting you down as promised to the Conservatives.—That is quite wrong; I never spoke to either of the parties.

26,183. You got nothing for your vote?—Nothing at all.

26,184. Were you offered anything?—I was offered nothing.

26,185. And you knew there was money going about?—Well, I heard tell of such things, but I was never offered any.

26,186 You were never offered any, you say?—Yes.

26,187. You are surprised to hear that you are estimated as a person who will take money?—No, I should not be surprised. There was nobody ever offered me anything; if they had, I do not know that I should have accepted it.

26,188. (Mr. Slade.) Did Downing ask you for your vote?—No; I have not spoken half-a-dozen words to Downing ever since I have known him.

JAMES HODDS sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. J. Hodds.

26,189. What are you?—A fruiterer.

26,190. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

26,191. Did you get anything for your vote?—Not a farthing.

26,192. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

26,194. (Mr. Slade.) Did you give anybody else any money?—No, I had nothing to do with it.

26,195. Did you canvass anybody for their votes?—No.

26,196. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Were you canvassed for your vote?—No.

26,197. Were you not seen by Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman?—No, I was not seen at all; I was not at home when they canvassed.

26,198. They did canvass you?—They canvassed a my house, but I was not at home.

26,199. Did anybody see them?—I do not know.

THIRTIETH DAY.

J. Hodds.

10 Oct. 1866.

26,200. Are you married?—Yes.

26,201. Did your wife see him?—She saw Mr. Brogden.

26,202. Did she tell Mr. Brogden you were going to vote for him?—No, she did not say anything at all about it.

26,203. Was that early in the canvass, or late, to your recollection?—I think they came, as my wife said, about 11 o'clock in the morning.

26,204. Was it near to the day of the election?—That I do not know. I voted early.

26,205. What I want to know is, how long before the day of the election was it they called upon you?—I think it was about four days before the election when they called.

26,206. And you are sure your wife did not say you were going to vote for them?—I am sure she did not; in fact they called twice, one day after the other.

26,207. Did they call on you on the other side?—Not at all, not one of them.

26,208. Did they not call when you were absent and your wife saw them?—No.

26,209. Can you account for the fact that both parties claim the promise?—I did not promise either of them. I told Skoulding I should vote for Lacon and Goodson.

26,210. When was that?—A month before the time; he is a friend of mine, and I promised him I would vote for them.

26,211. Both parties say you promised them?—Not one of them; I did not see either of them.

26,212. Your wife did not get anything?—No, I am certain of that.

26,213. (Mr. Slade.) Skoulding asked you which way you were going to vote?—Skoulding asked me which way I was going to vote, and I told him I should vote for Lacon and Goodson.

26,214. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Had you a vote in 1857?—No.

J. King.

JOHN KING sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

26,215. What are you?—A publican.

26,216. Did you vote at this last election?—Yes, the first time.

26,217. Whom did you vote for?—Lacon and Goodson.

26,218. Did you get anything for your vote?—Not a halfpenny.

26,219. Whom did you vote for in 1859?—Not at all.

26,220. (Mr. Russell.) Do you draw your beer from Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes.

26,221. Who asked you for your vote?—Well, I believe Sir Edmund Lacon did speak to me about it, and that was all.

26,222. You promised him at once?—Directly; if he had not I should have voted.

W. B. Pye.

WILLIAM B. PYE recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

26,223. Do you know William Blyth?—The painter do you mean?

26,224. Yes, the painter, plumber, and glazier?—Yes, a fish curer he used to be.

26,225. Did you go up with him to the poll in the year 1859?—I think not, but I could not say; I am not sure. I think I may say I am sure I did not go up with him.

26,226. He has come here to-day and has sworn you did?—I might do. I think I may say not.

26,227. Do you recollect anything at all about the election of 1859?—I recollect going to vote, but I do not think I went up with any voter myself.

26,228. If Blyth says you went up with him, is that so?—I think I went up by myself. I would not, I never had anything to do with Blyth, nor yet nobody else.

26,229. Say one way or another, did you go up to the poll with Blyth?—Yes, he was a very particular friend of mine, we were always engaged in business together; we used to talk about business, about the prices we made, and so forth.

26,230. Did you tell Blyth at that election you had money from Cooper?—Never. I am able to contradict that anywhere.

26,231. You told us yesterday that you would bring up some evidence to show you were not living in the house in Howard Street?—Yes, I can tell you the date, I have been and got the date from the good lady. John W. Girling came to live there the 15th October 1858.

26,232. Is what you have just read your own writing?—Yes. He says he has not been ordered up here, John W. Girling. This is from my book, or rather the good lady's book. John W. Girling came to live there October 15th, 1858.

26,233. Had you ever received any money to vote at municipal elections from Mr. Cooper?—Never.

26,234. Blyth has been here this morning and he says he saw you receive it?—That is not true.

26,235. That is a lie?—I will swear it is a lie. Let Blyth come forward before me and say so. I never had the value of a penny piece, in fact I was surprised that I was put down as such from what Mr. Cooper said yesterday.

26,236. (Mr. Russell.) Is it from principle you did not take it, or that you were never offered it?—If you offered me ever so much I would not take it. I always voted for a Tory, except once, that is the only time I did not.

26,237. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Had you a vote in 1857?—Yes, I had a vote in 1857, because I have voted for several years.

26,238. Whom did you vote for in 1857?—I do not know who the candidates were.

26,239. The candidates in 1857 were Mr. Watkin and Mr. McCullagh, and Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Vereker?—I could not tell you whom I voted for unless I had the poll-book. There was once I voted for the Liberals, and the year I could not say, unless I had the poll-book to go by.

26,240. There was one occasion on which you voted for the Liberal party?—Yes.

26,241. Did you get paid then?—No, I never received a farthing, never a penny, nor yet the value of half a pint of beer.

26,242. How came you to vote for the Tories on the next occasion?—I was always on the Tory side, and always will be.

26,243. What do you mean by telling me you have always voted on the Tory side?—Except that once. I think they were turned out, and I said I would vote for them because they turned them out. As I told you yesterday I could not say when I was.

26,244. Had your father a vote?—Yes, I think he had a vote these last one or two elections, he has now. I think he has had one these two or three elections.

26,245. Did he have any money?—Yes, this last time he had.

26,246. Has he been examined?—His wife has been.

26,247. (Mr. Slade.) He is ill?—Yes, he has been laid up these three years.

26,248. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you ever get any money for him?—Yes, I did, because I knew he stood in need of it.

26,249. Who did you go to to get money for him; whom did you ask for money for your father?—Well, I went to Mr. Harrison, he told me if I could get him a vote they could have some money, that is what he told me. He is a gentleman living in Gaol Street.

26,250. Did Harrison get the money for him?—

Well, he told me to come in twice. I went in twice. Then he sent me to see another gentleman. I do not know anything further about it.

26,251. We must know. Did you get the money from Harrison ?—No.

26,252. Did he promise you the money ?—No, he said he would see me again.

26,253. Did you go to him again ?—Yes, I went to him again.

26,254. Well, what then ?—He said he could not say anything about it.

26,255. Did you get the money in consequence of going to him ?—No.

26,256. When did you get the money ?—I never had it.

26,257. Whom did you go to afterwards ?—I never had any money at all. I do not know where they got it from.

26,258. I mean for your father ?—I never got it. I do not know where they got it from. I do not know anything about it more than that. I do not know anything more about it.

26,259. Whom did Mr. Harrison send you to see ?—He did not send me to see anybody. He said he would see me again.

26,260. You said he sent you to see somebody else?—If I said so I made an error. He said he would see me again.

26,261. (Mr. Slade.) Why did you not take money at the election of 1859 ?—I never had the chance, because I never had any offered to me, and they knew it would be of no use offering me any.

26,262. Why would it be no use offering you money ?—Because I always voted on the Tory side, except that one time.

26,263. Would not you accept money ?—No, I would not, not on any account.

26,264. You are above that ?—I am, I hope. I hope, as far as that goes, I would rather want a piece of bread.

26,265. You are not above asking for money for your father ?—No.

26,266. What is the difference ?—Because he is an aged man, and incapable of work. I am a young man, and capable of working for my living.

26,267. (Mr. Russell.) You might have taken the money for your vote and given it to your father ?—My father was in bed then. I did not require it. He never had anything before in his life. That I can speak to, as well as myself.

GEORGE HARVEY recalled ; examined by Mr. SLADE. G. Harvey.

26,268. Did you receive any money at the election of 1859 ?—Yes.

26,269. Who from ?—I think it was sent to me from Mr. Green. It came through Mr. Powell.

26,270. How much was it ?—30*l.*

26,271. Through Benjamin Powell ?—He gave it to me.

26,272. What did you do with that 30*l.* ?—I gave it to Mr. Seago.

26,273. Samuel Seago ?—Samuel Seago, junior, and his father.

26,274. The two Seagoes ?—Yes.

26,275. 15*l.* each ?—Yes.

26,276. Did you receive any other money for the election in that year ?—No, no other money at all.

26,277. Samuel Seago denies receiving money in 1859 ?—I gave it to him.

26,278. He said he voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey, because Mr. Fill behaved unpleasantly to him ?—I gave him the 15*l.* myself.

26,279. Did you give it to Seago for himself, or to give to somebody else ?—I gave it to himself, and I think he took 15*l.* to give to his father as well.

26,280. It may be the father I am speaking of, who said he voted that way. The man I mean got 75*l.* from Parker ?—Yes, that is the same.

26,281. Have you seen this man Seago since ?—I have seen him about the quay.

26,282. Have you ever reminded him about this 15*l.* ?—I do not know that I have reminded him of it. I have spoken to him about the election matters.

26,283. Has he ever acknowledged to you that he took this money ?—No, I do not know that he has, not directly.

26,284. Has he ever spoken to you about this ?—No, I do not know that he has spoken to me about that in particular.

26,285. About receiving money in 1859 ?—I think his father will tell you that he had the 15*l.* from him, and that will prove clearly that I gave it.

26,286. His father is not on the register now ?—I think not.

26,287. Is his father alive ?—I believe so. He is a very old man. I believe I saw him a little while ago.

26,288. You gave it to Samuel Seago, junior, for his father ?—Yes.

26,289. Do you know whether his father received it ?—That I do not know, most likely. He voted that way I know.

26,290. Did you ask young Seago whether he gave it to his father ?—I do not remember doing that. I might have done so, but I do not remember.

26,291. Here is Samuel Seago's evidence : "What "did you get for your vote in 1859 ?—I do not re- "collect getting anything for it."—You are now reading his evidence I suppose.

26,292. Yes: "I never had any money from Mr. "Cooper in my life, not a penny." Then I say, "What made you vote for Lacon and Stracey then ? "I do not know. Mr. Fill behaved a little un- "pleasant to me, and for that reason I did not vote "that side." He had another reason besides that ?—I should think so.

26,293. Are you sure Benjamin Powell gave you the money ?—I am pretty sure.

26,294. I will tell you why, because Benjamin Powell has come here and said in 1859 he got 45*l.* from Mr. Green, and that money he gave to Daniel Carter 15*l.*, Samuel Haylett 15*l.*, and James Turrell 15*l.* ?—Green sent it to me for him, so that he might not account for it in that way.

26,295. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Naturally he would not account for it ?—He did not disburse it himself. Perhaps he would not account for it in that way.

26,296. Did Green speak to you upon the subject ?—Yes, I knew him very well ; I lived close to him.

26,297. (Mr. Slade.) I thought it better to put that to you ?—It is better I believe.

26,298. (Mr. Russell.) Your account is exactly corroborated by Mr. Cooper. Mr. Cooper gave us the name of Seago as having been bribed in 1859, and he said he gave you money for them ?—Mr. Cooper did.

26,299. That exactly corroborates your story ?—No, I got it from Mr. Green.

DANIEL BEALES sworn ; examined by Mr. SLADE. D. Beales.

26,300. Do you live in the Victoria Road ?—Yes.

26,301. Who did you vote for at the last election ?—Goodson.

26,302. What are you ?—A labouring man.

26,303. Are you sure you did not vote for the other side ?—No.

26,304. Not for Brogden and Vanderbyl ?—No.

26,305. You are wrong; you voted the other way ?—No, I believe not.

26,306. The poll book says you did ?—No.

26,307. Are you sure you have not forgotten it ?—Certainly I have not.

THIRTIETH DAY.

D Beales.

10 Oct. 1866.

26,308. Did you receive any money for your vote?—No.

26,309. Do you know a man named Downing?—Perfectly well.

26,310. Did he give you any money for your vote?—Downing gave me 10*l.*

26,311. When did he give you that?—I think it was about two days before the election took place.

26,312. What other money did you get besides that 10*l.*?—Not one penny.

26,313. Did you go up to the "Angel"?—No.

26,314. Did you go to Cattermole's?—No.

26,315. Did you not receive 15*l.* of some other gentleman?—Not one farthing.

26,316. Did Downing give you a ticket?—No.

26,317. Did he give you ten sovereigns?—He gave my money into my hand, ten sovereigns.

26,318. Is Daniel Beales, who was on the register, your son?—Daniel Beales who is dead. No, I think not.

26,319. You think he was not?—I think he was not.

26,320. Did you receive any money on the other side?—No. Not one farthing.

26,321. Were you offered any?—No.

26,322. Had you a vote in the election before the last in 1859?—I had not.

26,323. Did you live in Mill Road?—It is called the Victoria Road and Mill Road, if you please to call it so.

26,324. You lived there then?—I did so.

26,325. You voted then?—Of course I had a vote then.

26,326. Then you did vote?—Yes.

26,327. Did you get any money for your vote?—No, not a farthing.

26,328. Do you know a man named Eagleton?—Perfectly.

26,329. What did he give you?—Not one farthing.

26,330. Are you sure of that?—Certain of that.

26,331. Did anybody give you any money?—No.

26,332. (Mr. Russell.) You say you voted for Lacon and Goodson last election?—Yes.

26,333. And you got 10*l.* from Mr. Downing to vote the other way?—No, certainly not.

26,334. What did Downing give you the money for?—I do not know. He gave me the money, what it was for I do not know. I am sure I cannot say.

26,335. Was Daniel Beales, junior, reputed to be your son?—Yes, I suppose he was.

26,336. Do you know that he had money at the last election?—No, I cannot account for that.

26,337. Did you see much of him?—No.

Mr. C. Cory.

Mr. Charles Cory recalled; examined by Mr. Fitzgerald.

26,338. We wish to ask you some questions about the election of 1859. What part did you take in that election?—I took no part in the election myself, except canvassing a few voters.

26,339. Were you not acting as adviser to Sir Edmund Lacon with regard to the election?—Not at all.

26,340. Had you any communication with Sir Henry Stracey with regard to the election?—Nothing at all, except by meeting him in the street and canvassing with him at times; nothing else.

26,341. Were you employed by Sir Henry Stracey as his solicitor on the petition?—Yes, I was, with Sir Edmund Lacon.

26,342. And did you send in an account of the expenditure and expenses of that petition to Sir Henry Stracey?—I think I did. Yes, I think so. I have no doubt I did.

26,343. How were you paid?—I think he paid me part, and part was paid by Sir Edmund Lacon in the account I mentioned.

26,344. Part was paid by Sir Henry Stracey and part by Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes, in the defence of the petition.

26,345. The account you sent in to Sir Henry Stracey would be the same that you sent in to Sir Edmund Lacon?—Sir Edmund Lacon's account was sent in afterwards some time, there were a great number of things, actions, and suits after that, and then it was sent in altogether. Sir Henry Stracey's was sent in before, that is my impression.

26,346. I presume your books would show what were the costs of the petition that you charged to Sir Henry Stracey?—I think probably they might, what I received they would probably.

26,347. But your books would show the items?—I do not think my books would show the items, because I do not keep those in a book.

26,348. Have you no copy of the bill you sent to Sir Henry Stracey?—Not that I am aware of.

26,349. Do not you keep a copy of your accounts?—I do for some time, but I do not usually keep them long.

26,350. Does not the account you send in correspond with your books?—I did not keep any books of those affairs.

26,351. Do you remember the amount charged to Sir Henry Stracey for the petition?—I do not know. The best part of it was paid in London, so that I do not know by memory.

26,352. Yours would not include the parliamentary agent's expenses in London?—No. I think they were paid in London separate, that is my impression.

26,353. We have heard that Sir Henry Stracey indirectly sent a sum of money to Mr. Green. Were you cognizant of that at the time?—Not at all.

26,354. Were you cognizant of the fact that any money was sent to Mr. Green on behalf of Sir Edmund Lacon?—No, I was not. I knew nothing about the money matters at all.

26,355. You knew nothing about it?—I knew nothing about the money matters.

26,356. Did you hear anything at the time?—No. I might have heard a rumour or talk, but nothing that I knew of in any way. I did not mix up with the election very much.

26,357. I believe you told us before, you did not know anything about Mr. Nightingale having advanced money until he communicated it himself?—I did not say that. I said I had nothing to do with the last election. The previous election you mean of 1859?

26,358. Yes—I did not mix up with the election at all, and then afterwards he came to me about the money.

26,359. Was that the first time you became acquainted with the fact that Mr. Nightingale had advanced the 1,000*l.*?—It was, after the election was over.

26,360. When he came and asked you to put it in the bill?—It had been mentioned before that, but I do not think my evidence implied I never heard it before. I do not mean to imply that at all events.

26,361. Do you recollect when you first became acquainted with the fact that Mr. Nightingale had advanced 1,000*l.* for that?—No, I do not.

26,362. That was soon after the election?—I think it was soon after the election.

26,363. You did not communicate that fact to Sir Edmund Lacon?—Certainly not.

26,364. Did you hear of money being advanced for Sir Edmund Lacon?—No, I did not.

26,365. Did you ever act as solicitor to Sir Edmund Lacon's mother?—No.

26,366. Are you aware that Mr. Reynolds suggested yesterday that more money might have been furnished by the Dowager Lady Lacon?—I heard it mentioned.

26,367. Had you ever heard it before?—I had heard a rumour. I merely heard it rumoured. It might be a guess, or it might be anything else. I knew nothing of my own knowledge at all in any way whatever.

26,368. Who was acting for Sir Edmund Lacon as solicitor at that time?—I think Mr. Isaac Preston or Mr. Charles Preston. They are his solicitors always.

26,369. They are Sir Edmund Lacon's solicitors!—Yes.

26,370. They are also solicitors for the Dowager Lady Lacon?—I do not know. I should fancy they were, but I do not know.

26,371. (Mr. Slade.) Was not Mr. Charles Preston acting as agent for the election expenses, both for Sir Henry Stracey and Sir Edmund Lacon?—In 1859?

26,372. Yes.—I think he was the appointed agent. I fancy so, that is my impression.

26,373. Did you act for Sir Edmund Lacon at all in 1859?—No, not in the least. I did not act for Sir Edmund Lacon until on the petition.

26,374. Was the bill that you sent in to Sir Henry Stracey only the expenses of the petition?—That is all, nothing else at all.

26,375. Was Mr. Reynolds' bill included in the bill you sent in to Sir Henry Stracey?—I do not think there was any bill of Mr. Reynolds. Mr. Reynolds assisted, and I paid him so much for the assistance I think. That is my impression now. I paid him a sum I think for services he rendered me.

26,376. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Mr. Reynolds told us he acted as a sort of clerk in that affair?—Not as clerk. He was an assistant in that affair.

26,377. Then that 50*l.* was the only item besides the expenses of the petition that was included?—That was, and that was part of the expenses of the petition.

26,378. Do you recollect the amount of the whole?—No, I do not at all. I do not like to speak from impressions because it is so difficult to speak of what it is.

26,379. We should like to know what the expenses of the petition were?—It did not come all through my hands, the expenses of the petition; the expenses that came through my hands I could ascertain.

26,380. That is what we want.—I can send you a note, if that will do.

26,381. Can you also ascertain the amount of the parliamentary account, the whole cost to Sir Henry Stracey of the petition?—No, I cannot ascertain the parliamentary agent's account, because there was a dispute about it, and there were several objections to the account, and it was finally settled in London without my knowledge at all.

26,382. Who would it be settled between?—I do not know who settled it on behalf of Sir Henry Stracey or Sir Edmund Lacon, but I believe Sir Henry Stracey objected strongly to a part of it, and Mr. Spofforth was the agent at the time. It was settled between Mr. Spofforth and Sir Henry Stracey, or some one on his behalf. There was a considerable dispute about the matter.

26,383. Was your part paid by a cheque on Harvey and Hudson's of Norwich?—I do not know what bank it was on.

26,384. By a cheque on a bank at Norwich?—I think so, that is my impression.

26,385. Sir Henry Stracey has told us that all the expenditure relating to the election and the petition, and some private affairs of his own, were settled at the same time, about two years after the election?—I have no doubt Sir Henry Stracey sent me a cheque, as far as I was concerned.

26,386. He sent you a cheque for all that was due to you?—I think so.

26,387. And that would appear in the banking account?—Yes.

26,388. You are not aware whether the expenses of the petition, the disputed account, were settled at the same time?—No, it was not settled at the same time, not with me. It was settled afterwards. My impression is they settled mine first, and settled the other afterwards.

26,389. Did you consider yourself as acting for Sir Edmund Lacon at the election?—No, certainly not. I had nothing whatever to do with Sir Edmund Lacon. I declined to have anything to do with the election at all.

26,390. And you cannot give us any more information with regard to the election?—No, I am very glad that I cannot.

26,391. You do become acquainted with secrets afterwards?—We do hear all sorts of things, but that is not evidence.

26,392. It is the means of getting at evidence?—Yes, it is the means of getting at it.

26,393. (Mr. Slade.) Were you aware after the election of 1859 of any more money besides the 1,000*l.* having been advanced by Mr. Nightingale?—Not that I am aware of.

26,394. You were never aware of it?—No, never; he says that it was 1,000*l.* that he advanced, and I paid it him back, that was his statement.

26,395. We have not asked him.—Whatever Mr. Nightingale advanced that way it is my impression that I paid him back again. That is what I mentioned.

26,396. The question is, was it 1,000*l.* or was it more?—That I cannot be positive about. My impression was it was less. I should have said less if he had asked me positively, only he would have known better than I should perhaps.

26,397. Are you aware of Sir Edmund Lacon having paid any other money besides this 1,000*l.* after the election to anybody who had advanced money for him?—No, not at all. I do not think Sir Edmund Lacon paid a sixpence. I think not, at least I cannot tell myself. I am not aware of it at all.

26,398. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You told me you did hear a rumour that the Dowager Lady Lacon had advanced some money?—I think it was gossip to some extent.

26,399. Did you hear of anybody else?—No.

26,400. There was no other name mentioned at all?—No.

26,401. You must have had some belief on the subject yourself, I daresay?—No, I had not at all.

26,402. Had you ever communicated with Mr. Reynolds about it?—No.

26,403. Mr. Reynolds has told us that, acting on behalf of Sir Henry Stracey, he felt it his duty to inquire how much money Mr. Green had got from Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes.

26,404. And he satisfied himself a similar sum to that advanced by Sir Henry Stracey was advanced by Sir Edmund Lacon, and you say you are ignorant of the sum that was advanced?—I am.

26,405. You were not consulted about it?—Not the least in the world.

26,406. And you had nothing to do with the settlement of the account at the banker's?—No, nothing at all.

26,407. Will you let us have the amount of those accounts?—I will send it.

26,408. I want to ask with regard to the prosecution of Fayerman, which I believe you conducted?—Yes, I did.

26,409. Tell me the grounds on which the prosecution failed?—It was this, in a case of perjury you must have two witnesses to confirm the evidence.

26,410. Two witnesses to disprove what he has sworn?—Upon the examination at the Central Criminal Court the point was, whether Sir Edmund Lacon was in the Victoria Hotel at 12 o'clock at night or the time stated by the witness. My counsel unfortunately did not ask the witness, Balls, the other witness, the exact time, and it broke down in that way, and I complained very much afterwards about it.

26,411. What was the allegation in the indictment?—That he had gone before the Committee of the House of Commons, and sworn that Sir Edmund Lacon had given him a 5*l.* note on a certain night in a certain road, which was denied, and he said also, this witness, that he had endorsed the note at the time; but unfortunately for his evidence the note had been endorsed 1860 instead of 1859, when the transaction took place, and it was clear on the note. We had a photograph and produced it to the Committee, but they did not believe it; and when the trial went on Fayerman offered, I heard, to confess if we did not proceed with the prosecution.

26,412. I want to know the grounds on which the prosecution failed?—That the question was not put to him as to the precise time. Sir Edmund Lacon was in the hotel the whole time, so that he could not by possibility have been in the road.

26,413. Sir Edmund Lacon was I suppose a witness to prove that he was in the hotel at a particular hour?—Yes.

26,414. And the other witness?—They did not ask him the question as to the particular hour Sir Edmund Lacon went to bed. He took his candle and went to bed, and the question was the particular hour and time that he went to bed.

26,415. The case went to the jury?—Yes, the case went to the jury, and the judge made some very strong remarks upon the case against Fayerman.

26,416. Was it relied on then by the counsel for the defence that the fact was not negatived by the testimony of two witnesses?—Yes.

26,417. That was the defence?—Yes, that was the defence, and also they took some objection about one or two witnesses not quite corroborating each other, not as to the main point, but as to a secondary point, but that was the main point.

26,418. The case was not stopped by the judge telling the jury there was not sufficient legal evidence?—No, it was not stopped; but the judge when he wound up said he thought the evidence was hardly sufficiently legal to convict the party of the offence, and he made some strong remarks upon the offence.

26,419. You say your counsel omitted to ask that?—Yes, he did.

26,420. How came it to be tried at the Central Criminal Court?—Because he committed perjury in London, and we were obliged to take it there.

26,421. I see that the case was stopped?—Yes; I saw the evidence that was given by Mr. Livingston, which I think is the most gross, and especially as I think he must, and all the party must have known afterwards from what subsequently transpired that it was a conspiracy altogether. I must put my protest against that, because it was a gross thing on Mr. Livingston's part to come here and say that Sir Edmund Lacon bribed that man.

Wm. Mason.

WILLIAM MASON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

26,422. What are you?—I am a groom.

26,423. You had not got a vote at the last election, had you?—No.

26,424. You had got a vote in 1859?—Yes.

26,425. Whom did you vote for then?—Young and Stracey.

26,426. How came you to split your vote?—I altered my mind on the day.

26,427. Who had you promised before?—I promised a man that offered me 10*l.* He did not give me the 10*l.* at the identical time, so that I changed my mind.

26,428. Was that Greenhow?—Yes.

26,429. He promised you 10*l.*—Yes.

26,430. Do you mean to say he did not give it?—He gave me 5*l.*, then he came down to the stable and gave me 5*l.* more, and I returned that back.

26,431. You kept 5*l.* and returned 5*l.*?—I took 5*l.* and I returned 5*l.* back.

26,432. That was to vote for Watkin and Young?—Yes, I promised him I should vote for Watkin and Young, but still he would not come forward with his money, and therefore I did not vote for them.

26,433. What did you get for voting for Sir Henry Stracey?—Nothing.

26,434. Was 5*l.* all you got?—Yes.

26,435. How did you vote in 1857?—I do not know what members they were. They were Blue, but I cannot tell you the names now. I think it was McCullagh and Watkin, I am not sure.

26,436. How came you to vote for Sir Henry Stracey?—I changed my mind.

26,437. Are you sure you did not get some money to change your mind?—No, not a farthing.

Adjourned till to-morrow at half-past 10.

THIRTY-FIRST DAY.

THIRTY-FIRST DAY.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 11th October 1866.

C. A. Preston.

11 Oct. 1866.

CHARLES ABBOTT PRESTON sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

26,438. You are a solicitor?—Yes, in Yarmouth, in partnership with my brother, Mr. Isaac Preston.

26,439. Were you appointed agent to Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey in 1859?—Yes, the legal agent.

26,440. When was your appointment made?—Just previous to the election.

26,441. A day or two?—Yes, two or three days previous to the election, or four or five days, I should think. I have my appointments here.

26,442. When was it then?—Here are the appointments (the witness handed the documents in).

26,443. I see Sir Edmund Lacon's appointment is dated on the 26th of April, that is three days before the election?—Somewhere thereabouts.

26,444. And Sir Henry Stracey's is dated the 22th, which is the day of the election?—Yes, that was the day of the election.

26,445. Previously to these appointments being made, had you anything to do with the election on behalf of the candidates?—Yes, I was certainly acting on behalf of Sir Edmund Lacon, particularly before the election, because I know I was at the rooms several days, two or three days previous to the election.

26,446. Were you furnished with any money previous to the election?—No; what money I advanced up to the election was out of my own pocket. There were one or two trifling charges.

26,447. That you paid yourself?—That I paid myself.

26,448. And after the election the bills were sent into you?—Yes, for me to pay.

26,449. And you transmitted them to the election auditor?—Every item that I spent.

26,450. And I suppose the election auditor paid the bills?—The election auditor pays the bills. I signed my name at the bottom as the authority and the parties took them to the election auditor, and received the money, and I supplied the election auditor with money from time to time as he required it to meet the bills.

26,451. And were you paid by Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey?—It was charged equally to Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey. Mr. Reynolds, as acting for Sir Henry Stracey in his absence, supplied me with the amounts from time to time and Sir Edmund Lacon, on the other hand, supplied me himself with the credit at the bank.

26,452. Were you aware that other monies besides money that passed through your hands, or rather the account of which passed through your hands, had been expended in the election?—Not one farthing.

26,453. Are you Sir Edmund Lacon's private solicitor?—Yes.

26,454. Did Sir Edmund Lacon say anything to you about the expenses of the election previously?—Nothing whatever.

26,455. No special direction?—No.

26,456. Or conversation?—I occasionally applied to him sometimes for the amount, to tell him what the amount was that had been paid by me, and it always was, "Well, what cash you want you shall have."

26,457. Were you applied to for money to disburse for any preliminary expenses at all?—No none whatever.

26,458. I mean legal expenses?—No, none whatever. I remember the first amount was merely a carpenter for putting up the desks. He had an execution put in his house, something of that kind, and they came to me to know whether I would pay the probable amount of his bill in advance to assist him, which I did out of my own pocket.

26,459. Had you anything to do with the petition?—Nothing whatever.

26,460. Who paid Sir Henry Stracey's account?—After the election Sir Henry Stracey left, leaving Mr. Reynolds to represent him, and I applied to Mr. Reynolds, the same as I did to Sir Edmund Lacon, at times, to see what money had been expended, and if I was out of pocket to be supplied with the necessary amount to meet bills.

26,461. You are aware now, since this Commission has been opened, that some money was spent in illegal expenditure on behalf of Sir Edmund Lacon?—I have heard it and I have read it.

26,462. You have heard it for the first time since this Commission was opened?—Yes, except by mere report in the town, which is the same old song we always hear after a contest.

26,463. You never heard before, I presume, that part of the money came from Mr. Nightingale?—No.

26,464. It has been suggested that some money besides that 1,000*l.* that Mr. Nightingale has stated he supplied came from the Dowager Lady Lacon?—I never heard that.

26,465. Who was the Dowager Lady Lacon's executor?—I really cannot recollect. I think Sir Edmund Lacon was one, and Captain Henry Lacon.

26,466. Are you yourself aware whether Mr. Nightingale knows anything about it?—I have not the slightest idea, I should say not certainly.

26,467. It will save me asking you these questions, because we must inquire where this money came from?—I never heard it before.

26,468. Were you Lady Lacon's solicitor too?—My brother was. My brother and myself are in the firm, and we are solicitors to Lady Lacon at times; I do not say always, but occasionally.

26,469. Who was Lady Lacon's banker?—I believe Sir Edmund; I am not sure, I do not know of my own knowledge.

26,470. Did Lady Lacon live while she was alive in this neighbourhood?—No, she lived occasionally in London, I believe, at a distance, and used to go abroad a great deal, to Nice.

26,471. Do you happen to recollect whether she was in the neighbourhood in 1859?—She was not residing here.

26,472. Do you happen to know whether she was on a visit here in 1859?—No, I cannot say that. She generally came once a year, I believe, but she was generally abroad or in London.

26,473. You do not recollect at that particular period where she was?—No, I have not the slightest idea. She would occasionally come for a week or a fortnight here to stay at Sir Edmund's house at Ormesby.

26,474. As far as you know the election only cost Sir Edmund Lacon the sum mentioned in your account?—I do not know of one farthing besides, I am not aware of one single farthing besides that amount.

26,475. Did you ever hear of Mr. Green?—Oh yes, I knew him well.

26,476. Did you know his pursuits in election time?—Not the pursuits generally credited to him.

26,477. You knew by reputation?—Yes, not of my own knowledge, but merely what I have heard.

26,478. (Mr. Slade.) Did you ever hear of Mr. Cooper?—Yes.

26,479. Did you hear of him in the same way as you heard of Mr. Green?—Yes; nothing of my own knowledge.

26,480. Was it generally known in the town of Yarmouth as to the employment of Mr. Cooper at the election?—I do not know; it was general talk. I knew Mr. Cooper to be an active partisan for the party; he was not at that time, not till Mr. Green died.

26,481. You knew him as the successor of Mr. Green by reputation?—He was equally active in Mr. Green's time, but not in what I have ever heard in those pursuits previous to Mr. Green's death.

26,482. After Mr. Green's death you heard that Mr. Cooper took his place?—I have read the evidence before the Committee of the House of Commons, and what has been talked of in general conversation in Yarmouth. I have no other means of judging than that.

26,483. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Were you acting for Sir Edmund Lacon at this last election of 1865?—No.

26,484. I do not mean as his legal agent?—In no way.

26,485. (Mr. Slade.) Was it well known in Yarmouth the part that Mr. Cooper took at the last election?—Mr. Cooper was spoken of. I do not know that it was known; it was spoken of in the usual way, Mr. Cooper did this, or Mr. Brown or Mr. Smith did that. I have heard of many other parties, but not Mr. Cooper exclusively; the usual discussion after elections, and charges, of which many of them may not be true at all.

26,486. I meant rather before the polling day, whether it was known the part Mr. Cooper was taking?—I cannot say. I never heard anything till after the election, when reports are very rife of what has been done.

26,487. Mr. Cooper had been very active in the election of 1859; were you aware of that?—I think that was Mr. Green's time. I think Mr. Green was then alive; but Mr. Cooper has always been an active partisan.

26,488. An active partisan in the illegal part of the business I mean?—No, I cannot say that. I think, from what I have heard, Mr. Green had the credit of it until his death.

26,489. There is no doubt as to Mr. Green's practices?—I cannot say of my own knowledge, to speak to his practices, only by mere repute in the town. Mr. Green was an illiterate man but a very clever man, and had the chief management of those affairs. He always led the canvass, and knew every man on the register and his number without looking at the book. He could tell you, if you wanted a man, he was number so and so. He had the most extraordinary memory.

26,490. And if there was any bribery to be done, of course you would not know anything about it personally, but you understood it would have to be done through Mr. Green in those days?—No, I did not understand that.

26,491. Did you not?—No, never. I never knew anything that was going on until after the election.

26,492. I meant only by common repute?—I mean repute, as you would hear that Brown did this, or Smith did that. I believe the lion's share was given to Mr. Green. That is what I always thought and always heard by repute; how true I must leave to you. I knew nothing.

THIRTY-FIRST DAY.

C. A. Preston.

11 Oct. 1866.

26,493. (Mr. Russell.) Were you appointed Sir Edmund Lacon's agent in 1857?—No; my brother was, I believe. I do not know whether at that time there was a legal agent appointed under the Act of Parliament, but I know my brother acted in 1857.

26,494. You were not at that time in the confidence of Sir Edmund Lacon?—In what way?

26,495. With reference to the election?—I think we were.

26,496. You yourself?—No, I am speaking of the firm. When I say that my brother was, we are the solicitors to Sir Edmund Lacon, and I am under the impression that my brother acted for Sir Edmund Lacon in that election. I think he exclusively kept the accounts. I do not think I had anything to do with it, beyond going to the committee rooms.

26,497. Did Sir Edmund Lacon consult you whether he should retire or go to the poll?—No, he never spoke to me about it. I never heard that he ever did.

26,498. Have you any idea how the report originated that there had been a pecuniary arrangement between Mr. Watkin and Mr. McCullagh, and between Mr. Mellor and Mr. Young?—Not the slightest.

26,499. Had you heard of it yourself before it commenced in this court?—Yes, I heard of it at the time, after the election.

26,500. Merely as a general rumour?—Merely as a general rumour.

26,501. Did you ever take any steps to ascertain the truth of it?—Never. I treated it as one of those reports that in all probability were not the truth. There are so many reports you hear there is no depending upon them, and I never gave it further attention.

26,502. From your experience as an electioneering agent, what amount do you consider ought to cover the legitimate expenses of a contested election in Yarmouth?—Having the account of those expenses in 1859, I should say 800*l.*—700*l.* or 800*l.*

26,503. For the two candidates?—For the two candidates.

26,504. And what amount do you consider ought to cover the expenses of a non-contested election?—I should say a half or less than a half of that, perhaps all expenses. There was a large item for stave-men, which amounted to 87*l.* That was in consequence of an attack made on our rooms two or three nights before the election, and the windows being smashed. The violence was so great that we were obliged to protect the voters, and that formed a large item in our account.

26,505. Do not you think that the legitimate expenses might be fairly reduced below 700*l.* or 800*l.*?—In a contested election?

26,506. Yes?—It might, perhaps; but we do not look very much at shillings, or anything like it, in remunerating men for their loss of time.

26,507. I do not suppose you look so much to shillings to spend legitimately, when pounds are spent illegitimately; or, rather, the candidates do not?—It might be reduced, no doubt, if you put it out by contract, and I have no doubt it could be done for less.

26,508. I put the question to you, having observed a very great discrepancy in the various returns from the towns in England, with the expenses returned for contested elections, even in towns of about the same size and population?—I have noticed that discrepancy myself.

26,509. Do you believe that there might be some deductions?—I think there might.

B. Lane.

BENJAMIN LANE recalled; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

26,510. You have been examined before us?—Yes.

26,511. With reference to the election of 1865?—I have.

26,512. But you were not examined with reference to the election of 1859?—Not yet; I am here for that purpose.

26,513. Whom did you vote for at that election?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey.

26,514. Did you take a very active part in that election?—Yes, I did.

26,515. You received a sum of money, I believe?—I did.

26,516. How much?—About 120*l.*

26,517. Who from?—Mr. John Cooper.

26,518. Do you remember the names of voters to whom you gave that money?—I do.

26,519. Have you got a list of them there?—I have.

26,520. Was that a list made at the time, or made since from your recollection?—Made since from the poll-book and my own recollection. I should not like to be on oath as to the amounts given, but I believe I am correct.

26,521. Will you be good enough to give us the names?—Matthew Curson, watchmaker.

26,522. How much?—12*l.*

26,523. The next?—Robert Catchpole, of South Market Road.

26,524. How much?—6*l.*

26,525. He is dead, is he not?—I am not aware of it. I know he is a very old man, but probably he is. There is no account to be given of a man turned threescore years and ten.

26,526. To avoid future interruptions, as you give us the names, if you know of any man that is dead, please mention it?—I will.

26,527. The next?—William Charles Marsh, of South Market Road. He is now in America.

26,528. How much did you give him?—15*l.*

26,529. The next?—J. B. Hall, North Market Road, 14*l.* or 15*l.* George Tatham, that would be in Middle Market Road, 15*l.*

26,530. Has he gone away?—He has left the town these five years.

26,531. The next?—Thomas Frost, a rabbit seller, 12*l.*; and James Knowles, or wife.

26,532. How much?—I believe about 12*l.*

26,533. The next?—John Howard, a butcher, of South Market Road, 12*l.*

26,534. Did he live at the Market Gates in 1859?—No; he lived in the same house for the last 20 years now, to my knowledge.

26,535. The next?—John Diver, hay dealer, in St. Nicholas Road, 12*l.*, or about that. I think it was 15*l.* he asked for.

26,536. The next?—Daniel Powley, Caister Road.

26,538. Why did you only give him 1*l.*?—That was all he asked me for. I never gave them more than they asked me for.

26,539. He was the most moderate man in all Yarmouth?—He was very mild I must admit. I have another one the same amount, Henry Housago, North Market Road, that would be.

26,541. The next?—James Benstead, shoemaker, Charlotte Street.

26,542. How much?—6*l.*

26,543. The next?—That is the number.

26,544. Have you added up how much they come to?—Yes.

26,545. How much?—119*l.*

26,546. Though you are not certain as to the amount you gave to each individual voter, are you certain you gave that sum among the men you have mentioned?—Yes.

26,547. What did you receive for your own trouble?—Nothing.

26,548. (Mr. Slade.) There are only three of those men who are on the register at the present moment?—That I am not aware of.

26,549. Only Howard, Powley, and Housago?—Powley is dead. There would be four. Curson is still on.

26,550. He acknowledged it? — Yes, he did. Howard is still on.

26,551. Howard you mentioned, and Housago?—Yes.

26,552. That is all?—That is all.

26,553. (Mr. Russell.) Did all those voters vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey?—I should think so.

26,554. You are not aware that any of them received money on the other side?—Not in 1859; but I believe they did in 1857.

26,555. You seem to have given as much money to voters in 1859 as you did in 1865. Do you think there was a rise in price at the last election?—I do not think they would average above 10*l.* then. I have not cast it up. Take the amount and divide it, I do not think it comes to more than 10*l.* or 11*l.* a vote. It is 12 voters for 119; that is about 10*l.*

26,556. What should you put as the average in 1865?—I should think 15*l.*

26,557. (Mr. Slade.) Can you tell me under what circumstances you gave Henry Housago 1*l.*? I tell you why I ask, because the question is, "Did you not get anything in 1859?" to which he says, "Nothing." And he is asked, "Are you sure?" and he says, "I am sure." "Could you have got it and forgotten it?—I did not get any?"—I saw that in print.

26,558. How did you give him the 1*l.*?—I gave it him myself.

26,559. He says he could not have forgotten it?—It is a long time ago.

26,560. I say again to him, "Are you sure of it?" and he says, "I am sure of it?"—I am sure of it myself, and he has acknowledged it to me since.

26,561. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you pay all these men you have named yourself?—I took the responsibility of it.

26,562. Did you pay them all yourself?—No, I think not.

26,563. Was it your son to whom you gave the money?—No, I am sure they had it.

26,564. That is another thing; but I want to know the person to whom you gave the money yourself?—That I cannot exactly state. I gave a portion to my brother.

26,565. Is he alive now?—Yes, he is.

26,566. Is he in Yarmouth?—No.

26,567. When you gave the money to your brother and to others, did you give it specifically for the votes you have named, or did you give it generally to buy votes?—No, I should state there is so and so, and go along with him. I remained in a fly, and he would go and give it them. Perhaps one or two would know him better than they would me. I do not think there are above one or two.

26,568. And the rest you paid yourself?—Yes.

26,569. Was there anybody else besides your brother?—No, he might give it to Frost and Howard. I think those are the only two. It is a long time ago to recollect.

26,570. Did I understand just now you would go round with your brother?—Yes, I would be with him.

26,571. And give the money to him, and tell him to go in and give the money to the voters?—Yes.

26,572. Are you aware whether your brother had any other money besides what you gave him?—Not to the best of my knowledge.

26,573. (Mr. Slade.) Have you ever spoken to John Howard since about this 12*l.* you gave?—In 1859?

26,574. Yes.—No, I do not recollect that I have.

26,575. We have not examined him yet.—No, you have not.

26,576. Has he ever acknowledged to you that he got it?—I spoke to his son.

26,577. And what did his son say?—He believed he had money in 1859, but he did not believe he had any this last election time; but he was not exactly certain who gave it, whether me or a young man.

26,578. Would that be your brother?—That would be my brother.

26,579. Where is Hall?—He is living on the North Market Road.

26,580. Did you give him the money yourself?—Yes, I think I did, in fact I am pretty sure I did. I cannot say whether he took it of me or whether I laid it down, but he had it of me.

26,581. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Where is Thomas Frost?—He is living in one of the Rows in Charlotte Street.

26,582. And Joseph Knowles?—He works for his mother on the North Quay; he lives on the St. Nicholas Road.

JOHN DIVER sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

J. Diver.

26,583. Whom did you vote for in 1859?—Lacon and Stracey.

26,584. You have heard Mr. Lane say he gave you 12*l.*?—I have just come in; I did not hear him.

26,585. Mr. Lane says he gave you 12*l.* for your vote?—10*l.*

26,586. Was that what you asked?—I did not ask anything, and neither did I know what he gave me until I undid the paper and found it was 10*l.*

26,587. Did you vote at this last election?—No, I had no vote.

26,588. (Mr. Slade.) Did you receive any money from anybody else in 1859?—No.

26,589. Are you sure?—No.

26,590. You are sure of that?—I only took the money from Mr. Lane.

26,591. Did anybody else give you any money?—I did not vote for anybody else but Lacon and Stracey.

26,592. But did anybody else give you any money?—No.

JOHN TRUEMAN BUSTON recalled; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

J. T. Buston.

26,593. We have heard what you did in 1865. We want to know now what you did in 1859?—I have the names down.

26,594. How much money did you receive in the first place?—I think somewhere about 100*l.*, but I am not positive as to the sum.

26,595. From Mr. Cooper?—From Mr. Cooper.

26,596. Can you give us the names of the persons to whom you gave the money?—One was Charles Baldwin of North Road.

26,597. How much?—15*l.*; he is dead.

26,598. The next?—James Cadywould of the Queen's Road; he is dead also.

26,599. How much?—15*l.*

26,600. The next?—William Cooper of Fuller's Hill.

26,601. How much?—15*l.*

26,602. Is he in Yarmouth now?—He is living in the same house he was then.

26,603. The next?—Robert Davey of Charlotte Street; he is dead.

26,604. How much?—15*l.*

26,605. The next?—William Howes of the North Road, a gardener, 15*l.*; he is living, and that is all that I can remember. There are others, but I cannot remember them, it is so many years gone by.

26,606. That is only 75*l.*?—Yes; and 5*l.* of the money was spent in treating at the North End Retreat.

26,607. How many do you think you have omitted to give?—There may be two or three omitted, but I cannot say, it is so long gone by, and I have so much business to think of more important than elections; but I have had very little to do with electioneering business since I have been with the Conservative party.

26,608. Charles Baldwin?—He was a boot and shoe maker.

26,609. Was he always a Conservative —I think he was not, I think not.

26,610. We have an intimation that he voted for Watkin and McCullagh in 1857?—I daresay he did.

26,611. Do you think you gained him for the Conservative party by the offer of 15*l.*?—I am positive of that.

26,612. Without the 15*l.* he would not have voted for you?—No, he would not.

26,613. Did you look upon him as a man who had been bribed on the other side?—No, the other party never had any men whatever for them scarcely that were not bribed.

26,614. That cannot be so. Have you any special reason to believe Charles Baldwin received money in 1857?—Not to my knowledge he did not; I have heard reports that he did receive money at every election that he voted. Whether it was true or not I cannot say.

26,615. Did he say anything to you?—No, his object was to get money.

26,616. With regard to James Cadywould, do you know how he voted in 1857?—No, I do not.

26,617. Do you look upon him as a man who had any political principles, or voted according to the money?—His principal principle, I suppose, was to get the money. It did not matter which way he voted, I daresay, if he got the money. He was a man that anybody might buy.

26,618. Had you any special reason to believe in the previous election he had voted different?—I understood from him prior to that he had 20*l.* I do not know where he got it.

26,619. Are you prepared to say that you understood from him he had money at the previous election?—Yes.

26,620. William Howes, is he alive?—Oh yes, he is alive and well, to the best of my knowledge.

26,621. Did you know at the time you bribed him in 1859 what way he voted in 1857?—No, I do not. I should say he had not a vote in 1857; not that I am able to say, but I think he had not.

26,622. There is a William Howes; he voted in 1857 for the Liberals?—I should have thought he had not a vote then. I do not think he had the garden long enough.

26,623. How came you to go to him?—Because I knew he was a man that wanted money, and I thought I could get him for 15*l.*, and I asked him.

26,624. Did you ascertain whether he had any political principles?—No, I heard him say he would rather vote for the Tories; that is all I heard him say.

26,625. (Mr. Slade.) Do you know a man named Thomas Robert Barber?—I may know such a man.

26,626. He is a Birmingham and Sheffield dealer?—Whereabouts did he live?

26,627. He lives in the Market Place or did live in Regent Street?—I know there is such a man.

26,628. Do you recollect him?—I should not know the man if I were to see him.

26,629. Were you ever sent to him by Mr. Reynolds?—No, certainly not. Mr. Reynolds never mentioned his name to me, nor I ever mentioned his name to Mr. Reynolds. It is a business, I think, that Mr. Reynolds did not interfere in so far as regards voters.

26,630. Mr. and Mrs. Barber have told us that in 1859 Mr. Reynolds said he would send you to him. You never were sent?—Mr. Reynolds never mentioned such a thing to me. There is Mr. Reynolds.

26,631. Mr. Reynolds has denied it.—That I am sure he would positively, because he never did, and he never asked me to go and see Mr. Barber on any business whatever, to the best of my knowledge. Indeed I do not know the man. There is a man that once lived on the Church Plain, I think.

26,632. You never had any dealings with him in the way of bribing him?—No, I never had, to the best of my knowledge. I do not remember going to the man's house for anything.

26,633. (Mr. Russell.) Did you receive anything for your own services in 1859?—Not anything.

26,634. You seem to have given precisely the same sum to vote in 1859 as you did in 1865, 15*l.*?—Yes, precisely.

26,635. You did not consider there was any rise in price at the last election?—No; I do not think that any of the Conservatives had more than 15*l.*, very few of them, and the others, I think, averaged about 20*l.*

H. Wilshack.

HARRIS WILSHACK recalled; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

26,636. You have been examined before with reference to the election of 1865?—I do not recollect. I did not understand what you asked me then about this.

26,637. You have been examined before us previously with reference to the last election?—I did not understand you at that time what you meant. You had better ask me about 1859, and then I can answer you.

26,638. What amount did you receive in 1859?—80*l.*

26,639. Who from?—Mr. Shuckford.

26,640. Can you tell me the men to whom you gave that 80*l.*?—Yes, John Newark, in Charlotte Street.

26,641. How much?—15*l.*

26,642. Newark has been examined before us and swears he only received 10*l.*?—He received 5*l.* the day before the election, an extra 5*l.*, because on the Saturday before the election the news came that Mr. Watkin's party was giving more money, so I was obliged to give 5*l.* more. What he says here since, now, I cannot say.

26,643. How much did you hear Mr. Watkin's party gave him?—He was offered 15*l.*, and I had to give 5*l.* more. He had the 10*l.* previous to that. He denied that 5*l.* I think in the paper.

26,644. Now the next?—Mingay of North Quay; he is dead.

26,645. How much?—15*l.*

26,646. And the next?—Solomons the watchmaker in King Street.

26,647. How much?—15*l.*

26,648. Mr. Cooper has mentioned Mr. Solomons before, and says he paid Mr. Solomons?—No; Mr. Cooper cannot say so; I did. There is his wife alive, she will tell you.

26,649. But he may have been paid by both?—I cannot say.

26,650. Does his wife know that you gave the money?—Yes.

26,651. The next?—James Gurney.

26,653. Is Gurney dead?—No, he is alive, as I know of; he is alive. I am sure I gave him 15*l.*, and he was there, and the election morning I was obliged to give him another sovereign. He would not go till I gave it him. He brought it before the Commissioners in London. He was there himself.

26,654. The next?—A man of the name of Martin in Gorleston, a draper and grocer.

26,655. Where did Martin live?—In Gorleston.

26,656. Is that William Martin of High Street, Gorleston?—Yes.

26,657. How much?—18*l.* He said he would vote for my party if my son gave him a gold watch and chain. My son gave him a gold watch and chain. That came to 18*l.*, and I gave him the money for it.

26,658. Did you buy a gold watch and chain?—Yes, of my son.

26,659. Out of the money you received?—Yes.

26,660. He was an expensive investment. He voted for Watkin and Young?—He did; but he has the gold watch and chain, and he wears it now.

26,661. Do you know whether he was bribed on the other side?—That I do not know. No doubt of it, or else he would have voted on our side.

26,662. Is that the last one?—That is the last one.

26,663. That amounts to 75*l.*?—That is right.

26,664. Did you receive anything for your own services?—No, I did not receive anything, I lost money. I did not mind that.

26,665. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you know Newark well?—Yes.

26,666. Do you know how he voted in 1857?—He came forward for the Conservatives in 1857.

26,667. Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Vereker?—I believe he had money of me then.

26,668. For the Conservatives?—Yes.

26,669. In 1857 that is?—No; Watkin and McCullagh.

26,670. He did vote for Watkin and McCullagh?—Yes; and I gave him the money.

26,671. For the Liberals?—Yes; I was not for the Conservatives then, I was for the Liberals.

26,672. (Mr. Russell.) How came you to change your political views?—It took my fancy. There are a good many changes in the time, and I am in business. That was my business, you know.

26,673. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Where did you get the money, from the Liberals?—That I cannot recollect.

26,674. To give to Newark in 1857?—I believe it was my own money. I have lost it. I have never had it returned to me.

26,675. You are quite certain you bribed Newark?—I believe I am quite certain of it.

26,676. Had you known him for a long time?—Many years.

26,677. Did you consider him a man having any political principles?—Never.

26,678. Or did he only vote for money?—He only voted for money.

26,679. So you secured him in 1859 for the Conservatives?—Yes.

26,680. How long was it before the election of 1857 you had secured him on that side for the Liberals?—That I cannot recollect.

26,681. Now we will go to James Gurney. Had you known him for any time?—Yes, I had.

26,682. How did he vote in 1857?—That I cannot say. I did not go to him. I had nothing to do with him.

26,683. Had he any political principles?—No, he had no principles at all, because I lost 150*l.* by him.

26,684. Either political or moral?—No.

26,685. In 1859, how soon before the election did you give or promise him this money?—I believe he had his money the Monday before the election, 15*l.* I gave the wife, and he was there.

26,686. Did you disburse any of this money before you received it from Mr. Cooper?—I never received any money from Mr. Cooper.

26,687. From Mr. Shuckford, I mean?—I cannot say; I cannot tell you, because if Mr. Shuckford told me to get any votes I always did before I asked him for any money. I recollect when he gave me the money. I had the money because me and Shuckford did business together.

26,688. Do you recollect when Shuckford gave you the 80*l.*?—I cannot. He did not give it to me at once.

THOMAS DOWNING recalled; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

T. Downing.

26,689. We have heard you were on the Conservative side in 1859?—I might do a little. I did not do very much.

26,690. Did you receive money to give to voters then?—Yes.

26,691. How much?—I am not sure of it, I cannot tell you exactly. I never kept any account, it was a mere trifle.

26,692. Who was it from that you received it?—I had some from Mr. Richard Yaxley. I think it came from Mr. Shuckford, still I received it through Mr. Yaxley.

26,693. Do you believe that money came from Mr. Shuckford?—Yes, I believe it did; still Mr. Yaxley gave it to me. I do not know, I cannot say, I only suppose it came from Shuckford.

26,694. Do you recollect to whom you gave the money, whatever it was?—40*l.*, I had, I think.

26,695. To the extent of 40*l.*?—It was 40*l.* I think.

26,696. Will you give us the names?—William King.

26,697. Has William King been examined?—Yes. I think he has said I gave it him.

26,698. How much?—10*l.*

26,699. The next?—Shearman Bayfield.

26,700. How much?—I think that was 10*l.* I am almost certain they all had alike. I was asking King, and he said, what he recollected was 10*l.* There were four of them together, and I gave them all alike.

26,701. And who was the other?—Henry King.

26,702. And who was the other?—Benjamin Ashby.

26,703. How much to Henry King and Benjamin Ashby?—They all had alike.

26,704. You think it was 10*l.*?—I think it was 10*l.*, all alike. I was asking King whether he could recollect what it was, and he said it was 10*l.* he had; and I know I gave them all alike. I do not recollect what there was, only by what he said; I know what I gave one I gave all.

26,705. Is that all you can recollect?—That is all. Those are the four I had the money from Yaxley for.

26,706. Can you recollect any other voters whom you paid on that occasion?—John Nicholls, I think he had 15*l.*; 10*l.* before he voted, and 5*l.* afterwards.

26,707. Is that Nicholls in the Caister Road?—No, John E. Nicholls, I think, in the Nelson Road.

26,708. Where did you get the money to give him?—I fancy I had it from Mr. Shuckford, or Mr. Shuckford's clerk. I do not know. I cannot say exactly now; it is so long ago.

26,709. (Mr. Slade.) You never gave 10*l.* to William King?—Yes, I did.

26,710. You offered it to him?—I gave it to him. The man told me the other night he had it. You will find he did, because he told me the other night it was 10*l.* I did give him. He met me in the market. I asked him. I said, "Do you recollect what it was I "gave you?" and he said, "10*l.*" I said, "That "is what I gave Ashby;" and he said, "Yes, you "gave us all alike."

26,711. William King, of Apollo Walk?—Yes.

26,712. He has been examined before us, and says he was drunk in 1859, and got 15*l.* from Mr. Clements, and was offered 10*l.* by you?—The man cannot deny I gave him 10*l.* I gave it him about three days before the election; he and Ashby were together, they were both in the gardens. They both have gardens down there.

26,713. Has he acknowledged it to you since?—Yes. The man stopped me in the market, and I asked him. I said, "What was it, Billy, I gave you the election before this?" and he said, "10*l.*"

26,714. Shearman Bayfield says you gave him 8*l.*?—I gave them all alike. I do not remember what it was now exactly. I know what money I had from Mr. Yaxley I gave them.

26,715. Was Henry King the man who now keeps the public-house at Norwich?—No. It is Henry King of Row, No. 92, I think.

26,716. He says he got 10*l.* from you?—Yes. That is right I know; I gave them all alike; I made no distinction, for they were all together as you might say, and

THIRTY-FIRST DAY.

T. Downing.

they asked me 40*l.* for the four. I am quite satisfied what one had the whole had. They were to have 5*l.* more if they voted all right, but two of them I think did not vote at all, and two of them voted the other way.

26,717. Do you know Benjamin Ashby ?—Yes.

26,718. Is he very ill ?—I do not know ; I have not seen him this two or three years.

26,719. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Were all these men you have mentioned always Conservative when they were paid ?—No. I think they were all Liberals. I know they were all Liberals ; but I thought I could depend upon them ; I had known them several years.

26,720. Do you know whether they were paid on the Liberal side the previous election ?—That I cannot say. I do not know.

26,721. I find all these men voted for the Liberals ? —No. I do not think they voted at all.

26,722. Except King, who did not vote ?—I do not think he did.

26,723. Have you any reason to suppose they were bribed the other side ?—I do not know. King said he did not get anything the other side. I asked why he did not vote ; I knew him many years. He said, "I do not know. When last came to last I dare not." He held a garden, I think, under some one, and he dare not vote when the time came.

26,724. (Mr. Russell.) May you have received as much as 100*l.* from Mr. Yaxley ?—No, I should not think I did ; it is so long ago I cannot recollect. I do not know whether I had another sum to come. I know there were three or four more that I cannot recollect, it is so long ago. I have tried to tax my memory; there are so many people dead, and some gone away from the town, you cannot recollect now the state of the poll book, in fact I cannot recollect it.

26,725. There is a most extraordinary mortality in Yarmouth among the men who gave and took bribes ? —There are a great many voters dead, but I have not any dead ones; you cannot lay that to my charge.

26,726. How much money do you think was spent in bribery by the Conservatives in 1859 ?—About 8,000*l.*

26,727. Of which you received 40*l.* ?—I had some more, but I cannot recollect. There is Nicholls 15*l.*, that made 55*l.*, and I might have a few pounds more, but I cannot recollect the others. It is no use my saying I can recollect, when I cannot recollect.

26,728. What makes you think 8,000*l.* was spent in 1859 ?—The talk. I know within a little what they cost a vote, and I know within a little what men there are to tin.

26,729. What do you think was spent by the Liberal side in 1859 ?—Not so much; we got the start of them three or four days.

26,730. How much should you think ?—I should think they must have spent between 3,000*l.* and 4,000*l.* They must have spent over 3,000*l.* I should think, that I calculated upon. They spent very little in Gorleston, therefore they shortened that account. There are 600 people to buy, that is what there are in Gorleston and Yarmouth.

26,731. 600 to be bought ?—Yes, I well know it. If you put that altogether you will find that is not far off the mark. In fact I told Mr. Brogden when he first came, if he wanted to win the election he would have to buy 320 to make himself safe. Other parties led him astray ; they said they did not think he would want so many.

26,732. You think whoever gets hold of the 200 first will win ?—Yes. He is sure to win, because he can always buy some of the bad ones twice over, and some three times.

26,733. As you have experience both sides, I should like to know how it is the Liberals have paid more for the votes than the Conservatives ? —At the last election ? I will explain it to you. On the Friday morning I had secured 100 at from 10*l.* to 15*l.* each. If they could have had the money the Saturday morning and—perhaps I am rather out of place in saying I urged Mr. Brogden's solicitor to go in then and win if he was a mind to win, if not it would be lost ; but I was quite satisfied they would begin the Saturday or Sunday, and I told him before that I went into that the Monday morning, as there are several witnesses can bear me out, gentlemen who were there, "If you now go on you "will lose it, 10,000*l.* or 15,000*l.* will not win it, "but still I will do it if you want it." But I was certain it was gone, I knew it was gone the Sunday night.

26,734. What do you think was the average price of a vote on the Liberal side in 1859 ?—I think about 7*l.* and 3*l.*, and 8*l.*, and 2*l.* more when they voted, but I know the stated price the other side was 10*l.* down, and 5*l.* more after they had voted.

26,735. Do you mean in 1859 the Tories were paying more for their votes than the Liberals ?— Yes, decidedly so.

26,736. And in 1865 it was the other way ?—In fact Mr. Shuckford gave me the order when I went out anywhere, if the Whigs gave 15*l.* anywhere, the Tories would give 5*l.*, never mind, tell them, they should have 5*l.* more than the other party would give, and I knew he was a leading man, so I took it from him what they intended to do ; they intended to win the election ; it would not matter what they gave, if they had given 20*l.*, the Tories would have given 25*l.*, but it would have been no use if the Whigs had spent 15,000*l.* this time, they would be as far off as they are now, because half the men they gave money to would have voted without money, but strangers coming here gave the money indiscriminately, and they took it, so half the money was thrown away. It was not our fault.

26,737. Do you think a stranger in Yarmouth would have to pay more for a vote than a gentleman who is known to the electors ?—There are a great many people who would take money in Yarmouth who do not wish to be seen, and would only take from certain people. There are plenty of people worth 2,000*l.* or 3,000*l.*, who would take 15*l.* in Yarmouth. You do not suppose you have the whole of the truth by a great deal; I am satisfied you have not. There are plenty of parties who have come up and have sworn it, and have sworn they have not had it.

26,738. We have not got the whole of your truth ? —If I had taken anything I should have known it. I never got a penny in my life.

26,739. You did not answer my question, which is this. Do you believe a stranger coming down to canvass the town would have to pay more for a vote than a gentleman resident in the neighbourhood, and who was known to the inhabitants ?—No, not a penny. I consider Mr. Brogden stands better than anyone that had ever come to Yarmouth, barring Mr. McCullagh, or Mr. Watkin. Mr. Watkin was a popular man, and Mr. McCullagh, and so was Mr. Brogden, and if both Mr. Brogden and Sir Edmund Lacon were pitted together, and neither of them spent any money, I would guarantee he would poll 100 more votes than Sir Edmund Lacon.

26,740. Put Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Brogden out of the question, do you think there is any feeling in Yarmouth in favour of a local gentleman ?—The borough is decidedly Whig, and you cannot alter it, and in my personal opinion it always was this last 40 years.

26,741. Were they Whig in 1859, when you belonged to the opposite party ?—I know you never could win an election without buying it, I was satisfied of that.

26,742. On the other side ?—Yes. The Whigs would always go in if there was no money spent. When each gave two guineas to the freemen, they generally got in nine times out of ten, when each party paid alike to the freemen. And if you were here and were to see a demonstration that is got up, if the Whigs and Tories were here, you would see enough to judge for yourselves which way the people of Gorleston are.

26,743. (Mr. Slade.) We are talking of the voters?—I take the voters in a general way, and there are a great many of them coerced.

26,744. (Mr. Russell.) You say 600 men in Yarmouth can be bought?—In Yarmouth and Gorleston.

26,745. Take the remainder who cannot be bought, do you think the majority of them are Liberal or Conservative?—We cannot judge, because the other party got into the field a fortnight before the Whigs, but there was as near a balance of votes according to my keeping the canvass book. I do not think there was 11 difference each way.

26,746. If you were to take the poll book, and scratch out the 600 who were bought, who do you believe then had the majority?—I hardly know who had the majority, Sir Edmund Lacon or Mr. Brogden. I do not think there was 11 difference according to my calculation.

26,747. In whose favour was the difference of the 11?—That I do not recollect, whether in Sir Edmund Lacon's favour or Mr. Brogden's, because I have not got it. I have lost it. I have looked for it among my papers several times. I kept it correct because most of these men I knew, and I did not put down a man "Yes" or "No," unless I was satisfied he would vote. There were some would promise who I knew would not vote without being paid.

26,748. If you were to put your Conversatism of 1859 and your Liberalism of 1865 together, and go through the poll book, and make out how you believe the register really stood as regards the pure voters, it would be a very interesting thing?—I think in 1859, as I thought then, the Liberals had the best canvass.

26,749. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Mr. Edwards handed us in this very interesting register of 1865. Were you the person on whose information he mainly relied when he put the letter T against each voter of Yarmouth?—I do not know that I was in particular, perhaps I might be.

26,750. I have not added it up to see how many people are open to bribes. Were you aware he put it down?—When I was out canvassing I said, "You might put T against that."

26,751. Did anybody else give that information?—Yes, I daresay there was; but everyone I knew I said, "You might put T to his name; that is a decided case of tin."

26,752. We have had several parties before us who repudiated the imputation?—So they will. I have no doubt of that.

26,753. Had you anything to do with bribery in 1857?—Yes, a little; but it is long ago, I do not recollect it.

26,754. You were then a Conservative?—Yes. I have been a Conservative, and was always a Conservative until this election.

26,755. You do not mean to say there was any bribery on the Conservative side in 1857?—That is Lacon and Vereker's?

26,756. Yes?—No. I do not think there was, or very trifling. I think they did begin a little, but it was soon stopped for want of money.

26,757. There was no money forthcoming?—No. They were waiting for it, but it did not come, from what I can recollect of it.

26,758. You have no doubt there was bribery the other side?—Yes, I think there was a little; but they did not want a great deal, they would not go on without the others went on.

26,759. Mr. Watkin handed us in a list of men who had in 1857 voted for himself and Mr. McCullagh, who in 1859 voted the Conservative side, and he assumed they were all bribed?—I daresay they were, I have not the least doubt of that. I do not suppose people have changed their opinions without something.

26,760. The question is whether when they voted on the Liberal side they were bribed or not?—I cannot say that, for I have been on the other side ever since Lennox and Coope's election, and I cannot say what they did.

WILLIAM LAMB sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

W. Lamb.

26,761. What are you?—A butcher.

26,762. In the St. George's Road?—Yes.

26,763. Did you receive any money for your vote at the last election?—No.

26,764. You voted for Lacon and Goodson?—Yes.

26,765. Who asked you for your vote?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson. They came and canvassed me.

26,766. Who did you vote for at the previous election of 1859?—Lacon and Stracey.

26,767. And previous to that you voted the other way?—Yes.

26,768. What made you change in 1859?—I do not know; we like to have a change now and then. I thought perhaps I might do a little better by going the other side, in regard to business.

26,769. You received no money for your vote in 1859?—No; not the value of a penny.

26,770. Did you improve your business by going round from the Liberal to the Tories?—It increased a little, but very little, still I do not think it made any difference.

25,771. Who canvassed you in 1859?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey.

ZACHARIAH EASTICK sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

26,775. At the last election?—Yes.

26,776. What did you have?—I received 20*l.* from Mr. Jones or Mr. Edwards, I do not know who it was, it was a stranger that was down at Gorleston, for Mr. Eidsforth, which I gave him; and I received two 15*l.* from Mr. Brand, one for Mr. Bradnum and one for Mr. Snell, which I gave them.

26,777. Mr. Brand says he gave you 25*l.* He gave you 30*l.*, did he?—Yes, two 15*l.*; 30*l.* together.

26,787. You had not anything?—I never had a penny in my life.

26,788. What induced you to abandon the Liberal party in 1859?—Nothing particular, my own will. I had no one to oblige.

THIRTY-FIRST DAY.

J. Teasdel.

11 Oct. 1866.

26,789. It has been suggested that those who voted for Watkin and McCullagh in 1857, and who voted afterwards in 1859 for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey, were bribed. That was not the case with you?—Oh no, it is quite wrong.

26,790. (Mr. Slade.) Were you a licensed victualler in 1857?—Yes, and 10 years before that. I have been a licensed victualler in one house for 23 years.

26,791. (Mr. Russell.) There is no form of variety left to you, you have voted entirely Liberal and entirely Conservative, and part Liberal and part Conservative?—Yes.

J. Hart.

JOHN HART sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

26,792. What are you?—A fisherman.

26,793. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

26,802. Are you married?—Yes.

26,803. Did your wife tell you who had called?—Yes.

26,804. Did she tell you Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman had called?—I do not know that she told me that. I do not remember the words the woman said. She never said such a thing to me.

26,805. Do you think your wife ever promised them that you would vote for Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman?—No.

26,806. Your wife would not accept money?—Not a penny piece; she dare not do it, she never did.

26,807. She did not receive any?—Not a penny, and I did not request it of any person.

26,808. You are credited here with having promised Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman?—It might be so. I cannot say what I did say at that time. I was quite busy about the fishing at that time.

26,809. Is it likely you would have promised Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman, and afterwards voted for Lacon and Goodson?—I tell you what I said, the first come the first served, and I believe Sir Edmund Lacon's party came first, and I promised my vote, and I voted for them.

26,810. You are also credited with promising that party?—Well, I do not remember.

26,811. You are quite sure you did not receive 20*l.* from the other side?—Not one penny from either side, nor yet a halfpenny from any person, that I am satisfied of.

26,812. (Mr. Slade.) You do not care who it is as long as he comes first?—Yes, first come first served, that is the way I was always brought up.

R. Goose.

ROBERT GOOSE sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

26,813. What are you?—A gardener.

26,814. How did you vote at this last election?—For Lacon and Goodson.

26,815. How did you vote in 1859?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey I think then.

26,816. How did you vote in 1857?—I never voted at all then.

26,817. Are you quite sure about that?—Yes. I do not believe I had a vote. I do not recollect at this moment.

26,818. Do you live in North Road?—Yes.

26,819. You voted for Watkin and McCullagh?—Well, I might, I cannot recollect.

26,820. Watkin and McCullagh belonged to a different party from Lacon and Stracey?—Yes, I know they do. I used to be a Blue.

26,821. Why did you vote Conservative in 1859?—I do not know I am sure.

26,822. Did you receive any money for your vote?—No, I never asked anyone to give me anything.

26,823. Have you ever had any money?—No.

26,824. Do you act on the principle of the last witness said he acted on, first come first served?—It did not make any difference to me which way.

26,825. It did not make any difference to you which way you voted?—Very little.

26,826. Why did you not vote for the Tories then?—I might do it to oblige some one. I do not know now.

J. Harris.

JOHN HARRIS sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

26,828. What are you?—A pipemaker.

26,829. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

26,830. Did you get anything for your vote?—15*l.*

26,833. Nothing?—Nothing.

26,834. You voted Liberal, I think, in 1857?—Yes, that was my maiden vote.

26,835. Did you get anything then?—No.

26,836. Why did you change your principles?—I have never changed my principles.

26,837. Why did you vote the other way?—Because I was under an obligation to the Liberal party. I was just entering into business at the time.

26,838. In 1857 that was?—Yes. I told Mr. Livingston and Mr. Watkin when they came down in 1859, they canvassed me first. I told them deliberately I should vote against them, and they never canvassed me at this last election.

26,839. You got nothing for your vote in 1859?—No.

26840. How came you to take money at this last election for your vote?—Well, I never solicited it, but Mr. Stagg saw me in a house, and he asked me whether 15*l.* would be of any use to me, and I said "Yes, it would be.

26,841. He tempted you, and you could not resist the temptation?—No, I could not; no man is infallible to gold.

26,842. Would you have voted for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson if you had not received any money?—Yes, and always shall unless my principles change.

26,843. Is it William Playford Stagg?—No, Edward Stagg.

26,846. What are you?—A fisherman.

26,847. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Sir Edmund Lacon.

26,848. Lacon and Goodson, or Lacon alone?—No, not at the last election; I had not a vote.

26,849. In 1859 whom did you vote for; was it Lacon and Stracey?—Lacon and Stracey.

26,850. What did you get for your vote then?—I am sure I do not know what we did get.

26,851. You got something?—I never took anything; I was very ill at the time.

26,852. Did not Mr. Eagleton give you 12*l.*?—He left it at the house.

26,853. Did you return it?—Yes; he came for it again. I was upstairs. I never see the money. I was very ill at the time.

26,854. You returned it to him, did you not?—He came for it, and he received it back. I could not go out.

26,855. He found you were going to vote the other way; is that it?—Yes, I suppose so; I never asked for it.

26,856. Did you get anything from the other side?—Not that I know of; I never received anything.

26,857. Did your wife?—Not that I know of.

26,858. Were you offered anything?—No; I could not get out. I could not be about at all.

26,859. Why not?—I had the rheumatic gout for two years; I could not get out sometimes for three weeks together.

26,860. You voted?—They came for me.

26,861. Why did you vote for the Tories then?—Because my brother came for me, and pressed me. I should not have attempted to vote at all.

26,862. You voted Liberal, did you not, in 1857?—I do not know.

26,863. You voted for Watkin and McCullagh, did you not?—I think I did.

26,864. Why did you change?—I do not recollect; I did not intend to vote, only my brother pressed me.

26,865. Did you get any money to vote for Watkin and McCullagh in 1857?—No.

26,866. You are sure of that?—Yes.

26,867. (Mr. Russell.) Are you a cowkeeper?—No.

26,868. Did you ever keep cows?—I used to do years ago.

26,869. In 1859?—No, not so late as that.

26,870. Used you to have your grains from Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes.

26,871. (Mr. Slade.) Was any other money left at your house at the election of 1859?—Not that I was aware of.

26,872. Could it have been left there without your knowledge?—I did not know Mr. Eagleton left that money. I did not know it at the time.

26,873. Who told you of it first?—My wife.

26,874. Did your wife get any money on the other side?—Not that I know of.

26,875. Did she tell you she had?—No.

26,876. Why did you not keep that 12*l.*?—Because Mr. Eagleton came for it again. I never asked him for it; he left it. I did not know anything about it, and I wanted it bad enough, for I had been ill two years.

26,877. Did he give it to your wife?—There was a glass on the table, and he left it there. I do not think she was aware of it at the time: she saw it the next day.

26,878. Do you know what it was for?—We guessed what it was for. I was in bed; he used to come at night; he was never allowed upstairs. It was not often I see him.

26,879. Did you see anybody on the other side at that election?—Yes.

26,880. Who?—My brother often used to come in.

26,881. He voted for Lacon and Stracey?—Yes.

26,883. Did he receive any money himself?—I do not know.

26,884. What is your brother's name?—James Bland.

26,885. Your brother got money in 1859?—Did he?

26,888. Did you ever hear of it?—No, I never heard of it.

26,890. You are sure of that?—Yes, I am sure he never told me.

26,891. Do you know a man of the name of Robert Symonds?—Yes.

26,892. Did he come to you at all at the election of 1859?—I think he did; it is so long ago I entirely forget.

26,893. Do you know whether he gave your brother any money?—He never told me.

26,894. Do you know whether he did?—I do not know whether he did; he might receive some. I do not know I am sure what he did.

26,895. Did he ever give you any money?—He never gave it to me, but whether he left it I do not know.

26,896. Robert Symonds may have left money at your house?—Yes.

26,897. Did your wife ever tell you Robert Symonds had left any money?—I do not recollect.

26,898. Do not come here and prevaricate; it is not likely money would be left at your house and you not know it. Did you hear afterwards there was money left at your house?—Yes, I think there was; I am not sure.

26,899. You have no doubt there was?—I have no doubt there was.

26,900. Left there by Robert Symonds?—I do not know I am sure; it might be left by him, or it might be left by somebody else.

26,901. That money you did not return?—No, if it was left there.

26,902. You never gave back the money to Symonds?—No.

26,903. (Mr. Russell.) It was two months after the election Mr. Eagleton came for the money?—I cannot say I am sure.

26,904. Did not Mr. Eagleton tell you he must have the money back because you had taken money on the other side and voted that way?—I do not remember at all he said anything about that.

26,905. Do you remember being paid for the repair of a boat?—No, I do not remember it.

26,906. Do you remember being paid for the repair of a boat?—I do not know what it means.

26,907. Mending a boat?—No, I do not recollect anything about it. Mr. Symonds built a new smack for me.

26,913. Whom did you vote for in 1859?—No one; I had not a vote.

26,914. Had you a vote in 1857?—No.

THIRTY-FIRST DAY.

G. Parker.

11 Oct. 1866.

GEORGE PARKER sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

26,915. What are you?—I am a fruiterer, but I do not do anything now; I live on my property.

26,916. In Charlotte Street?—I live in Charlotte Street.

26,917. Did you vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson at the last election?—I did.

26,918. Did you vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey in 1859?—Yes, I did.

26,919. How did you vote in 1857?—Mr. McCullagh and Mr. Watkin.

26,920. What was the reason that you changed your side?—Because I supplied a man on the staff, and he lost his ticket, and they would not pay him.

26,921. What do you mean by that?—He lost his ticket. I employed him as one of the staff, and they would not pay him till just before the next election, and then I went and voted for the others.

26,922. What do you mean by employing a man upon the staff?—For the election they used to give them 7*s.* 6*d.* for two days or a day.

26,923. And they would not pay him?—They would not pay him.

26,924. Because he lost his ticket?—Yes.

26,925. And you would not pay it?—No, the man got nothing.

26,926. Was it a voter?—No.

26,927. Was that a sufficient reason for your voting for the Tories at the next occasion?—Yes.

26,928. You did not receive anything for your vote?—I did in 1859; I might have had money from both parties.

26,929. I asked you your reason for changing your politics?—I told you.

26,930. What did you get?—In 1859?

26,931. Yes?—13*l.*

26,932. Who from?—John Gowing.

26,933. The 13*l.* had nothing to do with it?—With what?

26,934. With your vote for Lacon and Stracey?—Yes, though I might have had as much on the other side, and more too.

26,935. You told me you voted for Lacon and Stracey in 1859 because the Liberals behaved bad?—Yes, that is the reason I went and voted for the others.

26,936. Did you get any money in 1857?—I did not, not a halfpenny.

26,937. Did you get any money at this last election?—No.

26,938. Did you ask for this 13*l.*, or did Gowing offer it you?—I cannot tell now; I think he offered it me.

26,939. That was the reason why you voted for Lacon and Stracey?—No; I might have had more on the other side if I had liked.

26,940. Were you offered any money?—Yes.

26,941. In 1859?—Yes.

26,942. Who by?—Mr. Greenhow, or some such name as that; two or three of them asked me.

26,943. Is that John Gowing alive?—I believe he is; I have not seen him lately.

26,944. Is he in Yarmouth?—I think he is.

26,945. Why do you say you might have had money from the Liberals in 1857?—I did not say so.

26,946. In 1859 you said?—Yes.

26,947. (Mr. Slade.) Were you offered any money at the last election?—Yes, I was.

26,948. Who by?—Mr. Edwards.

26,949. T. B. Edwards, the tailor?—Yes.

26,950. What did he offer you?—He offered me 7*l.*

26,951. That was not enough?—I might have had more if I liked.

26,952. How much did he go on to; did he rise in his price?—No; two or three of them asked me.

26,953. Who else offered you any money?—I was a fruiterer in the market at the time of the election; and I went up and showed myself after they had lost the election, and they told me I was of no use then, that they had lost the election.

26,954. The other side, the Liberals?—Yes.

26,955. You voted for the Conservatives?—Yes, I did. I meant to vote for them, and would a hundred times if I had a vote.

26,956. If you had been paid by the other side you would have voted for them?—No, I should not.

26,957. (Mr. Russell.) I understand you to say you went to the Liberals on the day of the election, and asked for money, but they told you you were too late?—No; I did not ask for any money; they came after me, three or four of them.

26,958. You would have taken it then if you could have got it?—Yes, I should have taken it.

26,959. If you had got the money from the Liberals how should you have voted?—Well, I fancy I should have voted one and one, I fancy I should. I think if I took money from both parties I should have had a right to do so.

26,960. You said you did not get any money from the Conservatives in 1865?—Not one halfpenny.

26,961. Then why would you vote one and one?—Because I had a man in Lacon's place, a carpenter, living in one of my houses, if I must tell you truth.

26,962. You got the man in?—I had a man living in one of my cottages. The man came down after me, and I did not wish to get the man turned out.

26,963. Have you reason to believe the man would have been turned out?—I would not say; the election would go a great way.

26,964. Did the man tell you he was afraid he would be turned out?—Well, the man came and asked me to vote for that side.

26,965. What is his name?—William Munser.

26,966. Is he a voter?—No; and I believe he did get discharged the election day.

26,967. For any reason connected with the election?—I do not know; I cannot give you that answer.

26,968. Did Munser say he would give you anything if you would vote for Sir Edmund Lacon?—No, he had nothing to give me. He is a poor fellow, and cannot hardly pay his rent.

26,968*a.* Did you know that Mr. Cooper had any money to give away?—I do not know anything about Mr. Cooper's business.

26,969. Did you know money was being spent in buying votes on the Conservative side?—I heard so.

26,970. You did not try and get some money?—No; because I have enough of my own.

26,971. You said just now you would have taken money from the Liberals if you could have got it?—Yes; there were four or five after me.

26,972. Do you mean to say you would have taken money from the Liberals, and not the Conservatives? No, I did not want it. I promised him I would vote when he came.

26,973. You were going to give away one vote and sell the other?—So I should; but I did not go till after they had lost the election; that is when I went.

26,974. Do you remember what o'clock it was when you voted?—Yes, I think I can tell you. I had done in the market, and I looked at the clock; it was about half-past 10 or a quarter to 11.

26,975. In the morning?—In the morning.

26,976. Who told you on the morning of the election that the election was lost?—The people reading the bills outside when the poll came out.

26,977. Who told you?—Several people who stood about there; I cannot tell you the names now.

J. Mayers.

JOHN MAYERS sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

26,978. What are you?—I am a miller by business, but I do not follow it. I follow the pork butcher and keeping cows. My shop is in Gaol Street.

26,979. Did you vote for Lacon and Goodson at the last election?—Yes, for both of them.

26,980. Did you get anything for your vote?—No.

26,981. Did you vote for Lacon and Stracey in 1859?—I think I did. I voted for Sir Edmund Lacon then.

26,982. Did you get anything for your vote then?—No, not a farthing.

26,983. Whom did you vote for in 1857; did you not vote for Watkin and McCullagh in 1857?—No, I did not. I do not think I voted for them at all. My recollection is bad; I am getting an old man, and I cannot recollect.

26,984. Is it Gaol Street you live in?—The upper part of Gaol Street.

26,985. You voted for Watkin and McCullagh in 1857?—Did I?

26,986. Yes.—I forget.

26,987. Did you get anything for your vote then?—No, not anything.

26,988. Why did you change your party?—I was obliged to change my party because I kept a lot of cows, and Sir Edmund let me have the grains. I will tell you the truth if you ask me. We used to pay 4*d.* a bushel for grains, and after I voted we contracted for them for 3*d.*

26,989. (Mr. Slade.) Is that the understood thing, if you voted for Sir Edmund Lacon you get your grains a penny a bushel cheaper?—I contract for them. I used to pay 4*d.*, and then afterwards I paid 3*d.* a bushel.

26,990. If you had contracted for them before would you have got them at 3*d.* a bushel?—Yes, I should.

26,991. It has nothing to do with your vote?—No, it had nothing to do with that at all. It is not me only has them so; there are a good many as contract for them, and they are all tied to take so many bushel a week. Mr. Nightingale ordered I was to have them so.

26,992. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you make the contract with Mr. Nightingale?—I made an arrangement with the man who served them out; he told me I was to have them so.

26,993. Were you asked at the time the contract was made whether you were a Conservative or a Liberal?—No, I never was asked anything at all about it.

26,994. (Mr. Russell.) How should you vote if you did not get your grains from Sir Edmund Lacon?—I never mentioned it before.

26,995. If you did not get your grains from Sir Edmund Lacon, how should you vote; whom should you vote for?—I should have voted for Sir Edmund all the same.

26,996. All the same?—Yes.

26,997. If you did not get the grains?—Yes, I should have voted for him, and always did.

26,998. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Why did you vote against him in 1857?—Well, I do not know; I forget; I cannot tell you.

26,999. (Mr. Russell.) When you got your contract for the grains, was anything whatever said about your vote?—No, no, no, not anything.

27,000. You are sure of that?—No, no, no.

27,001. (Mr. Slade.) Did Sir Edmund Lacon canvass you?—No.

27,002. Did he ask you for your vote?—No.

27,703. Who did?—Somebody along with him canvassing; old Mr. Green I think his name was. I cannot tell. I am 76 years of age. I cannot recollect.

27,004. Mr. Green had a very agreeable way of canvassing, had he not?—I believe he had.

27,005. Did not Mr. Green offer you some money in 1859?—No, he never offered me a farthing.

27,006. Did he say anything about the grains?—No, he never said anything about the grains, not anything, not till afterwards.

27,007. What did he say afterwards?—He said I ought to have my grains the same as other people; that I should contract for them; and so the next time I went I had them; that is all I know about it. I had nothing to do with Sir Edmund Lacon. I never took a penny from him in my life.

27,008. Can anybody contract for the grains?—If they have plenty of them to give; sometimes, when there is a scarcity in the winter time, they cannot.

27,009. Then they give the contract to their friends?—Yes, if they take so many bushel a week; and I took 30 bushel a week.

27,010. When you voted for Sir Edmund Lacon, Mr. Green said you ought to have your contract?—No, it was never mentioned.

27,011. Afterwards?—No.

27,012. You said afterwards it was?—Not him; the man at the brewery office.

27,013. A man in the brewery said that?—Yes.

27,014. Did he say because you had voted for Sir Edmund Lacon?—I ought to have my contract; and so I had so far as that goes.

27,015. (Mr. Russell.) Do you think you could have got your grains at 3*d.* a bushel anywhere else?—No, I do not know that I could.

27,016. You save 2*s.* 6*d.* a week by getting them at 3*d.* a bushel?—Yes; 30*d.* is 2*s.* 6*d.* I am not alone; there are a good many other people contract for them as well.

27,017. Then Mr. Green did you a very good turn?—Mr. Green did nothing to me about that.

27,018. I say Mr. Green did you a very good turn?—Yes, he did.

EDWARD NUTMAN sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

E. Nutman.

27,019. What are you?—A publican.

27,020. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

27,021. And whom did you vote for in 1859?—Lacon and Stracey.

27,022. I believe you voted for Watkin and McCullagh in 1857?—Yes.

27,023. Did you get anything for your vote in 1859 when you changed?—No.

27,024. How came you to change?—My opinions changed, that is all.

27,025. It would be wrong to say that you changed for money?—Yes, decidedly it would be.

27,026. You never received any money at any election?—No.

27,027. It has been imputed to you that you were bribed in 1859?—Very likely it might be said so, but I never received anything.

27,028. Was it your interest to vote with the Conservative party in 1859?—No, not at all. I had no interest either way, not particularly.

27,029. You are a Conservative now?—Yes.

27,030. (Mr. Slade.) Were you offered any money at the last election?—No.

27,031. Were you asked for your vote on both sides?—Well, the candidates called on me; of course I was canvassed.

27,032. Who did?—The candidates called on me.

27,033. All four?—No; Mr. Vanderbyl did not call, Mr. Marshman did.

27,034. Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman?—No, Mr. Brogden alone.

27,035. And Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—Yes.

27,036. Did you promise anybody?—No, I did not promise anybody particularly. I intended to vote for the Conservatives.

27,037. You did not promise them?—No, not at the time when they called, two days before the election.

27,038. Why did you not promise them if you intended to vote for them?—I do not know why I did not exactly. I intended to vote for the Conservatives.

27,039. Why did you not promise them?—I do not know, I am sure, now.

27,040. If you always intended to vote for the Conservatives, and Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson called on you, I want to know why you did not tell them you intended to vote for them?—Well, I do not know why I did not tell them so at the time, but I intended to do so; I said I should not vote against them.

THIRTY-FIRST DAY.

E. Nutman.

27,041. I thought you said just now you did not promise?—I said I would not vote against them. I did not promise them that I would vote for them.

27,042. If you told them you would not vote against them, I take that to be a promise?—It is tantamount to a promise, but I did not say positively I would vote for them.

27,043. If you said you would not vote against them they would have put you down as being on their side?—I do not know but what they would.

27,044. Are you sure you told them you would not vote against them?—Yes.

27,045. Who did you tell that to?—To the parties who were there; there were several of them; the canvassing party.

27,046. Tell us who it was?—Lacon, I believe, and several of the party. I do not know the others names.

27,047. Did you tell Sir Edmund Lacon himself?—I told him I should not vote against him.

27,048. When he called?—Yes.

27,049. What did you mean by telling me you would not promise?—I did not promise him I should vote for him, but I would not vote against him, that is what I said.

27,050. If you had told them that you would have told me here that you promised them to vote for them?—No, I should have told you what I told them exactly.

27,051. You never promised at all?—It is tantamount to a promise. I said I should not vote against them.

27,052. Did you intend to get money for your vote?—No.

27,053. Never?—No.

27,054. That you swear?—Yes.

27,055. In your own mind you never looked for money?—No.

27,056. And never told anybody you did?—And never told anybody.

27,057. And never wished it?—No.

27,058. Why did you not tell Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson you would vote for them?—I do not know, I am sure, why I did not at the time.

27,059. You are put down here as a bribed man?—Yes.

27,060. You take your solemn oath you received nothing for your vote?—Yes.

27,061. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) What induced you to vote for Watkin and McCullagh in 1857?—I do not know; it was my first vote.

27,062. Did you get anything then?—No.

27,063. Were you offered anything?—No.

27,064. How soon did you let it be known that you intended to vote for them; how soon before the election?—I do not remember now how long before the election; it was not a very long while.

27,065. Were you canvassed at that time early?—Yes.

27,066. A month before the election?—Yes, by both parties.

27,067. Did you know there was any money going then?—No, I did not know anything about that.

27,068. Who canvassed you upon the Liberal side at that time?—Watkin and McCullagh.

27,069. Did you promise them?—That I cannot say; I cannot remember now.

27,070. Can you give us the reason which induced you to vote for Watkin and McCullagh then; were you a Liberal in politics?—Yes, I was at that time; and I changed afterwards.

27,071. Do you mean that you changed your party, or that you changed your opinions?—I changed my opinion about their party.

27,072. You are a publican, and you get your beer from Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes, mine is a free house, and I can get it where I like. The house is not Sir Edmund Lacon's.

27,073. (Mr. Russell.) Do you draw your beer from Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes, some of it.

27,074. Do you know a man named Henry Nutman?—Yes.

27,075. What relation is he to you?—A brother.

27,076. A carpenter?—Yes.

27,077. Do you know that he got 15*l.* for his vote?—I know by the reports in the papers; nothing further.

27,078. You never heard of it before?—No.

27,079. You never heard of it before he told us?—No, I never knew whom he voted for until I saw it in the papers.

27,080. Do you see much of your brother?—Very little; sometimes once a week.

27,081. Did you see him about the election time?—I saw him during the election, of course, but he never said anything to me, or I to him, about the election.

27,082. Did he never tell you that he had received money for his vote?—No, I did not know that he had a vote till after the election.

27,083. Did you ever hear of any man in Yarmouth being bribed at the election time?—No, nobody ever told me they were bribed, only it was the talk about people being bribed. I never knew anybody personally who got any money.

27,084. You heard that money was going?—Yes, of course.

27,085. Before the election?—Upon the election day I heard it; I did not know anything about it before.

27,086. Before the election you never heard of any money being given to voters?—No; I heard the talk, of course, that there was money being given away, but I do not know of anybody who received anything.

27,087. Did you hear of money being given away upon the Conservative side?—Both sides I heard it talked of; a rumour about the town.

27,088. Did you know Mr. Lummis?—No; yes, I knew him.

27,089. Then why did you say "No?"—I thought you meant did I know him personally. I saw the man frequently, but I never spoke to him in my life.

27,090. You never heard of a single man taking money for his vote before the election?—No.

27,091. That you swear?—Yes.

27,092. And never heard it till your brother told us in this court that he received money?—No.

J. W. Bunn.

JAMES WILLIAM BUNN sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

27,093. What are you?—A coal and corn merchant, and one of the aldermen of the borough.

27,094. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

27,095. You belong to that party?—I never was asked for my vote in my life by any party. I have always voted Conservative. I am so well known a Conservative that they never ask me.

27,096. Had you anything to do with the last election?—I was a strong partisan, but illegitimately, I had nothing to do with this election.

27,097. I think it is the 1859 election?—In 1859 I took a little more active part in it.

27,098. Tell us what you did in 1859?—I will answer any questions you like to ask me. I mainly worked in the Southtown Ward, to assist in the management of that ward. It is at the far end of the parish. All my business premises lie in Southtown, and being a young man they pressed me to go down there.

27,099. Did any money pass through your hands on that occasion?—I think it did; not to bribe a man myself. I was perhaps a little more than a conduit pipe. I took money down one day before the election, and I gave it mainly to Mr. Rivett, and on one or two other occasions to other persons to give to voters.

27,100. You merely gave it to Mr. Rivett and to other persons?—Yes.

27,101. How much did you give to Mr. Rivett?—I cannot tell you exactly. I had better make a lengthened answer upon that point.

27,102. If you please?—All of us have a great horror of Gorleston. It is a very long ward, nearly four miles long, and it is objectionable to canvass it. It is a nasty ward. There is at times so much hard work that everyone, after once having had experience of it, gets out of the way. I, not understanding the ward, was pressed by Mr. Palmer, who was then in the town council, but now in London, to undertake it, being one of the principal members of it. I went down with Mr. Harmer and a legal agent, perhaps a fortnight before. We were trying to find out how the voters were going. I had a memorandum book, and Mr. Rivett looked at my memorandum book which I had. He said, "You may cross out so-and-so." He said, "They are all right when I get the money." After that, whenever I saw him, if I found any name which I did not understand, he would tell me whether they were for or against. Then I would tell Mr. Harmer. I do not think he had any knowledge of the bribery. I see he has been accused of being one of the operators. I am bound to say that he never saw a halfpenny during the whole of the election, the same as I. I did not bribe, but I was cognisant of it. I was down there a fortnight before the election, nearly every day, and three days before the election Mr. Rivett said, "I shall have no money to spare, you had "better bring down some in case of a run upon the "election day." I went up to the rooms on the day before the election, and went into a room where Mr. Green and Mr. Reynolds were. I said, "I had better take down 200*l.* to Gorleston." One of the others said, "Look in in an hour or so." I went back again, and there was the money prepared for me. I recollect it was done up in 10*l.* packages, in sovereigns. I took it down with me. Fortunately we did not require all to be used. I went down to Gorleston and stopped all that night. It was a very rainy night, and the other side would not operate, and we had won the election at 10 in the morning. It was impossible for the others to operate. I do not think there was above 130*l.* of this money expended.

27,103. Whatever it was, you gave it to Mr. Rivett?—No. There was a person of the name of George Colk, who is a collector of dues here. He had no knowledge of the people, but he knew I should be down there, and in former times he went down to offer his services, and when I knew a man wanted any money, or Mr. Rivett told me that he was to have so much money, I gave it to Mr. Colk to give it to him, and I had the man pointed out to him. I see Godbolt said I bribed him with 10*l.* I was perfectly aware of his having the 10*l.*, and I have no doubt he believes he is correct, but he is a very drinking man. He was drunk three or four days before the election. I was perfectly astonished when the election was all over; about 10 or 12 o'clock in the morning he said, "Is it not time for me to vote?" I was astonished at that, because he had been acting on our side for three or four days previously. He said, "I want some money," I said, "You do not want money, surely!" He said, "I am to have 15*l.* or 20*l.*" He had been drinking, and he kicked up a row, and I turned round to one of them, and said, "Give him 10*l.*" That is exactly the same thing as if I had done it myself. It is only cheating the devil. I did not pass it to him, but I caused it to be passed to him.

27,104. Were you the only person that took money to Mr. Rivett?—I think Mr. Cooper gave him some. He told me the other day he believed Mr. Rivett went into his shop and took some money.

27,105. Have you any knowledge of what Mr. Rivett did?—No, I have not. I have a very bad recollection of persons features; I do not know persons again after canvassing them two or three times. I can recollect several names. Rivett told me of a man named Banham, a baker at the corner. I asked him about him, and he said, "That is all right, I have squared him," Then there was a man named Matson. I could not find out where he was, and I asked Mr. Rivett. He took me up to a loft over a public-house. He was stone deaf. I can remember the peculiarity, that he made him understand so, that he did vote for us all right. Then there is a man named Fisk. He is not upon the register at the last election. I do not think he lives in Gorleston. There is the other, Godbolt; I do not think he took any money, but he was an active partisan with us. And there are two or three other names I was thinking of this morning.

27,106. You cannot give us any information as to who the individual voters were that Mr. Rivett bribed?—No, I cannot. I recollect Reuben Smith. He works for me at times. I see the names sometimes down in my book. I really do not know them personally. I thought I could get voters, but I do not think now I have half the influence that I thought I had. Godbolt is dead. He is a different class of man to the one that has been up here. He was the employer of that one who was up; he is a cousin of his.

27,107. He had money?—I do not know. Mr. Rivett told me about him, that he would be a useful man, and would be all right; and a man named Fisk; he was a shoemaker down there.

27,108. Do you mean when you said 200*l.* you took down, that 200*l.* was all you took down?—Every bit. I think I took back 57*l.* or 47*l.* of that upon the morning after the election. If the election was on the Saturday, I took it back to the committee room afterwards, and gave it up in the committee room with the account, mentioning to whom I gave the money.

27,109. Whom did you give that account to?—Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Green were both in the room, but who took it up I do not know, I laid it down. I gave the account in, and I think Mr. Reynolds pencilled it down.

27,110. Did you and Mr. Green have any conversation about the money?—No. I have known Mr. Green ever since I have left school nearly. He was a very austere old fellow, and if you asked him a question he would insult you as likely as not, especially if you were a well-known partisan he thought he could take a liberty with.

27,111. You did not hear from Mr. Reynolds or Mr. Green how much money there was to spend?—No. I have my own opinion.

27,112. What is your opinion?—That the election cost 3,000*l.*

27,113. Have you any idea where it came from?—Yes. I think I brought some of it.

17,114. Where from?—From Norwich.

27,115. Did you bring it from the bank?—No; but it was very close to the bank where I brought it from. I attend the Norwich market as a corn merchant. I think—I cannot tell whether I was told of it, but I had an impression on my mind—that I should have a parcel to bring down upon that Saturday night. Somebody met me close by Harvey and Hudson's bank. I do not know much of Norwich, any further than from the corn hall down to the train. Harvey and Hudson's bank is upon the way, and some person met me within 100 yards of it, and asked me my name, and said, "There is a parcel for you to take down to the Conservative party at Yarmouth."

27,116. Do you know who the person was?—No, I do not know who it was. My idea was, it was taken directly from Harvey and Hudson's bank and brought to me, so that the traces of it should be lost.

27,117. Some person well acquainted with you, and with the position you held, brought it you?—Yes. No doubt some person who had had some information, or had had me pointed out to him.

27,118. Can you judge from the size and weight of the parcel what was in it?—It was in brown paper and sealed up. It is difficult to tell, because you cannot see through brown paper. I think there was a little gold, and the rest was notes. I heard afterwards it had 500*l.* in it. That is my impression.

27,119. Was that upon the Saturday?—That was upon the Saturday.

THIRTY-FIRST DAY.

J. W. Bunn.

11 Oct. 1866.

27,120. Was that the first money, do you know, that came to Yarmouth ?—I do not know. That is the only parcel that I brought.

27,121. Do you know who that came from, or did you understand whose money that was ?—No, I do not think I understood anything about it. I could exercise my own ideas at the time.

27,122. Was it your own idea that it was Sir Henry Stracey's money ?—It was my idea that it was a part of Sir Henry Stracey's money, and came from Harvey and Hudson's bank ; but I had no knowledge of it.

27,123. Have you any idea of where the money came from on the part of Sir Edmund Lacon ?—No, not Sir Edmund Lacon. I should feel a great interest in Sir Henry Stracey, he not being so well known. I felt very anxious for him ; and he had fought such a good fight in the county before, that I was a very active partisan. That is the reason I might have been one of the conduit pipes. I like Sir Henry Stracey, and his bold way of speaking and character.

27,124. You took these parcels ?—No, one parcel.

27,125. Where to ?—Up to the committee room across the market.

27,126. That was not the public committee room ?—Yes, it was.

27,127. And whom did you give the parcel to ?—I opened the closet door, and laid it in the closet. Mr. Green and Mr. Reynolds were in there at the time.

27,128. Were there other parties present cognizant of the transaction ?—There were ten or a dozen rooms in the house. The legal agent would not have known a bit abont this.

27,129. Did any other party know about it except Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Green ?—No. I would not swear that they knew about it. I have very good reason to believe that they did. They saw me go to the closet and open the door.

27,130. Did they take it up ?—They did not touch it in my presence. I have no doubt they took it up, one or the other. I have an impression it was meant for Mr. Green.

27,131. It was not directed to anybody ?—No, it was not. I think it was a brown paper parcel sealed up.

27,132. (Mr. Slade.) Is that man, George Colk, alive ?—Yes. I saw him this morning. He keeps the "Bath Hotel" now. I do not believe really he would know a single man hardly in Gorleston. He went down knowing that I should be there, to see if he could be of any use to me ; I daresay it was very foolish on my part. It is like passing money direct ; one is as bad as the other. I went a roundabout way to do what Mr. Cooper did direct.

27,133. What part did Mr. Colk take in it ?—If I said, "There is so-and-so, he is to have 10*l.*, give him the money," he did it. I did not buy the men, or any of them. It was all arranged. Mr. Rivett would say, "So-and-so is there." I think at the time he was short of money ; he had expended the money that he had. I only took mine down in case of a run. They said to me, "Take this down two or three days before the election," in case of a run. And so his money being expended, two or three men whom he engaged, and whom he could not pay, he asked me to pay. I did not like to pay them myself ; I asked Mr. Colk to do it for me. I do not know that I did not ask one or two other persons to do it. I returned 50*l.* or 60*l.* out of the 200*l.*, therefore, there was not much expended. I think it was 47*l.* or 57*l.* that I returned.

27,134. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you happen to know anything about Matson ?—I do not think I ever saw him except up in that loft. I think that was the name of the man. He was a little old man, very deaf. Rivett took me up into the loft to him.

27,135. According to your idea, Mr. Rivett had arranged with this man before ?—Yes. I could not find out why the men hung back. Now and then I found one man promising. I met Mr. Rivett, and he said, "Let me look at your book ;" and then he said, "So-and-so is right," and I guessed how they were made right then.

27,136. At this election of 1865, had you anything to do with Mr. Rivett then ?—The only conversation that I can recollect with Mr. Rivett at the election time was on the Thursday, it might be eight or ten days before the election ; I was going over the bridge to my office. He said, "When do you go down to Gorleston ?" I said, "I do not mean to knock myself up again, I have had enough of Gorleston." Then he said, "It is time for somebody to come down." I said I did not think there would be a contest. I reckoned things were such a certainty that the others would retire. He said, "If there is to be a contest it is time for some one to come down ; I think we ought to have some money down very soon." As you know one's business increases a little, and not wishing to be led on, I did not have any further conversation.

27,137. That was eight or ten days before the election ?—Yes, eight or ten days before the election.

27,138. And did you repeat it at the committee room ?—No, I did not wish to be drawn into it. I am rather impulsive. I did not like to go down to Gorleston again, although I occupy a farm in Gorleston Ward. I never went there for three weeks previous to the election, because I did not wish to be drawn into it.

27,139. Had you ever mentioned to anybody that Mr. Rivett said that it was time to commence ?—I do not know that I did. I might, or might not. I have no knowledge of it..

27,140. Did you see Mr. Cooper at all upon the subject ?—I saw him very often.

27,141. Did you mention it to him ?—We talked about politics, and how things were going on, and, like an old racehorse, I liked to know how they were getting on, though I did not interfere myself.

27,142. With that exception you had no knowledge of Mr. Rivett's proceedings ?—None.

27,143. And you never heard of them ?—No, I do not think I spoke to him again. When he found I would not have anything to do with it, I do not think we had any further conversation.

27,144. (Mr. Russell.) You say you may have given money to other people besides Mr. Colk ?—Yes.

27,145. Can you remember anybody else ?—No. I think very likely I should have trusted the elder Godbolt if he had asked me. I should have done it, simply passing it from one hand to the other, immediately in front of the polling place, in a public-house immediately in front ; I might have done that.

27,146. You do not remember the amount you gave to Mr. Colk ?—No. I asked him this morning if he could recollect, and he said, "It is five or six times you have asked me about it ; I know nothing of Gorleston ; I do not know the people there from Adam."

27,147. Cannot you remember who it was that sent you to bring the money from Norwich ?—Nobody sent me, the parcel was given to me in the street. The party said, "Is your name so-and-so ? Will you take that parcel down to the Conservative rooms ?" I might have been sitting up in the committee room the night before, when it might have been said, "We shall have a parcel down from Norwich," so that I might understand it.

27,148. You cannot recollect who it was who mentioned it ?—I cannot. Mr. Green would talk in an off-hand way, expecting me to understand it.

27,149. Who was in the room besides Mr. Green and Mr. Reynolds ?—I do not recollect. I passed the clerk's room ; there were Henry Teasdel and one or two other clerks in the room, but we did not want to go into that room. I passed their room in going on.

27,150. How came you to know the election cost 3,000*l.* ?—I say I do not know, but I conjecture it cost about 3,000*l.*

27,151. I suppose you base your conjecture upon this ; you knew Sir Henry Stracey spent 1,500*l* ?—No, I did not know that, it was calculated immediately after the election. That was my impression ; I do not know how I arrived at it.

27,152. You would say whatever Sir Henry Stracey spent Sir Edmund Lacon spent the same ?—I am certain that one would not let the other pay more, at least I should think not.

27,153. Did you know that Mr. Reynolds had brought some money down before you brought down this 500*l.*?—I think I did; I have an impression I did, it is only conjecture. I took a note up to Harvey's bank the Saturday previous, and left it there; I said, "I think I have to call for a parcel." I met Mr. Reynolds in London Street, Norwich, during the day, whether I was leaving the Corn Exchange or not I do not know, and he said, "You need not go about that parcel, I have got it," and therefore I did not bother further about it.

27,154. Who was it told you to go for that parcel?—I think Mr. Lushington Preston gave me a note.

27,155. Did you have any idea how much that parcel contained?—No, I had none.

27,156. Did your hear subsequently?—I had an impression at the time, it might be from what I heard Mr. Reynolds say, 1,000*l.*, or something of that sort. I did not know at the time; in fact I did not see the parcel. I expected I should take the parcel simply as the conveyer, but I found it was gone.

27,157. Did you ever hear of any money that came from or through Sir Edmund Lacon except the 1,000*l.*?—No, I had not the slightest idea how Sir Edmund Lacon's money would come. He had plenty of friends of course. It was quite easy enough in any way, and I should not attempt to inquire. It is unreasonable to attempt to find out what you have no business to know, and I should not attempt to inquire about it.

27,158. Whom did you give the note to that Mr. Lushington Preston gave you?—I do not know.

27,159. Was it to a gentleman at the bank?—Yes. They would know me possibly at Harvey's bank when I would not know them. I believe I have a credit at the bank—it is not often used, through Sir Edmund Lacon's bank here. I have occasionally taken up parcels, the exchange between Sir Edmund Lacon's bank and Harvey's bank. I might have taken back the exchange of notes upon a market-day. I have repeatedly taken up notes to leave there for other persons that could not get over to Norwich. They may know me, but I do not know them, or any of them.

27,160. Do you know Mr. Pill by sight?—No, I do not. I know who you mean, Harvey's manager you mean.

27,161. Can you remember whether you drove Mr. Cooper down at the election of 1859 to the house of a man named Mayes?—Yes, I recollect it quite well. It was possibly two nights before the election. I had just come up from Gorleston, and I met Mr. Cooper upon the Quay. He said, "How are you getting on?" I showed him my list, and he said, "There is old Mayes, I know him quite well." Every Wednesday and Saturday Mr. Mayes' stall is placed immediately in front of Mr. Cooper's shop, therefore he knew him. He said, "I can work him," and we engaged a fly and drove down. I set him down at Mayes' door, and drove on to the "Greyhound." Within a few minutes he came back to me there, and said he had secured Mayes. He said, "Old Manthorpe has now gone in there." I said, "What does he want to do with him?" He said, "He is his brother-in-law." Mr. Cooper said that he had no money, and I lent him 15*l.*, I think, out of my own pocket, and I recouped myself if I did lend it him out of the 200*l.*

27,162. Whether it was your money, or whether it was Mr. Cooper's money, Mayes had the money from Mr. Cooper?—Undoubtedly, I believe so; I took him down for the purpose of bribing him. I left him there, and he came out and told me he had put it all right; and the probability is he did give the money, notwithstanding his brother-in-law's going on, because he voted one and one, and old Mayes is a very strong dissenter, and would not have gone with us without.

27,163. Is it your belief that Mayes had the money?—I did not see it, but I have no moral doubt of it, of course.

27,164. Were you upon those terms with Mr. Cooper, that if he had been unable to secure the man he would have told you so?—Yes, he would have told me directly. I have known Mr. Cooper a great many years. I have great faith in him, so far as that goes.

27,165. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You say you took a note from Mr. Lushington Preston to the bank at Norwich?—Yes.

27,166. Did you understand that that note was one written by Mr. Lushington Preston, or by anyone else?—My impression is, I knew that I should have to bring some money down.

27,167. Do you know whether it was directed by Mr. Lushington Preston, or whether it was in anybody else's handwriting?—It was Mr. Preston's handwriting. I think it was written in my presence in his office by him. He said, "I want you to take a note up to Harvey's." His office is close to mine. Of course we did not want much conversation about it. He wrote a note, and I took it. That is my impression, that it was so.

27,168. (Mr. Slade.) You knew what the note contained?—No, I did not, but I guessed.

27,169. He did not tell you?—No, I do not think we had any discussion particularly upon it. I had an impression that the money would have to come from Harvey's if it was required for Sir Henry Stracey, and we were all of us warmly interested in Sir Henry Stracey's return. I jumped at once at it. I do not think we had any particular conversation about it.

27,170. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) There is one question I want to ask you which I had forgotten, with regard to Mr. Rivett. Did you know the under-agent that Mr. Rivett employed at Gorleston, who distributed the money?—No, I did not. I do not think he spent anything like what he did in 1865.

27,171. From your intimacy with him, do you know who those persons were whom he trusted?—No, I had no knowledge of them. He was a shipping agent, and I occasionally met him on board ships in valuations. I know that he lived somewhere upon the hill, but I do not know his house.

27,172. You would not know the parties he employed to distribute the money?—No, I should not. We did not get anything like the majority in the year 1859 that we did in 1865. I think that was the result of his nephew William Thomas Clarke's influence. They were fighting one against the other. I think many of the voters we got in 1865 we should not have got if Mr. Clarke had lived.

27,173. Did you know Mr. Clarke?—Quite well.

27,174. Do you know anything of his proceedings at the election?—It was notorious that he was the manager upon the Radical side, as Mr. Rivett was upon our side.

27,175. Did you ever have any means of judging how much money he spent?—I heard him say something about his loss of 300*l.* by the party.

27,176. Did you hear him say how much he had spent?—Yes, one day at the "Star," we had a meeting about the vestry clerk. It was a split up among us. I do not know if it was the respectable party who voted against us, or the non-respectable party. We were disposed to get in Mr. Chamberlin, and Mr. Clarke worked with me. We lost; and I recollected his growling about the party, and saying that he had lost 300*l.*

27,177. This is subsequently?—This is within three years ago.

27,178. Did he refer to the election of 1859?—No, I do not know that he did. These vestry clerk's elections cost something; and he said, "I have now 300*l.* owing to me by the party."

27,179. Might that occur from municipal elections?—No. We could carry them there without spending a penny. He had all the pilots, or a great many of them, with him.

27,180. Did you understand it at that time to refer to that election?—No. I think it referred generally to borough elections, that is, for members of Parliament.

27,181. It referred to several elections?—It might have referred to some lump sum.

27,182. Did you understand it to refer to the

THIRTY-FIRST DAY.

J. W. Bunn.

11 Oct. 1866.

election of 1859 ?—No, I did not. It might have referred to the election of 1857. It was in common conversation, something like this, "Oh! confound their politics; I am now 300*l.* out of pocket," or "300*l.* is owing to me," or something of that sort.

27,183. (Mr. Slade.) Are you a brother of Charles Victor Bunn ?—Yes.

27,184. Can you say who Godbolt received the money from; was it from Mr. Cooper ?—I do not know that he received it from Cooper. I passed it on, and he had it within a minute. My impression is, that he was bribed by the other side too. I think he wanted to vote half and half, and my impression is rather confirmed by seeing that he was bribed by both sides this time. He was intoxicated. He said "Is it not time for me to go and vote ?" I said, "I am astonished you have not been before." He says, "Give me the money." The election being won, and not being particular about a 10*l.* note, I got Mr. Colk, or somebody else, to give him 10*l.*, and settle him.

27,185. The election, you think, cost the Conservatives 3,000*l.* Have you any idea what it cost the other side ?—It is no use answering these questions; you only answer them in a spirit of party feeling. There have been answers given that have been laughed at on both sides.

27,186. (Mr. Russell.) Did you give any money to your brother ?—No. I am rather annoyed. One looks after the young ones a little more than oneself. I was annoyed to see him come out so much as he did. I find both of them were handling a little money in 1859. One of them was a clerk in my office. He is now South America. I had a feeling of elder brothership, and I wished them to be kept away. I was not aware of their spending any money.

27,187. Do you know where your brothers had the money from in 1859 ?—No.

27,188. You are aware that they both handled money ?—I see that my brother Charles did. I did not know that the other did.

27,189. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You cannot doubt but that he had it from Mr. Rivett ?—I do not doubt that.

27,190. At any rate it was so with regard to one, and it is very probable the other brother who is in South America had the money, also from Mr. Rivett ?—Mr. Colk told me to-day that my brother John did something. I said "Surely he is too young." He said he had some money. If so, it has been only for one or two cases. He would be afraid to let me know it.

27,191. He might have taken the money to a particular voter ?—He would have been the means of conveying the money only.

27,192. And not to use his discretion ?—No.

27,193. (Mr. Russell.) Who was it told you your brother John did something ?—I was asking about it. It was Mr. Colk. He said, "Your brother John did something."

I. Shuckford.

ISAAC SHUCKFORD recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

27,194. Have you some memoranda there to refer to about the election of 1859 ?—Yes, about the election of 1859.

27,195. We understand that you gave some money to persons to disburse in 1859 ?—Yes, I did.

27,196. Will you give us the amounts, and the names ?—I am not certain that these amounts are correct, but I will endeavour to give them as correctly as possible. I gave a man named William Beales 80*l.* or 90*l.* I gave a man named Richard Yaxley 30*l.* I gave a man named Harris Wilshack 80*l.* I gave a man named Thomas French, senior, who is dead, 30*l.* for his voters. I gave a man named Henry Swan, who is dead, 60*l.* for some voters.

27,197. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) He is dead, too, Henry Swan ?—Yes.

27,198. Is he any relation to the Swan examined here to-day ?—That is a son of his, I suppose; he passed the money from me to his son to distribute. There are also a certain number of men whom I myself gave money to.

27,199. Is Richard Yaxley dead ?—Richard Yaxley is dead.

27,200. (Mr. Slade.) Now the names of those you gave money to ?—I think there are 10, but I can only remember eight. I have gone through the poll book, and with any degree of certainty I can only pick out eight, but I fancy I bribed about 10.

27,201. Downing received money from you ?—Yes, Thomas Downing 40*l.*, I thought I had given that name in. I am very positive about this 40*l.* that Downing had, because I heard this morning he said he had not 40*l.* of me.

27,202. Yes, he said he had ?—He said he had it from Mr. Yaxley, I thought.

27,203. He said he had it through Mr. Yaxley, but it came from you ?—He had the 40*l.* from me. It was an unfortunate speculation. I do not know the four men; all I know is one of the four never voted at all, and the other three voted dead against us, and I thought the money badly laid out, and not only so, but there has been a grievance between Mr. Downing and me about this matter. When the petition came on Mr. Downing said he thought he had better go away, and considering the result of the 40*l.* I thought he had better go; and I said, "Yes, I think you had." He went away, and after the petition was over came back again, and I perhaps was uncharitable enough to think at the moment he had not spent the 40*l.*, all of it, considering how they voted. Therefore I did not pay the money out of my own pocket for his going away during the time of the petition, and I believe that has been his great grievance. But I did do something. He, like many other men, became unfortunate, and had to go through the court. He asked me whether I would be kind enough to go to his solicitor, Mr. Cufaude, and, as a matter of form, pass my name to his solicitor for his expenses, and said it would be all right, and that sort of thing, and I, thinking of this little matter he had been engaged in, from good feeling, I went and passed my name, as a matter of form, to Mr. Cufaude, to put him through the court. And after some little opposition, Mr. Cufaude successfully got him through, and the finish was I had to pay all the expenses of his going through the court. Therefore my little transactions with Mr. Downing have not been very profitable. Would you like me to give you the names of the men I can remember having bribed ?

27,204. (Mr. Russell.) I should like to ask you one question first. I suppose, if Mr. Downing had continued to be a member of your party, he would have been a very unlikely man to be entrusted with money to buy votes ?—As far as I was concerned he would certainly.

27,205. (Mr. Slade.) Do you imagine that may have had anything to do with Mr. Downing's political conversion ?—I believe that had the whole to do with it myself.

27,206. Now give us the names ?—Henry Ames, Daniel Beales, Robert Burwell, Samuel Goodwin, Isaac Miller, George Martin Holmes, George Howlett, and Charles Harvey.

27,207. Did they all get the same amount ?—No. I do not know the amounts, but, generally speaking, they ranged in fact from 10*l.* to 15*l.*, all of them. But I should say a greater portion of them were 15*l.*

27,208. Do you think you probably bribed another couple of men ?—I think I bribed about 10.

27,209. (Mr. Russell.) Are any of these eight dead ?—Yes, I think so. Daniel Beales is dead, and Samuel Goodwin is dead, and Isaac Miller and George Howlett. There are four of them dead, and four of them alive.

27,210. (Mr. Slade.) Did you, when you gave money to your sub-agents, give them any instructions as to how much they were to give ?—I think the prices ranged from about 10*l.* to 15*l.* My impression is, nothing beyond 15*l.* was gone to in 1859.

27,211. Were your instructions that you would rise a five-pound note above what the other side were giving?—Certainly not, nothing of the kind. If any man wanted 20*l.* in 1859, my impression is he would have been pooh-poohed, and he would have been put on one side. 10*l.* was a sort of starting point in 1859, but it came up in consequence of the tactics of the opposition to 15*l.*

27,212. (Mr. Russell.) I cannot find Robert Burwell?—Perhaps it is spelt wrong in the poll book.

27,213. Was it Robert Burrell?—I suppose it to be the same man. I think I am correct; I will not be positive it was not Burrell, it is my impression it is Robert Burwell.

27,214. Is it Charles Harvey, of St. Nicholas' Gate?—He lived at St. Nicholas' Gate.

27,215. (Mr. Slade.) William Beales has told us that you gave him only 30*l.*?—My impression is that I gave him 80*l.* or 90*l.* It is eight years since, but that is my impression. I do not know the man, but I know the sum, and it seems to me it must have been more than that. I ought not to say, "That Beales would have," because I fancy more men would come for the money.

27,216. He says you gave him 30*l.* for Samuel Roberts and R. Hastings, or some such name?—I gave him money for a man of the name of Robert Earl. I did not give him the money for any particular man that I remember at the time, but he said that he knew of a man that would not vote without money. He found the men, and not I.

27,217. (Mr. Russell.) Can you remember any other men who Beales mentioned then?—I cannot say that I do.

27,218. (Mr. Slade.) From whom did you get this money in 1859?—From Mr. William Green.

27,219. Can you tell us the exact amount that you got from Mr. Green?—No, I cannot. I thought I had about 200*l.* or 300*l.*, until I came to the figures and papers, and I found I must have had something like 400*l.*

27,220. You are aware that Henry King Swan has told us that he received 50*l.* from you at the last election?—Yes.

27,221. Which you have forgotten?—I did not consider it my transaction, the 50*l.* that I paid to Swan. I simply passed it from one to another; and there is another man besides Swan I paid money to. In certain wards there is one man who particularly had a certain amount of money, and he was the working man in that ward; it was in the Victoria Gardens. Some of the opposite party were there the same night. I had a bottle or two of wine with John Lummis; they watched me from the gardens, they knew I was there, and he asked me if I would pass the money from him to this Swan and another man. I considered it Mr. Lummis's transaction altogether, but I suppose, without thinking whether he was right or whether he was wrong, that I might, having been so friendly so many years with his father, thinking I might have a little more weight with them than he had, he said, "Will you give 50*l.* for me to Harry Swan?" as we called him. And I paid the money to Henry Swan. I considered it Mr. Lummis's transaction altogether, and not only that, but I passed the money to another man of the name of William Staff, 30*l.*

27,222. William Henry Staff?—That is the man. My impression is that was for two votes.

27,223. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you know how much it was?—30*l.* And I think the other was for three votes to Henry King Swan.

27,224. (Mr. Slade.) They were both Mr. Lummis's monies?—Mr. Lummis gave me this money, and in fact I did not wish Mr. Lummis to know that I really had money at all. I did not let everybody know that I had money, and if I had, not only that, but I should have been rather reluctant to have parted with money out of what I called my district, because I wanted to keep mine to see if I should require it at the last moment.

27,225. (Mr. Russell.) Do you know who the two men were for whom Mr. Staff had the money?—I think for a man of the name of Elliot and himself; I think so, I am not positive.

27,226. Do you know what Elliot's christian name is?—I do not.

27,227. Or where he lives?—I do not.

27,228. Or what he is?—He is a block-maker.

27,229. (Mr. Slade.) Then you were quite right in your account with Mr. Nightingale?—Yes, quite so, with my money.

27,230. Did any other money besides this that you received from Mr. Lummis go through your hands?—Not that I am aware of, not any more. I do not remember any money beyond this, and I suppose Mr. Lummis gave me the money; being rather a large employer here, he thought I should have a little more weight with those men than he had.

27, 231. (Mr. Russell.) Did any money pass through your hands in a similar way in 1857?—Not in 1857. I have given all the information that I remember in 1859.

27,232. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Mr. Lummis had no objection to your knowing that he had money and was employing it?—No.

27,233. Do you happen to know any other parties through whom Mr. Swan disbursed money?—No, I do not.

27,234. You cannot give us any clue to it?—Indeed I cannot.

27,235. (Mr. Russell.) Did you ever hear what amount Mr. Lummis received?—No. I never heard the amount no further than as general evidence has come out.

27,236. (Mr. Slade.) What Mr. Cooper said?—He did not seem to be to me at all in want of any money when he asked me to pass this money. I might suppose he had 1,000*l.*, or I might suppose he had 3,000*l.* or 4,000*l.* He seemed to have plenty of money at the time he asked me to pass this over.

27,237. (Mr. Russell.) He did not tell you he had any money except from Mr. Cooper?—Certainly not; and I never asked him where the money came from either.

S. Nightingale.

Mr. Samuel Nightingale recalled; examined by Mr. Slade.

27,238. You told us that you advanced 1,000*l.* for Sir Edmund Lacon at the election of 1859?—Yes.

27,239. Did you advance any other money at that election?—I have remembered since advancing some money to a Mr. Stolworthy; I do not remember the amount; I got some of it back again. It might have been a couple of hundred pounds.

27,240. The 1,000*l.* you advanced, I understand, you sent to Mr. Green?—Yes.

27,241. Did you send any other money to Mr. Green?—No.

27,242. Nothing but that?—Nothing. I do not remember the exact amount. I told you at the time I thought perhaps it was rather more than 1,000*l.*

27,243. Can you say whether it was to the amount of 1,500*l.*?—No, it was not.

27,244. Not that?—No, certainly not. It might have been 1,100*l.* or 1,200*l.* I do not think it was quite an even sum.

27,245. What was the amount that Mr. Cory put in that bill, do you remember?—No, I do not; it was so long ago, and I did not remember. The fact is, I did not try to remember.

27,246. Was it the exact amount you had advanced?—Yes, as near as I could tell, with the exception of Mr. Stolworthy's; I do not think that was included. I never had that; I made up my mind to lose it.

28,247. You say for certain that you did not advance

THIRTY-FIRST DAY.

S. Nightingale.

11 Oct. 1866.

as much as 1,500*l.* to Mr. Green?—Yes, I am certain I did not.

27,248. We have heard that Mr. Green received 1,500*l.* from Sir Henry Stracey, and that he also received a similar sum from Sir Edmund Lacon?—I should think not. You see if Mr. Cory paid me 1,100*l.* or 1,200*l.*, and I advanced 100*l.* or 200*l.* to Mr. Stolworthy, it would be pretty near it; and a Mr. Child told you I advanced him a little the other day. I had forgotten the circumstance; it was merely a trivial amount, 15*l.*, or something of that sort.

27,249. Would your advancing the 200*l.* to Mr. Stolworthy be known to Mr. Green?—No, I think not, unless Mr. Stolworthy was in communication with him, which probably he might be.

27,250. You cannot say?—That I cannot say; I think it is most probably he was. Mr. Green was aware Mr. Stolworthy was spending some money.

27,251. He was?—Yes, I expect so.

27,252. Have you ever been repaid the 200*l.* you advanced to Mr. Stolworthy?—No. Every election generally has cost me some money; I have been out of pocket every election. I thought it was too large an amount to put in Mr. Cory's bill, so I let it stand over.

27,253. And you have never been repaid in any way, independent of Mr. Cory's bill?—No. I let it stand over from time to time, thinking something might turn up at some future occasion perhaps. I never mentioned the subject.

27,254. Was it known to Sir Edmund that you had advanced more money?—No.

27,255. How did you send this money to Mr. Green?—I really forget now. I think he came to my house once, and I went to his house once or twice. He had it not all in one sum, in three or four sums, and I am not certain he had it all until the election was over. Mr. Green was a man who stood so well with the voters that his word was quite sufficient, they would take his word.

27,256. You think some of it was paid after the election?—I think it was; I know it was not paid all at once.

27,257. Mr. Green, we understand, was very well known in Yarmouth?—Oh yes.

27,258. And also, I suppose, in election tactics very well known?—Oh yes.

27,259. Have you seen Mr. Stolworthy lately?—Oh yes; but his mind is gone. He is blind and paralyzed. He has no recollection of anything.

27,260. His memory has quite failed him?—Yes; his eyes are paralyzed, and he is paralyzed altogether. He is incapable and blind.

27,261. Was Mr. Green's occupation known to Sir Edmund Lacon in your opinion?—What occupation do you mean?

27,262. As regards bribing?—He might have a suspicion. Before Sir Edmund Lacon contested the borough Mr. Green was so well known. He was half a century, I suppose, employed in the same business, and he used on previous occasions to canvass with the candidates, and his knowledge was so good that he would tell you every voter and how he voted for years previously, without any reference to memoranda or anything. He knew the history of every man. He was an extraordinary character.

27,263. Beyond his merits as a canvasser, was he not also known to be a man who had the disbursement of money when required?—Oh yes, I think so.

27,264. Did Mr. Green come to you with the result of the canvass from time to time?—No, I had it from other sources.

27,265. Used you to see Mr. Green at the time of the election?—Oh yes, frequently, repeatedly.

27,266. Were Mr. Green's visits to you chiefly for the purpose of obtaining money?—Oh yes.

27,267. Were you ever in the company of Mr. Green about the election of 1859 at the same time as Sir Edmund Lacon?—No.

27,268. Never?—Never. I do not remember that I ever was; I think not.

27,269. Can you say whether Sir Edmund Lacon was aware if Mr. Green ever came to you?—I should think not; certainly not.

27,270. I want to ask you if you can give us the number of the public-houses which are supplied with beer from your brewery in Yarmouth?—Yes, I can; taking our own houses and those we supply in Yarmouth and Gorleston alone, there is about 203 or 204. There are not many of our own houses, just under 40, and that of course forms a very small part of our business, and especially those houses form but a small part of it.

27,271. Are those 203 or 204 in Yarmouth alone, or included in Yarmouth and Gorleston?—In Yarmouth and Gorleston.

27,272. In the borough?—Yes, in the borough.

27,273. Do you know how many public-houses there are in the borough?—No, I do not. Many of those houses I have given you are beerhouses, not spirit-houses. I should think we supply nine-tenths of them.

27,274. Nine-tenths out of the whole of those in the borough?—Yes, of the free houses I am speaking of. Of course there are other public-houses belonging to private parties.

27,275. How many brewers are there in the borough besides your brewery?—Two, I think.

27,276. Mr. Ferrier is one?—Yes, Mr. Ferrier is one, and Mr. Tomlinson.

27,277. How many houses have they got, do you know?—No; but very few, I should think.

27,278. Are both those gentlemen Conservative in politics?—Yes, I think so.

27,279. (Mr. Russell.) Brewers generally are, I believe?—I think so.

27,280. (Mr. Slade.) This 1,200*l.* that you sent to Mr. Green, was that drawn out of the bank?—No, I explained before, if you remember, I borrowed 1,000*l.* of Mr. Wolton, and the other I had by me.

27,281. I think you said you borrowed at the last time of Mr. Wolton, and you previously had done so?—Yes, I think Mr. Wolton confirmed me in that.

27,282. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) We have heard several times that the election of 1857 was pure, as far as the Conservative party was concerned?—Yes.

27,283. To your knowledge no money was advanced?—I think so.

27,284. You advanced none?—No.

27,285. And you were not cognizant of any having been advanced at all?—No, not by the Conservatives.

27,286. You told us before that you were resolved that in 1859 you would not be beaten by bribery?—Yes.

27,287. And that you would resort to the same expedient?—Yes.

27,288. About what time was that resolution first come to?—After the defeat of 1857.

27,289. Immediately after the defeat?—Yes.

27,290. How long before the election of 1859 did you first communicate that resolution of yours to anybody else?—I do not quite remember that. Perhaps some few weeks, probably.

27,291. How soon did you put yourself in communication with Mr. Green?—Perhaps as soon as the election was talked of; as soon as the canvass was commenced.

27,292. Did you then inform Mr. Green that the money would be forthcoming when wanted?—Oh yes.

27,293. I suppose you recollect when Sir Henry Stracey first announced himself as a candidate?—Yes.

27,294. Did you or any of the party, not Sir Edmund Lacon, communicate with Sir Henry Stracey or his friends on the subject of money?—No.

27,295. Sir Henry Stracey told us that it was understood that the battle was to be fought on equal terms?—Yes.

27,296. That he always understood it?—Yes.

27,297. Did you understand that too?—I understood from Mr. Green that he had the same amount.

27,298. I mean beforehand did you understand that it was to be? Sir Henry Stracey substantially said when he came down here it was on the terms that each party was to pay half?—It was understood so, I believe.

27,299. I want to know when that understanding was come to?—I do not quite remember. At the time Sir Henry Stracey declared himself.

27,300. Mr. Green understood that?—Yes.

27,301. Was Mr. Green known to both parties as the agent who was to conduct it?—I presume he was.

27,302. At all events, when you were prepared yourself to advance money to Mr. Green, you understood Sir Henry Stracey was to find half?—Yes, and understood from Mr. Green that he had done so.

27,303. Was that after the election?—At the time it was going on.

27,304. Did you enter into any particulars with Mr. Green about it?—No.

27,305. Was that a mere general statement that Sir Henry Stracey had performed his part of the bargain?—Yes.

27,306. And did you understand the amount?—No, he merely said he had got an equal sum from both.

27,307. But he must have said that after the election, I suppose?—He said it during the election.

27,308. He could hardly have said that with truth, because Mr. Reynolds has told us that the first money that passed into the hands of Mr. Green on behalf of Sir Henry Stracey was the second Saturday of the election, and the second sum we have heard from Mr. Bunn was brought down the Saturday before the election. He thinks it was 500*l.*, and Mr. Reynolds says it was 1,000*l.*; and Sir Henry Stracey's money was in the hands of Mr. Green the Saturday before the election, and you have told us your money was not paid until afterwards?—I will not be certain of that. I think not, I think it might be at the finish of the transaction. Mr. Green told me he had a similar sum from both.

27,309. That was after you had paid his last amount?—Yes.

27,310. How much do you suppose yourself you advanced altogether to Mr. Green?—It might be 1,100*l.* or 1,200*l.*, I do not know the sum.

27,311. Did you advance as much to Mr. Stolworthy?—I think perhaps he did, but he returned me a part. I forget what it was. I had nearly forgotten the circumstance.

27,312. In point of fact do you think you spent 1,500*l.*?—I do not think I spent that; it might have approached near to it.

27,313. Have you any reason to think Mr. Green got money from anybody else?—I do not know, but I think not.

27,314. Was there any application made by you to anybody else?—No.

27,315. It has been suggested to us here that some money might have come from the Dowager Lady Lacon?—I heard the report at the time repeatedly, but I did not think it likely.

27,316. You did not think it likely?—I did not at the time. I could not tell. She was a wealthy woman, and quite able to do it if she wished.

27,317. And likely to have done it if she was asked?—Yes. There might have been an application to her, and she might have done it.

27,318. You have no knowledge of that?—No, it would be kept from me, of course, knowing I was connected with them.

27,319. I should have thought you were the medium of communication?—No, probably Lady Lacon would not have done it if she knew I was acquainted with it.

27,320. The person to keep it from would be Sir Edmund. It is probable she would not tell him?—I do not think it is likely it occurred at all; it may have done so.

27,321. Was Mr. Green known to her, do you know?—I should think he was. He was known to all the town; he was rather a notorious character.

27,322. The Dowager Lady Lacon's husband had been member for the borough for some time?—Yes, for some years; she would naturally take an interest in it.

27,323. And she would naturally know something about it?—Of course.

27,324. As an agent through whom the money might have passed?—She might have done so.

27,325. Did you ever hear Mr. Green mention anybody else as having given him money?—No.

27,326. You never heard him mention Lady Lacon's name?—No.

27,327. You say you gave Stolworthy 200*l.* or 300*l.*, and he gave you back part of it?—Yes.

27,328. Do you recollect how much?—No, I do not remember; it is so long ago. It is seven years ago, and I cannot remember it. I have banished it from my mind, in fact.

27,329. When you gave the money to Mr. Stolworthy did you suppose that Mr. Green would become acquainted with the fact?—I knew that Mr. Green and Mr. Stolworthy were in communication with each other, so that I naturally concluded he would know it.

27,330. Did you understand, in giving the money to Mr. Stolworthy as well as to Mr. Green, that you were carrying out the agreement with Sir Henry Stracey?—Yes.

27,331. In fact, that it was a part of the contribution?—Oh yes.

27,332. We may take it that in point of fact you believed that the whole of the money advanced on the Conservative side at the election of 1859 was advanced by you?—I think it was. There might have been a private application to other parties. I cannot say myself as to that. I have no knowledge of it.

27,333. Is there anybody else to whom the application would be made except to Lady Lacon?—I think not. Perhaps, if an application had been made to Lady Lacon that such and such a sum would secure the election, she might be induced to do it; but I have no knowledge of the thing.

27,334. Would it have been likely to be made to her directly?—Oh yes, it would be so. Of course it would have been concealed from Sir Edmund Lacon.

27,335. Were any of the sons living with her at the time?—No.

27,336. Do you happen to recollect where Lady Lacon was at the election of 1859?—I think she was living at Ormesby House then.

27,337. You think she was in the neighbourhood at the time?—Yes, I think she was living at Ormesby House, the residence of Sir Edmund, the house Sir Edmund now lives in.

27,338. Was that her house at the time?—Yes.

27,339. That was her house during her life?—Yes.

27,340. Then it would be very easy to make the application to her during the election?—Oh yes.

27,341. Was Sir Edmund living there too?—No, Sir Edmund was living down at Hopton, I think.

27,342. And you say none of her other sons were living there with her?—No.

27,343. An application, if made to her at all, might have been made by Mr. Green direct?—Yes.

27,344. Do you recollect from whom you heard the report?—It was a current report at the time, repeatedly.

27,345. Not very current in the town?—I heard it repeatedly myself amongst the party. I do not remember the precise party I had it from.

27,346. Do you think Mr. Lushington Preston was likely to know anything about it?—I think not; he might have done so, he might have named it, I mean.

27,347. (Mr. Russell.) Was the Dowager Lady Lacon aware that you advanced the money in 1859?—No.

27,348. Were you on intimate terms with her?—Yes.

27,349. If she had advanced that money she would have been as likely to have advanced it through your hand as anybody's?—If I made the application probably, but I did not.

27,350. May the amount you gave to Mr. Green and

Mr. Stolworthy have amounted to 1,500*l.*?—I do not think it would quite. I do not think so much money was spent as is reported.

27,351 If 1,500*l.* was spent, the balance over and above what you advanced must be a small one?—Oh yes.

27,352. And a sum hardly worth while, I should have thought, applying to Lady Lacon for?—I think not; they might have made a special application to her to say a certain amount would have saved the election. But I do not think it myself. There is no accounting for what is done at those times.

27,353. (Mr Fitzgerald.) At present we have not got the exact sum advanced by Sir Henry Stracey?—You have not.

27,354. (Mr. Russell.) I mean, if Lady Lacon was applied to, it was probably for a larger sum than 200*l.* or 300*l.*?—I think very probably.

27,355. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you think, when Mr. Green and you conversed on the subject, that the amount advanced by Sir Henry Stracey was adverted to?—He merely said he had got an equal sum from each.

27,356. That is when he made up the exact sum he received from you, he said he had an equal sum from Sir Henry Stracey?—Yes.

27,357. Did he ask you for the balance to make it up?—No.

27,358. Then all that you advanced was expected by Mr. Green?—Yes, I should think so.

27,359. (Mr. Russell.) Of the public-houses supplied by Sir Henry Lacon, are the majority of them tenanted by voters?—Yes, I think so.

27,360. I suppose almost all?—Almost all. Some are attended to by women.

27,361. I suppose they are all 10*l.* occupiers?—Yes, most of them.

27,362. Did you ever ascertain how they voted; in what proportion?—No, I have not.

27,363. Did almost all of them vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—I think a great many of them; the majority of them.

27,364. I think it right to ask you whether any influence whatever was brought to bear on those men to your knowledge?—Only the legitimate interest. Of course we use what interest we can in all cases in asking them for their vote. There was no unfair means used.

27,365. Was any publican given to understand that if he did vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl it would be against his own interest?—I do not remember; not by me certainly.

27,366. Or by your authority?—No.

27,367. The subject of the screw has been mentioned, therefore it is almost incumbent upon you, if you can do so, to give it a direct denial?—I do so. I confess I used all legitimate influence I could fairly in forwarding Sir Edmund's interest; but I never used a threat nor did I put one in execution.

27,368. Of those publicans who voted against Sir Edmund, who are supplied by him, have you any case that you know of in which a man has done it to his own injury?—No.

27,369. Have you ever turned a man out of his house?—No, I think not. In preferring or admitting a tenant, I have asked him his politics, and I would naturally, if there were two, three, or four candidates equally eligible, I would prefer the man who is friendly to me.

27,370. Is it your invariable rule to ask a man's politics before you allow him to occupy one of your houses?—I do so; but if he is a man likely to do more business than another who is not opposed to me, it would not be a consideration.

27,371. If a man says his politics are Liberal you do not put him into the house?—Unless he is a more eligible man than the other. If there are two equal men I prefer my own friend.

27,372. Have you put in any men who represented their political views were Liberal?—Oh yes.

27,373. And have those men voted Liberal afterwards?—Yes.

27,374. Without any detriment to themselves?—Oh yes.

27,375. Are your houses held at will, or do you grant leases?—At will, most of them.

27,376. There is another matter that has been mentioned, the grains?—Yes.

27,377. A voter named Mayers, a miller, was examined before us to-day, and he told us in 1859 Mr. Green came to him and said he would obtain a contract for him for grains at 3*d.* a bushel, by which Mayer saved half-a-crown a week, or 6*l.* 5*s.* a year. Were contracts of that sort made with your knowledge, or by your sanction?—Oh yes; but that is not confined entirely to voters.

27,378. The 3*d.* is a very small price, is it not?—4*d.* is the extreme price, but in making those contracts they undertake to consume a certain quantity all the year round. As many in summer as in winter.

27,379. Are the contracts for grains at 3*d.* per bushel ever made with men who voted against Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—I think there are some who voted against us; but I should not as a general way make a contract with those men, unless we had such an abundance that we could not sell them without. In winter it is of very material consequence to dairymen whether they get grains or not.

27,380. If it were not for the contracts to sell grains at 3*d.* per bushel, could you sell them at a higher price?—We might in the winter, but not through the summer. It is of material advantage to take a certain amount, and I would naturally give a preference to my friends. I consider that only a legitimate influence.

27,381. What do you consider the average price paid for grains by men who have not got contracts?—He pays 4*d.* a bushel, but then he does as he likes. In summer he turns his cows to grass. In summer he is not bound to take more than he likes.

27,382. Mayers has told us he could not have bought his grains at 3*d.* a bushel anywhere else?—Perhaps not, because there are very few grains made anywhere else.

27,383. As you have said you consider that a legitimate influence, I suppose you do not mind admitting it is partially with a view of obtaining the votes of these men that the contracts are entered into?—Perhaps, to a certain extent, I give them the preference. I could take as many contracts again as I have this time of year. They are all anxious to take the contracts, and, having a certain amount to dispose of, I give the grains to those I like best.

27,384. And those you like best are those who would vote for Sir Edmund Lacon?—Probably that is in my mind at the time. I consider it is fair you should do so. It is no use having an interest, if you do not use it.

27,385. Did you ever know a man that had a contract that voted against Sir Edmund Lacon?—Yes.

27,386. Did you ever know them afterwards get their contracts renewed?—Yes, I think so.

27,387. After the contracts were renewed, did you ever know them vote against Sir Edmund Lacon?—I do not remember any precise case.

27,388. I suppose you never would give a man more than one trial?—No, I think not, perhaps not. I should say nothing to him. I should say the contract is at an end, and give instructions that it should not be renewed, and give no reason.

27,389. If the man had voted the other way?—Perhaps so. You see a man who is friendly towards us, and voting with us, would naturally complain if he was excluded, and others were allowed to take them; because I could take as many contracts again if I had them.

27,390. Have you been repaid the 4,000*l.* you advanced at the last election?—No.

27,391. Have you any idea whether that money will be repaid in equal proportions by Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—I think, if it is paid at all, it probably will be so.

THIRTY-FIRST DAY.

S. Nightingale

11 Oct. 1866.

27,392. But no communication has taken place with reference to its payment ?—Not a word.

27,393. Either with Sir Edmund Lacon or Mr. Goodson ?—No.

27,394. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you recollect that particular case of Mayers, the old man of 74 ?—I do not know him ; there are so many that we have a man in that department to sell the grains, and he gets his instructions from me. I know very few of them.

27,395. Mayers was a voter whose name was handed in to us as having voted for Watkin and McCullagh in 1857, and for Lacon and Stracey in 1859, and the inference drawn from that was that he was bribed in 1859. He denied that he was bribed in 1859, but he said he had voted for Sir Edmund Lacon subsequently, and that he had in consequence of the interference of Mr. Green obtained a contract ?—I think very likely he might have done so. Many of them make a contract with me, and get supplied all the winter, and in the summer throw them up.

27,396. Was it the habit of Mr. Green after an election to mention to you parties who he thought ought to have contracts ?—I do not remember his so doing. It is probable he may have done so, but I do not remember it.

27,397. Do you remember his ever doing so ?—No. Of course in all our transactions we would naturally either employ or assist those parties who were friendly to us. For instance, we use between 30,000 and 40,000 quarters of malt, which is nearly the whole of it manufactured in Yarmouth. That would naturally give us great interest and great power ; and in the employment of all our tradesmen we would select those that are friendly to us, it is only natural we should do so.

27,398. How many contracts do you suppose you have at the present moment to take grains ?—I do not know. We take between 50*l.* and 60*l.* a week for grains. We take 100*l.* a week for yeast and grains together.

27,399. You cannot tell me how many persons have contracts with you ?—I should think 20 or 30.

27,400. Not more ?—No. A great many are supplied in the country round. The cows in Yarmouth could not consume all our grains.

27,401. (Mr. Slade.) You have received 175*l.* from Mr. Shuckford since the inquiry ?—I think that was the amount ; he sent me a cheque, and I paid it into my account.

27,402. Have you received any money besides that ?—No.

C. Lubbock.

Charles Lubbock sworn ; examined by Mr. Slade.

27,403–4. What are you ?—I am out of business now.

27,405. What were you ?—I have been a purveyor of timber in London, in a large firm in London, a shipbuilding yard, previous to my retirement.

27,406. Are you on the register at present ?—Not at present.

27,407. Were you in the year 1859 ?—I was.

27,408. Who did you vote for ?—Watkin and Young.

27,409. Did you receive any money for your vote ?—12*l.* of Mr. Eagleton.

27,410. Had you any offer of money on the other side ?—No.

27,411. Had you voted for the Liberal party previous to the year 1857 ?—No, I had no vote then. I was in London then.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning at half-past 10.

THIRTY-SECOND DAY.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 12th October 1866.

THIRTY-SECOND DAY.

J. Stanford.

12 Oct. 1866.

Joseph Stanford sworn ; examined by Mr. Slade.

27,412. What are you ?—A Trinity pilot.

27,413. Did you vote at the last election ?—Yes.

27,414. Who for ?—Lacon and Goodson.

27,415. Did you receive any money for your vote ?—I received 15*l.* for loss of time.

27,416. Who gave you that money ?—Mr. Rivett.

27,417. Did you send in any account to Mr. Rivett ?—No.

27,418. Did Mr. Rivett offer you the 15*l.*, or did you ask for it ?—He offered it to me if I would wait to vote, in the room of going to sea.

27,419. Had you a vote in the previous election of 1859 ?—I had.

27,420. Did you get any money at that election ?—10*l.*

27,421. Who from ?—I really could not say who gave it me. It was from the Liberal side. I voted Liberal that time.

27,422. Had you voted previously at the election of 1857 ?—No.

27,423. Did you know the late Mr. Rivett ?—I did.

27,424. He secured a great number of votes in Gorleston ?—I cannot say what he did.

27,425. Do you know anybody to whom he gave money ?—I do not.

27,426. Did you know that he had given money to Thomas Leggett ?—I heard that he had, but Mr. Rivett did not tell me so ; I heard such was the case, but I was not aware of it till I read of it in the paper yesterday. I am not certain of it, although he is a shipmate of mine.

27,427. Did Mr. Rivett give you the money with his own hands ?—Yes.

27,428. Was this 10*l.* that you got from the Liberal side in 1859 also for loss of time ?—Yes it was.

27,429. Cannot you recollect who the person was who gave you the money in 1859 ?—I cannot. The late Mr. Barker took me to the gentleman who gave me the money, but who the gentleman was, or what he was, I cannot say.

27,430. Where was the gentleman staying when Mr. Barker took you ?—Standing abreast of the "Star." I do not know where he was staying.

27,431. Was that gentleman a stranger to you ?—A perfect stranger to me.

27,432. Do you think it was a Yarmouth man who gave you the 10*l.* in 1859 ?—I really cannot say.

THIRTY-SECOND DAY.

12 Oct. 1866.

Mrs. JUDITH SOLOMON sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

Mrs. J. Solomon.

27,433. Are you the widow of Abraham Solomon?—Yes.

27,434. Did he vote at the last election?—Yes. He was taken there in a most helpless state, quite unfit to go, still he was taken in Stafford's carriage.

27,435. Whom did he vote for?—Lacon and Goodson, so far as I know. He went there in the carriage.

27,436. Dr. Stafford has said that he gave him money for his vote. Are you aware of that?—Dr. Stafford might have given him money. He was our medical man, and I perfectly recollect one day when in the shop he inquired if Mr. Solomon was alone, and I thought he came on his professional visit. I might have heard the conversation. It was about 10 minutes. When he left I heard him say, "I have behaved well to you, and you behave well to me." Before I had time to make any remark to my daughter the door opened, Stafford left the shop, and my husband was at the keeping room door to put the money in my hand, 15 sovereigns; and that is all I know about it.

27,437. Do you know whether he voted in 1859?—I do not recollect it. I did not interfere in those affairs at all; I do not know whether he did or not.

27,438. And you do not know whether he got any money?—I know nothing about it and I should not have known this, only for his being in such a helpless state; he could hardly make himself understood at times, even his reason had left him; indeed, I did not expect they would take him for a voter in the state he was. He suffered from paralysis of the brain for three years before he died, and Dr. Stafford was his medical man.

R. J. Harvey, Esq., M.P.

ROBERT JOHN HARVEY, Esq., M.P., sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

27,439. Are you a partner in the bank of Messrs. Harvey and Hudson at Norwich?—Yes.

27,440. Are you a Member of Parliament?—Yes.

27,441. For what place?—The borough of Thetford.

27,442. We have been told, that on the Saturday before the election in 1859 Mr. Reynolds received a sum of money, a parcel containing money, at your bank; do you remember that?—I do not remember it. Very likely he did. I have come here for the purpose rather of clearing up your way than probably being asked questions; and perhaps it will facilitate if I tell you exactly all I know on the subject, if you like that.

27,443. We should prefer that.—All I know of the subject is this, that about a month or six weeks before the election Sir Henry Stracey called upon me, and he said that some money would be wanted on account of the Yarmouth election, and that either Mr. Reynolds, or Mr. Palmer, or Mr. Preston—I really do not know which, I forget—was to have what (I believe) they required. I remember stating at the time that that was such an order as I could scarcely take, inasmuch as the amount must be limited; and he then fixed 2,000*l.* as the extreme amount that either of those gentlemen was to draw, I cannot tell you which. I see, in looking back, that 1,000*l.* was taken about the 22nd March, 500*l.* on the 15th April, and 500*l.* about the 23rd April. The greater part was taken in our own notes, for we issue notes.

27,444. How was this money drawn out?—I cannot say. You see it is seven years ago. I cannot tell you. I know it was a letter or a note individually to me, from one of those gentlemen.

27,445. Had Sir Henry Stracey a balance of that amount in your hands at that time?—I think he had; but Sir Henry Stracey is a man of very large fortune, and anything that he required he was certain to have.

27,446. What is Mr. Palmer's christian name?—I really do not know. I do not come to Yarmouth once in two or three years. I know Mr. Palmer, and I know Mr. Reynolds, and I know Mr. Preston, but I really did not know one from the other. I only knew that they were connected with the Conservative party in Yarmouth, and that was all I knew of them.

27,447. We have been told that Mr. Bunn took up a letter to your bank, and that in consequence of that letter a parcel was given to Mr. Reynolds by a gentleman whom he supposed to be Mr. Hill?—That is quite incorrect. You see, sir, it is impossible after seven years to remember to whom a parcel was given of money, inasmuch as we are dealers in money.

27,448. What I wish to know is, whether you were the gentleman who Mr. Reynolds took for Mr. Hill?—I never saw Mr. Reynolds, and I never saw anybody but Sir Henry Stracey.

27,449. Then you never gave a parcel of money to any person?—No. It was given probably to him. My impression is this, that a letter was written to us, "Somebody will call for a parcel, which please to make up in the following way;" that is the sort of impression I have. But this I can say, that the greater portion of it was taken in our notes.

27,450. And the entire amount was 2,000*l.*?—2,000*l.*

27,451. (Mr. Russell.) Sir Henry Stracey exceeded the limit he had fixed on the first occasion?—No, he did not; it was 2,000*l.*

27,452. (Mr. Slade.) When did Sir Henry Stracey ask for his account at the bank?—About a month or six weeks before the election.

27,453. I mean to say, had he his pass-book sent to him then, his pass-book made up for him?—No, he called. He merely said he was going to Yarmouth to stand at the Yarmouth election; there would be some money wanted there, and I should attend to the instructions of some gentleman at Yarmouth, I forget who.

27,454. When did Sir Henry Stracey ask for his account for the election at Yarmouth?—Sir Henry Stracey is a very bad accountant, and I do not think Sir Henry Stracey looks into his affairs very often. I should think the book was made up in the ordinary way; I do not remember. I may say I have had no conversation with Sir Henry Stracey on the subject of Yarmouth ever since.

27,455. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Ever since what?—Ever since 1859.

27,456. Ever since the election?—No, never.

27,457. (Mr. Slade.) Then I understand this 2,000*l.* was not an advance by you?—No.

27,458. Was this money brought down partially in notes, and partially in gold, do you remember?—I think that the first 1,000*l.* was taken, 600*l.* in notes and the rest in gold.

27,459. You cannot tell us who took the first 1,000*l.*?—I cannot.

27,460. (Mr. Russell.) I suppose you simply directed your cashier to give the parcels to any gentleman who called on behalf of Sir Henry Stracey?—Any gentleman who identified himself, I think.

27,461. Sir Henry Stracey has told us that he did not settle his account with you with reference to his election expenses until 18 months afterwards?—I do not know how that was.

27,462. You do not remember whether that was so?—No.

27,463. Was this 2,000*l.* a balance, or part of a balance, that Sir Henry Stracey had with you?—Perhaps I had better fully explain to you how the transaction really was. The fact is this: the order from Yarmouth was so exceedingly irregularly sent to me, that I felt I was not justified in charging that amount to Sir Henry Stracey's account without a better voucher, and therefore I took upon myself individually this 2,000*l.* for 18 months.

27,464. (Mr. Slade.) Was Sir Henry Stracey ever aware of that?—Sir Henry Stracey was not aware of that for 18 months afterwards.

27,465. And then he became aware of it?—Yes.

27,466. (Mr. Russell.) Was that in contemplation of the possibility of a petition?—It was not at the time at all. The fact was, the order was so exceedingly irregular, such an order as could scarcely be taken as a proper voucher in a banking establishment, and I did not choose that anything irregular should go on through our bank, so I took it on myself. Sir Henry Stracey is a very intimate friend of mine, and my father was on his death-bed at the time, and I had not an opportunity of seeing Sir Henry Stracey; and immediately after the election a petition was, I believe, either threatened or filed against Sir Henry Stracey, and we thought it better not to say anything to Sir Henry Stracey about it for 18 months afterwards.

27,467. Then in fact you adopted this course partially to protect yourself as a banker, and partially also to protect Sir Henry Stracey from the consequences?—Just so.

27,468. Sir Henry Stracey has informed us that he gave a carte blanche to Mr. Reynolds to draw whatever might be requisite. Mr. Reynolds says he carried that, and your statement bears out Mr. Reynolds?—I have stated exactly the fact, that Sir Henry Stracey in the first instance said, "I do not know whether it was "Mr. Reynolds, Mr. Palmer, or Mr. Preston, I cannot "tell you which, that either one or the other was to "have what they required." I said that was a sort of order that no bank could take, there must always be a limit to any order of that sort, and then Sir Henry Stracey limited it to 2,000*l.*

27,469. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Was this all by conversation?—By conversation.

27,470. There was no letter?—None at all.

27,471. (Mr. Russell.) Was any money drawn by Sir Henry Stracey with reference to the election expenses shortly after the election?—I really cannot tell you. Whatever else was drawn was drawn by cheque, and I have no means of tracing it whatever, nor do I know of any other transaction but that which I have mentioned to you.

27,472. You were not aware yourself whether the whole of this 2,000*l.* was drawn with reference to illegal expenditure?—I know nothing about the illegal expenditure.

27,473. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Your books, I understand you, would not show the drawing of this 2,000*l.*?—No, my private account would show it, and that is the only account that would show it.

27,474. Your private account in the bank?—Yes.

27,475. That would show the three separate items of 1,000*l.*, 500*l.*, and 500*l.*?—Yes, that is it.

27,476. (Mr. Russell.) Then Sir Henry Stracey's account with you would show whether he drew a cheque shortly after the election for the payment of the legal expenses?—I should think it would. The books are here; we can look at them.

27,477. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) We ought to know that, whether the legal expenses came out of the 2,000*l.*?—We unfortunately give up the vouchers in our establishment, therefore we have no means of tracing it.

27,478. The only means of tracing it would be this, if Sir Henry Stracey gave a cheque for the exact amount the amount would correspond in your book?—I have been looking for that and cannot see it.

27,479. You see no cheque for the sum charged by the election auditor?—I do not know what the sum is. I do not know anything more than what I have said, something like 800*l.* or 900*l.* They told me about 900*l.* I was to look for. I looked, and could not find such a sum.

27,480. 800*l.* would be the whole for both?—I do not know the amount. I see there is a cheque payable to Mr. Preston of 250*l.* in May.

27,481. In May of the same year?—May of that year; but I do not know whether it is the same Mr. Preston, or any other Mr. Preston. It is put in our ledger as Mr. Preston, so much.

27,482. Is that the only entry of 250*l.* to Mr. Preston in your book about that time?—I think it is; it appears to be.

27,483. What Sir Henry Stracey would have to pay as legal expenses would be 404*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*?—My impression is, a little further on, there is another cheque of 100*l.*, or something like that, to Mr. Preston, but I have no opportunity of knowing what Mr. Preston it is to.

27,484. We only want to know how it stands in your books?—I think there is another cheque to Mr. Preston, but we have no opportunity of knowing whether it is Mr. Preston of Yarmouth, or Mr. Preston of anywhere else. Of course on referring I could find.

27,485. (Mr. Slade.) I understand you have Sir Henry Stracey's account here?—Yes.

27,486. Will you allow the Commissioners to look at it?—Yes. I imagine you gave me a summons to produce it, and that is all I required. (The book was produced.) What do you wish to know?

27,487. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) We wish to know whether, soon after the election, there is any cheque in your book to Mr. Preston?—If you wish us to refer we will refer to our cash books, and no doubt we can trace it; but in this ledger I have now before me there is 250*l.* payable the 12th May to Mr. Preston, and the 3rd of June there is another 150*l.* payable to Mr. Preston. It may be Mr. Preston of Yarmouth or any other Mr. Preston.

27,488. That would just make up the 400*l.*, you see?—Yes, it would.

27,489. (Mr. Russell.) I suppose you are giving the exact amount of the cheques?—Yes, the exact amount.

27,490. No odd shillings?—No.

27,491. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Where does it appear in your books that Sir Henry Stracey repaid you the 2,000*l.* which was advanced?—The facts are these, that there was some settlement with Lady Stracey in September 1860, and at that time, after all the petition and the whole business was over, I mentioned to Sir Henry Stracey, at least I did not then mention it to Sir Henry Stracey, but I mentioned it to a member of his family, that they had forgotten there was 2,000*l.* due to me for his order on account of the Yarmouth election, and so that was given to me.

27,492. It was given to you in that way?—Yes; and there was a question that a little account might be opened, and it was opened and paid.

27,493. And nothing was said as to the manner in which it was expended?—No, I never spoke to Sir Henry, nor have I seen him upon the subject since the election. I never mentioned to him the subject in any way whatever.

27,494. (Mr. Russell.) I suppose you charged interest for the money for 18 months?—If you ask me, I did not; for Sir Henry Stracey and I are on terms of great friendship, and I thought he had lost enough money with his petition and other things, that I did not charge him any interest.

27,495. The 400*l.* that you have mentioned amounts to the sum that would have been Sir Henry Stracey's share of the legitimate expenses within 4*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* No doubt then the 400*l.* was to pay the legal expenses, leaving the 2,000*l.* advanced as you said for illegal purposes?—Yes. That you know, as a banker, I had nothing to do with. When gentlemen ask for money, I have nothing to do with what they want it for. It is their business.

27,496. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) The manner in which this transaction was carried on obliges me to ask you whether at the time you advanced this money you believed it was for legal purposes?—I do not trouble myself to think for other people; I leave that to them. I have plenty to think of in my own affairs.

27,497. At all events I may take it you did not assume it was for strictly legal expenses?—I did not want to think about it. The mode the money was ordered was unusual, and that is all I can say.

27,498. ((Mr. Russell.) Mr. Brogden's banker stated everybody knew Yarmouth, and I suppose you

THIRTY-SECOND DAY.

R. J. Harvey, Esq., M.P.

12 Oct. 1866.

did ?—It struck me that the amount was wonderfully small, that I confess.

27,499. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) For the requirements of Yarmouth ?—Yes; but in my opinion it is the duty of the Legislature to prevent it, and that is very easily done by making it a criminal offence. When Parliament does that there will be no longer any bribery.

27,500. (Mr. Slade.) You are a member of the Legislature, and may apply yourself to that ?—For that purpose, I apprehend, you come down here.

27,501. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) I ask you whether you think it would put down bribery if members were required to make a declaration at the table of the House that they had not spent money, or money had not been spent to their knowledge ?—I do not think it would have any effect whatever. My own impression is that gentlemen are kept in perfect ignorance of the illegal expenses until after the oath has been given them, then they would be informed of it. I think until you make it a criminal offence to give money or receive it, and make it criminal for the member also to have had it charged in any way to him, or proved to have been charged to him, you will not do away with it. That, I am afraid, the House of Commons will never consent to, because it affects themselves.

27,502. Suppose it was a criminal offence, do not you think a court of law ought to be invested with the powers of this Commission, to insure a conviction of the individual ?—I quite agree with you.

27,503. (Mr. Russell.) I understood you to say this, you believe if a member had to make a declaration at the bar of the House, the same means would be adopted during the election to enable him to make the declaration with truth which is at present adopted to enable him to do so before a Committee of the House of Commons ?—That is just my opinion.

Mr. Edward H. L. Preston recalled ; examined by Mr. Slade.

Mr. E.H.L.Preston.

27,504. Can you tell us what authority you had to draw on Messrs. Harvey and Hudson for Sir Henry Stracey ?—I had the authority of Sir Henry.

27,505. When did Sir Henry Stracey authorize you to do so ; how long before the election ?—I think it must have been a month or five weeks before the election, I should think so.

27,506. Did Sir Henry Stracey say to what amount you might draw ?—Yes, I think it was said at somewhere about 1,500*l.*

27,507. Was this money to be drawn by an order from yourself to Messrs Harvey and Hudson ?—I think Sir Henry said, "Your order will be honoured."

27,508. Are you aware whether Sir Henry had given a like authority to Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Palmer ?—Mr. Palmer is a great mistake of Mr. Harvey's. Mr. Palmer had nothing to do with it.

27,509. What is Mr. Palmer's christian name ?—I suppose he means the partner of Mr. Reynolds ; there is no other Mr. Palmer. Mr. Palmer was the returning officer, and it was a mistake, it could not be him.

27,510. Had Mr. Reynolds any authority to draw ?—Mr. Reynolds, I think, had no authority whatever.

27,511. And to what extent did you exercise this authority ?—I am surprised to hear this morning Mr. Harvey talks of 2,000*l.* The only order that I gave, as I believe, was one card for 1,000*l.* I am not aware of ever having given a second.

27,512. We have been told that you gave an order for money to Mr. James William Bunn ?—Yes.

27,513. Is that the order you mean, of 1,000*l.* ?—That is the order I allude to.

27,514. That is the only order you recollect ?—That is the only order I am aware of having given.

27,515. On what day was that order for 1,000*l.* drawn ?—I really cannot tell, but I think it was in March. I have endeavoured to refer to my books this morning, but can find nothing of it whatever. All I remember of it is this, it was on my own printed card, to which I put my initials, and I fancy I put 1,000*l.* ; but I certainly did not exceed that.

27,516. It was really written on your own card ?—enclosed my card in an envelope.

27,517. A visiting card ?—A visiting card. I enclosed it in an envelope, putting the sum. I am not certain about that, but I suppose it must have been so. I put 1,000*l.* upon it, and I put my initials to it in pencil, and I put it in an envelope and gave it to Mr. Bunn.

27,518. We have been told by Mr. Harvey 1,000*l.* was drawn out on the 22nd of March ?—I should think that must have been the sum.

27,519. Was that money ever brought to you ?—Never ; I never saw it.

27,520. Did you hear whether Mr. Bunn had got it himself ?—I think I must have heard that, but I am not aware that I did. I think I must have heard it, but he never came to me about it. In fact I had nothing whatever to do with it further than to give orders for such money as might be wanted.

27,521. You did not make any inquiry of Mr. Bunn whether he cashed that ?—Not the least ; in fact I did not know. It might have been in sovereigns or paper. I never asked him any questions about it.

27,522. Can you give us any information about the two sums of 500*l.* that were drawn on the 15th and 23rd of April ?—I am not at all aware of it. I have been talking with Mr. Reynolds this morning ; he seems to think I did give a second order. I am quite satisfied I never did. I never gave but one order, and that was for 1,000*l.*

27,523. Was this authority from Sir Henry to draw to the extent of 1,500*l.* given verbally ?—Oh yes ; I was staying over at Rackheath with Sir Henry, and he told me, arranging about the election, "What money you want go to Harvey's for and give your initials."

27,524. Did he mention at that time the sum of 1,500*l.* ?—I think I said it would require somewhere about 1,500*l.*

27,525. That being the case, can you say one way or the other whether you drew to the full extent of 1,500*l.* ?—I am quite satisfied I never drew beyond the 1,000*l.*

27,526. That you are certain of ?—I am quite satisfied of it. I have endeavoured this morning and yesterday to find the books ; somehow or other, through the death of my father and the changing of the office, I cannot lay my hands upon them ; but I am quite satisfied if I could do so I should find a copy of my order.

27,527. Are you at all aware at this time that a similar sum to what Sir Henry Stracey advanced was to be advanced by Sir Edmund Lacon ?—No, I am not at all. I had nothing to do with the management of the election ; that was exclusively in the hands of Mr. Reynolds, but I suppose it was to be so.

27,528. At the time did you ?—I imagined it was ; as my own matter of belief I thought it would be so, but I do not know anything about it.

27,529. It is many years ago, and the recollection of the different witnesses seems to vary. Mr. Reynolds tells us that he brought down a parcel from the bank of Messrs. Harvey and Hudson, and that it contained 1,000*l.*, and Mr. Bunn told us yesterday that the order to draw for him was 500*l.*, and he brought that back ?—My notion is that it was for 1,000*l.* I never gave another. If Mr. Reynolds brought 1,000*l.* down, that must have been my order. I understood Mr. Bunn brought the 1000*l.*

(Mr. Fitzgerald.) Mr. Bunn has told us exactly the day he brought the money, which must have been on the 23rd of April.

27,529*a*. Would that be a Saturday ?—That would be a Saturday or a Friday. I do not remember the day.

27,530. The election was Friday the 29th of April, and Mr. Harvey has given us the 23rd of April as the day, and Mr. Bunn says he brought the money that day ?—The 22nd of March, is not that the 1,000*l.*

27,531. That is the 1,000*l.*?—That is the first order that was given, and that I gave.

27,532. That no doubt was brought by Mr. Reynolds?—By Mr. Reynolds.

27,533. That 23rd of April must be the day Mr. Bunn brought his, because he fixed it to be the Saturday before the election, whereas Mr. Reynolds thought his was about 10 days or a fortnight before the election?—The first application for money and the first advance of money was that that I gave the order to Mr. Bunn for.

27,534. (Mr. Slade.) The 22nd of March?—Yes.

27,535. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Mr. Harvey's books agree with Mr. Bunn's evidence that 500*l.* was drawn the Saturday before the election?—It only shows that Mr. Bunn took 500*l.* on the 23rd of April, but it does not show that my order did not exist the 22nd of March.

27,536. Not at all?—I maintain that I gave Mr. Bunn no order for 500*l.* in April; my order was for 1,000*l.*

27,537. That was in March?—That was in March, and that was the first order that was given; I am quite satisfied of that.

27,538. And you are quite sure that was the order you gave to Mr. Bunn?—Yes.

27,539. (Mr. Russell.) It is perfectly clear the 1,000*l.* the 22nd March no doubt was the 1,000*l.* you gave the order for. The 500*l.* on the 23rd April is no doubt the 500*l.* Mr. Bunn brought down, but there is an intermediate sum of 500*l.* drawn the 15th April, of which we have no evidence except the evidence of Mr. Harvey, the banker?—I am quite satisfied I gave no order except for the first 1,000*l.*

27,540. Are you aware whether any gentleman but yourself had authority to give an order?—I am not aware of any; still, in the mêlée of an election, if money were immediately wanted, one cannot say who was in that position.

27,541. Would you say of your own knowledge Mr. Palmer had any?—No, he was returning officer, and never mixes with elections.

27,542. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Is there any other Mr. Palmer who does?—No, none; it is a mistake of Mr. Harvey's altogether. He has connected that with Messrs. Palmer and Preston in Yarmouth, who are large parties on both sides, but the name is a mistake altogether.

27,543. (Mr. Slade.) I should like to ask you this question; do you believe the 2,000*l.* was not brought down for Sir Henry Stracey?—I have no doubt Mr. Harvey is perfectly correct, but all I say is this, it is 2,000*l.* that I was totally unaware of, and if I had given the order I must have been aware of it, I could not give orders for 1,000*l.* and 500*l.* without knowing it; and I do not think, and I am perfectly convinced, it is a long time ago certainly, but I am perfectly convinced I only gave one order for 1,000*l.*, and that was done on my own visiting card.

27,544. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) To whom did you give the order?—To Mr. Bunn.

27,545. At the committee room?—No, he came to my office.

27,546. In consequence of what did you give that order?—He came and said that money was wanted.

27,547. Did you suppose he came from Mr. Green?—Yes.

27,548. Had you any conversation with Mr. Green on the subject?—Not a bit, but I knew that Mr. Bunn was a trustworthy man, or they would not have sent him to me, and Mr. Bunn would not ask me for money without it was proper and correct.

27,549. Then, further than giving the order to Mr. Bunn, you do not know whether Mr. Bunn went that day or not?—He may have given it to somebody else.

27,550. He may have carried it back to Mr. Reynolds?—Yes.

27,551. And Mr. Reynolds may have got the money?—He may have given it to anybody, and another person may have brought it down.

27,552. You knew nothing of the subsequent order for 500*l.*?—Nothing at all. Speaking now from recollection, to the best of my belief I swear I did not give a second order.

27,553. You told us you thought the 1,500*l.* was brought down?—I have no doubt it was. The banker's book says so.

27,554. Previously to this, were you not under the impression that 1,500*l.* had been spent by Sir Henry Stracey?—I have always understood so.

27,555. How the 500*l.* came you do not know?—How the 500*l.* came I do not know. If I had given the order I should have said so directly, because whether it was 100*l.* or 1,500*l.* was a matter of no importance.

27,556. You do not keep any diary?—Yes, I do; and I have referred to my diary, and as I just now said, on account of my father's death, and the whole of our books having been removed from the office, I miss '58, '59, and '60. I cannot find them anywhere, or else if I could find those books I have no doubt I should have seen my order. If I could find them I should be happy to put them before you.

27,557. We have it now as a matter of certainty 2,000*l.* passed from the bank?—I have no doubt about that.

27,558. And we have only proof that 1,500*l.* arrived in Yarmouth?—I do not doubt whatever about what Mr. Harvey says. The money came, and there can be no doubt the money came; but you ask me what did you give the order for? I tell you what I believe, and what I am satisfied I gave an order for, no matter if I gave it for 1,500*l.* or 1,000*l.*, it is a matter of no importance, or even of 2,000*l.* If it came to a balance of account, as it were, I should not necessarily balance the account with him.

27,559. But, as far as you go, you say that?—As far as I go I gave the first order to Mr. Bunn, and my impression is that Mr. Bunn brought the money down himself, the first 1,000*l.*

27,560. Was Sir Henry Stracey brought into communication with Mr. Green himself?—No, I should not think so, as a canvasser.

27,561. You knew, I suppose, that Mr. Reynolds was acting for Sir Henry Stracey to take care of his interests?—Yes. I should tell you, when Sir Henry Stracey came to Yarmouth, he sent for me, and in talking the matter over I advised him not to stand for Yarmouth; if he did, I recommended him to take Mr. Reynolds as his managing man, and I told him I should be very happy to give him assistance, but I would have nothing to do with money matters whatever. However, afterwards, as we began to warm up, he had confidence in me, and he asked me whether I would undertake to give the orders for such money as would be wanted; and I said that I would, and I wrote the single order that I gave, and Mr. Bunn took it, and what became of it after I do not know, for I never saw it.

27,562. Were you aware that Mr. Reynolds had equal authority with you to draw?—I should say he had not, but still I think, from the confidence that Sir Henry Stracey had in him, if he had drawn, I think his cheque would have been honoured.

27,563. Sir Henry Stracey has told us that he gave a carte blanche to Mr. Reynolds?—That is a mistake.

27,564. Mr. Harvey has told us that Mr. Reynolds was one of three?—I have no doubt Sir Henry Stracey in talking to Mr. Harvey would say, if Mr. Preston or Mr. Reynolds come for it, you will let them have it; because if it had been arranged with me and Mr. Reynolds that he should give the order, I am sure Mr. Reynolds's cheque would be honoured equally with mine.

27,565. Mr. Reynolds being in partnership with Mr. Palmer, it is very likely Sir Henry Stracey would say Palmer and Reynolds?—Mr. Palmer is not the person who would have anything to do with it.

27,566. (Mr. Russell.) Did Sir Henry Stracey tell you that an arrangement had been made that he and Sir Edmund Lacon should share the expenses?—Oh dear, no. He and Sir Henry Stracey came first of all

THIRTY-SECOND DAY.

Mr. E.H.L.Preston.

12 Oct. 1866.

into Yarmouth almost as it were independently, and it was not till after some days that he had been here that I succeeded in arranging a coalition, and Sir Henry Stracey came to Yarmouth with the intention, if he could succeed with a coalition in Yarmouth, to obtain the seat if it was to be had.

27,567. Do you think it likely that Sir Henry Stracey may have spent a sum illegally in excess of that spent by Sir Edmund Lacon?—I should think he may have done that for the influence of Sir Edmund Lacon. I suppose at that election he had 40 or 50 votes above Sir Henry Stracey, and he would not require that amount of money that the other would; but still I do not know that it was so, but as at present informed, Sir Henry Stracey seems to have spent 700*l.* or 800*l.* more than Sir Edmund Lacon in buying votes at that election.

27,568. Has it been shown that, although the money has been received, it has been spent?—It has not been shown. There is such a thing as part of that money having been carried over to the petition expenditure. It is not necessary, on the present showing of the case, that the money was spent.

27,569. Sir Henry Stracey would have bribed if he had received this money in notes and gold, and he had kept it in his pocket for subsequent disposal?—I did not hear his evidence, but from what I have collected he tells us he knows nothing at all about his expenditure, and Mr. Harvey says he is not a great accountant, and knew nothing at all about it.

27,570. That is very evident?—And I believe so, from my knowledge of Sir Henry.

27,571. If any further sums than the sums we have heard of as sums advanced by Mr. Nightingale were advanced by Sir Edmund Lacon, are you aware from what source they have come?—I have no idea at all. I know nothing at all about Sir Edmund Lacon's side whatever, further than giving my support to it.

27,572. Mr. Watkin has told us that 750*l.* was all that was spent by him in illegal expenses at that election. Have you any idea yourself what money may have been spent?—I am not aware at all; there must have been a large sum of money.

27,573. Did it surprise you to hear so small a sum as 750*l.*?—It was puerile to talk about it. He must think people are a parcel of fools.

27,574. You consider it was a great fall down from the oyster barrels to 750*l.*?—Oh, very.

27,575. I mean 750*l.* was exclusively the expenditure of Mr. Watkin?—I am quite satisfied it was not, and if the election of Sir Henry Stracey and Sir Edmund Lacon cost 4,000*l.*, that the other cost more, and that they could not have approached Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey without an enormous outlay; and I think if you could collect the number of men that were bribed on that side it would show that the sum they talked of would not be sufficient.

27,576. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) That is not the way I have arrived at it, from taking the price of votes and the number bribed on that occasion?—You think it was sufficient.

27,577. I think on that occasion, the election of 1859, 4,000*l.* a-side would be much too large a sum?—What did they poll?

27,578. The number polled was something like 200 under the number, and there were only 600 polled by Sir Henry Stracey at that election, and there were 800 this election.—They must have polled 500 for Mr. Watkin?

27,579. Yes.—I do not think they could do that under 4,000*l.*

27,580. (Mr. Russell.) The majority of Sir Edmund Lacon over Mr. Watkin was 131?—Yes, and over Sir Henry Stracey, I think, 40.

27,581. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) If the whole of the constituency were bought at 10*l.* a-head?—They did not get them for 10*l.* a-head, they varied to 15*l.*; that is a third more.

27,582. The illegal agents have estimated the number of bribed voters at only from 550 to 600 at the last election, when the constituency was much larger?—You see the Whig party or the Radical party, whatever they like to be called, have a peculiar habit of first of all dividing among themselves before they pick up the outsiders. You look round at all the Edwardses and all those people, they first of all divide among themselves, and take care that everyone of their friends is provided for, so that almost everyone of them is bought before they do anything.

27,583. (Mr. Slade.) Is that confined to the Liberal party?—I think it is; you will find our men are a much better class.

27,584. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Can you give us any clue to the discovery of that?—You see it in your daily books. I have observed it daily. You have Mr. Edwards and a number coming up, who say, "We should have voted Liberal without the money."

27,585. It is clear when a gentleman comes down prepared with 6,000*l.* there are plenty of people prepared to take it?—Exactly; and all those people who had the money to give, they divided it among their friends, that appears to be the heart and object.

27,586. (Mr. Russell.) If you were sitting here instead of standing there, can you tell me what course you would adopt to ascertain if there was any further expenditure made by Watkin and Young in 1859?—It is impossible to say what course. It is well known the town was under bribery. It was as clear as could be, and there is no doubt that Mr. Rundle, who was brought from Grimsby, was brought down purposely to bribe Gorleston, and as to telling me that 700*l.* or 1,500*l.* bought their side, it is puerile to talk of it.

27,587. You cannot give us any further clue?—I have no idea how the money came. Mr. Watkin goes right through that; he himself spent 700*l.*

27,588. Mr. Watkin polled 568 votes at the election of 1859. Of those 568 votes how many in your opinion were parties open to receive a bribe?—I do not believe they polled 300 without bribery.

27,589. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) 268, you think, were bribed?—Yes, that is 1,720*l.*, taking it at 10*l.* a-head, and that is without any other expenditure; and then they were very free and easy with their public-houses and meetings, and so on, and that is not a small item in the election, from my own experience.

27,590. A witness told us that he went up to the Liberal committee room, as early as half-past 11 the polling day in 1859, wanting money for his vote, and he was told it was too late, as the election was lost already, so that, though a very large sum might have been contemplated as expenditure, it had probably been arrested early in the day?—It is perfectly futile to put off buying votes until the morning of the election. If the parties are not quieted the night before, you are sure the election would be lost before 10 in the morning. In 1859, I think I am right in saying the election was lost by that time, certainly it was the last time, I know.

27,591. Then, necessarily, they would stop buying votes?—They would not buy except on such an emergency arising in the course of the day, that one was three or four ahead, then there might be an attempt to bribe, but as to going the election morning when bribery is going on on both sides, to think of buying it then I think was impossible.

27,592. That may have been the reason why Mr. Watkin and Mr. Young may not have spent so much?—The money went before that; days before that at Gorleston; it was all arranged for, and so it was in Yarmouth.

27,593. It is hardly sufficient to suppose that that is well known, because a great many things have been alleged before us, as perfectly well known, that have fallen through?—I have seen a little of these things in my life, and I am satisfied that if they put off buying votes until the morning of the election, they might as well go and throw their money into the river.

27,594. At the previous election Sir Charles Napier and Mr. McCullagh were candidates?—Yes.

27,595. And we understand at that time, when no money was spent, the Liberal, party polled 486 without money?—So they say, but it is not proven.

27,596. But the probabilities are, to say the least, that it was so?—I do not believe they could do it.

27,597. They did poll them?—But they lost the election.

27,598. I only talk of the number of bribable people. They polled 486?—Those were never polled without bribery.

27,599. You think that Sir Charles Napier and Mr. McCullagh bribed?—I believe there was bribery at that election. I have no doubt of it.

27,600. (Mr. Russell.) I suppose that two-thirds of the register must have changed between 1852 and 1865?—I should think so.

27,601. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) I suppose you do not think you know more about the bribed voters than the agents on each side?—I know very little about the bribed voters now, because I do not interfere with them.

27,602. Mr. Cooper estimates the part that will take bribes at 550, and Mr. Downing estimates that at 600, that is about one-third of the constituency?—If the election was left to itself as it were, and there was bribery on no side, I believe there are a great number of those who are put down as bribed men who would vote according to their opinions. I do not think they are all what is called bribed men.

27,603. Do you mean to say they are men that are open to temptation?—Yes.

27,604. And then the temptation must be put in their way?—Yes, and, as I said before you must see by the evidence brought before you, man after man coming, that Mr. Edwards came down, or Mr. So-and-so, and they helped one another first, and then they went out together to bribe others.

27,605. If the temptation is put in their way the money must come from somewhere?—It is proved it did come from somewhere.

27,606. We have had the parties who admitted they produced a certain sum?—We are talking, I apprehend, on the circumstance of Mr. Watkin's attempting to do for 750*l.* what nobody else could do for the money.

27,607. Mr. Watkin says that was all the money that passed out of his pocket. Can you suggest anybody else whose pockets were open for the electors of Yarmouth?—No, I cannot.

27,608. Do you believe the money was found somehow?—Yes, I do. I am certain of it. I am satisfied of it. I am perfectly certain that Mr. Watkin's election could not have been done for the money.

27,609. What are the grounds of your certainty?—The impossibility of polling those men.

27,610. What is the reason of the impossibility?—My experience tells me if Mr. So-and-so can get 15*l.* that he will not vote for nothing.

27,611. Supposing he does not get it offered?—But it was offered.

27,612. We have those who prove it was not offered?—That shows if it was offered to A., there is no reason that B. would not have had it.

27,613. No doubt Yarmouth is voracious enough to swallow 6,000*l.* and 12,000*l.*, if they can get it?—Yes. You see Mr. Brogden swallowed 6,000*l.*, and yet was in arrear.

27,614. And they would have taken 12,000*l.*?—Yes. And they might have been like the committee at Harwich, the whole lot of them bought.

27,615. But you see it was not offered?—We do not know it was not offered. You do not suppose you have caught all the fish here that were offered or bribed.

27,616. (Mr. Russell.) It is for us to say that. Mr. Brogden's 6,000*l.* was notoriously put into the market?—I do not think that, because we have the evidence of Mr. Downing that they had put 90 aside the week before.

27,617. I think it is very evident, when Mr. Cooper got the money, he took care immediately to secure those men that were not lame ducks. That is to say, men who if they had taken money on his side, would not take money to desert him, and that was done before Mr. Brogden was in the field?—I believe the whole part of that evidence to be a myth, that on both sides they held the men fast as far as it would go. The money it is quite evident, from the evidence before you, came simultaneously, Mr. Brogden acknowledges he came with his on Saturday, and he went to work with it on Monday, and we have the evidence I read in the papers, that Mr. Downing and Mr. Jones were at Gorleston on Sunday; and we also have the evidence on the other side, that this man came down on Saturday. They are all simultaneous.

27,618. (Mr. Slade.) You have reason now to change the opinion I suppose you once held, as we have heard, as to the report about the money being paid for the goodwill of Mr. McCullagh?—Yes, I have heard that. I think, if you refer to what I said, it is a thing I could not prove; it was a rumour.

27,619. It appears now to be totally without foundation?—They say it was not so; but it is a curious circumstance, when they went to Mr. Mackenzie with Mr. Humphrey, Mr. Mackenzie for some reason or other declined, and they did not agree with each other, and they went back and saw Mr. McCullagh, and then they picked up Mr. Young.

27,620. Then your opinion is unchanged?—I am not satisfied about it.

27,621. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) I suppose as far as Mr. Young is concerned you are satisfied?—I am satisfied Mr. Young says there is nothing in it as far as he is concerned. He did not pay the money, but there might have been something in it. It might have been asked, that is a matter merely of opinion and speculation.

27,622. That is a matter about which we cannot inquire?—I have a right to believe Mr. Young. I have no reason to doubt a gentleman of his position, but it is a curious circumstance that there should have been a meeting held at their own party, Mr. Owles', to come and demand of Mr. Young to know what reason he had to go and attempt to sell them. It did not arise from our party, it arose from theirs.

27,623. No doubt Mr. Watkin and Mr. Young have both denied it, and our inquiry as to any further matter is stopped?—Only you asked me my opinion. If you ask me my opinion, I believe there was something in it, but I have a right to believe that Mr. Young did not accede to it, and I have a right to believe that Mr. Watkin had nothing to do with it, because he said so.

27,624. Mr. Young not only did not accede to it, but says it was never made to him?—But Mr. Young tells me a meeting was called at the house of the very head of their party, by whom they were brought to Yarmouth, to call him to account for his great impropriety, as they thought it. I am not weak enough to believe that a meeting of that sort would have been called without there had been some origin for it. If an idle rumour was floating about the town, I should not call a meeting to bring parties up to know if they acted improperly.

27,625. (Mr. Slade.) Mr. Young says that was the first time he heard of it, and there was no foundation for it?—Mr. Young appeared there and gave his denial to it.

William Collett Reynolds recalled; examined by Mr. Fitzgerald. W.C. Reynolds.

27,626. You have been present during the examination of Mr. Harvey and Mr. Preston?—Yes.

27,627. And you have followed the statement they have made?—Yes.

27,628. Can you throw any light upon a matter which seems in doubt, namely, how much money came to Yarmouth, and in what way it came?—I cannot alter my former evidence, which was, I believe it was

THIRTY-SECOND DAY.

W. C. Reynolds.

12 Oct. 1866.

1,500*l.* or thereabouts. I think, if you refer to my evidence, I did not express myself certain on that subject.

27,629. It appears Mr. Preston wrote an order for 1,000*l.* ?—No doubt about it.

27,630. Were you cognizant of it at the time ?—I have no immediate recollection of it, but I have no doubt it was.

27,631. And he says he gave it to Mr. Bunn, and on referring to Mr. Bunn's evidence, I find he said he did take an order to Norwich at that time ?—Yes.

27,632. No doubt the 1,000*l.* you brought to Yarmouth was that 1,000*l.* ?—I have no doubt about that.

27,633. On Mr. Preston's order ?—I have no doubt about that.

27,634. Then Mr. Bunn has told us that he subsequently brought a sum, what he believed to be about 500*l.*, to Yarmouth himself ?—Yes.

27,635. Have you any idea on whose order that was ?—Not the least, unless it was Mr. Preston's. I gave no order of any kind ; I had no authority, as I said before.

27,636. You supposed you had no authority, because after Mr. Harvey's evidence your orders would have been honoured ?—I think Mr. Harvey's evidence, if I heard it right, was, that one of the three names, not all three. I conceived therefore one party would do the whole.

27,637. Were you satisfied in conversation with Mr. Green that he had more than the 1,000*l.* ?—Yes. Because I saw the second parcel, that was the time Mr. Bunn brought it.

27,638. He said you were in the room ?—No doubt.

27,639. Did you ascertain the amount ?—I have no recollection of that.

27,640. There is one 500*l.* totally unaccounted for ?—Apparently so ; certainly.

27,641. (Mr. Slade.) It was your duty, on the part of Sir Henry Stracey, to ascertain from Mr. Green that Sir Edmund Lacon advanced a similar sum to himself ?—Yes.

27,642. Did you ever understand from Mr. Green that Sir Henry Stracey had advanced 2,000*l.*, and that Sir Edmund Lacon was to advance a similar sum ?—No. I have no recollection as to what the amount was, as I told you before, but I know it was somewhere about 1,500*l.*

27,643. Having heard the evidence of Mr. Harvey, can you say whether it was 2,000*l.* ?—No. I should not like to say so, but I have no recollection as to so large a sum as 2,000*l.* My impression was at the time, not less than 1,500*l.* It might have been more ; I have no reason to alter my opinion.

27,644. You have no doubt the two sums of 500*l.* were drawn out for the purpose of the election ?—Not a shadow of doubt.

27,645. And no doubt they found their way into Mr. Green's hands ?—Yes. And I have no doubt I must have known it at the time, but I cannot charge my memory with the amount beyond that.

27,646. Can you give us the names of any gentleman who would have acted in a similar way to Mr. Bunn in bringing money from Norwich, or who might have, in your opinion ?—No. I have no idea who it was at all, or who it could have been, and I should have thought the same person would have applied for the whole. I should have fancied so.

27,647. You are perfectly certain you only brought one parcel yourself ?—Perfectly certain, that was the 1,000*l.* That I distinctly recollect. What day was the 500*l.* you cannot account for ?

27,648. The 15th of April ?—Would that be a Saturday, because that would be the day Mr. Bunn would be in Norwich ?

27,649. I presume it would be the Saturday ?—It would be some person who would be going to Norwich market.

27,650. The last was the 23rd ?—Then the 16th would be the Saturday. Then I think it would not be Mr. Bunn, because he would not be in Norwich on the Friday. I cannot give you any clue as to who it would be.

27,651. And you cannot give us any clue as to who the gentleman was who brought that down ?—Not the least in the world. I have no idea of it.

27,652. I presume Mr. Green would not have gone himself for the money ?—It is possible. He might have gone. I do not know whether he did or not, it is quite possible ; he was at that time in very good health, and could get about anywhere ; he walked about the town and canvassed it, and it is quite possible he would have gone himself.

27,653. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you think Mr. Green could have got the money without an order ?—Not without an order from Mr. Preston ; not without some authorized order they would not have known him at the bank.

27,654. (Mr. Slade) Was that gentleman who appeared to-day Mr. Harvey, the gentleman you took for Mr. Hill ?—No. The gentleman I took for Mr. Hill was a gentleman who was at that time a cashier. I knew the gentleman by sight, I always spoke to him if I saw him, as Mr. Hill. He is a man I have always taken to be Mr. Hill.

27,655. Have you ascertained his name since ?—No. He is not at the bank now. I looked at the gentlemen at the bank yesterday, and could not pick him out. I know the gentleman by sight well ; he was a cashier there.

27,656. (Mr. Russell.) It has been suggested by Mr. Preston that possibly some part of this 2,000*l.* may have been spent by Sir Henry Stracey in subscribing towards the expenses of the petition ?—It is possible, but I have no knowledge of that. It is quite possible it might have been so.

27,657. It does not appear to me probable, because the petition would have been some little time afterwards ?—The petition was the year following. The petition account would not be settled until May, June, or July 1860.

27,658. And Sir Henry Stracey would not be likely to walk about with money in gold and notes the whole year ?—Mr. Preston's suggestion was, the money would be retained by Mr. Green, or some one here for the purpose of the petition, and then placed to the credit of Sir Henry Stracey with whoever was conducting the petition, but I do not apprehend that was so.

27,659. You yourself, I suppose, cannot tell us anything with reference to the payment of the expenses of the petition ?—All I know as to the payment of the expenses of the petition was, as I said the other day, that Sir Henry Stracey sent the account over to me for my opinion upon it, and I believe I returned it again, telling him what I thought of it.

27,660. Sir Henry Stracey would pay the money to Mr. Cory ?—Yes, he would pay the money to Mr. Cory.

27,661. Not through your hands at all ?—Not through my hands at all. I have no distinct recollection as to the amount. I have some recollection of it, but I cannot fix it.

27,662. I asked Mr. Preston, and you were asked whether any agreement was come to between Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey as to the share in which they should bear the expenses ?—I always understood them to be equal.

27,663. And I find, on reference to his evidence, Sir Henry Stracey has told us it was so ?—I have no doubt of that.

27,664. So that if 2,000*l.* was spent in illegal practices by Sir Henry Stracey, the inference is the same sum was spent by Sir Edmund Lacon ?—And more than that. I should have satisfied myself that it was so at the time. If 2,000*l.* came I should have taken the assurance of Mr. Green that he had a similar amount from the other party.

27,665. You, acting as solicitor of Sir Henry Stracey, would have felt it your duty to see he paid no further sum towards the election than Sir Edmund Lacon ?—Certainly. That was so.

27,666. I hardly understand that. If you say you considered it your duty to advise Sir Henry Stracey not to pay any further sum than Sir Edmund Lacon you must have known what sum each was to pay?—I have no doubt I did at the time.

27,667. And you are certain, whatever the sum was, it was share and share alike?—I was satisfied in my own mind at the time that it was so, share and share alike. Whatever sum came to Mr. Green's hands on behalf of Sir Henry Stracey, I was satisfied by some assurance from him that he had a similar amount from Sir Edmund Lacon.

27,668. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you ever hear how much Mr. Green got for his services?—No, I did not. I have no doubt I did at the time, but I have no recollection what the amount was.

27,669. Have you any idea about what sum he would get?—I should not like to fix it. I have no recollection on the subject what it was, or what it ought to be.

27,670. (Mr. Slade.) Why do you say you must have known at the time?—Because it would have come into the item of the expenditure. Sir Henry Stracey would pay part of it.

27,671. Did Mr. Green send in an account?—No. He would say, "I had so much money, there is so much for myself, and that is how I disposed of it."

27,672. And returned the balance?—Yes. I was satisfied there was so much spent.

27,673. (Mr. Russell.) Was there any account made out?—No. I took it from himself, that he had spent so much money.

27,674. Were there any papers about it?—I had no papers.

27,675. (Mr. Slade.) I thought Mr. Green was a gentleman who gave no account at all?—He must have satisfied me as to what he expended at the time.

27,676. Would he have told you the number of men he bought?—No; but he would have told me the amount he expended.

27,677. If he would have said, "Take my word for it I have spent so many hundred pounds," you would have been satisfied?—Yes.

27,678. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) This is a thing you must remember. Was there any balance of money unexpended?—No. There was no balance of money unexpended; he assured me and satisfied me at the time all the money he had he spent.

27,679. And yet you do not recollect the exact sum?—No, I do not recollect the exact sum. My impression is it was 1,500*l.* on each side.

27,680. When there was so large a balance as 500*l.*, there must be something to do with it?—My impression was it was 1,500*l.* I know nothing to alter my opinion except a statement that Mr. Harvey sent 2,000*l.*

27,681. (Mr. Russell.) Which is conclusive?—But it does not alter my opinion.

27,682. Supposing for the sake of argument it had been 1,500*l.*, still there would be the same expenditure on behalf of Sir Edmund Lacon not accounted for before us. Have you any idea where that money came from?—Not the least. I did not know anything where Sir Edmund Lacon's money came from, all I know is at the time Mr. Green satisfied me he had it.

27,683. (Mr. Slade.) There is a sum of 500*l.* unaccounted for in Sir Henry Stracey's account. Do you believe that money was spent by Mr. Green in electioneering purposes?—I have no means of forming an opinion about it. I have no doubt it got to the hands of Mr. Green if it came to Yarmouth. I have no recollection as to that 500*l.* whatever.

27,684. Can you form any opinion, one way or the other, whether it was paid for electioneering purposes?—I have no means of forming an opinion beyond this, that Mr. Harvey says he sent that to Yarmouth. If it came to Yarmouth it went to Mr. Green, and I believe he spent it, and I believe it was 1,500*l.*

27,685. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) And that was the amount you believed Sir Edmund Lacon's party advanced?—That was the amount Sir Edmund Lacon's party advanced, and that was the amount which ran in my mind as having been the amount, but I have no date to go upon, beyond my recollection at the time.

27,686. (Mr. Slade.) Do you think it very improbable that that 500*l.* was spent by Mr. Green, that extra 500*l.*?—I do not think it is improbable at all, or impossible; it is only a matter of my recollection whether it was or not.

27,687. (Mr. Russell.) I will put one question to you, not particularly to satisfy myself, but it is this. It is proved to our satisfaction that 500*l.* not accounted for was advanced by Harvey's bank?—Quite so.

27,688. Do you believe that that 500*l.* was spent for the purpose of the election, or do you believe that it was retained in the hands of anybody?—After the evidence I can only form an opinion.

27,689. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Only upon the evidence you have heard?—Upon the evidence I have heard; and I have no doubt it was spent for the purpose of the election, but that does not go at all with my own recollection as to figures—I go on the evidence I have since heard.

27,690. (Mr. Russell.) Was Mr. Green a man who if he had received the money, would have been certain to disburse it for the purpose for which it was entrusted to him, or, if it was not required, to return it?—Certainly, I have no doubt of it.

27,691. He was a man who was above retaining any portion of it for his own services?—I do not think he would have retained a shilling.

ARTHUR LARK sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE. A. Lark.

27,692. What are you?—A bootmaker.

27,693. Who did you vote for at the last election?—I did not vote at all.

27,694. Did you receive any money at the last election?—Yes, 15*l.*

27,695. Who did you receive that from?—Mr. Cooper.

27,696. Had you a vote at the previous election, in 1859?—No.

27,697. Why did you not vote?—After I received the money I intended to return it to Mr. Cooper on the morning of the election.

27,698. Was that because you could not vote for him?—Because I did not intend to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon.

27,699. Did you return the money to Mr. Cooper at any time?—No, I offered it to him.

27,700. When you accepted this money from Mr. Cooper did you tell him you would vote for Sir Edmund Lacon?—No.

27,701. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you abstain from voting because you had the money from Mr. Cooper?—Yes.

WILLIAM MAYES sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. W. Mayes.

27,702. What are you?—I was very ill.

27,703. Just answer my questions. Did you vote at the last election?—No, I did not. I voted, but that was not for Sir Edmund Lacon.

27,704. Did you vote at the election in 1859?—In 1859 I voted.

27,705. Who for?—I voted for Watkin and Stracey.

27,706. I forgot to ask you what you are?—I never took any money in my life.

27,707. What are you?—A gardener.

27,708. You say you voted for Stracey and Watkin?—Yes.

THIRTY-SECOND DAY.

W. Mayes.

12 Oct. 1866.

27,709. They were opposite political parties?—Quite so.

27,710. How came you to vote for them?—A gentlemen came to my house—Sir Henry Stracey. He was a very strong man. He was a soldier-looking man, or had been.

27,711. Did he come to your house?—Yes, he came to my house.

27,712. Did he offer you any money?—No, he did not offer me one farthing of money, only John Cooper.

27,713. We are talking about the candidates?—No, he did not.

27,714. You say nobody offered you any money but John Cooper?—Yes.

27,715. Did he offer you any money?—Yes.

27,716. How much?—5*l.* He told me he had the money for me a day or two, I think, before the election. The election was on the Tuesday morning. I was going up to town. I was a Gorleston man, and he paid me directly. It was an old debt that Mr. Cooper owed me of 5*l.*

27,717. Did he not give you 15*l.*?—No, I never received a farthing from anybody. He never offered me 15*l.*

27,718. Did not Mr. Cooper see you at Gorleston?—Yes.

27,719. He came down there one day?—I believe he did.

27,720. And did he not give you 15*l.*?—No, not a farthing. I never received a farthing from anyone neither him nor anyone else.

27,721. What did Mr. Cooper come down to you for?—Just for a chat, that is all.

27,722. During the election time?—It was a long time before the election. He never offered me a farthing. You received my note, I suppose, gentlemen?

27,723. Did not Mr. Cooper come down to you shortly before the election?—Yes.

27,724. And he offered you 15*l.*?—No, he did not offer me a farthing.

27,725. Did he come down to you at Gorleston before he paid you the 5*l.*?—Yes.

27,726. What was the day he paid you the 5*l.*?—On the election morning. It was the Tuesday morning.

27,727. The election was on a Friday, not a Tuesday?—Well, Friday. It was on the election morning. I know he paid me 5*l.*

27,728. Are you certain that he did not give you 15*l.*?—I am certain of that.

27,729. For your vote?—For my vote I never had a farthing from nobody.

27,730. Did you vote for Sir Henry Stracey because Mr. Cooper gave you that 5*l.*?—No.

27,731. You voted for Sir Henry Stracey because he was a soldier-like looking man?—Yes.

27,732, But why did you vote for Mr. Watkin?—He was an old friend of mine. I never was asked before in my life.

27,733. Mr. Watkin was an old friend of yours?—Yes.

27,734. Did you vote for him in 1857?—I did not. In 1859 I voted for him.

27,735. Whom did you vote for in 1857?—I had not a vote at all that I know of.

27,736. Had you a vote then?—If I had a vote I voted, and it was McCullagh.

27,737. If you had had a vote you would have voted for Mr. Watkin and McCullagh?—I do not know.

27,738. Mr. Cooper said he gave you 15*l.* to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey?—No, I never voted for Sir Edmund Lacon in my life.

27,739. You did not like him?—No, I did not like him at all. He came to my house for my vote.

27,740. Did you refuse him?—I did refuse him. I said, "I do not owe you anything, I will not promise you anything, nor his party either."

27,741. (Mr. Slade.) How came Mr. Cooper to owe you 5*l.*?—For vegetables in the market, for potatoes and apples, and one thing and another. I sat in the market. I had no bribe at all.

27,742. Had you Mr. Cooper down upon your book for 5*l.*?—No, I had no book at all. We took each other's words. I had no book against him at all, or he against me.

27,743. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you supply him regularly with vegetables?—Yes.

27,744. How long before the election?—12 months.

27,745. And he then ceased dealing with you?—On the Saturday I told him to come no more. He said, "Very well." That is all he said to me, and I said to him, "You owe me 5*l.*" He says, "I know that very well."

27,746. Did you ever send him any bill for this 5*l.*?—No, no bill at all.

27,747. How long had it been owing?—Half a year.

27,748. Did you ever ask him to pay you?—Yes, but he said he had not got the money.

27,749. He said he had not got the money till the election time?—He had not got the money.

27,750. Did he say, when you asked him to pay you half a year before, that he had not got the money till the election time?—Yes.

27,751. And I suppose you did not ask him till the election time?—Yes, and he paid me.

27,752. At the election time?—Yes, it was a Friday.

27,753. How long had he been taking vegetables of you without paying you?—He had been taking it a twelvemonth. He and his son came for them.

27,754. Did you send them down to his house regularly?—No, he came for them himself.

27,755. And you let him have what he liked?—Yes.

27,756. And you never asked him for payment till the election?—No, I never asked him for payment till the election. He never offered me any till the election time. I call it no bribe. Do you call it a bribe?

27,757. (Mr. Slade.) We cannot give you our opinion; we are not allowed to do so.—You must know.

27,758. (Mr. Russell.) How came the bill to be exactly 5*l.*?—That is what he asked for, and I trusted him till it came to the 5*l.*, and I said I would not trust him any more. He said, "Very well, I never asked you." I call it no bribe at all; still you can do as you like.

27,759. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Were the vegetables you supplied him with worth 5*l.*?—Yes, I daresay they were, or rather more. The 5*l.* he gave me I got it changed at the fish stall house directly for four sovereigns and two half-sovereigns, that is 5*l.*

27,760. (Mr. Russell.) Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Cook.

27,761. I mean the last election in Yarmouth; was it for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—No.

27,762. Yes, you did?—No, I did not.

27,763. They have given you the credit for having voted for Brogden and Vanderbyl at the last election?—No, I never voted for Brogden and Vanderbyl in my life.

27,764. Did you ever have any money for your vote?—No, I never had a farthing of money for my vote in my life.

27,765. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You did vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—Did I?

27,766. Yes.—In 1857?

27,767. No, in 1865?—I might; I do not know, I am sure; I cannot say the people's names; I do not know the people.

27,768. You did not vote for Sir Edmund Lacon?—No, I never voted for Sir Edmund Lacon in my life.

27,769. (Mr. Russell.) If you forgot that you voted for Brogden and Vanderbyl in 1865, may you not have forgotten that you had 15*l.* from Mr. Cooper in 1859?—No, I never had 15*l.* in my life.

27,770. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Where did those vegetables come from you served to Mr. Cooper?—Out of my own garden.

27,771. (Mr. Russell.) Have you a wife?—Yes.

THIRTY-SECOND DAY.

W. Mayes.

12 Oct. 1866.

27,772. Did your wife ever get any money for you?—Never in my life. Thank God, I have a wife.

27,773. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) May I ask you how old you are?—82 come next August, something in August, please God, if I live so long. How came Mr. Cooper to say 15*l.*?

27,774. Mr. Cooper said that he gave you 15*l.*?—That is all damned lies.

T. Cross.

THOMAS CROSS sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

27,775. What are you?—Well, I am a rabbit merchant, but I sell cockles and mussels, and all that sort of thing.

27,776. Had you a vote at the last election?—No, I had not.

27,777. But you had at the election before?—Yes, I had.

27,778. In 1859?—Yes.

27,779. Did you receive any money for your vote then?—Yes.

27,780. How much?—12*l.*

27,781. Who from?—Well, it is a very curious thing that I am going to state. I never knew it till yesterday. I heard it after the election. A man came in my shop door, and he said, "I want you at your back doorway." I goes; I never expected anything of the kind. He says, "Where is your hand?" It was a very dark night that night, and he put it in my hand, and I found it was 12*l.* when I went in. I found it was from Mr. Buston, but I never knew till yesterday whom I got it from.

27,782. Was that for your vote?—Yes, I suppose so. Indeed it could not be for anything else, of course.

27,783. Is that all the money that you received?—Yes; that is the first time I ever received anything; I would not have taken it but that I wanted it.

G. Colk.

GEORGE COLK sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

27,784. Are you upon the register?—No.

27,785. Are you William George Colk?—No, only George.

27,786. Do you keep the "Bath Hotel?"—Yes.

27,787. Had you a vote in the election of 1859, or at the last election?—I never had, and never want.

27,788. Do you recollect taking part in the election of 1859?—I think I might probably say I did.

27,789. You acted under J. William Bunn, did you not?—Yes, I think so.

27,790. Did you receive any money from Mr. Bunn?—Well, I cannot say. It is a long time ago. I might, but if I did I paid it away again.

27,791. Can you recollect to whom you gave money?—No; to no one.

27,792. You cannot recollect anybody?—I think not.

27,793. You did give money to some voters?—Probably I might. If I did it was under his direction. You recollect that I had newly arrived in the town. I knew very few people, and if I did give it to anyone he told me who to give it to, and I did so.

27,794. Did he point out the man in the street to you?—Yes, he pointed them out, and I kept my eye upon them till I paid them the money. I do not know a single one by name.

27,795. Can you recollect at all how many men you gave money to by his directions?—No, I have not the slightest recollection.

27,796. More than one?—I think probably so. I may say whoever he pointed out to me he put the money into my hands, and I never even opened the packets.

27,797. The money was put up in packets?—I undid the paper, and slipped it into their hands, and threw the paper away.

27,798. That was in Gorleston and Southtown entirely?—Yes.

27,799. Do you know the name of Godbolt?—I know there is such a name since then, but whether he was the man or not I cannot say. I do not know one of them individually. I daresay I have seen them since, but I do not recollect them.

27,800. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) That is the reason, perhaps, that Mr. Bunn employed you?—I think very probably. I had known Mr. Bunn for years.

27,801. I suppose Mr. Bunn employed you to give the money because they did not know you?—Probably.

27,802. (Mr. Russell.) Have you any idea how much money passed through your hands altogether?—Not the least.

27,803. Was all the money that was given to you by Mr. Bunn given in small sums to give to the electors?—Yes.

27,804. And you received no large sums?—I cannot say what there was. I daresay there was 10*l.* in a packet.

27,805. You never received many packets altogether?—No, I never received more than one at a time.

J. Cooper.

JOHN COOPER recalled; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

27,806. You were not present when William Mayes was examined just now?—I was not.

27,807. He stated that you gave him no money for his vote at the election of 1859, but that you came down to Gorleston and had some conversation with him about the election, and afterwards he went away to Yarmouth, and you then paid him 5*l.* for a bill which you owed him for vegetables?—I never was indebted to Mayes a single penny in my life.

27,808. Did you deal with Mayes for vegetables?—Very frequently.

27,809. Had he a shop?—No, he kept a stall in the market.

27,810. Had you dealt with him within six months before the election?—Yes, I had dealt with him up to the election. I never dealt with him afterwards in consequence of his taking money from me and not voting right.

27,811. He says you had not dealt with him for six months before the election, and that you owed him 5*l.*, which you said you could not pay till the election time?—I can swear upon my solemn oath I never owed him a single shilling in my lifetime.

27,812. You paid it at the time?—I paid him in the market. I had not the slightest idea that a man could come here to make a base and false accusation. Allow me to say Mayes has first denied having had any money. I suppose this tale has been concocted in consequence of Mr. Bunn's evidence yesterday, he having stated that he took me down to Gorleston to give Mayes the money, and I suppose he thought he could not get out of it without telling this tale.

27,813. (Mr. Russell.) Did you tell him that you would withdraw your custom?—The election was upon the Friday. I went to his stall, directly opposite my shop in the market. I told him he was a big old blackguard to take the money and vote for Stracey and Watkin. That is why I mentioned Mr. Manthorpe's name; but Mr. Manthorpe has denied giving him money. All I can say is I gave Mayes 15*l.*; and more than that, Mr. Bunn gave me the money to give to Mayes. He took me in a cab to Gorleston. He met me at Yarmouth, and he took me to Gorleston and set me down at Mayes' door, because I knew Mayes. He gave me the money, and I went into his house and paid it to him.

27,814. I want to know what Mayes said when you told him that you should withdraw your custom?—He mentioned something about his brother-in-law went to him.

THIRTY-SECOND DAY.

J. Cooper.

12 Oct. 1866.

27,815. Was he indignant?—I was very indignant with him, and I recollect at the time mentioning it to Mr. Lane, then the clerk of the market collecting the market dues. I told Lane what an old blackguard Mayes had been in voting that way.

27,816. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did he come up to you in Yarmouth before your visit to Gorleston about his account?—There is not the slightest foundation for it. I never owed him any money in my life, nor did I pay him 5*l.* for any debt that I owed him. It is a gross case of perjury.

27,817. He says he is 82 years of age?—Yes; and I am sorry an old man of his age should come here to perjure himself in the way he has done.

D. Carter.

DANIEL CARTER recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

27,818. You live on the South Quay?—Yes.

27,819. Have you been examined before?—Yes.

27,820. Had you a vote in 1859?—I had.

27,821. Whom did you vote for in 1859?—I voted for the Liberal side.

27,822. And what did you get for your vote?—Nothing, not a farthing.

27,823. Were you offered anything?—Never.

27,824. You got 15*l.* at Cattermole's the last time?—Yes.

27,825. (Mr. Russell.) You did not vote at all in 1859?—Did I not?

27,826. No.—Then it was a mistake; in 1857 it was; I forget.

27,827. How is it you did not vote in 1859?—I cannot answer the question. I did not feel inclined to vote. I had friends on both sides, and I did not wish to offend either party.

27,828. Were you offered any money?—Not a fraction.

27,829. You are called by mistake. We want the other Daniel Carter?—I think he is at sea.

27,830. Is he a relation of yours?—He is a son of mine.

27,831. Has he been examined before us?—Yes, he has been examined.

27,832. Is his name Daniel Draper Carter?—Yes, Daniel Draper Carter. He has been examined.

27,833. And he got 80*l.* from Benjamin Powell for staying on shore?—Yes, so he said. I do not know what he had.

H. Housago.

HENRY HOUSAGO recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

27,834. Are you a baker?—Yes.

27,835. You got 12*l.* at the last election?—Yes.

27,836. Did you vote at the election before that?—Yes.

27,837. Who for?—Lacon and Stracey.

27,838. What did you receive for your vote?—In 1859?

27,839. Yes.—Nothing.

27,840. What did Mr. Lane give you 1*l.* for?—He gave it me for a present.

27,841. And very kind of him?—Yes.

27,842. When did he give you this 1*l.*?—Upon the next morning.

27,843. Had you done anything for Mr. Lane?—No.

27,844. Did Mr. Lane say anything about voting?—Oh yes, several times.

27,845. Did he tell you to make haste and go up to the poll?—Yes, he did.

27,846. And he gave you a sovereign?—Yes, he gave me a sovereign before I went up, in my own house.

27,847. What o'clock was this?—Before noon-time.

27,848. (Mr. Russell.) Should you have voted if you had not had the 1*l.*?—Yes, I should have voted if I had not had any money at all.

27,849. (Mr. Slade.) You voted Liberal last time, did you not?—Yes.

27,850. Why do you say you would have voted Tory if you had not any money?—I changed my opinions then.

27,851. You had changed your opinions then?—Yes, I had done so.

27,852. You changed your opinions, I suppose, because you got 12*l.*?—No, it was not for that.

27,853. Was it not?—No.

27,854 (Mr. Russell.) How did you vote in 1857?—For the Tories.

27,855. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Is Mr. Lane in the habit of giving you presents?—Never before?

27,856. And never since?—He calls for the rates, but he never gave me anything before.

27,857. Has he given you anything since?—He has not given me anything since.

27,858. Do you think he would have made you a present of it if it had not been election time?—No, I do not think he would.

27,859. (Mr. Slade.) You do not call calling for the rates making you a present?—No, I do not.

27,860. (Mr. Russell.) That 1*l.* was all you received?—That is all I received.

J. Roling.

JAMES ROLING sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

27,861. What are you?—A baker.

27,862. How did you vote at the last election?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

27,863. Did you get anything for your vote?—No.

27,864. How did you vote in 1859?—Lacon and Stracey.

27,865. Did you get anything for your vote then?—Yes.

27,866. How much?—15*l.* was left at my house.

27,867. Do you know who by?—I think Mr. Stolworthy. I think that is the man.

27,868. That was the reason I suppose that you voted for them?—No, I intended to stand neutral. I promised Sir Edmund Lacon I should not vote against him.

27,869. How did you vote in 1857?—Always Liberal; that is my principle.

27,870. Did you get anything for your vote in 1857?—Nothing.

27,871. Nothing from the Liberals?—No.

27,872. And how was it you voted Tory in 1859?—Well, Sir Edmund Lacon called upon me. I told him I should not vote against him, and Mr. Stolworthy left the money some time before the election. I cannot say how long according to my recollection; and after the money was left I thought I was in duty bound to vote, and I did so. I did not vote for it; not a bit of it, though I made very good use of it.

27,873. You made very good use of it?—Yes, I did; I gave it away.

27,874. (Mr. Russell.) Were you offered any money at the last election?—I cannot say; I might have; I daresay I might. Mr. Edwards called upon me, and I ordered him out of my shop; I told him I did not want any conversation with him.

27,875. How was it you took money in 1859 and not in 1865?—That was a business transaction. My trade was so that I could not vote against the Tories that time, I could not.

27,876. Still you took money?—I never took it, it was left. It is about the same, I daresay. He called several times, but I would have nothing to do with him, but he would leave it.

27,877. William Roling, the next upon the register, is he any relation of yours?—He is my brother, I believe.

27,878. Is he here now?—Yes, he is in business.

27,879. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Your brother did not vote at the last election?—I am sure I do not know, I have not had much to do with him for these two or three years.

27,880. (Mr. Slade.) Who canvassed you at the last election?—I do not think anyone only Mr. Goodson. I did not see anyone only Mr. Goodson, and I promised him I should not vote for him.

27,881. You made him that promise?—Yes.

27,882. But you did, did you not?—Yes.

27,883. No, you did not; you voted for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—I promised him I should not vote for him.

27,884. Did Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl canvass you?—I never saw them.

27,885. Did anybody canvass you for them?—No, I do not remember.

27,886. What made you vote for them?—Well, that is my principle, Liberal. I am a Liberal.

27,887. But you were not a Liberal in 1859?—Very likely not. I could not vote against my trade, not personally. I was taking from 1,000*l.* to 1,200*l.* a year from the party, and I thought it was a very wrong thing for me to do such a thing. I had the general contract of Yarmouth for the union.

27,888. Did anybody ever offer you any money at the last election?—No, nobody; I was solicited.

27,889. Who solicited you?—Mr. Edwards solicited me. I told him I did not want any conversation with him, that I should vote as I thought proper, and so I did. I think it was some time like half-past 9 in the morning when I voted.

27,890. And you did vote upon Mr. Edwards's side?—Yes.

27,891. Why did you not tell Mr. Edwards that you were going to vote for him?—Because I thought I was insulted.

27,892. By being asked?—Yes, I am very much against the canvass myself. I am telling you the truth.

THOMAS ELLIOTT sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

T. Elliott.

27,893. Do you live in Gaol Street?—Yes.

27,894. Did you vote at the last election?—Yes.

27,895. Who for?—Lacon and Goodson.

27,896. What are you?—A block-maker.

27,897. Did you receive anything for your vote?—Yes.

27,898. How much?—15*l.*

27,899. Who gave it you?—Mr. Shuckford.

27,900. Had you a vote at the election before that, in 1859?—No.

27,901. When you say from Mr. Shuckford, did Mr. Shuckford give it you himself?—No, he did not give it me himself, but it came from him.

27,902. Mr. Staff gave it you?—Yes.

WILLIAM HENRY STAFF sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

W. H. Staff.

27,903. What are you?—A block maker.

27,904. Had you a vote at the last election?—Yes.

27,905. For whom did you vote?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson.

27,906. Did you receive any money?—Yes.

27,907. How much?—15*l.*

27,908. From Mr. Shuckford?—Yes.

27,909. And Mr. Shuckford gave you another 15*l.* that you were to give to Elliott?—Yes.

27,910. Did you give any money to any other voter besides Elliott?—No.

27,911. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No.

WILLIAM MARTIN sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

W. Martin.

27,912. What are you?—A draper and grocer.

27,913. Had you a vote at the last election?—Yes.

27,914. Whom did you vote for?—Lacon and Goodson; always Liberal till that time, till last year.

27,915. Where do you live?—At Gorleston.

27,916. Whereabouts?—In High Street.

27,917. Did you receive any money at the last election for your vote?—No.

27,918. Are you quite sure of that?—Quite sure.

27,919. Were you offered any?—No; I did not want to be offered at all.

27,920. Did you promise Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson when they canvassed you?—They did not canvass me, I met them. They said, "It is no use asking you, you have always been against us;" and I said, "Circumstances may alter cases."

27,921. How came you to change your opinions?—The post-office was vacant. I had the promise of the appointment, and the Liberal party interested themselves for Mr. Reynolds and took it away from me.

27,922. Who had promised you?—The Postmaster-General. The clergyman had made the application, and I had the promise.

27,923. Was that upon the recommendation of Sir Edmund Lacon?—No.

27,924. Upon whose recommendation?—The party who had it failed before I took it. The post-office had been in connexion with the business for many years, and when I took it the clergyman wrote on my behalf for me to be appointed, and I had the promise. I kept it on for six weeks, but after a time I think the Liberal party interested themselves for Mr. Reynolds, and represented him to be also a draper and grocer, and he got the business, and not me.

27,925. Who were the members for Yarmouth at the time?—Watkin and McCullagh.

27,926. Did you apply to them?—No, I did not. After I had the promise I thought I was quite secure, and I thought no more about it.

27,927. You did not receive the promise from them?—No; I never applied to them at all.

27,928. Did they use their influence?—On behalf of Mr. Reynolds; they took it from me and I lost it.

27,929. Were you offended?—I was offended, and I told them I would never vote again for them.

27,930. But you did vote for the Liberals before?—I did vote for the Liberals before, till this last election. That was the only cause of my not voting for them.

27,931. Did you receive any money in 1859?—No.

27,932. Do you know a man named Wilshack?—I do.

27,933. Did you not receive some money from him?—I did not.

27,934. 18*l.*?—No.

27,935. Did he give you a gold watch and chain?—No, he did not. I had a transaction with him. I bought a gold watch and chain some time previous to the election, and he took mine in exchange.

27,936. Was yours a silver one?—Mine was a silver one. He took it in exchange. He said, "If you will "vote for Lacon and Stracey I will make a fresh "bargain." I said, "Do so; do as well as you can "for me, and I will pay you the balance;" and he has put it down to my account. I know nothing else about it.

27,937. You have never paid him any balance since 1859?—I settled the account then and there.

27,938. Do I understand that you gave him an old silver watch, and that he gave you a gold one in exchange?—I have the receipt for them. I gave him the balance at once.

THIRTY-SECOND DAY.

W. Martin.

12 Oct. 1866.

27,939. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) What do you think the amount was of the balance?—I do not know if it was 18*l.* or not for the whole.

27,940. What was the balance you paid him?—I think about 15*l.* or 16*l.* I am not sure. I have the receipt at home. I keep all my receipts.

27,941. Do you remember what he told you?—It is down in the bill. I believe I have the same account now.

27,942. If I understand you rightly, Wilshack said he would make a cheap bargain with you?—I did not intend to vote for him, certainly not. I always voted Liberal, that was the only occasion.

27,943. You intended to get your watch cheap if you could?—I knew him perfectly well. I met him several times when the Tories were with him. I said, "Joe, make this as cheap as you can."

27,944. You must produce the receipt?—I can produce the receipt.

27,945. You had better come to-morrow with it?—Saturday is a busy day, and I would like to be excused.

27,946. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Are you prepared to swear that the money passed from you?—I believe it was something like 8*l.* that I paid him, and he said, "All right, I will give you the other."

27,947. You gave him 8*l.*?—Yes.

27,948. And the price of the watch was 18*l.*?—I suppose he got the value of it.

27,949. Your watch was a silver one?—My watch was a silver one, and guard.

27,950. Do you think that watch was worth 10*l.* at that time?—Certainly not. I fancy I paid him quite the value of what the gold watch was worth.

27,951. You got the gold watch for 18*l.*?—I have been in the trade since, and I know the value of it.

27,952. What was the gold watch and chain worth when you got it?—I suppose about 10*l.*

27,953. Have you got it on?—No.

27,954. Is it in your possession?—It is in my possession.

27,255. I think you had better bring to-morrow, the receipt, and the watch and chain?—I will, but it is a very awkward day, Saturday, it being a busy day in trade. It was a business transaction.

27,956. Were you aware Reynolds, the postmaster, was very active at the election?—He generally has been, I believe, an active party for the Liberal side. I did all I could for them, and I never charged them one farthing, and I thought if they could give me a little return they might have given it to me as well as him.

27,957. Were you aware of the services that he rendered?—No, I was not aware.

27,958. Are you now astonished at the preference?—No; only that he had been a supporter more years than what I had been.

27,959. You say you do not think he had been a more useful man than what you were?—I do not know; I know nothing about another man's business, or the affairs in canvassing, or anything of the kind.

27,960. How much do you think you gained by this bargain because it was the election time, and you were asked to vote for Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—Well, I do not think I gained anything by it.

27,961. To clear up your character you had better come here to-morrow morning with the watch and chain, and the receipt?—Yes.

27,962. (Mr. Slade.) Mr. Wilshack considered it to be a bribery transaction?—Mr. Wilshack knows I always voted for the other party. I think if they entrust their people with their money to spend they ought to be responsible for it. Mr. Wilshack has put down what he likes to my account, and I am under the scandal of it. I do not see that at all.

27,963. That is the only reason why we inquire into it?—If Mr. Wilshack has put down 15*l.* or 20*l.*, of course I cannot say, of course they must be paid for their services in some way. I do not know anything more about it.

27,964. Had you ever asked the price of this watch and chain before you proposed the exchange?—No, I never had done so.

27,965. Was there any chain attached to your watch?—It was a silver watch and a silver chain; it was a very good watch. I gave 7*l.* 10*s.* for it, and I had it for about six years.

27,966. I do not want to prejudge you, but if you want to clear your character, the best thing for you is to bring the watch and chain to-morrow, and the receipt?—If I cannot bring it I will send it to you; it is a very busy day with me. I will send it to you or bring it if you wish it.

27,967. You can send the receipt and the watch and chain?—I will send it to you to-morrow. If Mr. Ling comes I will give it to him to bring to-morrow. I never should have voted the other way.

28,001. And that was all you got?—That was all.

J. B. Hall.

JAMES BARNARD HALL sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

28,002. What are you?—I attend the bathing machines in the summer time.

28,040. You did?—Yes.

28,041. Whom did you get the 13*l.* from?—I forget the man's name.

28,042. Was it Mr. Stolworthy?—Yes.

28,043. Did Mr. Stolworthy give you any money besides that?—Yes.

28,044. How much?—36*l.* it was.

28,045. What did you do with that 36*l.*?—I gave it away.

28,046. Who to?—I have no recollection at all now. I have a paper here.

28,047. Give me the names?—One was Wright.

28,048. What was Wright's christian name?—William.

28,049. Did he live in King Street?—No, he lived in Charlotte Street.

28,063. How came you to give away 45*l.* if you only received 36*l.*?—I received 45*l.* to give away.

28,064. Did you receive 45*l.* from Mr. Stolworthy?—Yes.

28,065. I thought you told me you only received 36*l.*?—45*l.* I told you.

28,066. You are sure that is all you received?—Yes.

23,067. Who made out that list for you?—I made it out myself.

28,068. (Mr. Slade.) George Francis is a rope-maker by trade, and does a little business in the fishing way?—No.

28,069. He has been examined here?—He has; he told me so.

28,070. I am telling you what he told us he was. Is this the same man?—No, he had nothing to do with the fishing, nothing of the sort.

28,071. He is asked, "What are you?" and he says, "I am a rope-maker by trade, but I do a little "business in the fishing way, but it is very little in "comparison?"—He does not do either of them.

28,072. (Mr. Russell.) What does he do?—He lives independent now.

28,073. (Mr. Slade.) We want to know who the man is?—I tell you who he is; he is George Parker, living at North End. George Francis keeps a public-house.

THIRTY-SECOND DAY.

J. Gowen.

12 Oct. 1866.

28,075. He has been examined before us?—I believe he has.

28,076. He was asked what he got in 1859 for his vote, and he said he got nothing?—That is wrong.

28,077. Did you give it him with your own hands? —Yes, I did.

28,078. Where?—At his house.

28,079. What was the name of the public-house?— Where I used to live?

28,080. Yes?—I do not remember what the sign was.

28,081. Was it the "Rose and Crown?"—No, the "Sir Samuel Hood." I have lost my intellect.

28,082. Then we cannot take your evidence?—I know right from wrong.

28,083. Have you told us the truth here?—I have told you every word of truth, and nothing but the truth.

28,084. Cady is a publican?—Yes.

28,085. He says that in 1859 he fancies he got something, and he thought it was 10*l.*; so that no doubt you gave it to him?—I did so.

28,086. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Do you know George Cady well?—I have known him for several years; he kept a public-house opposite where I did.

28,087. What party did he belong to?—Any party who would give him money.

28,088. Do you happen to recollect how he voted in 1857?—No, I do not.

28,089. Do you think he was paid in 1857 for voting?—No.

28,090. Why do you think he was not, he voted for the Liberals in 1857?—Yes, and he voted for the Tories in 1859.

28,091. And the Liberals in 1857?—I do not know.

280,92. Do you think he was paid or not?—I do not know whether he got paid at all or not.

W. Cooper.

William Cooper recalled; examined by Mr. Russell.

28,092*a*. What are you?—A shoemaker.

28,093. Had you a vote at the last election?—I had.

28,094. You have been examined before with reference to that election?—Yes.

28,095. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

28,096. You voted for Lacon and Stracey then?— Yes.

28,097. What did you receive?—Well, I could not say exactly, but I am under the impression it was 15*l.*, but I could not say.

28,098. From Mr. Buston?—Yes, whatever it was I got it from him.

28,099. Were you offered any money by the other side in 1859?—I was not.

28,100. When you were before us before you were asked if you received any money in 1859, and you said no?—I did not remember it.

C. Veale.

Charles Veale recalled; examined by Mr. Russell.

28,101. You have been examined before?—Yes.

28,102. You have come here to contradict a statement that had been made against you?—Yes.

28,103. By Mr. Reynolds, the postmaster?—Yes. I did not see it in the papers till yesterday.

28,104. Mr. Reynolds has said that you had 20*l.*? —I see it in the papers so.

28,105. He says you had 10*l.* in Yarmouth, you had 5*l.* given you by Rundle or King, and on the morning of the election you would not go up to vote without receiving 5*l.* more?—That was for expenses.

28,106. That made 20*l.* altogether?—15*l.* for my vote, and 5*l.* for my expenses.

28,107. What is it you want to deny?—Is that all his statement?

28,108. Yes.—That is not as I see it in the papers. I see yesterday the paper says that after I took 10*l.* in Gorleston I came up to Yarmouth and took 10*l.* more from the Liberal party, and then go to the Tories and take 25*l.*, and then turned round and said to them, "That is my principle, and that is what I mean to do," and that is what I see in last Saturday's paper that is what I want to come up to contradict. I never was offered a penny on the Tory side in my life, and never did I vote a Tory.

28,109. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You say you never voted for the Conservatives?—No.

28,110. You are a Liberal by conviction?—To the heart.

28,111. What Mr. Reynolds says is this, "I have "every reason to believe he took 25*l.* from the Tories, "for I found when he went up to vote they looked "very glum at him at the time, and he clapped his "hands on the board and said, that is my principle." —That is what I see in the papers.

28,112. And that is what you come to contradict? —Yes.

28,113. You mean the 15*l.* for your vote, and the 5*l.* for your expenses, was all that you received?—Yes.

28,114. Were you offered any more money?—No. I never was offered a farthing on the other side at all.

28,115. Who was it who gave you the 15*l.*?—You will see in my examination Mr. Greenhow gave me the 10*l.*, and through him George King gave me 5*l.*

28,116. Do you know a man named John Durrant? —Yes.

28,117. Did he not give you 5*l.*?—Yes, that was for my expenses.

28,118. It is all true except that you took 25*l.* from the Tories?—I never received a farthing, and never was offered any by them.

28,119. Whom did you vote for in 1859?—I voted for the Liberals; Mr. Watkin and Mr. Young, I think it was.

(The Commissioners then proceeded to the residence of Benjamin Ashby, who was unable from illness to attend before them.)

B. Ashby.

Benjamin Ashby sworn; examined by Mr. Russell.

28,120. Had you a vote at the last election?— Yes.

28,121. Did you get any money?—Yes.

28,122. How much?—20*l.*

28,123. Who gave it you?—I forget the man's name; a man I never saw before or since.

28,124. Had you a vote in 1859?—How many years ago is that?

28,125. Seven years ago.—Yes.

28,126-7. Did you get any money then?—Yes. I never got a farthing before in my life. They are wrong to say I have. I never got a farthing more than those two elections.

Adjourned till to-morrow at half-past 10 o'clock.

THIRTY-THIRD DAY.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 13th October 1866.

THIRTY-THIRD DAY.

R. Burwell.

13 Oct. 1866.

ROBERT BURWELL recalled; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

28,128. You have been examined before?—Yes.

28,129. You had a vote in 1859, had you not?—Yes.

28,130. Whom did you vote for then?—Lacon and Stracey.

28,131. You received some money in 1859?—Not for my vote I did not.

28,132. But you received some money. Did not Mr. Shuckford give you some money?—He did not for voting.

28,133. How much did Mr. Shuckford give you?—18*l.*

28,134. When was that?—That was, I think, on the Saturday week before the election, if I be not mistaken something like that.

28,135. If it was not for your vote, what do you think it was for?—I gave 10*l.* to a man of the name of George Holmes, a barber, living on the South Denes Road at that time.

28,136. (Mr. Slade.) George Martin Holmes?—Yes; of the South Denes Road.

28,137. (Mr. Russell.) George Martin Holmes has told us he got 15*l.* from you?—No.

28,138. It was 10*l.* you say?—Yes.

28,139. Did you give any money to anyone else?—Yes.

28,140. Who?—To a man by the name of Robert Earls, a cooper, living in the Tower Road.

28,141. Is Robert Earls dead?—Yes, since that.

28,142. Did you give any money to any other man?—Not any more. That was all I had.

28,143. Do you mean to say you did not receive anything for your own vote?—Not a shilling. Mr. William Beales told me that he had given Robert Earls previous to that, the day before, 15*l.*

28,144. You were examined before the Committee of the House of Commons, were you not, in 1860?—Yes.

28,145. Did you tell them you had taken this part?—No. I told them that I never received any money for my vote.

28,146. Were you asked if you had ever given money to others?—No, not to my knowledge, I was not.

28,147. Did you promise Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey when they canvassed you?—Yes.

28,148. Have you always belonged to that party?—I had not a vote until 1859.

28,149. How is it that you took money at the last election, and did not take it in 1859?—Because I stood in need of it.

28,150. Do you mean you were better off in 1859?—I do not know if better. I stood greatly in need of it this election, and that is the reason I took it.

28,151. And you swear you did not receive any money in 1859?—No money in 1859 for my vote.

J. Cox.

JOHN COX sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

28,152. What are you?—A publican.

28,153. Where do you live?—On South Quay, at the "Dog and Duck."

28,154. Did you vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl at the last election?—Yes.

28,155. What did you get for your vote?—15*l.*

28,156. Where was it paid?—At Mr. Cattermole's.

28,157. Who took you to Cattermole's?—Not any one. I went down there myself.

28,158. Had you heard that money was given away?—I did not come ashore from my vessel until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. A gentleman spoke to me on the Jetty—a strange gentleman, I do not know who he was—and asked me whether I would come down to Mr. Cattermole's in the evening, 28,159. Was that the day before the election?—Yes.

28,160. (Mr. Russell.) Who sent for you to come ashore?—Not any one. Most of our boats came in that day.

28,161. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Were you canvassed by the other side?—No. I never saw any one.

28,162. You were not offered any money on the other side?—No.

28,163. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

J. F. Neave.

JOSEPH FLEMING NEAVE sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

28,164. What are you?—I am a ropemaker, and in the fishing.

28,165. Which way did you vote at the last election?—For Brogden and Vanderbyl.

28,166. Did you take any part in the election?—Yes.

28,167. What part did you take?—I was occasionally on the canvass for about one day out of two or three, as I might happen to be with the party; but I kept no canvass book.

28,168. Were you on any committee in any ward?—There were three or four parties named for the committee in the north ward, simply to get up the voters during the day, and the appointment of messengers, to make such necessary arrangements for the working of the ward, as might be considered necessary.

28,169. You are a brother of James William Neave?—Yes.

28,170. Did you give any voters money for their votes?—No.

28,171. Were you aware of any money being given?—I heard after the thing was over that money was given.

28,172. Did you know at the time money was being given to the voters for their votes?—A day or two before the election. I do not know what evening and when; when I came up to the town, I heard there had been a meeting at Wright's, and parties had been there and received money.

28,173. Did you send any person up to Wright's for money?—No. I was not aware of the meeting at Wright's until after the meeting was over.

28,174. Then you did not take the same active part that your brother did?—No.

28,175. Were you aware that your brother was bribing at that time?—Not till after the election; not until the day after the election.

28,176. What did your brother say to you then about his doings?—He told me he had given 15*l.* to Stanley. I said, "I should have left him alone if I had been you."

28,177. Did he say anything else?—He said he had offered another party money, but they did not get through.

28,178. What did you understand by that?—That he had offered—as by his evidence and Mr. Bland's

THIRTY-THIRD DAY.

J. F. Neave.

13 Oct. 1866.

evidence it came out—he offered him 15*l.*, and Bland wanted 20*l.* That was the day after the election he told me that. But I did not know it during the election day, nor did not know it previous to the election, that he was going to take that part in the business.

28,179. Did he say where he got the money from?—He said he got it of Mr. Jones. I think he went to the "Angel" and got it of Mr. Jones I understood him.

28,280. Did he say how much money he had got?—He said either 15*l.* or 20*l.* that he had then got, that he did not give to Bland.

28,181. Do you mean 15*l.* or 20*l.* more than he had given to Bland?—No. I understood he drew 35*l.* He gave 15*l.* to Stanley. I met him on the road, and he told me of that. The surplus money he did not give to Bland, consequently, he had it on hand for them; and I supposed at the time Jones would have called upon him, and the money would have been returned. He told me he had it in hand ready.

28,182. The day after the election?—That was the day after the election.

28,183. When did you see Jones the last time?—I think that very day.

28,184. The day after the election?—The day after the election. I think that was the last time I ever saw him.

28,185. You are aware now he did not leave Yarmouth until several days after?—I am aware he did not leave for some days, but I was not aware he was in the town after the first day after the election. I thought he went off immediately.

28,186. You knew Mr. Edwards, the agent?—Which Edwards?

28,187. The man who came from Preston?—Only by seeing him two or three times when I went up to the "Angel." That is all I know of him.

28,188. Did you see him after the election?—I believe the day after the election I went up to the "Angel" to see if Mr. Brogden was gone, and I saw Mr. Jones and Mr. Edwards, and I do not know whether I saw Mr. Salmon. There were two or three of them in the room, and I went and asked whether Mr. Brogden had gone.

28,189. Did you go with your brother?—No, I went alone.

28,190. Were you aware whether your brother ever offered to return that money to Mr. Edwards?—I never heard that he offered until Mr. Edwards came to town again. I did not know they were here after the election, and whether he did I do not know. I am not aware whether he went to the election. After the evening of the election he walked up then to the "Angel," and saw Mr. Brogden, but whether he ever went to the "Angel" after that time I do not know. That was 6 or 7 o'clock in the evening, the day of the election. He did not go with me.

28,191. You did not know anything at all about it?—I knew nothing at all about it.

28,192. Had you a vote in the election of 1859?—Yes.

28,193. Whom did you vote for?—Watkin and Young.

28,194. Did you give any voters money at that election?—No. I was not aware there was any money spent then until after the election was over, and I did not take any part particular. On the day of the election I went to several of my friends and tried to get them up to vote, but beyond that I did not know anything.

28,195. Did your brother take any part in the election of 1859?—I believe not. I do not know whether on the day of the election he went round and did as I did. We knew several friends of the candidates, and we tried to get them up to vote, but I am not certain whether he did as much as that in 1859.

J. Wilshack.

JOSEPH WILSHACK sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

28,196. What are you?—A watchmaker.

28,197. Had you a vote at the last election?—Yes.

28,198. For whom did you vote?—For Lacon and Goodson.

28,199. Were you canvassed by Lacon and Goodson?—Yes.

28,200. Did you promise your vote to them?—Directly.

28,201. You took no part in bribery?—No; I was away.

28,202. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

28,203. Whom did you vote for then?—Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey.

28,204. Did you promise them when they canvassed you?—Yes.

28,205. And received no money from them?—No.

28,206. You were called because your father told us that in 1859 you sold a gold watch and chain to a man named William Martin?—I did not sell it to him. I gave it him to vote.

28,207. Will you tell us exactly what passed with reference to this watch?—I go a great deal to Gorleston. I knew this man. He was wanting to buy a gold watch and chain just before the election; and he said, "Stop till the election, and I will have one." When the election came on I showed him this watch and chain. He said, "If you can get me 20*l.* I will "vote for which you like; that is what will pay for "the gold watch and chain." I told father of it, and he said, "You had better stop and I will see." Afterwards father gave me 18*l.* for a watch and chain, and he said he would vote for Lacon and Stracey; but he voted the other way, and he sent me a letter up (but I cannot find it, as I have been removing this last fortnight) to send him a receipt for the watch and chain, as he was courting a woman at that time, and she had a little money, and a rumour was floating about that he had taken it as a bribe.

28,208. Is that the receipt (handing a receipt to the witness)?—Yes. He sent up for this receipt to show himself clear of it, and to show this party whom he was courting during the time, as a rumour had got afloat, and he was afraid he suffered in her ideas.

28,209. Is this the receipt? "1859, April 21st. "Mr. Martin to J. Wilshack. To gold lever watch, "15*l.* To gold guard chain, 4*l.*," making 19*l.* "By watch and chain, 2*l.* 10*s.* 0*d.*" That was a silver watch and chain that he gave to you?—Yes, in exchange.

28,210. "By cash, 16*l.* 10*s.* 0*d.*?—Yes; that is how I gave it to him for him to make himself safe.

28,211. And then it says, "Settled, J. Wilshack, 16*l.* 10*s.* 0*d.* April 21st, 1859?"—That is as I gave it to him.

28,212. The 16*l.* 10*s.* 0*d.*, as appears in the receipt as having been paid by him was not paid?—Not paid. I never took a halfpenny of him, not a farthing.

28,213. And do you swear it was with the distinct understanding that he was to vote for Lacon and Stracey?—Yes. That was in 1859.

28,214. Did he give you any sum of money?—Not a farthing, and he never gave me anything at all.

28,215. He swore yesterday he gave you 10*l.* in cash?—No, he never gave me a farthing. I cannot find the letter. Perhaps I have burnt it; but he said plainly in the note to send it up as he wanted to show it.

28,216. Had he given you an order in January 1859, to get him a watch?—He gave me an order to get him a watch, and then he told me to stop until the election as he had not any money then.

28,217. Did you ever remonstrate with William Martin for having voted the other way?—He did not care to show himself to me for a long time after that, or I should have spoken to him.

28,218. Have you ever said anything to him since?—Yes.

28,219. Have you spoken to him about it?—I have spoken to him and shaken hands with him, but I have not seen him until yesterday for a month or six weeks. I always nod to him, and he nods to me. I never saw him for about 18 months after I gave him the watch and chain.

J. Wilshack.

28,220. Did you ever have any other transaction of the sort?—No.

28,221. Did you tell anybody at the time?—It was all over Gorleston; all the people knew it.

28,222. Have you told many people?—I did not tell them, but it oozed out itself. They saw me down at his house two or three days before the election. It never got out from me after the election. I told one or two friends of this case to show what sort of a gentleman he was, as he was supposed to be a very respectable man.

28,223. Can you tell me whom you mentioned it to as one?—Yes, young Rising.

28,224. What was his christian name?—I mentioned it to William Rising, of Gorleston, and to a man who is dead, a great friend of his, a Mr. William Leggett, a pilot, and he was chaffed all over Gorleston, because they knew it was quite true, although I did not tell them. Mr. Reynolds and George King, of Gorleston, both said they would have me up here because they knew I gave it him for a bribe.

28,225. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You undertake to swear that no money whatever passed from him to you?—No, none at all.

28,226. Not 8*l.*?—No; there was not any money at all.

28,227. (Mr. Russell.) Whose watch do you consider it to be?—I can hardly tell. I think it ought to be father's.

G. Arbon, jun.

GEORGE ARBON, junior, sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

28,228. What are you?—A fish curer.

28,229. Had you a vote at the last election?—Yes.

28,230. Whom did you vote for?—I forget.

28,231. Which side did you vote?—The Blue party.

28,232. Brogden and Vanderbyl?—Yes.

28,233. Did you receive any money?—Yes, I received 15*l.*

28,234. For your vote?—For my own vote.

28,235. Who gave it you?—He was quite a stranger to me.

28,236. Where were you paid?—At the "Army and Navy."

28,237. Who sent you up?—I cannot say who it was now. I was with several of them in the market-place, and talking about going down there.

28,238. Did you receive any money to give to anybody else?—Only the other, because when I received it they asked me whether my name was Daniel Arbon or George, and I told them the other was my father.

28,239. And they gave you for both?—Yes.

28,240. 15*l.* for yourself and 15*l.* for your father?—Yes.

28,241. That was all you received?—Yes.

28,242. Had you got a vote in 1859?—No, nor yet my father.

G. Holmes.

GEORGE HOLMES sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

28,243. Do you live on Hall Plain?—I did.

28,244. At the time of the election?—Yes.

28,245. What are you?—A bank agent.

28,246. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

28,247. Did you receive any money for your vote?—No.

28,248. This is the reason of the mistake. This is George Watson's evidence, and the question is "The next person you gave money to?" The answer is, "George Holmes, of Gaol Street;" and then the question is, "Is that George Martin Holmes?" Is there a George Martin Holmes in Gaol Street?—Yes.

J. Chapman.

JAMES CHAPMAN sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

28,249. What are you?—A fish curer.

28,250. Do you live in Row 145?—That is where I had a vote from.

28,251. Did you vote for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—Yes.

28,252. Did you get anything for your vote?—No.

28,253. Who canvassed you for your vote?—I believe I saw Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman once.

28,254. Did you see any other agents?—No; I saw Mr. Downing, he came to me one day, and he said he would serve me as he served other people.

28,255. He did offer you?—No, he did not offer me.

28,256. "He would serve you?"—Something of that kind; but I did not want anything of Downing.

28,257. You did not want anything?—No.

28,258. And you did not get it?—No.

28,259. Perhaps you will be surprised to hear you got 20*l.*?—I am surprised, and very much surprised at that, for no one ever came to me to offer it to me.

28,260. Had you a vote in 1859?—No. If anyone says I got 20*l.* it is a wilful piece of business, it is a scandalous business I call it, and they ought to be prosecuted for it, whoever they are.

J. L. Scott.

JOHN LARTER SCOTT sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

28,261. What are you?—I have been living on my property the last 15 years.

28,262. You do not look like a man who would take money for your vote?—I do not think they would offer it to me.

28,263. It is very odd, they put you down here as having received a D ticket?—No one took less interest in the election than I did.

28,264. You voted for Mr. Brogden?—No, for Lacon and Goodson.

28,265. Did you promise them when they canvassed you?—I did promise Sir Edmund Lacon.

28,266. I think it is altogether a mistake, they put you down here as voting for Brogden and Vanderbyl, and as having promised Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson?—I promised Sir Edmund Lacon and voted for him.

28,267. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

28,268. Who did you vote for then?—I did not vote at all. I am very sorry that my name should have been mentioned in such a disreputable affair.

T. C. Press.

THOMAS CRISP PRESS sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

28,269. What are you?—A ship owner and retired master mariner, whatever you call it.

28,270. Who did you vote for at the last election?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

28,271. Were you offered any money by anyone at the last election?—Neither side offered it, and I never asked for it.

28,272. Had you a vote in 1859?—I had not.

THIRTY-THIRD DAY.

T. C. Press.

13 Oct. 1866.

28,273. Did you vote late in the day, or what o'clock was it when you voted?—I voted as near as possible at half-past 10 in the morning, and perhaps it would be better for me to state, when Mr. Brogden and Mr. Marshman canvassed me, Mr. Scott and Mr. Livingston were with him, and I without the hesitation of a word gave them a promise, and on the election day, if you look back at the record of the Nelson Ward, you will find my name there as having voted at half-past 10, it might be a quarter-past 10, or a quarter to 11, only Mr. Cooper has made insinuations as to the Presses. He said he understood one of the Presses was hovering round the committee-rooms in the "Nelson Ward." I beg to state what I have said is correct, and my house is situated opposite to the committee-rooms, therefore I suppose on such occasions I might be seen to pass; and as regards what Mr. Cooper said that one of the Mr. Presses he understood had written to Mr. Brogden, I emphatically deny it, it is a base falsehood so far as myself is concerned. I neither directly or indirectly, in jest or in earnest, ever passed such a word on such an occasion. I challenge any man to bring a scrap of paper bearing my name. He said one of the Presses, and I appeal to my fellow townsmen, as they do not know but what I was the one.

28,274. They know it now that you are not?—They do, and I do hope no man will come forward and say that again.

W. Trett.

WILLIAM TRETT sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

28,275. What are you?—A confectioner.

28,276. For whom did you vote at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

28,277. Did you receive any money?—Yes.

28,279. Who from?—Mr. Blyth.

28,280. Were you offered any money by the other party?—I never saw one of the gentlemen.

28,281. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

I. Hayward.

ISAAC HAYWARD sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

28,282. What are you?—A professional man.

28,283. A profession, what?—A musician.

28,284. Who did you vote for at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

28,285. Did you receive any money?—Yes.

28,287. Who from?—Mr. Watson.

28,288. Were you offered any money by the other party?—No.

28,289. Had you a vote in 1859?—No; I supplied them with a band of 16 people and never got paid for it.

28,290. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Supplied who?—Several gentlemen at the committee-rooms.

28,291. Who employed your band in 1859?—The Conservatives.

W. Beales.

WILLIAM BEALES recalled; examined by. Mr. SLADE.

28,292. You have told us in the election of 1859 Mr. Shuckford gave you 30*l.*?—Yes.

28,293. What else did he give you besides that?—I am not able to say, it is so long ago I cannot recollect.

28,294. Can you say whether he gave you more or not?—No.

28,295. To whom did you give the money?—To Mr. Sam Roberts.

28,296. You gave us his name before?—And Bob Early, and, I believe, Mr. Hastings, the baker.

28,297. R. Hastings?—I think it is, I am not able to say his christian name.

28,298. And who else?—I am not able to say, it is so long ago I cannot recollect; my memory is wonderfully shallow.

28,299. So it seems, we have had those three names before?—Yes.

28,300. Have you anything more to tell us?—No.

28,301. Mr. Shuckford says he gave you 90*l.*?—No, I do not think that.

28,302. He has sworn he has?—I cannot say exactly, I cannot recollect so long ago.

28,303. You will be put down as having taken that money for yourself if you cannot give any names?—I cannot I assure you.

28,304. Do you know what the consequence is?—If I can recollect I will endeavour to send you a note.

28,305. Send it this evening; try and brush up your memory?—I will, but my memory is wonderfully shallow.

J. C. Press.

JOSEPH CRISP PRESS sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

28,306. What are you?—A master mariner.

28,307. For whom did you vote at the last election?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

28,308. Were you offered any money by anyone?—None.

28,309. Then of course you did not take any?—None.

28,310. What relation are you to the other gentleman we examined?—Brother.

28,311. Did you take any part in the election of 1859?—None.

28,312. Did you promise Mr. Brogden and Vanderbyl when they canvassed?—Yes.

28,313. Do you remember if you voted early in the day?—I do not recollect what time it was exactly, and I am sure I do not think it was very early; about dinner time I think, more or less in the middle of the day.

28,314. Do you know a man named Fill?—The ship chandler?

28,315. Yes.—Oh yes.

28,316. Did he offer you any money?—None.

28,317. Or Mr. Moore?—None; I was never offered any money by any party.

28,318. Had you a vote in 1859?—I was not in England.

28,319. You and your brother were summoned before us because your names have been given to us as having taken money?—So it appears; Mr. Cooper made mention of it, but he never saw me.

28,320. It is only right that you and your brother should have the opportunity of contradicting it?—I have told you the truth.

W. M. Hall.

WILLIAM MATTHEW HALL sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

28,321. Do you live at Market Gates?—Yes.

28,322. Is your name Matthew Barnard?—No, my name is William Matthew.

28,323. Have you gote a vote?—Yes.

28,324. (Mr. Russell.) What are you?—I am a labouring man now, but a currier by trade.

28,325. Who did you vote for at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

28,326. Did you receive any money ?—None.

28,327. Did you not get 15*l.* from Mr. Lane ?—No.

28,328. Were you offered any money ?—Never.

28,329. By neither party ?—By neither party, nor yet asked for it ; never asked for it, I know nothing about it ; I was lame at the time and had just come out of the hospital, I had been there 14 months.

28,330. What is your father's name ?—James Barnard Hall.

28,331. Do you know whether he had any money ?—That I cannot say.

28,332. Had you a vote ?—No.

28,333. Had you not a vote last election ?—No.

28,334. You had a vote in 1859, had you not ?—No.

28,335. Had your father a vote in 1859 ?—No.

28,336. Where does your father live ?—Down at the Market Gates ; I live with him.

28,337. Do you know whether your father had any money in 1859 ?—That I cannot say ; I did not live there then.

28,338. (Mr. Slade.) Your father is James Barnard Hall ?—Yes.

28,339. And he told us yesterday he received 15*l.* from Lane at the election of 1859 ?—That I cannot say, that was not my business.

28,340. Are you the man Mr. Lane mentioned as having given 15*l.* to ?—I never received any, I never asked for any, and no money was ever offered to me by one party or the other, neither was I asked for a vote by Sir Edmund Lacon or Mr. Goodson. There was a man came into a public-house where I was getting a glass of ale one night, but who it was I do not know ; but it was not Sir Edmund Lacon ; they never offered me any money.

28,341. This is Benjamin Lane's evidence : "Mat-" thew Hall I had on my list at the time. I forgot " to mention it in the excitement. Does he live in " Market Road ?—That is the man. What did you " give him ?—15*l.* I received from Mr. Shuckford?" —That is a falsehood. I never received a farthing.

28,342. Mr. Lane has sworn to that ?—I can face the gentleman if he is in the room ; he never offered me a farthing, or gave me one.

28,343. That was the last election ?—I never had a vote except about 25 years since, and I never had one from that time to this time.

28,344. You could not have forgotten it ?—I am certain I never received a farthing or asked for one. I never went further from my house, no more than I went to Mr. Lane on my crutches, and from there I was driven up in a fly because I could not walk. I never received a farthing either in silver or gold.

28,345. Did you go up to Mr. Lane's ?—Yes.

28,346. In a fly ?—I walked there on my crutches. The reason was I was in the hospital. I did not know I had a vote, although I paid the rate. I did not know I was put on the list, and Mr. Lane said he would look after me, and by that I voted. They never asked me any more questions. I thought he knew it was right. I always voted the Tory side, both the municipal and this election. I never had but one vote before, and that was 25 years since, and I voted for Sir Edmund Lacon. He never asked me if I wanted money, or anybody else, although it was said in the paper I took 20*l.* from Mr. Lane.

28,347. Are you a married man ?—Yes.

28,348. Did your wife get any money ?—That I cannot say. I do not live with my wife.

28,349. Did you at the time of the election ?—No.

28,350. Did your father get any money ?—I cannot say. I believe my mother got it after the election, but it is unknown to me.

28,351. (Mr. Russell.) You think your mother had it ?—Yes.

28,352. How much ?—14*l.* from what I can learn.

28,353. Did she give anything to you ?—No. Neither should I have known anything about it, if this job had not come out.

28,354. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You should have told us before that your mother had it ?—I cannot tell you everything. I answer your questions as near as I can.

28,355. When did your mother get it ?—After the election, from what I can learn, but I knew nothing about it until a month or so ago.

28,356. Who told you your mother had it ?—Mother told me after it was found out.

28,357. After the election ?—It was about a month or two ago. She took the money and gave it to my wife. They are like eagles when they get the prey, it is a hard job to get them to let it go, and so my mother got it and gave it to my wife, and they clawed it out of me, and I should not have known it if this had not come out ; but I shall have the money now to spend instead of spending it at the election.

28,358. Have you ever got the money from your wife ?—No.

28,359. No part of it ?—I do not know. I go there now and then and get my victuals.

28,360. Have you got any part of it ?—It is on account of the living being a little better. I do not know that I ever had the money, and I suppose never shall, not in cash.

28,361. Had Mr. Lane told you he was going to bring the money ?—No. He never mentioned a word about it.

28,362. Had your mother or your wife told you which way to vote ?—I should have sense enough to know that myself. I fancy I do not want to go to a woman to be persuaded.

THOMAS DOWNING recalled ; examined by Mr. SLADE.

T. Downing.

28,363. What have you got to say ?—I wish to make a few remarks on Mr. Shuckford's evidence. I understand he said he gave me 40*l.*

28,364. We know you gave money to the voters, and they voted contrary to what you asked them to do ; but we are perfectly satisfied you gave them the money. Is that what you want to say ?—Mr. Shuckford never gave me the money for those four particular voters at all. Mr. Yaxley gave me the money. He has dragged my name before the public, and said I went through the Bankruptcy Court. I did, but it was to please the party. The whole of them were mixed up in it ; both Mr. Reynolds and others were mixed up in it. I have been up to their door riding up with Mr. Shuckford when he went in. They mixed me up in the concern and said I was to go through the Bankruptcy Court. I did not owe a single shilling in the town. It was an old grievance six years old. And then he says he paid my solicitor's bill. He is a false man. I can prove Mr. Cufaude was not my solicitor. At the time of the election Mr. Costerton wished me to vote the other side. Some time, as late back as 1851, I had a lawsuit, and Mr. Costerton defended the action against me. He said he would do it for about 40*l.* I had paid him something like 42*l.* 10*s.* He never made any other claim on me from that time until the election time, and after the election he says, "I know what you have been doing," and he says, "I will put put you up for this ;" and he sent me in a bill of 122*l.* 18*s.* 8*d.* I took it to Mr. Shuckford. He said, "We will settle it for you ;" and there is the bill, sir, which will prove the time the work was done. The bill was six or seven years past, and Mr. Shuckford promised to settle it or get it settled, and I believe some conversation ensued between the solicitors on each side, and they offered Mr. Costerton 20*l.* to settle the difference, which he refused. After the petition was brought forward Mr. Shuckford sent Richard Yaxley for me. Unfortunately he is dead. I went to Mr. Shuckford and he says, "You must go away by the 6 o'clock train to-morrow morning." I said, "I cannot go, I am suffering from bronchitis."

THIRTY-THIRD DAY.

T. Downing.

13 Oct. 1866.

He said, "You must go.' I said, "I cannot." I went down to Dr. Bore and got a prescription, and I went away the next morning. This was early in February, and I was away seven weeks; and as to Mr. Shuckford saying he did not send me away, why he sent me to Truro in Cornwall. He said there was a man, Frank Comyns, owed him a deal of money, and I was to catch all the information I could. He wrote me several letters to Truro, and he promised me when I came my expenses should be paid, which they never were. After that he said, "With refer- "ence to this bill of Mr. Costerton's, we cannot settle "it. You will have to go through the Insolvent "Court, and I will get you through." He makes a fictitious bill of 30*l.* which I will expose for him. He drew up a bill of 30*l.* at three months date, and got me to sign it to say I was indebted to Richard Yaxley for 30*l.* Richard Yaxley at the time I signed the bill gave me three 10*l.* notes of Lacon's bank, which I returned to Mr. Shuckford or his agent, and with that I was arrested on it; and when he says he paid my solicitor I say it is false, because I paid Mr. Cully of Norwich 16*l.*, and 3*l.* to Mr. Palmer to put me through; and as he says Mr. Cufaude was my solicitor, I say it is false. I never employed him. I will prove Mr. Cufaude was not my solicitor in the case, and that is the only thing I went through the court for. He dragged my name before the public, and I wish to explain what he said. I never went through the Bankruptcy Court for any debts in Yarmouth, and not only that, Mr. Cufaude opposed me in the Bankruptcy Court, and there sits the gentleman in the court who can prove it. He opposed me for Mr. Powell in an action that occurred in 1851.

28,365. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) I understand you went through the Bankruptcy Court to relieve yourself from Mr. Costerton's bill?—Yes.

28,366. And you say that bill was not sent in until a long time after?—You see the date; it was sent in two days after the election.

28,367. The last election?—Yes.

28,368. Is it since the last election you have gone through the court?—I went in June after the election.

28,369. How long previous to the election was the debt incurred?—In 1851, most of it, but Mr. Shuckford took the bill and brought it back to me.

28,370. Are you alluding to the election of 1859?—Yes.

28,371. What I want to know is when was this legal business done for you?—In 1851 and 1852.

28,372. Was it all over then?—There is the bill and there are the dates.

28,373. Was there nothing else?—There is a little trifle in 1855, not much, not above a few pounds.

28,374. And did Mr. Costerton at that time send you in any bill?—No.

28,375. After the business was done?—No, I paid him that 42*l.* 10*s.* and he said, "I suppose I shall "never get any more, Tom, it is no use asking for "more."

28,376. Had he sent you in a bill?—No, the bill was delivered a few days before the election.

28,377. I thought I understood you to say he agreed to bring the action or defend it for 40*l.*?—He said it should not exceed 30*l.* at first, and then it was referred to arbitration, and I had to pay Mr. Couch 10 guineas more for fees.

28,378. You paid 42*l.* 10*s.*?—Yes.

28,379. And you never heard anything more of it until the election?—No.

28,380. Then he sent in the bill?—Yes.

28,381. And then you were obliged to go through the court?—Yes.

28,382. Is that the only debt in the schedule?—Except the disputed account of Mr. Giles that occurred a few years, and the bill of Mr. Powell's for the arbitration on account of the lawsuit.

28,383. Whom did you employ as your solicitor to carry you through the court?—Mr. Cully.

28,384. Did you pay him?—Yes.

28,385. What was Mr. Cufaude employed for?—It appears he employed Mr. Cufaude to arrest me.

28,386. Was there any agreement you were to pay him too?—Certainly not.

28,387. What did he arrest you on?—On the bill of three months for 30*l.*

28,388. That you had given?—Yes.

28,389. What was the bill for?—Nothing at all. Mr. Yaxley gave me the three 10*l.* notes, and I returned them to Mr. Shuckford, and he only wanted to make it appear that he paid this money for my going through the court; but there is Mr. Cully's bill.

28,390. You are entitled to make that explanation in public; there is nothing else you wish to say?—Nothing, only I wish to explain how the case stood. He wanted to establish that I went through the court to swindle the people and he had to pay for it.

28,391. (Mr. Russell.) Why did you consent to go through the court?—I knew Mr. Costerton was pressing me for this bill, and I knew he was very vindictive on account of my going the other side at the election, and Mr. Shuckford promised he would see it settled somehow or another, and they offered him 20*l.*, and he refused to accept it, and I was pressed, and I was obliged to do one thing or another, and I was in their hands.

28,392. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) What advantage had Mr. Shuckford to get by your going through the court?—It was no advantage, but I went away on his account. I was away seven weeks and never got a fraction for it. If I had gone the other side Mr. Costerton would not have brought any bill.

28,393. Was it your idea or Mr. Shuckford's, the sham bill?—Mr. Shuckford's. He got it me and sent it me through Mr. Yaxley to sign it, and Mr. Yaxley brought the notes with the endorsement upon the backs so that he should know he got the same notes back, and I did not make use of them. I sent the three notes back to Mr. Shuckford. I gave them to him. I can hardly say which, but he had them back.

28,394. Did you say before the court that you had received any money on account of that bill?—No, I was not asked it. The fact is, it was a mixed up job. Mr. Cufaude was opposing me, and we were hand in hand with the Tories.

28,395. (Mr. Russell.) You allowed the bill to be put in as a bonâ fide debt?—Yes, Yaxley gave me the 30*l.* He said he gave me the 30*l.*, and he said, "You will have to return it to Mr. Shuckford," which I did do.

W. Gedge.

WILLIAM GEDGE sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

28,396. What are you?—A publican.

28,397. Had you a vote at the last election?—Yes.

28,398. Whom did you vote for?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

28,399. Did you get anything for your vote?—15*l.*

28,400. At Cattermole's?—Yes.

28,401. Who sent you up there?—I was going past that evening?—I went to get a glass of ale, and some strange gentleman who was there told me to walk upstairs, and I went upstairs and the money was given me.

28,402. Were you offered money on the other side?—No.

28,403. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

28,404. (Mr. Russell.) Do you draw Sir Edward Lacon's beer?—No.

S. Clark.

28,407. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Mr. Vanderbyl.

28,408. Did you get anything for your vote at the last election ?—No.

28,409. Never, no, never.

28,410. You voted, I see, for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—Yes.

28,411. I think it is a mistake summoning you here ?—I think it is.

28,412. Have you always belonged to the Liberal party ?—Yes.

WILLIAM ROLING sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD. W. Roling.

28,413. What are you ?—A baker.

28,414. Whom did you vote for at the last election ?—Not anybody.

28,415. You did not vote at all ?—No.

28,416. Whom did you vote for in 1859?—For the Tories.

28,417. Lacon and Stracey ?—Yes.

28,418. Whom did you vote for in 1857?—Sir Edmund, I believe; I forget who the other one was.

28,419. I think you voted for Watkin and McCullagh?—Watkin and McCullagh was the first I voted for.

28,420. That was in 1857, was it not ?—I was thinking it was in 1855.

28,421. There was no election in 1855; it was in 1857?—Yes.

28,422. Was that the first time you voted?—Yes.

28,423. And have you voted twice?—Twice I voted; I am not positive.

28,424. Why did you vote for Watkin and McCullagh in 1857, and the Tories in 1865 ?—My father has been employed with Messrs. Cobbs for 28 or 29 years, and I suppose I could do no other than oblige him.

28,425. In 1857 that was ?—He had been working for many years so I was obliged to vote for Watkin and McCullagh.

28,426. That was in 1857 ?—Yes.

28,427. You voted against your principles in 1859?—That was not my principles.

28,428. What were your principles ?—Tory.

28,429. And you voted against your principles in 1857 ?—Yes, to oblige my father.

28,430. And in 1859 you voted according to your principles?—Yes.

28,431. Mr. Watkin thinks you voted according to your principles and were bribed to vote against him in 1859?—No, they pressed me very hard where my father was employed, and I could not do any other than oblige him.

38,432. (Mr. Russell.) How was it you did not vote at the last election?—To tell you the truth, my wife was very ill, and has been for some time, and so she is now. I have no opportunity of getting out from my business without trusting to a stranger, therefore I did not vote.

28,433. Were you offered any money at either election?—No, not on either side.

THOMAS SONES sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL. T. Sones.

28,434. What are you ?—A mariner.

28,435. Had you a vote at the last election?—No.

28,436. You had a vote in 1859?—Yes.

28,437. Whom did you vote for in 1859?—Lacon and Stracey.

28,438. Did you get any money ?—15*l.*

28,439. Who from ?—Mr. Shuckford.

28,440. Were you offered any money in 1859 ?—No, nothing.

28,441. Do you know anybody else who got money from Mr. Shuckford ?—No.

28,442. He did not give money to you to hand to anybody else ?—No.

GEORGE WATSON recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE. G. Watson.

28,443. You told us you spent 150*l.* at the last election. Did you spend anything at the election of 1859?—No, I think not; not that I am aware of at all.

28,444. Were you not occupied in these practices at that election ?—I was very little, I think; I took no interest in it. I do not recollect.

28,445. Did you receive any money at that election?—I think not.

28,446. Can you say whether you did or did not?—I really cannot say; at these times you get so excited you can hardly tell. You hardly know what you do. I would not answer positively that I did not, certainly not.

28,447. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Who would you have got it from if you did get it?—It is some time ago. I do not think I was mixed up in the affair, or have anything to do with it.

28,448. You do not think you had anything to do with it?—Not as to the money affairs; I think not.

28,449. Who would you have got the money from if you had had anything to do with it ?—In fact I do not know where it came from or anything else; at that time I was merely running about.

28,450. Do you know Mr. Green?—Yes, I must have known him, but I never had anything to do with him.

28,451. You never had any money from him?—No.

28,452. Nor from Mr. Cooper at any time?—No, certainly not.

28,453. (Mr. Slade.) You stated that before about Mr. Green?—I did.

28,454. You acted under Mr. Cooper at the election of 1859?—The last election ?

28,455. No, the election of 1859?—No, I cannot say.

28,456. I asked you, "What did you do at the pre- "vious election, did you spend any money?—I really "cannot say whether I did or not." I say, "Did you "act under Mr. Cooper then? Yes, I was about with "him or about by myself"?—I might be about with him but not as to money matters in any shape whatever.

28,457. Have you been trying to recollect whether you had anything to do with that election or not?—Yes, at different times, and I cannot bring it to mind that I had anything whatever to do with it as far as that goes. I was inclined for the Tories.

28,458. Do you remember giving Thos. Gooch money at the last election?—Well, they told me I did. I think very likely I might; I would not positively say whether I did or did not. I got so excited for the whole week that I did not know what I was doing. I gave, to the best of my judgment, the amount he stated; and I might have given him 15*l.* or 20*l.*

28,459. He says you brought him 20*l.*?—I might have given it him perhaps, 150*l.* I had I know, I was a good bit out of pocket.

28,460. You were out of pocket yourself?—Yes plenty.

28,461. Can you give us any more names than those you gave us when you were here last?—I cannot; in fact I was not aware of him.

THIRTY-THIRD DAY.

13 Oct. 1866.

SAMUEL SEAGO recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

S. Seago.

28,462. You were examined before?—Yes.

28,463. And when you were asked why you voted for Lacon and Stracey in 1859 you told us it was because Fill behaved unpleasant?—That was the reason. I saw Mr. Harvey this morning, and he told me he had been up here, and said I had some money. I do not know anything about it. I think I got some money but it was not through Mr. Harvey; I think it was through Powell. I was taking money from Mr. Harvey backwards and forwards; at that time I was in a little calamity, and Mr. Benjamin Powell gave it me. I entirely forgot it when I was up here.

28,464. It is true that you got money?—I recollected it afterwards. It was at Mr. Harvey's house. I think Mr. Harvey was present when it was given to me.

28,465. Did you get 15*l.* for your father?—No, I never see him take any.

28,466. How much did you get?—15*l.*; it was given me in this way, it will be a little good to you. I had a couple of boats, and things went bad. Howsoever, Mr. Fill took a great part in the canvassing, or I would rather have voted that side than the other. I never see the old chap take any money, but I believe he had some from Mr. Powell, not from Mr. Harvey, I never took it from Harvey; I told Harvey so on the Quay. I said, "I am quite certain I did not take it from you."

28,467. Benjamin Powell accounts for the money he got from Mr. Green but he did not mention you?—He did not mention it where he got it from, but I am almost certain Mr. Powell gave it to me in Mr. Harvey's house. I would just say I think it must be 10 or 11 years ago, I am not positive; I had a job on the beach, and I lost my time and he gave me 5*l.*; whether it was with regard to the election or anything of that kind I cannot tell. He said, "You will lose your time," and he gave me 5*l.*, that was Mr. Steward; that is all I know.

28,468. Did you vote for Watkin and McCullagh in 1857?—I think I did.

28,469. In 1859 you voted for the Conservatives?—Yes, I did.

28,470. What was the reason of your change?—The reason was that Mr. Fill was the first one who sold me up; he was canvassing for the Blue party, and that is why I did it.

28,471. That is why you voted so in 1859?—No, in 1859. In 1859 I voted for Lacon and Stracey.

28,472. Mr. Fill offended you?—He served me with a writ, and my things were sold, that did not want to be done.

28,473. You were not bribed with money?—It was when Mr. Powell gave me this money. I assure you I forgot it when I was up here or I would have told you before.

J. Appleton.

JAMES APPLETON sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

28,474. What are you?—A mariner I was, but I have left off now.

28,475. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Brogden and Vanderbyl, I think.

28,476. Did you receive any money?—5*l.*

28,477. Who from?—I cannot tell you.

28,478. Where were you paid?—At Cattermole's, at the "Army and Navy."

28,479. Who sent you up there?—I cannot say.

28,480. Did you ever hear that other voters received as much as 20*l.* for their votes?—Not that I know of. I do not recollect hearing anybody say so.

28,481. Did you never know that other voters got much more than you did?—No, I never made any inquiry at all about anything. I do not know anything at all about bribing going on.

28,482. Had you got a vote in 1859?—Yes.

28,483. Whom did you vote for then?—Well, I think it was Young.

28,484. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Was it Watkin and Young?—Watkin and Young I think.

28,485. (Mr. Russell.) You did vote for Watkin and Young?—Yes.

28,486. Did you get any money at that election?—I was brought out of the Roads to vote. I was sent for from the Roads; a man was sent off to seek for me.

28,487. Who sent for you?—John Barker.

28,488. What were you paid then; how much were you paid on that occasion?—I was paid 10*s.* a day for six days, and 2*l.* boat hire for coming ashore and going aboard again.

28,489. You got exactly the same sum in 1859 that you did in 1865?—Yes.

28,490. Who paid you the money?—John Barker.

28,491. Did Barker tell you you were to vote for Watkin and Young?—He told me that I was to vote for Watkin and Young. I always did vote on that side. I never voted any other way in my life.

28,492. (Mr. Slade.) How do you spell that man's name?—Barker.

28,493. He is dead, is he not?—Yes.

28,494. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You said just now you had nothing to do with bribery; what was that 5*l.* you received at Cattermole's for?—I do not know. I met Mr. Livingston coming up the New Street, and he asked me if I was going to give him a vote, I said, "I do not know I shall vote at all." I said, "I think I can get 5*l.* without voting." I never asked him for it; but he said, "I cannot give it you," he said, "You must go and speak to somebody, I do not know who." I said, "I shall not trouble myself about it; I never had a bribe and I should never think of one."

28,495. You went to Cattermole's and got 5*l.*?—Yes.

28,496. What for?—A man came that evening, or the evening after, and brought me a card, and told me I was to go to Cattermole's and deliver it there to some person, and I went at 9 o'clock, and I saw a person there. When I went to the door, Mr. Cattermole I suppose it was, said, "Are you looking for anyone?" I says, "Yes." He says, "Have you got a card?" I said, "Yes." He said, "Follow me." Accordingly I followed him through a dark passage to some stairs, and he told me to walk up there and you will see a person there; and I went up there and along a dark landing. I saw a person against the door; I laid the ticket down on the table and he took it up and gave me 5*l.*, but who it was I do not know.

28,497. You do not know what it was for?—I guessed what it was for, but I never asked for it.

28,498. What did you mean by telling us you did not know anything about bribery, do you not call that a bribe?—Yes, I should think it is a bribe.

28,499. It was a bribe?—I am sure I was not aware of it, and I never asked for it.

28,500. Who gave you the ticket?—I cannot tell you who it was, a man brought it one evening to me and told me I was to go to Cattermole's.

28,501. Somebody you did not know?—I did not know the man who brought it.

28,502. (Mr. Russell.) Did the man bring you the ticket the evening that Mr. Livingston had spoken to you?—No, I think it was on the evening after, I think so, I will not be sure, I think it was.

28,503. Did anyone except Mr. Livingstone canvass you?—No, the other side never canvassed me at all because they knew I never voted any other way.

J. Walsh.

JOHN WALSH recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

28,504. You told us before about the ticket system; did you receive any money for your own vote?—No, not for my own vote. I received some money for my trouble and labour.

28,505. How much did you receive?—15*l.*

28,506. Who gave it you?—I do not know.

28,507. Was it not Mr. Stagg?—Yes.

28,508. You received 15*l.* for your time and trouble?—Yes.

28,509. Who paid you that?—I do not know.

28,510. That was upon the Liberal side?—Mr. Downing gave me the order to get the money.

28,511. At Cattermole's, at the "Army and Navy?"—At Cattermole's.

28,512. Did Downing give you a ticket?—Yes; he gave me about a dozen, or 14 or 15. I cannot say how many.

28,513. Did Downing give you a ticket to get money for yourself?—Yes; not for my vote, but for my trouble and my expenses.

28,514. What expense had you been at?—Going about the town, and my wife going about losing a lot of time, and being about of a night.

28,515. You voted for Brogden and Vanderbyl?—No.

28,516. Did you not?—No; I never promised Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl. I told Mr. Brogden I should not vote for him, when he called upon me perhaps a fortnight or three weeks before; it was through Downing, and my being intimately acquainted with him, that I worked for him. He asked me if I would do him the favour, and I did so. The truth is, there has been always a good understanding between I and Downing, not upon election matters, but upon other matters which did not concern anything about electioneering.

28,517. You voted for Lacon and Goodson?—I voted for Lacon and Goodson.

28,518. And you received some money, did you not, upon that side?—I received 2*l.*; I received 3*l.*, and I received 10*l.*, but that was for work and labour.

28,519. Who gave you that money?—Mr. Stagg.

28,520. What labour had you done for Mr. Stagg?—Well, I forget now, I am sure; things that transpired 18 months ago I do not recollect. In fact, I do not remember the names I gave you upon that paper the last time I was here. When I come to talk the thing over with my wife she bears the thing in mind better than I do. What occurs to-day I never think about to-morrow.

28,521. You voted the way in which Mr. Stagg asked you?—Mr. Stagg never asked me at all. Sir Edmund Lacon called upon me, and I did not give him any positive answer. There was a little demur between I and Sir Edmund Lacon, it had nothing to do with election matters; this was some three or four years ago.

28,522. Can you carry your recollection back to the previous election in 1859?—No, I cannot.

28,523. How did you vote then?—I think I voted Red. I think I voted Red, with the exception of once, ever since I have been in Yarmouth.

28,524. What year was it you voted Blue?—Well, I think I plumped the Jew if I recollect right.

28,525. Did you receive any money in 1859 for your services?—I forget, I am sure. I cannot say, it is so long ago that I do not recollect.

28,526. For your loss of time?—I cannot recollect.

28,527. You can recollect if you were paid or not?—No, I do not recollect anything about it; in fact, I did not know who was returned till the other day, when I was looking in the paper and I saw it was Lacon and Stracey.

28,528. Did you take any part in the election of 1859?—Well, I really forget all about it. I do not bear in mind anything at all about it. Anything that I can give you any information about I would tell you immediately.

28,529. Have you ever asked your wife if you received any money in 1859?—No; I have never said a word to her about it. She told me the names of the parties, and I put them down on a piece of paper, and I handed them in to you; that is all I know about it. I do not know the names now if you were to ask me that I gave you in, they are on the paper; that is all I know about it.

28,530. In 1859 you voted Red?—Yes.

28,531. Did you know old Mr. Green?—Yes.

28,532. Did he ever give you any money?—Not a penny; I never took a penny from the man in my life. I have never taken any money in the shape of a bribe, or anything of that kind, but what I have worked for. I have always been paid for my trouble at the municipal elections and at other times.

28,533. You can tell me whether you were paid in 1859?—No, I cannot.

28,534. You say you are always paid?—If I work for them, not else.

28,535. Did you work for them in 1859?—No, not that I am aware of. I am not aware that I did.

28,536. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Did you do any work for the Liberals at the last election?—You can tell by that paper that I did. I told you the last time I was up here that I did.

28,537. Mr. Downing employed you?—Yes.

28,538. Did Downing know that you were going to vote for the other side?—He did not know how I was going to vote, and he did not know that I was going to vote.

28,539. Did he know that you were working for the Conservative side as well as the Liberal?—Not that I am aware of. If a man employs me I do the best I can for him.

28,540. At the same election you were employed by both sides, and you tell us you did do work for both sides. What work did you do?—I went and got parties to vote in the Blue interest.

28,541. Upon either side?—It mattered not to me.

28,542. It did not matter to you which side they were for; you went and fetched the voters?—It made no difference to me.

28,543. You went and fetched up the voters on both sides?—I did not fetch them.

28,544. What did you do?—I asked a man how he was going to vote.

28,545. Do you call that doing work?—Yes.

28,546. When you ascertained how he was going to vote what did you do then?—I told Mr. Downing.

28,547. Did you do the same with the other side?—No.

28,548. What did you do with the Conservatives?—I kept a sharp look-out, and ascertained who was going to vote one way and who the other.

28,549. You told us what you did for the Liberals, that you asked people how they were going to vote?—Yes.

28,550. What did you do with the Conservatives?—I did the same, at least, similar. I do not mean to say exactly the same, but similar.

28,551. Do you think you deserve to be paid for going to people to ask how they are going to vote?—Certainly I do.

28,552. Did not you think Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson went and asked for themselves?—They might for what I know; I cannot say that at all.

28,553. Do you not think Mr. Brogden and Mr. Vanderbyl did the same?—I do not know, I am sure, I never followed them about.

28,554. Do you not know that your services were perfectly colourable?—Perfectly what?

28,555. Utterly worthless; merely pretended?—Why should the tickets be brought to me for me and my wife to give away.

28,556. I am talking of your work upon the Conservative side?—It was just the same.

28,557. Were there any tickets upon that side?—No, not that I am aware of.

28,558. Downing wished to put 15*l.* into your pocket, so he employed you upon his side?—Mr. Downing came to my garden and asked me if I would do so for him. He came down to me twice, and he promised to bring me the tickets down, and I was to give them to these parties.

It is not worth while inquiring any more what you did.

THIRTY-THIRD DAY.

T. Harbord.

13 Oct. 1866.

THOMAS HARBORD sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

28,559. What are you?—A whitesmith.

28,560. Do you live in Priory Plain?—Yes.

28,561. Had you a vote at the last election?—Yes.

28,562. Whom did you vote for?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

28,563. Did you get any money?—I got 10*l.*

28,564. Who gave it you?—Tom Edwards, the tailor.

28,565. Were you offered any money by the Conservatives?—No.

28,566. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

28,567. Whom did you vote for then?—Watkin and Young.

28,568. What money did you have then?—Nothing. I never had anything before for any vote.

28,569. Were you offered any money in 1859?—No.

28,570. Then how came you to take money in 1865, and not in 1859?—Because it was offered to me.

I. Shuckford.

ISAAC SHUCKFORD recalled; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

28,571. Do you wish to make any explanation?—I understand there has been some little dispute between Mr. Downing in his evidence this morning and mine the day before yesterday; I thought the Commissioners would like to ask me some questions upon it, or give me an idea of Downing's evidence, because I shall be glad to correct it.

28,572. We allowed Downing to come to make an explanation in consequence of what you had said about him a day or two ago, but we have no jurisdiction to decide upon these collateral matters between you. We shall be happy to hear your explanation, and it will appear upon the notes.—I have only to say, the evidence I gave before the Commissioners, I think the day before yesterday, is strictly correct.

28,573. If you have not heard what Downing did say, we will read the evidence over to you?—There is only one little matter. He disputed my paying the expenses of his going through the court, and here is the memorandum of the solicitor, if the Commissioners would wish to receive it, of my having done so.

28,574. It is better. I should say that Downing's explanation was not very creditable to himself?—My only wish is, if I could do so, to impress upon the Commissioners that my evidence was the truth.

28,575. (Mr. Russell.) Mr. Downing informed us, that you had made some offer of paying Mr. Costerton's bill?—No. Mr. Cufaude, not Mr. Costerton I think.

28,576. He did say Mr. Costerton. Then he made a mistake, it may have been Cufaude. He then went on to state that an arrangement was made that he should go through the Bankruptcy Court?—No arrangement.

28,577. And to effect that arrangement so as to defraud Mr. Costerton of his bill, a bill of exchange for three months was drawn up by him with your knowledge, I believe by your advice, that no money really passed between you; that it was a sham and a pretence; that he was then arrested upon that bill and passed through the Bankruptcy Court, and so defrauded Mr. Costerton of his bill?—I am not aware of any bill being drawn at all.

28,578. The bill was given by Mr. Yaxley?—I know nothing about Mr. Yaxley.

28,579. But with your knowledge?—Not with my knowledge.

28,580. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) The imputation was, that the money was paid to Downing, and he was told at that time to return it to you, and therefore it was assumed that the money came from you originally?—I know nothing at all about the statement Downing has made. All I know is this, he said he was in difficulties, and he wanted to go through the court, and except I would go to Mr. Cufaude and be guarantee for some expenses for getting him through the court, he was fearful that he would not get through. He said, would I do it as a matter of form, and I did so; and, as a matter of fact, I have had to pay Mr. Cufaude's expenses, and I have the receipt for it here.

28,581. Mr. Cufaude the solicitor?—Mr. Cufaude the solicitor.

28,582. Was Mr. Cufaude the solicitor to the bankruptcy?—That I cannot say. Here is the memorandum, which I will hand to you, of the expenses I paid Mr. Cufaude. Mr. Cufaude is not in town or I should have asked him to come up. Mr. Wilshire is Mr. Cufaude's partner.

28,583. You say that you had nothing to do with Downing's bankruptcy further than being guarantee?—Not the slightest in the world.

28,584. You know nothing at all about it?—I know nothing at all about it.

28,585. (Mr. Russell.) Were you aware that Downing was arrested upon a bill due to Mr. Yaxley?—I was not aware of anything of the kind, beyond saying he was fearful he could not get through the court unless I went to Mr. Cufaude, and was answerable for some expenses. I had not the slightest knowledge of that in the world.

28,586. Were you aware that the bill handed over to Mr. Yaxley was part of the proof of debts at the bankruptcy?—I have not the slightest idea of it at present.

28,587. Had you at the time?—No, I have not the slightest recollection of anything of the kind in the world, nor do I believe anything of the kind was ever mentioned or took place.

28,588. Were you aware at that time that Mr. Costerton, as we understood, had a claim for 120*l.* or something of that sort against Downing?—I had not the slightest idea in the world of it. I did not know what his liabitities were with Mr. Costerton or anybody else. All he said was, that he was endeavouring to go through the court, and would I go to Mr. Cufaude, and be answerable for the expenses. What I did was to oblige him. I did so, and this is the result of it.

J. Starling.

JOHN STARLING sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

28,589. What are you?—A hatter.

28,590. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—No one.

28,591. Whom did you vote for in 1859?—I had no vote.

28,592. Have you never had a vote?—Never before 1865.

28,593. (Mr. Russell.) Was any means whatever used to induce you to abstain from voting?—No.

28,594. None whatever?—None whatever.

28,595. It has been stated to us that you attended at the nomination and held up your hand for the Liberal candidate?—I attended the nomination, as a great many others did, for the sake of seeing the fun; undoubtedly, at the time I held up my hand, but whether I held it up for the Liberal candidates solely, I will not charge myself to say. I may have done so.

28,596. May I ask you why you did not vote?—Simply for reasons of my own. I was never asked by anyone save by the candidates, and I told them that personal reasons would prevent me from voting, and they did so.

28,597. Did you tell the candidates what your reasons were?—No further than that.

28,598. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) I suppose you will not tell us?—I cannot, it was an impulse. I had made up my mind many months before the election came I would not vote. Knowing the state of affairs in Yarmouth I did not wish to offend anybody. I had my business to make and to support. I have nothing to conceal.

28,599. (Mr. Slade.) I think you are put down that you will not vote?—Yes, I honestly told them I should not, and nothing would have induced me. If a man had asked me to vote, I would most probably have gone and voted against him directly. Everyone in Yarmouth knows that I came up before to be heard just before the Commission adjourned; I could not be heard then, and my only reason for letting it wait so long was that I spoke to every one I knew, and nobody believed it, and therefore it did not matter.

28,600. Mr. Garson Blake says, "I know what the "influence upon him was. He was afraid to vote, and "therefore abstained from voting altogether." Then he is asked, "Do you mean the influence of the grain?" "No, the use of another influence. It was a case of "this sort, that his friend lent him money in his "business, and he was afraid to vote contrary to his "friend's wishes." Is that true?—No, it is not.

28,601. Is there any foundation in for it?—My brother-in-law passed his word when I first went into business, that is some time ago, which, with the exception of 50*l.* paid off before the election took place, I have paid. That 50*l.* was upon a promissory note which had been signed by me about the 28th or 29th of the December previously, so that the obligation had virtually gone away.

28,602. Was it the remembrance of the obligation that induced you to abstain from voting?—No.

28,603. Did your brother-in-law ask you not to vote?—No; he never mentioned politics of any kind to me, although we met weekly and do now.

28,604. Is your brother-in-law a voter?—Yes.

28,605. What is his name?—William Wright, a town councillor.

28,606. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) You got into the difficulty by holding up your hand?—So it appears, from my love of fun.

William Albrow sworn; examined by Mr. Fitzgerald.

W. Albrow.

28,607. What are you?—A cabinet maker and upholsterer.

28,608. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

28,609. Whom did you vote for in the election of 1859?—Lacon and Stracey.

28,610. I believe in 1857 you voted for the Liberals?—I did; I think I have explained that previously to this morning.

28,611. Explained what?—I sent a letter.

28,612. You are now telling us on your oath what it is. How came you to vote for the Liberals in 1857?—It was in this way; it was the first year I was on the register for the borough, and a year or a year and a half previous to the election I was at work off and on for Mr. McCullagh; when he came forward as candidate for the borough, he came round and solicited me, and I promised him, and I carried out the promise and supported him.

28,613. You also voted for Mr. Watkin?—Yes; it is no use making a split of it; it is no use doing a thing with the right hand and spoiling it with the left.

28,614. That is, it is no use doing a thing by halves you think?—No.

28,615. In 1859 did you receive a bribe?—No; I promised Sir Edmund Lacon on his first canvass, and supported him. I never received a bribe in my life; and likewise the municipals, I always voted on the Tory side.

28,616. Mr. Watkin thinks everybody who voted for him in 1857, and against him in 1859, did so because they were bribed?—Then my being summoned here is through the evidence given by Mr. Watkin?

28,617. You are summoned because your votes for two years were inconsistent.—I do not see why nor wherefore.

(The Commissioners then proceeded to the house of Mr. Longhurst to take his examination.)

William Overton Longhurst sworn; examined by Mr. Fitzgerald.

W. O. Longhurst

28,618. Whom did you vote for at the last election?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

28,619. Did you receive any money for your vote?—Yes.

28,620. How much?—20*l.*

28,621. Who gave it you?—A stranger to me, a person I do not know, I never saw him before or since.

28,622. Where at?—The "Angel."

28,623. (Mr. Russell.) Who sent you up to the "Angel?"—Mr. Downing. I had promised Mr. Brogden, and I had refused Sir Edmund Lacon, who came first of all, because I never have voted that way. I told Sir Edmund Lacon plainly I should not vote for him, and the answer he gave me was, "I wish "every one would be as straightforward." When he came I was in very peculiar circumstances at the time from misfortunes that I had had, and I was then laid up with the same accident as now, only with one leg. I had injured one which I had been lame with for many years, I did not know how I was situated. He said it was rather unkind of me, I must vote for Sir Edmund Lacon; but I told Mr. Brogden, "I do not "know how it will be, I do not know whether I can "vote for you;" but I said, "If I cannot vote for you "I will not vote against you." However, the night before the election Mr. Downing came to me—I could get out on two crutches then,—he came to me, I should not have thought of it, and he said, "You might as "well have it as anybody else." He said, "You go to "the 'Angel;'" and I went, and they gave me the 20*l.*

28,624. Did Downing give you a ticket?—No, I had no ticket. After that, as I was coming out, there was a man of the name of Shearman outside of the "Angel." It appeared he had wanted some money, and they were afraid to trust him, and he would not trust them. He asked them if they would give the money into my hands; he would trust me, and I was not to give it him until after he had voted. That was how I had the money for Shearman.

28,625. What was Shearman's christian name?—Joshua Shearman. That was the only time I was at the "Angel" at any time. I saw a report in the "Independent" that Mr. Jones represented I called myself, and said I had bribed two voters. Neither of these men I ever saw, in fact one I do not know at all. I do not know that I ever saw him to my knowledge, and the watchmaker in Gaol Street, Bambridge, I knew him by sight, and he has come to me since I have been laid up, because his father-in-law belongs to the same society, and he told me that night where he got his from, and he has told you, from the landlord of the "Turk's Head," Mr. Humphrey. I had no other money, and nothing to do with any other election further than what I have stated to you.

28,626. Did you vote in 1859?—No, I had no vote in 1859, not here.

28,627. (Mr. Russell.) What is your trade?—I have been brought up to the seafaring, in the yacht service, all my lifetime.

28,628. Now you are a publican?—Yes.

(The Commissioners then proceeded to the house of John Woods.)

Mrs. Elizabeth Woods sworn; examined by Mr. Russell.

Mrs. E. Woods.

28,629. What is your husband?—He was a gas collector.

28,630. Did he vote at the last election?—Yes.

28,631. Who for?—Brogden and Vanderbyl, and Mr. Marshman came forward first.

28,632. Did he receive any money for his vote?—

THIRTY-THIRD DAY.

Mrs. E. Woods.

13 Oct. 1866.

None at all, he never received a penny in his life. If anybody had offered him money, he would not have voted at all, he is that sort of man, he is always straightforward.

28,633. Did Mr. Brogden send a bath-chair for him here?—No, he came with a carriage, so I suppose; he went and told him he had ordered one. I never saw any more of him after the morning of the election. Mr. Kelf, the clerk, came down and asked him to vote for Mr. Brogden. He said, "You have no need to "ask me that, you know that I shall not be able to go "out at all, but if I can do him any good, I will." He said nothing about the bath-chair until I saw it in the paper, and I was angry, and I said I would put an advertisement in the paper that it was not so.

28,634. What is your husband's christian name?—John Woods.

28,635. (Mr. Russell.) He voted the same way in 1859?—Yes.

28,636. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Your husband is too ill to be examined by us?—I am afraid he is.

Adjourned till Monday morning at half-past 10 o'clock.

THIRTY-FOURTH DAY.

Town Hall, Great Yarmouth, 15th October 1866.

THIRTY-FOURTH DAY.

R. Bean.

15 Oct. 1866.

ROBERT BEAN sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

28,637. What are you?—A fish merchant and smack owner.

28,638. Who did you vote for at the last election?—Lacon and Goodson.

28,639. Did you get anything for your vote?—Nothing.

28,640. Were you canvassed by anyone?—They called on me, and I promised Sir Edmund Lacon and Mr. Goodson, and I voted for them.

28,641. Were you canvassed on the other side?—Yes, I believe the parties called, and I gave them a denial.

28,642. Were you offered any money?—No, nothing at all.

28,643. Nothing on the other side?—No.

28,644. Had you a vote in 1859?—Yes.

28,645. Did you vote for Lacon and Stracey?—Yes.

28,646. And in 1857?—I cannot say whether I did vote or not. I cannot say whether I was at home at the time.

28,647. Did you ever vote for the Liberals?—Never that I know of.

28,648. And you never got any money?—Never a shilling.

28,649. Then we have been misinformed.—You are quite wrong if you have. I never received a shilling in my life from anyone. I did not want any money.

W. Edwards.

WILLIAM EDWARDS sworn; examined by Mr. SLADE.

28,650. What are you?—A seaman.

28,651. Who did you vote for at the last election?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

28,652. How much did you receive?—15*l.*

28,653. Where?—At the "Army and Navy" tavern.

28,654. Did you get any other money besides that?—Not any more.

28,655. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

28,656. Who sent you up to Cattermole's?—I frequently go there. I merely called in to get a pint of beer, as I frequently do.

28,657. Who sent you upstairs?—I heard they were giving away money, and I thought I would go up, I went up; they asked my name, and where I lived, and they gave me the money. That was all the questions that were asked of me.

E. Smith.

EDWARD SMITH sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

28,658. What are you?—A blacksmith.

28,659. Who did you vote for at the last election?—Watkin and Young.

28,660. At the last election I asked?—I had no vote at this last election.

28,661. Did you receive any money for your vote in 1859?—Yes.

28,662. How much?—10*l.*

28,663. Who from?—William Newman.

28,664. Was that all you received?—That was all I received.

28,665. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) Had you a vote in 1857?—Yes.

28,666. How did you vote then?—Mr. Watkin and McCullagh.

28,667. Did you have any money then?—No.

J. Smith.

JAMES SMITH sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

28,668. Where do you live?—In Yarmouth, in Church Plain.

28,669. What are you?—A tailor.

28,670. For whom did you vote at the last election?—Brogden and Vanderbyl.

28,671. Did you receive any money?—Yes.

28,672. How much?—20*l.*

28,673. Where were you paid?—At Mr. Wright's.

28,674. Who sent you up to Mr. Wright's?—Mr. Newman, the tailor.

28,675. Were you offered any money by the Conservative party?—Yes, Mr. Cooper did offer me 15*l.*

28,676. Did you take it?—No.

28,677. Did Mr. Cooper offer you the 15*l.* after you had taken the 20*l.* at Wright's?—Before.

28,678. Do you mean you would not take money from that party?—So far I did not take it.

28,679. Had you a vote in 1859?—No.

28,680. You were examined before the Committee of the House of Commons, were you not?—Yes.

28,681. Were you asked if you had had money before that committee?—Yes.

28,682. And did you say that you had?—Yes.

WILLIAM NEWMAN recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

28,683. Do you wish to say anything?—When I was recalled last Monday morning I stated the money I received in 1859. I found afterwards that Mr. Eagleton had said on the Saturday, I was not aware he had been examined, that I had more money, or I kept money, and I beg to contradict that statement; 28*l.* was all I received, and I accounted for it. Mr. Eagleton does not say any particular sum that he gave me, more than any other people, and if his figures are gone into, it can be proved there are 116*l.* that can be easily accounted for, with my 28*l.*, and Louttid's 25*l.*, and the dead men he talks of. I assure you I never received more than 28*l.* of him.

28,684. You told us that before?—I thought you did not understand it. I only do not wish to go under any more than I am guilty of.

28,685. You accounted for two 10*l.*'s and one 8*l.*?—Yes, I did.

JOHN TRICKER sworn; examined by Mr. RUSSELL.

J. Tricker.

28,686. What are you?—A tailor.

28,687. You are not on the register now?—Not the last register.

28,688. You had no vote in 1865?—No.

28,689. Had you a vote in 1859?—I had.

28,690. For whom did you vote in 1859?—Watkin and Young.

28,691. Did you receive any money?—Not a penny.

28,692. Were you offered any?—I was.

28,693. Who by?—Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Smith, in the Broad Row.

28,694. How much did Mr. Reynolds offer you?—10*l.*

28,695. Did you refuse it?—I did.

28,696. Is that Mr. Reynolds who is in court?—That is the gentleman.

28,697. Were you offered some more money by a man of the name of Smith?—He was with Mr. Reynolds at the time.

28,698. What Smith was that?—He is living, I think, in a shop in the Market Row. Edward Smith I think his name is, and a person by the name of George Bilsdon was along with him.

28,699. You have been employed by the Commissioners as messenger to serve summonses?—Yes.

28,700. I have in my hands a list of the names of men alleged before us either to have given or to have received money for their votes, who are said to be dead. I will read you their names one by one, and tell me whether of your own knowledge you know they are dead. Robert Beales?—Dead.

28,701. Daniel Beales?—Dead.

28,702. John Collins?—Him I cannot speak to of my own knowledge.

28,703. Do you know whether John Collins is in Yarmouth, if alive?—I do not know him.

28,704. Stephen Cullum?—He is dead.

28,705. William Darnell?—He is dead.

28,706. William J. Dye?—Dead.

28,707. William Ellis?—Dead.

28,708. William Houghton?—I have got two Houghtons here. I know of only one.

28,709. Is one of the Houghtons dead?—One of them; the eldest one.

28,710. Where does he live?—I do not know what street. It is going to the train from the bridge.

28,711. Does he live on the North Quay?—Yes; on the North Quay.

28,712. Do you know whether Thomas Houghton of Gaol Street is dead?—I do not know him.

28,713. Abel King?—Dead.

28,714. John Lummis?—Dead.

28,715. Stephen Peachment?—Dead.

28,716. Robert Read?—Dead.

28,717. Abraham Solomons?—Dead.

28,718. John Walker?—I do not know him.

28,719. John Walker, of Howard Street in the register of 1864, was reported to us as dead?—He may be.

28,720. You do not know whether he is?—He may be, but I cannot speak to it.

28,721. And John Grimes Rivett?—He is dead.

28,722. I have here a further list of men who are alleged either to have received money for their votes, or to have given money to others for their, votes, and who are said to be at sea. Will you inform the Commissioners whether of your own knowledge they are so?—As near as I can guess, I will.

28,723. I will read you the names, one by one, George Wright?—At sea.

28,724. William Frosdick?—At sea.

28,725. Samuel Haylett?—At sea.

28,726. James Howes?—At sea.

28,727. Samuel Johnson?—At sea.

28,728. Edward Devereaux?—He is at sea. He belongs to the pilot cutter or did. I called on Friday and he was not at home then.

28,729. William Miller?—Of where?

28,730. Of Hall Plain.—He is at sea.

28,731. John Julier?—He is at sea.

28,732. Edward Sutton?—He is at sea.

28,733. Daniel Carter?—He was at sea on Friday.

28,734. Joseph Fill?—He is at sea.

28,735. Benjamin Press?—At sea.

28,736. And William Wright of Charlotte Street?—He is not at sea.

28,737. Is the Wright of Charlotte Street at sea?—No. He is a shoemaker by trade, but he is out of employment, and he goes down to the beach to get jobs where he can. His wife said he might be in the roads fishing to earn a shilling that way, but he is not a regular sailor.

28,738. Have you endeavoured to serve a summons upon him?—I have.

28,739. And have not been able to find him?—I could not serve him, but when I went back the wife was out. I found her first in the morning.

28,740. Have you received summonses from the Commissioners, and endeavoured to serve them on all the men whose names I have now read to you?—I have.

28,741. I will now read a list of names of men against whom there are similar allegations, and who are alleged to have now left Yarmouth. I will read their names one by one, and you tell me whether you of your own knowledge know they have left. John Adcock?—He is gone I know.

28,742. Stephen Alsop?—I do not know him.

28,743. I have on this list "Cheltenham," placed in front of Stephen Alsop, but do you know whether he is at Cheltenham?—I do not. I believe I shall have intelligence in the course of the day of his whereabouts.

28,744. William Butcher?—In London, at a brewery I think.

28,745. Augustus Easter?—Him I do not know. I have no account myself of him, although we have received this information from different parties I have been to.

28,746. Have you heard he has gone to Australia?—Yes, I did.

28,747. George C. Hunt, have you heard that he has left Yarmouth?—I have heard of it.

28,748. Andrew Lottimer?—He is gone I know.

38,749. William R. Mayor?—I do not know.

28,750. Have you heard he has gone to the Isle of Wight?—I know there is one person went to the Isle of Wight, that Mr. Tivy has an account of.

28,751. William J. Miller?—In what street or where.

28,752. The Apsley Road.—That is right; gone to London. He is in the printing office belonging to the railway company.

THIRTY-FOURTH DAY.

J. Tricker.

15 Oct. 1866.

28,753. Robert Myhill?—He has left.

28,754. Samuel Parsley?—He has gone to Australia or New Zealand, I do not know which.

28,755. William Scott?—He has left for Beccles, I think he has been examined.

28,756. John B. Stevens?—He is down, I think, in Manchester.

28,757. William Worledge?—He has not removed out of the town, but we could not find him anywhere.

28,758. Henry Cooper?—He has been up to London, but he has since gone down somewhere to the north of England.

28,759. Joseph Crisp?—I do not recollect him.

28,760. Have you heard he has gone to London?—Joseph Crisp of Southtown?

28,761. Yes; of Southtown.—Yes; he has gone to London.

28,762. George Hastings?—I cannot say anything about him.

28,763. Do you know whether he has gone to London?—I do not know. He has left Gorleston, and they did not know positively where he was gone.

28,764. William Fisk?—He left about six months ago.

28,765. James Libbis?—I think he is dead.

28,766. Has he gone to Australia?—I do not know.

28,767. Have you endeavoured to serve summonses on all the men whose names I have just read to you?—All of them.

28,768. And you have been unable to find them?—Unable to find them.

F. Smith.

FREDERICK SMITH sworn; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

28,769. Do you recollect being with Mr. Reynolds at the election of 1859, when he canvassed a man by the name of Tricker?—Yes; I think I was with him at the time he canvassed.

28,770. Do you recollect hearing Mr. Reynolds offer him 10*l.*?—No. Neither to Tricker or any other person that he canvassed, not 10*d.* or one farthing

28,771. Do you undertake to say that Mr. Reynolds did not do so?—Not in my presence he did not. I will swear that positively, or to any other person in my presence.

28,772. What are you?—A general dealer. I keep a shop in the Market Row.

28,773. Are you upon the register, and are you a voter?—Yes.

28,774. For whom did you vote at the last election?—For the Conservatives, ever since I have been in Yarmouth, the last three elections.

W.C.Reynolds.

WILLIAM COLLETT REYNOLDS recalled; examined by Mr. FITZGERALD.

28,775. You heard the evidence given by John Tricker, that you offered him 10*l.* at the election of 1859?—Yes.

28,776. Is that so?—It is perfectly untrue.

28,777. You did canvass him?—Yes. I canvassed him no doubt.

J. Tricker.

JOHN TRICKER recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

28,778. Have you any further explanation to give, there is some mistake?—No. I do not think there is a mistake. It is bad memory. I should wish to state that Mr. Smith, Mr. Reynolds, and Mr. Bilsdon, called at mine on the Sunday afternoon, the Sunday previous to the election. Mr. Bildson came round, I was at the back, because we do not open our shop on a Sunday. He called at the back door, and said there was a gentleman wished to speak to me outside. I went outside and saw Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Smith; and Mr. Reynolds asked me if I would oblige him by voting for Sir Edmund Lacon and Sir Henry Stracey, and I told him I had not made up my mind. Mr. Reynolds walked a few steps away, and left Mr. Smith and Mr. Bilsdon to make an arrangement with me. Mr. Smith said he did not hear it, but he must have heard it; Mr. Bilsdon said, "If you vote for Lacon and Stracey you can have 10*l.*"

28,779. Who said that?—Mr. Bilsdon and Mr. Smith were both together, because I walked away with them after that, and then we had a conversation after that about the 10*l.* Mr. Smith must recollect it, or else his memory is very bad.

28,780. You said before, it was Mr. Reynolds offered it you?—Mr. Reynolds was accessory before the fact, he was with them at the time it was offered.

28,781. That explains both stories?—Mr. Reynolds did not offer it himself, but he was with the parties who offered it at the same time.

F. Smith.

FREDERICK SMITH recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

28,782. Do you hear that statement?—Yes; and I can positively state, I never saw Mr. Reynolds on a Sabbath Day, nor spoke to him in my life.

Mr. C. J. Palmer.

Mr. CHARLES JOHN PALMER recalled; examined by Mr. SLADE.

28,783. Are you a member of the town council of Great Yarmouth?—I am.

28,784. And have been mayor?—I have.

28,785. On more than one occasion?—Twice. Would you permit me to refer to the evidence which Mr. Harvey of Norwich lately gave. I found, as reported in the Independent, he said he had been called upon by Mr. Reynolds, Mr. Palmer or Mr. Preston—he did not know which—previous to the election of 1859.

28,786. I did not understand he had been called upon?—I think that is it.

28,787. No, that he had instructions from Sir Henry Stracey to honour the order of Messrs. Palmer and Reynolds, or Mr. Preston, but not that you had called upon him?—I read it so. I wish to say I had no communication with Mr. Harvey at all, and that the circumstances deposed to by him and Sir Henry Stracey and Mr. Reynolds, were totally unknown to me until I saw them in print. I only wish to state that, that my former evidence may be consistent with what has been given since.

28,788. We understand that you yourself gave no orders to Messrs. Harvey and Hudson's bank?—None whatever. I had no connexion with Messrs. Harvey and Hudson directly or indirectly, in any manner whatever.

28,789. We want to ask you a few questions about the ancient history of Yarmouth. Will you tell us when Yarmouth first sent a member to Parliament?—It was first summoned in 1296. It was among the first boroughs that were summoned to send members to Parliament. Before that time counties only sent members. It was one of the very first boroughs that sent members to Parliament.

28,790. Who were the electors of Yarmouth before the Reform Bill?—The first electors were the freemen. The freemen in the time of King John were members of a fraternity or merchant guild, and they transmitted the freedom to their sons, and so on, and then other parties obtained their freedom by a servitude of seven years to another freeman. But in the early time the governing body of persons, that which now forms the town council, returned members. They did not go to the freemen at large, but they returned the member, and they continued to do so for a great number of years. They used to elect a committee, or an inquest as they called it, of six freemen and six common council-men, and that inquest nominated the members, and those members were frequently or almost invariably, members of the governing body at the time. That continued until the time of the Commonwealth ; and in the last Parliament that was summoned by Oliver Cromwell, the freemen asserted their right to vote at the election of members of Parliament, but the governing body would not allow it. They returned their own members. A petition was presented against that return, and the question was heard by a Committee of the House of Commons, and the committee determined the right was in the governing body and not in the freemen at large. Then at the next election, which was the Parliament that brought in the restoration, a double return was again made. The freemen claimed the right of voting ; the governing body claimed the exclusive right. There was a double return, and another petition, and the Committee of the House of Commons on that occasion reversed the decision on the previous one, and admitted the freemen to vote at large. Then James the Second, after filling the corporation with his own adherents, granted a charter in which he endeavoured to confine the voting to the members of the corporation, but that arrangement was upset by the revolution of 1688, and from that time the freemen at large voted until they were extinguished.

28,791. That was in 1848 ?—Yes.

28,792. What is called St. Andrew's Ward here consists of the parish of Gorleston and Southtown, does it not ?—Yes, it does.

28,793. When were they incorporated with the municipal borough of Yarmouth ?—At the passing of the Reform Act ; a commission was issued at that time to determine the limits of boroughs, and that commission sat here for some little time, and made inquiries, and on their report the parish of Gorleston, which includes the hamlet of Southtown, was added to the borough of Yarmouth for electioneering purposes.

28,794. Gorleston includes Southtown ?—Yes, Gorleston includes Southtown, Southtown was a hamlet of Gorleston, comprising about one-third of the area.

28,795. Gorleston is situated on the right bank of the river Yare, and in the county of Suffolk ?—It is.

28,796. Yarmouth is in the county of Norfolk ?—Entirely.

28,797. The population of Yarmouth we have heard is about 35,000 ?—Yes, it is more now, that is altogether.

28,798. Gorleston included ?—I had better refer to figures.

28,799. Do, if you please.—I have the last census, when the total was 34,573.

28,800. Does that include Gorleston ?—That includes Gorleston and Southtown. That was in 1861.

28,801. That is the census of 1861 you have given us ?—Yes.

28,802. Have you formed any estimate of what it would be now ?—I have no doubt there has been a very considerable increase, perhaps 15 per cent., or something of that sort. I can give you the separate numbers, if you please, of Yarmouth, Gorleston, and Southtown. I have them here.

28,803. If you please.—The population of Yarmouth in 1861 was 34,573, which comprised 30,088 in Yarmouth, and Gorleston and Southtown 4,485—that was in 1861, and I have no doubt the population has considerably increased since that date.

28,804. Then Yarmouth, I may take it, is an increasing and not a decreasing place ?—Increasing, and it has gone on increasing ever since.

28,805. What is the area of Gorleston ?—I think about 2,000 acres or nearly 2,000 ; that is Gorleston and Southtown.

28,806. What is the principal industry of the inhabitants of Yarmouth and Gorleston ?—The fishery, unquestionably. Probably the shipping has decreased, particularly in the coasting trade, since the introduction of railways, but other trades have increased. The number of visitors has increased enormously, and other branches of industry have increased, but the shipping has decreased. The fishery has increased very much in consequence of the rapid communication with the markets.

28,807. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) I think you told us before that the corporation of Yarmouth were possessed of considerable property ?—Yes, it is.

28,808. Have the freemen any pecuniary interest in the propetry ?—None whatever.

28,809. And never had ?—And never had.

28,810. (Mr. Russell.) Do you know at all up to what period the electors were in the habit of returning exclusively local men ?—They were generally in the habit of returning local men until the commencement of the last century. Of course there were exceptions. The old law was, that they were compelled to return resident freemen. There is an Act of Parliament to that effect. I think in 1430, or something of that sort, and that was broken through in some instances, not so much in Yarmouth as in the other places perhaps, and on the accession of Queen Mary she sent a requisition that the old law should be adhered to, the returning of a resident freeman, and she also recommended that good Catholics should be returned at the same time. Then, in the next reign, in Queen Elizabeth's time, came the great constitutional axiom promulgated, that members of Parliament were not merely deputies to represent the place they came from, but that they should legislate for the country in general, that they represented the whole country, and not any particular district. Still Yarmouth continued to return resident members, and they made a law of their own in 1585 to that effect, and so great was this feeling that during the Commonwealth, or in the time of Charles the First, they resisted all the efforts of the Crown. In James the First's time, and Charles the First's, and with all the influence that was used to induce them to elect the adherents and supporters of the Government, or parties residing out of the town, they steadily declined doing so, and always held their own, and they did elect to the Long Parliament one man belonging to the town. They also elected Myles Corbett, the recorder, who was a Norfolk man, not a Yarmouth man, and he became one of the King's Judges, and signed the warrant for the execution of Charles the First, but they still so far adhered to their old principle, that they compelled him to take a house in Yarmouth and reside here.

28,811. Have you in your antiquarian researches come across any records or papers showing that corruption existed in those days at Yarmouth ?—Corruption was not always on one side, because I find members of Parliament endeavoured to be corrupted. There is an instance now, 400 years ago, where an elector in Yarmouth applies to the member, and tells him if he can get him a good place in the Customs, he will allow the member's son a sufficient yearly allowance to keep a horse. You will find that in the Paston letters which have recently excited so much interest.

28,812. Do you believe, when local gentlemen were invariably elected, that they were elected on the ground of personal popularity or importance in the town, or do you believe they paid money to the electors ?—There is nothing whatever to show that any money was paid at those periods that I can ascertain.

28,813. Do you believe Yarmouth was purer in those days than in the days when the candidates travelled from a distance with sovereigns in their portmanteaus ?—I think so, unquestionably. I think the payments began when the arrangement was made that every elector should receive two guineas if he liked to claim it ; what they called head money. It was not at the time considered bribery, but that was, I have no doubt, the actual beginning of it—the touching the money was the beginning of what ensued.

THIRTY-FOURTH DAY.

Mr. J. C. Palmer.

13 Oct. 1866.

28,814. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) When did that practice commence ?—I think about somewhere near 100 years ago, in the last century. A sort of arrangement was come to that the freemen should be paid two guineas each by all the candidates, whether they were successful or not. The defeated candidates paid as much as the successful ones, but they paid no more than two guineas, and no more was expected, or ever received at the time.

28,815. (Mr. Russell.) It was the payment of head money which led to their disfranchisement, was it not ?—It was, because the inquiry in the House of Commons decided that, although the custom did excuse it, it was neither more nor less than bribery, and they declared it to be illegal. Notwithstanding that, it went on, and the freemen were disfranchised. I was asked on the last occasion, whether, after the passing of the Reform Bill, the 10*l.* householders, being added to the freemen, took the two guineas as well. I find they did to some extent, and I find in that election, of Lennox and Coope 1,200*l.* was paid for head money; of that 900*l.* went to freemen, and 300*l.* to householders.

28,816. Where did those accounts appear ?—They appeared in the evidence then before the House of Commons on that question, and you also find the great expenses that were incurred in the elections of that time were even then more considerable than they are now. Two of the most eminent leaders of the Liberal party in Yarmouth, men of great weight and ability, gave evidence on that occasion—the late Mr. Shelley and the late Mr. Bath—they said that the election on their side cost from 8,000*l.* to 10,000*l.*, that money was principally expended in bringing voters from a distance. Persons were brought from all parts of the country at very considerable expense, and the travelling expenses were not minutely looked into. That evidence is in print, as having been given in the House of Commons.

28,817. (Mr. Slade.) Is there any family in the neighbourhood who has any territorial influence in this borough ?—None whatever. I do not think there is any family having any territorial influence whatever. I think it has been independent of that.

28,818. The Anson family had property in Gorleston ?—The Anson family had property at Southtown, that formerly belonged to an old family, the Pastons, who were Earls of Yarmouth; they never well agreed with Yarmouth. There was always a jealousy on the part of Yarmouth against anything going on in Gorleston or Southtown. They wanted to prevent trade there, and in that time ships could not unload that side at all; but in the time of Charles II. Sir Robert Paston got an Act of Parliament passed that enabled ships to load and unload that side of the river, and other privileges were attached to Southtown. On the death of the last Earl of Yarmouth, which was in the commencement of the last century, the estates were sold, and were purchased by Lord Anson, the celebrated circumnavigator, and he left them to Mr. Adams, who took the name of Anson, and who is the ancestor of the present Earl of Lichfield; and the Anson family have from that time held the great portion of that property; but I do not think it has given them any material influence.

28,819. What was Mr. Rumbold's connexion with Yarmouth ?—Mr. Rumbold had no connexion whatever with Yarmouth. He was brought down with Mr. Anson in the first election in 1817, I think it was. He was very much liked, and was very popular, and was very much esteemed for his knowledge, and he represented the borough for a great many years.

28,820. (Mr. Russell.) Do you happen to know by what influence Gorleston and Southtown were made part of the electoral system of Yarmouth at the time of the Reform Bill ?—I do not know at all. It was considered desirable the borough should be extended. Whether the Anson family had any influence in getting it done I do not know at all, I am not aware of it. At any rate, I do not think it did them any material good, but I cannot say they did interfere at all about it. Local men continued to be elected until about the year 1734, when the Townshend and Walpole influence first became prominent.

28,821. (Mr. Slade.) How did that arise ?—They were a family of great importance, not only in Norfolk but in the country. Sir Robert Walpole, being Prime Minister for many years, and Lord Townshend being his brother-in-law, they had great influence in obtaining appointments and matters of that sort; and I believe the majority of the electors were in favour of the principles they asserted, which were the principles of the revolution of 1688.

28,822. They maintained their influence here for nearly a century ?—Yes; the Hon. Charles Townshend represented the borough 30 years, and was returned eight times. He was a Lord of the Treasury, and had considerable patronage and power.

28,823. (Mr. Fitzgerald.) The Walpole influence in this place was established I suppose before the system of head-money was introduced amongst the electors ?—I think it was; but I think it was introduced while the Townshends and Walpoles were representing the borough.

28,824. I suppose the electors thought they ought to share in the advantages which the corporation at that time derived from it ?—Probably they thought they ought to have something. It was generally put under the head of "loss of time."

28,825. (Mr. Russell.) Contrasting the population of Great Yarmouth proper, and of Gorleston and Southtown, are the inhabitants of Gorleston and Southtown a poorer class ?—I think they are certainly; I think they have been; they are getting up rather now; they are rather more prosperous now. In consequence of a large fleet of smacks which sail from Gorleston, and other causes, they are getting better off, but they were in a very poor state for many years.

28,826. Have you any idea what proportion of the electors of Gorleston and Southtown might be designated as working men ?—I should think the great majority of them in Gorleston, certainly. Not so in Southtown, because Southtown is more for places of residence; but in Gorleston certainly the working men would have a very large majority.

28,827. Two-thirds ?—I should think full that.

28,828. A much larger proportion than in Yarmouth proper ?—I should think so. I do not know exactly what the proportion would be in Yarmouth; but certainly in Gorleston there is a very considerable majority, I should say, of working men, or men in moderate circumstances.

28,829. Is house rent cheap or dear, do you consider, in Yarmouth and Gorleston ?—There is this difference, in Yarmouth the rates are much higher than they are in Gorleston, very considerably higher. In Yarmouth, we pay all the borough rates, and the poor rate is heavier, and the board of health rate; and in Gorleston and Southtown there is no board of health rate, and the poor rate is exceedingly moderate, because it is joined and incorporated with the hundred.

28,830. That would be an inducement to the poorer class of ratepayers to live in Gorleston rather than in Yarmouth ?—Yes; only the poor man must live where his business is, or near to it.

28,831. Except the fishing trade, is there any trade in Yarmouth that is prominent rather than others ?—There is the boat-building, and there is a silk factory which employs a great many hands.

28,832. It appears to me, there are a great many shoemakers; is that so ?—I do not know. Norwich is a great place for making shoes, and they send their shoes out to Australia, and they have a very large trade. They may perhaps employ some hands here, I do not know myself whether that be so or not. There are a great many businesses connected with the fishery, such as making and mending the nets, barrels, and a great number of trades supplying the fishermen with what they require, so that a very great deal of the trade and business of the town depends upon the fisheries.

28,833. (Mr. Slade.) And it is an increasing trade ?

—It has increased very much of late years; also the deep sea fishery, the fishery for cod, turbot, and those fish that they catch by the Dogger Bank, and about there; there is a large fleet of vessels which sail from Yarmouth, which did not do so formerly.

28,834. Formerly it was confined to the herring fishery?—Yes. These vessels sailed from Barking and the Thames, and they have now been transferred here. Other persons have joined them, and it is a large business and employs a great many men. It is a profitable business; I believe it is uncertain, but there are large profits and large losses too, I suppose, at times.

28,835. (Mr. Russell.) Have you any idea what is the average rent paid for the house of a working man in Yarmouth?—I should think 6*l.* 10*s.* 0*d.* or 7*l.* I am not quite so well acquainted with that subject as other parties.

28,836. You do not know what proportion of the whole electors are working men?—I think a very large proportion, a very considerable proportion indeed.

28,837. What proportion should you say?—Do you mean of electors who must live in a 10*l.* house?

28,838. Yes.—I think a large proportion; but if the franchise were lowered, of course there would be a very large addition, because the houses they live in I think are under 10*l.*

28,839. From my little experience of the matter, no statistics are more difficult to arrive at, for it is a fiction very often to term them as working men in such statistics, when in truth and fact, they are small shopkeepers, and hardly to be designated working men proper?—A small shopkeeper works very hard at times; but I could not give such reliable information on these points as some other parties.

28,840. What gentleman do you think could give us the most reliable information?—Really, I cannot say. I should think those parties that have been connected with the poor rates and the administration of the poor laws, can give you much better information as to rents. Of course the poor rates will show all the houses assessed to the poor rates. Here is an analysis of the elections during the 18th century, if you wish to have it (handing a paper to the Commissioners.) I find, that on an average, during the last century and during the present, there has been an election every three years or nearly so.

28,841. (Mr. Slade.) We have nothing more to ask you. We thank you very much, Mr. Palmer, for the very valuable information you have afforded us. We have now closed our labours at Yarmouth, and adjourn to London. Through you, as a member of the town council, we wish to convey our thanks to the mayor and corporation for the courtesy and consideration they have shown to Her Majesty's Commissioners. We have to thank them for these rooms they have placed at our disposal, and for the admirable arrangements of the police force, and generally for the order that has been maintained. Throughout this inquiry, which has been painful no doubt to many people, the Commissioners wish to state that they have been very much struck with the general character of the truthfulness of the witnesses called before them, and also with the desire of all parties in this town to afford them all the information in their power. You, Mr. Palmer, were the first witness called before us, and you are the last. You have had nothing whatever to do with the matters which we came to inquire into; therefore, I wish to say to you, which I can do with all propriety, that we consider that you have in very many respects reason to be proud of your native town, and to assure you, that though our official connexion with Yarmouth is now over, the Commissioners will always have and always bear a very deep interest in the prosperity of the borough.

(Mr. Palmer.) On behalf of the inhabitants generally, sir, I think I ought to thank you for the courtesy you have displayed to every person who has been brought before you.

The Commissioners then adjourned till 1 o'clock on Saturday, the 20th inst., at 1, Essex Court, Temple.
